S. C. Educator Asks Education Rights For All

By Associated Negro Press

COLUMBIA, S. C. — Dr. Wil Lou Gray, white, superintendent of Opportunity School, declared here last week that "we can no longer stand by the traditions of the South and think straight. If we are going to have Democracy in this state we must educate the people. The people cannot remain uneducated and stay free."

Miss Gray was guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Columbia Civitan Club, held in Columbia Hotel. Describing Opportunity School as "the most democratic place in the state, whose activities include research on ceremics, nursing and studies about the state," she said:

STARTLING REVELATION

"Only six percent of South Carolina's children who enter the first grade—and I am counting Negroes too—enter college. Out of 120,000 students who entered the first grade in 1932, only 4,000 completed the 11th grade and only 2,000 of that number went on to college. That includes both races."

She pointed out that the state spends $7[illegible] a year per pupil to educate its children, but spends $482 a year per prisoner to keep prisoners in the penitentiary.

"We must educate fully both races, for if we are going to have democracy, we must have all the people educated, not just one-half of the population with the other half ignorant and uneducated. We just can't stand by the traditions of the South and think straight."

NAACP Lawyers Request Court To Dismiss Action

Defendants Were

South Carolina School Officials

CHARLESTON, S. C.—(ANP)—A suit to force school authorities to provide "adequate free bus transportation" for Negro public school pupils in Clarendon county was dismissed here last week by Federal District Judge J. Waites Waring. The dismissal was ordered after plaintiff's counsel made a motion to that effect, which was seconded by attorneys for the defense.

The paintiff in the suit, filed March 17, was Levi Pearson on behalf of his son, James. They were represented by Thurgood Marshall, NAACP chief counsel, Harold Boulware, Columbia, S. C., and Edward R. Dudley. Defendants in the suit were the Clarendon County Board of Education, L. B. McCord, county superintendent of education; commissions of Clarendon County School District 26 and E. G. Stukes, chairman of the board, and Jesse T. Anderson, state superintendent of education.

The suit charged violation of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution and asked a declaratory judgment against "the policy, custom, usage and practice of establishing and maintaining adequate, free transportation for white children while failing and refusing to provide or maintain free bus transportation for Negro children because of their race or color." In addition, an injunction was sought to prohibit the state from "making a distinction on account of race or color in providing bus transportation."

REPLY TO CHARGE

Replying to the charge, the defendants said laws of the state provide a system of procedure for such matters and that resort should be had to that procedure rather than to the federal court. They denied there was any discrimination by reason of color or race. They also pointed out that James Pearson was enrolled in a school district in which he did not live, and without approval of the district commissioners involved.

On the discrimination count, they said that a considerable number of white students attending Clarendon county schools did not have access to free bus transportation.

School Bus Suit Filed Against Clarendon Co.

A suit to force Clarenden county to provide bus transportation for colored as well as white children was filed in U. S. District Court here Wednesday.

Attorney Harold R. Bouleware, state NAACP counsel, filed the action in behalf of James Pearson, a minor, naming Levi Pearson (his father) as next friend. The complaint alleges that by providing bus transportation for whites and none for Negroes, the Clarendon county school board and trustees, as well as the state department of education, are violating the fourteenth Amendment. It sought a permanent injunction and declaratory judgment against the county.

Named as defendants were the County Board of Education for Clarendon County, L. B. McCord, Clarendon county superintendent of education, E. G. Stukes, chairman of the District Commissioners, School District No. 20, Clarendon county and, Jesse T. Anderson, state superintendent of education.

LONG EXPECTED

James M. Hinton, state NAACP president, said the action was the first in what may develop into being a series to force counties to provide equal transportation facilities for Negro children. Last year, he pointed out, the state spent $2,200,000 to transport white children and but $64,000 on Negroes.

The action has been anticipated for sometime and has the backing of the Palmetto State Teachers' Association which meets here next week, the NAACP and other organizations interested in educational improvements in South Carolina.

School Bus Suit Filed In Columbia

COLUMBIA, S. C.—The first of what may develop into a series of suits for equal student transportation facilities was filed in U. S. District Court here Wednesday.

The suit is brought against Clarendon county for failing to provide bus transportation for colored students. It was filed in behalf of James Pearson, a minor, by Harold R. Bouleware, state NAACP counsel. Levi Pearson, the minor's father, was named as next friend.

The action declares that, by providing bus transportation for whites and none for Negroes, the Clarendon county school board and trustees, as well as the state department of education, are violating the 14th Amendment. It seeks a permanent injunction and declaratory judgement against the county.

Defendants named are the board of education for Clarendon county, L. B. McCord, Clarendon county superintendent of education, E. G. Stukes, chairman of the district commissioners, school district No. 20, and Jesse T. Anderson, state superintendent of education.

The action has been anticipated for some time, James M. Hinton, state NAACP president, said. It has the backing of the Palmetto State Teachers Association, which was to meet here recently. The NAACP and other organizations interested in educational advancement support it.

Mr. Hinton pointed out that last year the state spent $2,200,000 to transport white students, but only $64,000 for Negroes.

Opportunities For Education Of Negroes In State Is Apace With Those For White Pupils

Improvements Have Reached From First Grade To Nashville's A. & I. Which Is The Colored Students' U. T.

From The Commercial Appeal Nashville Bureau

NASHVILLE, Aug. 14.—Educational opportunities for negroes in Tennessee have been increased apace with those for white students, according to leaders in the field of education.

The improvements of recent yars have been distributed from the first grade on through A. & I. State College in Nashville, which is to negro students what the University of Tennessee is to white students.

Emphasizing the expansions at the negro college are the records of state expenditures there. For the school years 1941-42 and 1942-43, the state appropriation was $110,000 per year. For the next two years it was $120,000 a year.

In 1945-46 and 1946-47, the appropriation was more than doubled. For each year it was $285,833.

Sales Tax Does It

With the passage of the sales tax in 1947, and the greatly expanded program of public education, a much greater share of state funds was allocated to the negro college.

For the school years 1947-48 and 1948-49, A. & I. State College was allocated an annual total of $542,500 a year in appropriations and expendable receipts.

This is only a part of the story of advances made at the negro college, and the record there is matched by the improvements in negro elementary and high schools.

The great building program and the acquisition of school buses made possible and financed by the sales tax applies equally to negro schools and white schools. The sales tax funds for this purpose—almost $15,000,000 last year—are distributed to the 95 counties and the county boards of education decide where they are to be spent.

Reports received by the State Department of Education show that much of this money is being spent by the counties for new and improved facilities for negroes. Within the next few years if the sales tax flow continues, public schools and transportation facilities for both negroes and whites will attain standards equivalent to expert recommendations.

There is an undisputed maxim that schools can be no better than their teachers, and in this respect significant advances have been made in the field of negro education.

One of the first actions taken by the State Board of Education after the inauguration of Governor McCord and the appointment of Burgin E. Dossett as Commissioner of Education and chairman of the Board was the elimination of the A and B classifications for teachers.

"I di scovered ," Commissioner Dossett explained, "that Class B was used largely for the negro teachers."

More Negro Teachers

He further explained that the inferior classification caused the negro teachers to receive smaller salaries regardless of their experience and training.

Shortly after the passage of the General Education Act of 1947, which came in the wake of the sales tax, the State Board of Education adopted what was known as "the single salary schedule" which further implemented the impartiality between the salaries of negro and white teachers.

During the past school year, according to Dr. A. D. Holt, president of the Tennessee Education Association, negro teachers in many counties of the state were paid better salaries than white teachers.

Dr. Holt explained that this was because there is a greater percentage of adequately trained and experienced negro teachers.

"The state salary schedule is a bracket arrangement which grants graduated increases for training and experience," he said. "Negro teachers in some instances are better qualified and therefore receive better salaries."

Commissioner Dossett, pointing to other advances in negro education, mentioned that the various new features of the General Education Act also apply to negroes. These include vocational education, training for home-bound children, and several others.

The state's new public education law has been hailed by educators in other states as a remarkable advancement.

In the field of higher education for negroes, Tennessee is in a unique position as compared to to other Southern states. This is because of the location in Nashville of Meharry Medical College for negroes, the only negro medical school in the South and one of the two in the Nation.

On Par With U. T.

Meharry has a Class A rating from the American Medical Association and generally is regarded as equal to most of the medical schools in the Nation.

By a contractual arrangement with the trustees of Meharry, Tennessee sends negro students seeking to study medicine, dntistry and nursing to that institution. Tuitions of th students are paid by the state in a degree comparable o the benefits received by white students attending the medical units of the University of Tennessee at Memphis.

A part of the contract with Meharry reads:

"Meharry Medical College further agrees that students attending said institution under the erms of this contract will not be charged fees of any character in excess of the fees required of white students at the University of Tennessee."

The State Department of Education has similar agreements with colleges in other parts of the Nation for serving negro students who

MEXICAN SEGREGATION LICKED IN TEXAS SCHOOLS

DALLAS, TEX.—(G)—In a recent ruling of United States District Court Judge Ben Rice the segregation of Mexican-American children beyond the first grade in Texas schools has been outlawed.

It was held by the Court that first graders could receive separate instructions while learning the English language, but upon completion of that year they were not to be segregated.

FEDERAL JUDGE ORDERS HEARNE "EQUAL FACILITIES" BY OPENING

NAACP Case Puts Texas District School Board in Tight Spot

MARSHALL REPRESENTING NAACP

WACO, Tex. — (ANP) — In a surprise decision made after a "conference" with attorneys, Federal Judge Ben H. Rice declared that the Hearne independ school district must provide equal facilities for Negro children by the time school opens.

In making this ruling the judge said that the school must be equal in physical plant, library facilities for Negro children by the time school opens.

This decision was made in the Hearne case in which C. G. Jennings, Negro truck driver, is asking that his daughter, Doris Fay Jennings, 14, either attend the white high school in Hearne or be given equal facilities at the colored school.

The judge gave his opinion after a talk with attorneys for the defense, but without the concurrence of the NAACP attorneys handling the Jennings side, Thurgood Marshall and W. J. Durham of Dallas.

Judge Rice quoted the 14th amendment of the U. S. constitution and the "equal but separate" segregation statutes of Texas in his judgement.

Marshall said:

"Our petition prayed the court to enjoin the Hearne independent school district from further discriminating against the Negroes of Hearne.

"We insist upon taking no cognizance of the segregation laws of Texas since we consider them to be unconstitutional, and we made this position plain to the court."

The Hearne district is reported to have had 666 colored and 742 white students last year.

What the NAACP attorneys plan to do after the opening of schools is still undecided.

What Price Segregation!

$42,076,603 Jim-Crow School Bill Faces Texas

(Special to The Courier)

AUSTIN, Tex.—Desperate but determined to maintain the State's jim-crow educational system if the courts will sustain the "separate but equal" theory of segregation of the races, the State of Texas may have to spend $42,076,603 in the next two years in orders to retain the system. The sum is three times the present expense for separate maintenance of schools.

This was brought about by the NAACP's all-out fight against segregated schools in Texas, beginning with the Heman Marion Sweatt case.

Sweatt, a Negro letter carrier of Houston, is seeking to enter the University of Texas Law School. A decision in his case is expected in the fall from the Texas Supreme Court.

HEARNE RULING MADE

The NAACP earlier this month sought, in the Federal Court 'at Waco, to have a 14-year-old Negro girl high school student admitted to the white high school at Hearne, Tex.

Although Federal District Judge Ben H. Rice Jr., ended the case with a declaratory judgment that the State law provides for "equal but separate" schools for white and Negro students, the whites anticipate another move by the NAACP to break down the "tradition" of segregation based solely on race or color.

The recently created Texas State University for Negroes at Houston, has asked for $10,603,865 for the 1949 to 1951 biennium and Prairie View Agricultural and Mechanical College wants $1,936,738.

GILMER-AIKEN PLAN

The Gilmer-Aiken Committee's formula for a public school program would total $29,136,000 for 229,043 Negro children.

Texas officials state that in the last two years Negro education has cost approximately $16,204,045. The sum includes $4,815,986 for higher education and $11,388,059 for public schools.

Texas State University, set up by the fiftieth Legislature in early 1947 to circumvent the Sweatt case, plans a $7,500,000 building program. It will require buildings for a library, science hall, two dormitories, law school, medical school and other improvements to be equal to the white University of Texas.

The school to the present time has cost the State $3,375,000. A $10,000,000 budget request for the next biennium was heard by the Board of Control, Sept. 7.

Survey Report Asks New Schools

Kansas City, Mo.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — (ANP) — A survey committee has recommended sweeping changes in the school system of Albemarle county, Va., to cut down inefficient one-room schools. It recommended also a joint city-county five-year Negro high school which will cost about $1,000,000.

Survey plans also call for five Negro elementary school centers in a program to improve the facilities and educational opportunities of Negro pupils below the high school level.

Albemarle operated 49 schools last term including 20 one-room buildings. Four of these were for white and 16 for Negroes. An additional two other white and five Negro schools used only one room, due to insufficient number of pupils. Three Negro one-room schools will be closed next term.

The county's original investment in school buildings was $490,490 for 22 white schools of which seven are combination high and elementary buildings. Investment in the 27 Negro schools including two combination and elementary, was only $43,600.

Virginia Parents Test U.S. Writ Against School

By SAUL MILLER
Special to the STAR

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 12—The South's "separate but equal" social pattern received a resounding jolt last week when a rural Negro group in Tidewater, Va., challenged a white school board to back up the phrase with action.

Acting on the basis of a federal court injunction which had directed the school board to equalize its notoriously unequal facilities, the Negroes refused to register their children at the King George Training School. They claimed that the school board had not complied with the order calling for correction of unequal conditions at the school before the fall term opened last Wednesday.

Spearheaded by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the Virginia Teachers Association (Negro), they formed into a parents-teachers association, inspected the supposedly improved facilities and found them lacking.

Court Action Likely

They refused to register their children, and from all indications, they will take their case back to court and ask for a contempt order citing the school board for its alleged failure to provide segregated equality of facilities.

In an effort to strengthen the contempt charge, the group's attorneys, headed by Oliver W. Hill—who was installed this week as Richmond's first Negro councilman in 50 years—attempted to register the Negro children at the all-white King George High School. They were refused, in accordance with Virginia school segregation laws, and Gov. William M. Tuck called their attempt an "unfortunate agitation of the racial issue."

Wednesday's action and the promise of more to come is the result of long years of criticism by the Negro community—and some liberal white spokesmen, that "segregated but equal" was really a farce as far as the southern school system was concerned.

Negro spokesmen had tried for years to have the white school boards equalize facilities without success. Last year the groups finally went to the courts.

In Surry County—a typical case—Federal Judge Sterling Hutcheson ruled:

"The defendants . . . are perpetually enjoined and restrained from discriminating against plaintiffs and any other Negro school children on account of his race or color . . . in providing and maintaining school facilities, including buildings, equipment, bus transportation, libraries and qualified instructional and janitorial personnel, and from paying Negro school teachers . . . less salaries on account of their race and color than that paid to white teachers and janitors similarly situated."

Ordered to Comply

On July 30, Hutcheson entered final orders in the case—that the school boards involved must comply by the opening of the fall term.

The inspection held this week was delayed to determine whether this order had been enforced.

The group took a particularly dim view of 2000 odd volumes recently added to supplement the Negro school's library. Among others it found the following volumes:

Report of librarian of Congress, 1905; "Kladderadatsch," 1874, apparently a book of rhymed verse published in Berlin and printed entirely in German,—the school has no courses in foreign languages; 1925 yearbook of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace; "Love Letters of a Worldly Woman," a paper-backed novel; "Technical Journal of the Bell Telephone System," dated October, 1937; and others of a similar nature.

The school enrolls about 380 students, of whom 86 are in the high school classification. There are 13 teachers.

Our Public School Crisis: II

Editorial

Jeffersonian Guide

IN VIEW of the steps that had to be taken last week in Gloucester and King George counties (Va.) in order to clear matters for further court action, a statement by Governor Tuck was in order. The governor called for "tolerance and patience, not only with our officials, but with each other." That much was apropos. There were other parts of Governor Tuck's statement, however, that were not so good, and which showed a lack of both tolerance and understanding of the problem, on the part of the governor.

He indulged in a masterpiece of understatement when he said:

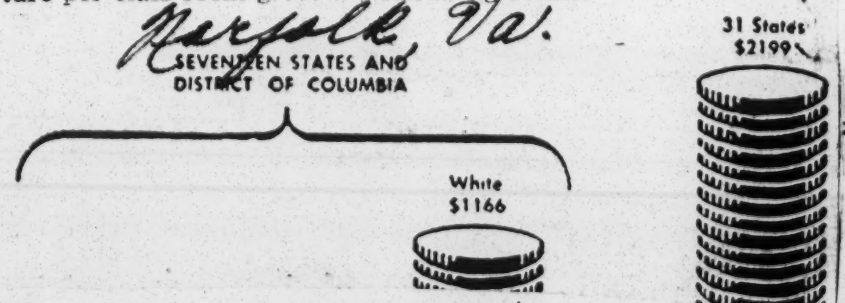
> We recognize that the facilities are unequal in many instances.

The facilities are unequal, period. There is no place in the state of Virginia—no city, no town, no county—in which equal or actually comparable facilities are provided for white and colored, except in the matter of the educational qualifications of the teachers. In many places the training and experience of the Negro teachers equal the whites. There is where equality of facilities ends. Where the physical facilities come close to "comparable" the full courses are limited or omitted, in some instances, in the Negro schools.

The very expenditures, as per the record, for school houses, class room or laboratory equipment, transportation, teachers' salaries and other factors entering into public school instruction prove that the disparity is wide and deep and despairing, as between white and Negro.

Virginia is one of seventeen southern and border states (including the District of Columbia) which have separate schools for the races. A comparison of the average (median) expenditure per class room gives the following result:

Norfolk, Va.



To the right is shown the average (median) expenditure per classroom in the thirty-one states which do not have separate schools. The figures speak for themselves. Governor Tuck is temporizing with and defending a bad condition when he says inequalities exist "in many instances." He is doing likewise when he makes the following assertions:

> Marked progress has already been made toward their solution. (The school problems).
> An expanded program of public buildings at this time would only serve to complicate and make worse an already bad situation. This problem is common to both races.

Progress made has been relative and has served to widen the gap between per capita expenditures for white and Negro. It is not enough to raise the per capita expenditures for whites $10 and Negro $2.00.

The following graph shows the value of school property per pupil enrolled in the seventeen states maintaining double-standard school systems:

It will be seen that in 1945 the value of white school property per pupil enrolled was 430 per cent higher than the value of Negro school property.

Likewise, the amount spent per pupil in elementary schools was, in 1945, $11.14 less per Negro pupil than the amount spent on white pupils fifteen years earlier, in 1930.

In 1945 the per capita cost per white pupil was $73.67, per Negro pupil $32.46, just $41.21 difference.

Construction is costly, of course. But when a white school is needed it is built. It is the Negro schools that wait. In Princess Anne county this summer a $450,000 bond issue to improve white schools was voted and a $250,000 issue to provide a Negro school was defeated.

That the problem is common to both races, is true. The children are not adequately provided for. But the provisions made for colored children are, in many cases, less than decent, to say nothing of being less than adequate.

Governor Tuck was in error again in including in his statement a reference to the "Civil Rights issue sponsored by President Truman."

That question has nothing to do with efforts to improve Negro public school facilities in Virginia. This effort started fifteen years before President Truman entered national politics. The reference by Governor Tuck certainly does not coincide with his plea for tolerance and patience. It is intolerant in itself.

The governor stated: "I sincerely trust that all parties concerned will recognize their responsibility as citizens." We hope the governor of Virginia will also recognize his responsibility as chief executive of the state.

So far, Governor Tuck has not made a statesmanlike contribution to Virginia's public education dilemma. For the most part he put aside a constructive program for the public schools initiated by his predecessor, Mr. Darden, and inherited by him. He has not encouraged progressive efforts to enable the people to come to grips with the problem at its core.

Our governor included in his statement the remark that "Virginians have not been accustomed to the type of colored leadership recently displayed and which has come to the surface." Mr. Tuck probably has reference to the rather aggressive procedures required in the process of litigation in the federal courts to get done through that medium what the state has refused to do in response to pleas, persuasion, petition, prayers and politeness.

The governor, and other important people in Virginia should bear in mind that if the present "leadership" is too aggressive, it is in the lead because the more conservative Negro leadership failed to accomplish much for the people.

This is not the fault of the more conservative Negro leadership. These men and women got nowhere with Governor Tuck, with the past two or three General Assemblies, and their predecessors. They tried hard enough. Conservative Negro leadership fails for lack of support on the part of white people in political and social control in the South. That is the unvarnished truth.

As to the current leadership, it cannot be said of it that it is not pursuing its course along lines laid down in the constitution. Their methods may at times, seem "shocking," as the governor says. That is more because they are unexpected, rather than because they are not in the traditional American way of achieving the people's rights.

Virginia Duality

There is a frantic scurrying of school authorities in various parts of Virginia to bring Negro educational facilities up to the level prevailing in white schools. Three counties—King George, Gloucester and Surry—are under court orders to equalize their separate schools and a fourth, Chesterfield County, has been directed to wipe out the differentials in salary between white and Negro teachers. The precedent which these court orders establish has caused other localities to scrutinize their own systems. For example, Arlington County, where a similar suit is pending, is refurbishing its Hoffman-Boston High School for Negroes in an effort to obtain accreditation. Officials there admit, however, that Negro facilities will remain below white standards because of a lack of classroom space.

There is much reason to feel encouraged by the attempts to wipe out the grosser instances of discrimination in education that prevail widely in Virginia and other parts of the South. Certainly Negro students should benefit from more libraries and gymnasiums and generally expanded physical plants. Even more important is the equalization of teachers' salaries as between the races. It is along these lines, perhaps, that progress first must be made, and the ground prepared for any consideration of the abolition of educational duality as recommended by the Wilson committee set up by the President.

This duality of educational instruction is bound to come to the fore as the result of the extra cost involved in equality of instruction. The problem is already felt in Virginia of the cost of maintaining duplicate facilities in a State which can ill afford it. In Arlington the custom has been for the county to pay tuition of Negro students attending Washington high schools. As a result the Hoffman-Boston School last year had only 23 students and one graduate. This year the county will pay tuition only for seniors, and the Hoffman-Boston enrollment may be expected to increase. But the county will be put to great expense to maintain the duality of instruction. The burden is considerably heavier in counties such as Surry, which is contending with a declining population.

It may be that the very financial load of duality ultimately will be the point that convinces Virginians of its futility where other arguments fail. We say ultimately because such a change can be achieved only by a change in the prevailing mores, yet Virginians cannot remain forever insensitive to the fact that in the present duplicate schools they are paying heavily for the duplication.

Another Chapter Written in Negro School Dispute

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 27 (AP)—Another chapter in the King George County school case was written today with the disclosure that a group of Negro residents had passed a resolution disclaiming a petition prepared for the signatures of Negro residents.

With this development, it was disclosed for the first time that the petition—designed to have the Negroes repudiate the attorneys supposed to be representing them in the school fight in return for a special election to decide whether the county would float a $150,000 bond issue and build a new Negro school—had received no signatures.

This seemingly capped the case until October 22, when the county school board and Superintendent T. Benton Gayle are to appear in Federal District Court to show cause why they should not be held in contempt of court for alleged failure to equalize Negro and white high schools as ordered by the court in July.

The resolution instructed Joseph E. Toliver, secretary of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Negro high school, to "return the said petition unsigned from whence it came together with a copy of this resolution."

The resolution was taken to the commonwealth's attorney, Horace Morrison, who released it this morning. The paper was approved on Septmeber 22 at a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association and "interested citizens." The commonwealth's attorney said he didn't know where the meeting was held.

School Equaliza

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 6 (AP).—A school equalization trial is scheduled to begin in Federal District Court here October 13.

More than a dozen parents of Negro children of Pulaski County have charged that Pulaski County school authorities are not meeting their constitutional responsibilities to provide equal educational facilities for Negroes. Named by the plaintiffs are Superintendent Frank J. Critzer, and members of the Pulaski County school board.

Charges advanced are that Negroes of high school age have no high school in Pulaski County and are sent to a Negro high school in Montgomery County. This, the Negro parents charge, is only "token compliance" with the law. They contend their children must travel 50 to 75 miles a day in an overcrowded school bus to Cambria's Negro high school, while a white school is in Pulaski County.

A motion of school authorities to dismiss the suit has been overruled. The defendants said the Negro parents failed to show there was money available to build the facilities they ask. School authorities have ben ordered to bring into court the minutes of all school board meetings since 1945, together with all other school records.

In similiar cases, school officials in both King George and Gloucester Counties have been directed to appear in Richmond on October 22 before Federal Judge Sterling Hutcheson.

(The officials of both counties have been directed to show cause why they should not be held in contempt of court for alleged failure to equalize fully their Negro and white school facilities.

(Surry County, also involved in a facilities case, recently submitted its proposals to equalize facilities, under a consent decree. All the cases, including Pulaski County, are being directed by the same group of Negro leaders.—Editor's note.

Court Orders Va. County To Paint, Repair Negro School

ASHLAND, Va.—(ANP)— Paint and repair the Negro school in Ashland, Circuit Court Judge Leon M. Basile ordered the Hanover County School board last week. The order came when he called the board, the board of supervisors and School Supt. B. F. Walton for a special appearance.

In order "to preserve this county property from destruction," the judge said, "the board should proceed to make the necessary repairs and paint the building."

The summons to county officials was issued, the judge said, "for the purpose of considering urgent business."

Walton said that he would try and finance the school repairs by a bond issue. Recently a petition for a bond issue of $300,000 for a consolidated Negro high school and $1,500,000 for the school improvement program failed to get the required 1,000 signatures, to bring it to a vote.

Negro and white children have been set aside by both the national NAACP office and the state conference here, it was revealed last week.

The NAACP has been ready for months to go into the courts to force a showdown on the nasty situation in the county, but hesitant Negro leaders in Princess Ann have continued to look to the school board, the supervisors and the efforts at two referendums on bond issues which were defeated in both instances.

A spokesman for the NAACP state conference said last week that victory is practically assured once the school equalization issue is carried to court in view of recent Federal court decisions on similar cases in which equal school facilities for the two races were ordered by the court.

THE VOTING

An official canvas on the bond issue of $250,000 for a new Negro high school in Princess Anne county, Va., shows that 357 county residents voted on Tuesday, June 29, against the proposal ind 331 in favor of it.

Both of the bond issues voted on by Magisterial districts for improvements of white elementary schools were supported by the residents of those districts.

Various Negro groups in Princess Anne county including the county NAACP branch will hold a meeting soon to map plans for legal action against the county, it was announced here July 3. One big question is the availability of some person or persons to institute the suit demanding equal school facilities.

Negro School Facilities Improved In Arlington

Standards Still Below Other Units, However, Asserts Board Chairman

Arlington County School Board said yesterday its Negro school facilities this year will be better than last, although still not up to white standards.

The board's statement came as schools in two Virginia counties—Gloucester and King George—prepared to open under Federal Court orders they provide equal facilities for both races.

Arlington County itself is awaiting outcome of a court suit similar to the ones which provoked the Gloucester and King George orders.

The Arlington suit was brought on behalf of 16-year-old Constance Carter, who charged she could not obtain courses available at Washington-Lee High School at the county's Negro Hoffman-Boston School. The suit is now awaiting hearing in Federal District Court in Alexandria.

Bond Issue Urged

The statement yesterday quoted Board Chairman Barnard Joy as saying the board "is making a sincere effort to provide equal facilities for Negro and white students," but that it is hampered by lack of space in the form of buildings and classrooms.

The facilities for Negroes, Joy was quoted as saying, will be better than they are at present if Arlington County voters approve a proposed school bond issue at a referendum in November.

The proposed bond issue was called "the only solution" to the problem.

The bond issue probably would be around four million dollars although the exact amount and the exact use to which the money would be put have not been definitely determined. A public hearing on the proposal will be held at 8 p. m. September 14 at Thomas Jefferson Junior High School, 816 S. Fillmore st., in Arlington.

Negro School Not Accredited

The county's Hoffman-Boston High School for Negroes has never been accredited. Last year it had a student body of 23 and only one graduate. Most of Arlington Negro students went to Washington high schools where the county paid their tuitions.

The eight-classroom Hoffman-Boston building houses all Negro high and junior high school students in the county as well as some elementary grade children. It has no gymnasium, and until this year no adequate library.

Joy, however, said he hoped the school will be on the accredited list this year.

He listed the following steps taken to provide more equal education at Hoffman-Boston:

1. Hiring of a full-time music supervisor, gym teacher and librarian and a new home economics teacher who holds a master of arts degree;

1. New equipment in the home economics room and library, auditorium redecorated, heating system improved, lockers ordered for students; and

3. Letting of a contract to put up a temporary two-classroom addition to house overflow students.

The board also has stopped tuition payments at high schools out of the county for all except those who will be seniors this year. The purpose of this move, said Joy, was to make the school's high school enrollment large enough to give courses not now taught for lack of a sufficient number of students.

Anti-Jim Crow Fight Pushed As Virginia Legislature Convenes

RICHMOND — (ANP) — As the Virginia General Assembly convened here Jan. 14, the N. A. A. C. P. Conference of Virginia, the Virginia Teachers association and other civic organizations were prepared to ask for an end of segregation of the races on public conveyances and in public schools and libraries.

The Virginia NAACP has in court already suits against four local school boards over the inequalities in education for Negroes and whites. The defendants are the school boards of King George, Pulaski, Surry and Gloucester counties.

The NAACP intends to make the cost of maintaining equal dual systems for the two races so high in the south that its abandoment will be the only sensible thing to do. It was reported here last week that the Princess Anne county school case had also been referred to the NAACP.

The NAACP and the teachers will press for a substantial improvement in the status of Negro education in the state and the campaign for the equalization of salaries for white and Negro teachers will require more funds for public education.

It is likely that Negroes request legislation abolishing the segregation of the races on public conveyances. The NAACP is definitely launching a statewide movement against every type of jim crowism in public travel.

Dual School System Hit

Richmond, Va., Sept. 11 (AP).— The Progressive Party of Virginia today called for the abolition of "Virginia's wasteful dual school system" and urged liberals to support Negro leaders in their fight for equal school facilities.

Additions Rejected By Probers

Pupils Advised Not to Register

By BILL FOSTER

An inspection group representing the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Virginia Teachers' Association and attorneys for 30 pupils of the King George Training School for Negroes turned thumbs down today on improvements made at the school during the past few weeks.

The School Board of King George County is under a perpetual enjoinder of the Federal District Court in Richmond to equalize educational facilities for Negro school children under its care.

After a two-hour inspection of classrooms, buildings and grounds today, the group described recent improvements in the school as "wholly inadequate." This was the first reaction to reported additions and improvements which School Superintendent T. Benton Gale had said would bring the school into compliance with the court order.

told their clients not to register at the all-white King George High School near-by. If this effort is not successful tomorrow, the attorneys are believed prepared to ask the District Court to cite the King George School Board for contempt for its alleged failure to provide segregated equality of facilities.

ADVISED NOT TO REGISTER

The two attorneys, Martin A. Martin and Robinson would attempt to register the Negro chil-

GROUP TAKES DIM VIEW

In addition to Martin and Robinson, the inspection group today was composed of J. Rupert Picott, executive secretary of the Virginia Teachers' Association, and W. Lester Banks, secretary of the Virginia State Conference of the NAACP. The group took a particularly dim view of 2,000-odd volumes recently added to the training school library to supplement its existing stock of books. It noted such volumes:

1. Report of librarian of Congress, 1905.

2. "Kladderadatsch," 1874 (apparently a book of rhymed verse, published in Berlin, printed entirely in German. The training school has no courses in foreign language).

3. 1925 yearbook of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

4. "Love Letters of a Worldly Woman," a paper-backed novel.

5. "Technical Journal of the Bell Telephone System," dated October, 1937.

6. "The Rollo Code of Morals, or The Rules of Duty for Children," by Jacob Abbot, author of the "Rollo books," the "Little Philosopher" and others, published in 1841.

7. "Drei Wochen In Deutschland," apparently a German texabook.

GAS RANGE ADDED

The inspection group also noted new additions to the school laboratory included a two-burner gas range, not yet attached to a gas pipe, a half dozen bottles of acid and other chemicals, a miscroscope, approximately two dozen test tubes, pictures of various types of beef cattle and pamphlets on agricultural subjects. The library shelf in the laboratory included more than a score of modern textbooks on biology and chemistry, but the inspection group said this "was only a start in the right direction."

A number of parents of pupils scheduled to register at the training school today had refused to enroll their children until the inspection was completed. J. E. Tolliver, secretary of the Parent-Teacher Association of the training school and other parents, followed the inspection group on its tour of the outdoor toilet facilities, the classrooms and the home economics department of the school.

E. B. Webb, principal of the school, took no part in the inspection but opened all the buildings to the visiting group.

He said the 13 teachers at the school expected an enrollment of approximately 380 students this Fall in classes one throuh 11. Approximately 86 students were expected to enroll for high school courses, about half of them boys and half girls.

"Virginia Duality"

gent white citizenry, and particularly of those colored citizens whose souls as well as their bodies have been emancipated from the frustrations of slavery, for the forthright editorial analysis of the dual school problems arising in Virginia.

For many years colored educators in Virginia have by the many been afraid to publish to the world the terrible conditions of so-called separate but equal schools. Teachers in Virginia are employed for only one year and may be dropped without recourse at the end of a year. It took courage, but here and there colored teachers did go to the courts for equal salaries. Some were fired, but eventually, through National Association for the Advancement of Colored People lawyers, the dictum of equal pay for equal qualifications and work was established. The same principle has more recently been used to secure equal facilities.

Once when I approached a county superintendent appealing for better schools for colored children, his reply was that "we must look after our own (white children) first," and "Negroes pay less taxes and should not expect as much public service." Of course Negro children are citizens, and in paying rent, working for wages and buying the necessities of life they pay as much in taxes as the white low-income group.

Once I asked the principal of the Huntington High School, a new building, in Norfolk, why it was that in building no provision was made for play space, for a gymnasium, etc. His reply was, "The white director of health and physical education for the city has said that since Negroes are so largely tubercular, what they need is rest and not further activity."

Too many colored principals in the South have been afraid to ask for more than enough to provide for the mere rudiments of education, while at the same time the neighboring schools for white children have gymnasia, playgrounds, instructors and opportunities for skilled trades and business instruction.

Negroes Ask Admission To Schools For Whites

Requests Denied; Segregation Laws Held as Reason

By Matthews Griffith

Negro students applied for admission to white schools in Gloucester and King George Counties yesterday after attorneys declared the counties had failed to provide the equal school facilities ordered by the Federal District Court in Richmond.

Admission was denied, as was anticipated, by school authorities who said acceptance would be in violation of Virginia's racial segregation laws.

The students returned to the Negro schools, just as quietly as they had arrived, and the attorneys indicated they will go back to the Federal court with a request that the two school boards and superintendents be held in contempt of court for their alleged failure to comply with the order for equal school facilities and educational opportunities for whites and Negroes.

Moves as Protection

Yesterday's moves were ordered by the attorneys as a protection for their clients should the court inquire whether the Negro students had made any effort to utilize the more adequate facilities provided at the white schools.

In Gloucester, Attorneys Oliver W. Hill and Spottswood W. Robinson, III, both of Richmond, were surprised when H. L. Secord, principal of Botetourt High School, asked for the name, age, grade and address of each of the 29 students.

Provided with this information, Secord declared:

"I'm very glad to have them register but I can't accept them in classes due to the State segregation law."

Robinson inquired:

"Because they're Negroes?"

Declines to Answer

The principal declined to answer, but he offered the personal suggestion that the students "go to their school."

Hill then informed Stanley T. Gray, chairman of the Gloucester County school board, who was at the white school, of the desire to "offer these children for registration."

Gray likewise answered "we must refuse to admit them because of the segregation law."

The attorneys were unable to get in touch with J. Walter Kenney, county school superintendent, who was on an opening-day tour of other county schools.

At King George High School, Attorney Martin A. Martin, also of Richmond, and his group of 12 Negro students were met at the school door by County Superintendent of Schools T. Benton Gayle and William L. Smith, Jr., principal of the school.

Martin and W. Lester Banks, secretary of the Virginia State Conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who accompanied the attorney, were invited to the principal's office.

There Gayle declared the Negro leaders were asking him to violate his oath of office by acting contrary to the Virginia constitution and laws.

Martin's response was that, where there is conflict, the Constitution and laws of the United States are supreme to those of the State. He then recalled the Federal District Court's order in the case, but Gayle held fast to his stand on the State laws.

Both moves yesterday at the white schools followed detailed inspections of the comparable Negro school in each of the two counties.

"Inadequate" Facilities

An inspecting party headed by Martin, on Wednesday, had found facilities at the King George Training School to be "wholly inadequate." Students were advised not to register at the Negro school but to wait until yesterday's scheduled registration at the white school.

Gayle was quoted yesterday as having said he agreed with the "wholly inadequate" findings, but added "we've done all we could in the short time we had."

Yesterday, after meeting the denial at the white school, the 12 students returned to the Negro school and were enrolled there. "We want them to get some education, even an inferior one," Martin declared.

Group Listed

At the Gloucester County Training School, yesterday's inspection was made by Hill, Robinson, J. Rupert Picott, executive secretary of the Virginia Teachers' Association, and William H. Carter, president of the Negro school's parent-teacher organization. Carter, a native of Gloucester, has retired to an estate there after serving as treasurer of Tuskegee Institute.

A number of school patrons also were on hand, as was the case in King George, and J. S. Carrington, of South Boston, a board member of the State NAACP organization, took part.

After the inspection there was unanimous agreement with Hill's statement that "no substantial improvements" have been made since the issuance of the court order several months ago.

The plant of the Gloucester County Training School is made up of a number of frame buildings, each with a covering of bricklike appearance. Buildings include those used for high school, elementary grades, science study, home economics and shop work.

Conditions Noted

The group noted a number of conditions which, it was maintained, make the plant inferior to Botetourt High School. Contrast was drawn especially between the "fire trap" stoves and exposed stove pipes in the elementary building, the space heaters in the high school building and the central heating of the Botetourt plant.

Painting of much of the woodwork, some new flooring in vestibules, repairs to windows and shades, and a new electric stove and refrigerator in the home economics department were listed as the major improvements noted yesterday.

Electric lights also had been installed in an additional building, a quantity of laboratory glassware had been received in the science building and running water had been installed there, it was pointed out.

Equipment Criticized

Carter was especially critical of "new equipment" in the workshop. He pointed to "old tables and discarded motors," and declared they were sent there when the white school "got modern, new stuff with safety devices and everything."

Following the tour, 18 elementary school students and 11 high school students who had not registered for the new year were selected for the five-mile trip to Gloucester, and the white school.

Following their conferences with Principal Secord and Board Chairman Gray, Attorneys Robinson and Hill issued a joint statement in which they declared the attempted registration was made in an effort to protect the rights of their clients.

"We inend to pursue our remedies to the fullest extent until our clients receive the oppertunities and facilities they are entitled to under the Constitution," the lawyers said.

Kenney Reports

Reached at his office later in the afternoon, Superintendent Kenney declared, in regard to the Negro school, that the grammar grades building had been wired, orders placed for 1,000 new books, "sufficient laboratory supplies and equipment" are being obtained, the interiors of all buildings have been repaired and painted, window

Gray earlier had declared that the salaries of white and Negro teachers have now been equalized in the county.

Plans have been drawn for a central white high school and a central Negro high school, Kenney recalled. He pointed out that petitions asking the Circuit Court judge to order a bond issue election to finance the program now are being circulated.

It was on April 8 that Judge Sterling Hutcheson entered a memorandum opinion in Federal District Court here finding racial "discrimination" evident in the schools of King George, Gloucester and Chesterfield Counties.

The ruling followed by less than two weeks the entry of a final judgment ordering the Surry glasses replaced, that the home economics department had been redecorated and refurnished with new equipment, new student desks placed "where needed," water added in the science laboratory, and that the water system was "in fine shape" after a complete overhauling.

"The same courses of study that are offered at Botetourt and at Achilles," the other white high school in the county, "are provided for Negroes," Superintendent Kenney added. Board Chairman Gray urged the County school board to wipe out discriminations by equalizing teacher salaries and bringing Negro school facilities to a par with the white schools.

The final order in the King George - Gloucester - Chesterfield case, entered on July 29, required Chesterfield to equalize pay scales of Negro and white teachers. The school board did this last month, but also voted to appeal the ruling of Judge Hutcheson.

Surry County, which has taken steps toward equalization, school officials have announced, must report its progress to Judge Hutcheson on September 15. The court order had the effect of an "immediate directive," however, in regard to Goucester and King George.

Virginia Judge Orders Equal School Facilities for Negroes

RICHMOND, Va., March 31 (CNS) —Surry County today faced an overhaul of its school system after Federal District Judge Sterling Hutcheson ordered establishment of equal facilities for Negro and white students.

In a decision unprecedented in Virginia, the pudge ruled on the first of four anti-discrimination suits before the court. Others involve King George, Chesterfield and Gloucester Counties.

Hutcheson directed the Surry County school board to begin immediately to equalize school facilities for white and Negro students and level salaries of white and Negro teachers.

The court injunction gave the board until Sept. 15 to report on its progress. It required that at least half the difference between salaries paid white and Negro teachers be eliminated by the opening of the fall term and completely dropped by a year later.

The case grew from a complaint filed last July by Richard Kelly, a Negro pupil, through his grandfather James Bage. The complaint listed five instances of discrimination.

The student charged that the county provides no Negro high school as for whites, that no consolidated schools are furnished Negroes, that bus transportation is inadequate, teacher pay scales are unequal and courses in commerce, science, trades and industries are not offered Negro pupils.

Full Parity Sought For Negro Children

RICHMOND, Va.—(NNPA)— Steps being taken or under consideration looking toward the equalization of education facilities for colored pupils with those of white pupils in Surry County were outlined by the county school board in a report filed last Wednesday in the Federal District Court here.

An order of March 30 by Federal Judge Sterling Hutcheson found there was discrimination against colored pupils in Surry and directed the school board as expeditiously as possible to provide equal educational facilities for colored pupil.

The board, in an 11-point report, indicated that in some respects equipment now in colored schools is superior to that in white, and made it clear that on all points covered it intends to eliminate inequalities.

The Surry School reported to the court substantially as follows:

(1) All requirements for having the school accredited have been completed and a report submitted to the State Department of Education. If there are other requirements not known, the board will meet them to have "This school fully accredited for the current school year."

(2) Some 2,300 volumes have been moved from the white school consisting of duplicates, antiquated and worn books. The duplicates have been made available to the colored school. The white high school now has 2,800 volumes; the colored school has 2,600, are on on order for delivery this month. This will not only "equalize the books as far as numbers are concerned, but in dollar value the Negro Training School library in Dendron will be greater."

PROGRESS NOTED

Appropriate liberary table and chairs and adequate shelves have been provided for the colored school. school.

(3) Much is to be desired in improving laboratory equipment at both schools and the two laboratories are approximately equal.

(4) Both white and colored high schools have a full-time janitor.

(5) All schools have sanitary lavatories. In the unconsolidated colored schools there are sanitary pit privies which would be eliminated in the proposed consolidation.

(6) There are adequate facilities for heating all schools.

(7) The board has bought a lot 111-by-600 feet, adjoining the colored school at Dendron, and is building a structure 32-by-84 feet to be ready about October 1. It will house two class rooms, The rest of the lot will be used to enlarge the playground.

At the white school, shop tools and equipment were secured primarily through the efforts of the vocational agriculture instructor and interest of local citizens over a period of years, mostly without cost to the county. Pupils built work benches, cabinets and fixtures, poured concrete floor, built and painted all cabinets, built two electric grinders. Both schools have ample small hand tools.

"The board expects to and will provide adequate equipment for the Negro training school for instruction in vocational agriculture and shop work for the current school year," the summary said.

The State Department of Education survey report on Surry schools pointed to a 36.3 per cent population decrease over a 30-year period and a school population decrease. It noted that for maximum efficiency and economy educationally and financially a high school should have from 600 to 1,200 pupils.

The report said that the white high school now has 97 pupils, the colored 101. The decrease in population trend probably will continue and the evidence clear dicates Surry cannot hope to have in the predictable future an enrollment of high school pupils sufficient to provide an adequate program of secondary education, the report said.

It recommended that school authorities of Surry approach Sussex authorities for the purpose of establishing a jointly owned and operated white high school and a colored high school, both to accept a few Isle of Wight pupils from near by; that the elementary school center for white pupils at Surry Courthouse; that all the colored elementary schools be consolidated into two school centers, one at or near Dendron, the other at or near Surry Courthouse.

The Surry Verdict

From Newport News (Va.) Daily Press

JUDGE Sterling Hutcheson's sweeping order in the United States District Court concerning the suit of a Negro pupil in a Surry county school for equal facilities with white pupils very likely will have a heavy impact in quite a number of Virginia localities. It covers just about everything, from buildings of equal quality through sanitary facilities, transportation to and from school, libraries, and curricula to the salaries of the teachers of both races. Since the order was entered by mutual consent of counsel for both parties to the controversy, it is conclusive that in some at least of these details Surry county had not been affording the Negro pupils in her public schools as good facilities or curriculum as the white pupils had had available. Pure justice, it seems to us, would dictate parity regardless of race.

We have serious doubt that the order would have any impact in Newport News. Under a previous court order our white and Negro teachers already are on salary parity for the same standards. No exception can be taken to comparative school buildings, nor, from our observation of the school trustees' work over quite a number of years, to comparative curricula and libraries. Transportation here is not involved. By approving a bond issue for a new consolidated school for Negroes, Warwick county very likely has placed itself above worry about whether it can be commanded from the bench to make improvements. We have an idea, however, that in this respect rural schools are below acceptable standards in many counties.

Forgetting all questions of racial feeling or racial animosity, the argument often is made that the Negroes pay only a minor portion of the tax revenue in a locality and that they therefore are entitled to less in public education. That is a fallacious theory. It is not, for one thing, in line with democratic practice. Its application would operate among the Caucasians themselves to the advantage of the affluent while denying the child from a family in poor circumstances even an elementary education. But beyond that, if democratic equity be momentarily waived, there is a very practical consideration. The higher the standards of education, the more is the earning power increased. With increased earning capacity comes larger contributions to the tax till. And with higher economic standing also comes less drain on the tax till for relief of economic distress.

Surry county, and any other localities hit by the Hutcheson decision, may consider themselves hardly used when confronted with the necessity for an immediate and expensive building program to conform. In the long run, however, they will find that it is one of the best investments they ever made, both sociologically and economically.

Dr. Penn Named To Roanoke School Bd.

Special to Journal and Guide

ROANOKE, Va.—Dr. Harry T. Penn, prominent Roanoke dentist and civic leader, was appointed a member of the Roanoke City School Board on Monday of this week to become the first member of his race so appointed in that post on September 1, 1948, according to information released by the five-man Roanoke City Council. He replaces the Rev. C. F. Dunning, a white minister whose term expires in September. The Roanoke School Board is composed of six members, and school board in the South has full authority in the conduct of school affairs in the progressive railroad center.

Long active in civic affairs both in his city, and in the state, Dr. Penn made the race for the Roanoke City Council in 1944 and again in 1946. He was defeated in the latter year by a scant 200 votes.

ACTIVE IN PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATION

He has been very active with the Parent-Teacher Association in Roanoke for the past few years and has served as president of the Addison High School Parent-Teacher organization for the past four years

Elected for a four-year term, Dr. Penn will assume his post on September 1, 1948, according to information released by the five-man Roanoke City Council. He replaces the Rev. C. F. Dunning, a white minister whose term expires in September. The Roanoke School Board is Negro appointed to a city composed of six members, and school board in the South since the Reconstruction era.

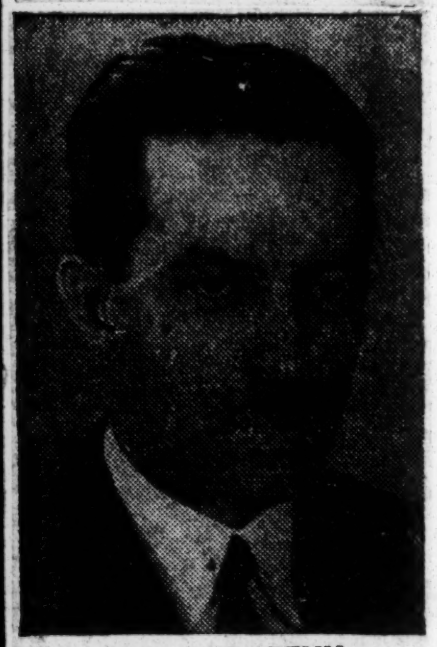
The appointee is married and the couple has two children. He was elected grand basileus of the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity in December 1947. He is a graduate of the Howard University college of dentistry.



DR. H. T. PENN

SECOND TO WIN HIGH OFFICE 9-3-48

Dr. Penn is the second member of his race in the Old Dominion to be elected to high municipal office within a month. His elevation to the Roanoke School Board follows by a few weeks the election of Oliver W. Hill, attorney, to the newly-organized Richmond City Council in a race in which Mr. Hill ran ninth in a field of twenty-nine candidates.

Equal School Facilities Is Declared Arlington's Policy

Va. Constitution Cited in Refusal To Mix Two Races

By Dorothea Andrews

The cry for equal educational facilities for Virginia Negroes echoed in Washington's back yard last week when nine Negro parents were refused permission to enroll their children in white Washington-Lee High School, Arlington.

To Arlington educators this cry already is a twice-told tale. The Arlington School Board last year got the issue on a legal basis when a 16-year-old Negro girl, Constance Carter, filed suit through her attorney, Dr. Leon Ransom, charging her education was inadequate because of racial discrimination and asking admission in Washington-Lee High School.

The school board and School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp have denied such discrimination exists in the county system. They have cited the Virginia constitution as their basis for denying the Carter girl last year—and the nine Hoffman-Boston parents this year—use of white educational facilities. Mon. 9-20-48

Division Differs

This constitutional ground is the same one cited earlier this year in tests of "equal educational facilities" in King George and Surry Counties, Virginia.

But the similarity of these counties to Arlington just about stops there:

About 35 per cent of King George County's population is non-white. More than 60 per cent of Surry County's population is non-white. In Arlington, only 5.3 per cent of the population is non-white.

King George, Surry, Chesterfield and Gloucester Counties are under court order to provide equal educational facilities. In Arlington, litigation on the Carter case is still under way. The Hoffman-Boston incident last week is expected to be used only as "supplementary evidence" by attorneys in the case.

No Pay Differential

Unlike some Virginia counties, including Surry, Arlington has had no differential in salaries paid to white and Negro teachers. Negro teachers get the same credit for teaching experience that white teachers get.

The result has been that the average salary for a Negro teacher in the Arlington elementary schools last year was $3460, as compared with $2682 for the white teacher. In high schools, the average was $2750 for Negro teachers, $3000 for white.

Arlington school officials have cited it as their "fixed and determined policy . . . to afford equal opportunity and facilities" for the two races.

James B. Copp, an attorney and associate of Dr. Ransom, who accompanied the nine Hoffman-Boston parents on their unsuccessful mission to Washington-Lee High School, denied this equality by citing five major shortcomings in the Hoffman-Boston School.

Shortcomings Listed

The "shortcomings," announced after a comparative tour of Hoffman-Boston and Washington-Lee Schools, included inadequate library, no gymnasium, no stadium, no electric machinery in science shop, and grouping of primary and secondary students in one school.

County school officials do not feel the two schools can be compared. They do not cover the same grade levels, nor do they have comparable enrollments, they say.

Arlington school officials, who declined to be quoted because of pending litigation, point out that the scope of subjects offered in a given school depends on the demand for each course.

In a school such as Hoffman-Boston, with only 180 students in the secondary grades, it is economically impossible to offer as many courses as at Washington-Lee, with about 2100 students.

They cannot, for instance, start a class in electrical engineering because one student wants it. From the educators' viewpoint, it would be better if Arlington had more Negro students.

On a per pupil basis, the county had to pay more for its Negro students last year than for its white. In elementary schools, the per pupil cost was $94 for white, $111 for Negro students. In the secondary schools, the cost was $139 for white, $141 for Negro.

Good Case by Percentage

Percentagewise, school officials feel they have a good case for "equal facilities."

The county has a nonwhite population of 5.3 per cent. Last year Negro students made up 6.3 per cent of the school membership and received education in 9 per cent of the county's school system.

The high school enrollment this year is about 7 per cent of the total, but Negro students are using 11 per cent of the county's classrooms, numerically.

The Negro population trend in Arlington County also runs contrary to the white. Arlington has at least 2000 more preschool white youths than it now has in county schools.

But there are an estimated 1150 Negro children in the county between ages of 6 and 17, as compared with only 900 who are 6 years of age or under.

County population experts feel that the ratio of 95-5 in white and nonwhite population will not materially change in the years to come. If anything, the white ratio may mount.

Decline in Attendance

Another factor is the declining rate of attendance of Negro students in the upper secondary grades. On the basis of current figures, Hoffman-Boston senior classes usually number about 20 students—the smallest class in the school. Many Negro students stop in education as soon as they reach the age of 16—compulsory school attendance limit under Virginia law.

At Hoffman-Boston School, with 180 students at high school level, courses include four years of English, French, Spanish, German (not offered at Washington-Lee), home economics, history, general science, biology, chemistry and physics, algebra, plane geometry and advanced algebra, typing, shorthand and general shop work.

At Washington-Lee High School, with an estimated 2100 students at high school level, courses, in addition to those offered at Hoffman-Boston, include:

Trigonometry, solid geometry, commercial arithmetic, general math, civics, Latin, commercial law, business correspondence, introductory business, bookkeeping, retail salesmanship, consumer buying, industrial arts, auto mechanics, machine shop, print shop, art appreciation, commercial art and home nursing.

Principals of the Hoffman-Boston and Washington-Lee High Schools have refused to enter the controversy on comparative merits of the two schools.

S. M. Sidnall, Hoffman-Boston principal, said textbooks used there are comparable to or the same as those in other county schools.

The library this year will be twice last year's size, although a number of books on order have not yet arrived. The home economics section is well equipped in a unit separate from the main school buildings.

On the other side, the school has no cafeteria. Students may buy milk at 3 cents a bottle, but must provide other food. The general shop is well equipped in woodworking supplies, needs additional equipment in other industrial arts. Shop space is adequate to present use by students.

There is no gymnasium or stadium, and physical education is carried on in lectures in the auditorium or in play on an ungraded field outside the school. The county proposes to set up a basketball court on the school grounds, Sidnall said.

Both at Hoffman-Boston and at Washington-Lee, students use the auditorium and library space as study halls, because of insufficient classroom space.

Said Washington-Lee Principal Claude M. Richmond, "I don't see how you can compare two school plants that are not designed to serve the same student load, and the same grade load."

Fletcher Kemp, county school superintendent, explained, "I think you have to see Arlington's problem in providing educational facilities for Negroes as part of the whole educational problem here—and that is a big problem."

Now being sought is a referendum to approve a bond issue for some of the 12 million dollars' worth of school construction estimated to be needed in Arlington within the next six years.

Dr. Edward J. Braun, consultant for the county school board, at a public hearing this week said that some of the money now sought would be used to improve conditions at the county's Negro schools.

Specifically, he said, it is planned to use Hoffman-Boston as a junior and senior high school only, and accommodate elementary pupils in a proposed new building.

Dr. Braun said the county also wants to build a $250,000 Negro senior high school in 1950-51.

Last summer the county spent or contracted for about $20,000 worth of work at Hoffman-Boston School in improvements and personnel. Among work ordered was a two-room classroom addition at the school. 9-20-48

Last week the Arlington County School Board voted to pay the tuition of any Negro senior high school student who wishes to attend the Manassas Vocational School in Virginia. The rate is about $100, school officials said.

Some sources feel the board should take similar action so far as District schools are concerned, although the tuition charged is nearly double the Virginia rate. The board has not indicated it will take such action.

Private Schools In West Virginia Can Admit Negroes

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

Charleston, W. Va., July 20 (AP) —Private schools in West Virginia may admit both white and Negro students, the attorney general's office said in an opinion today.

Constitutional and statutory prohibitions against common teaching of the two races apply to public schools only, the opinion added.

The opinion, prepared by Assistant Attorney General John C. Vance, was in answer to an inquiry from Nellie I. Roop, executive secretary of the State Board of Examiners for Nurses, as to the legality of mixed classes in private schools of nursing.

The Atlanta University Workshop in Adult Education held its first meeting June 16, 1948, with 22 members participating. High school principals, elementary school teachers, evening school teachers and Jeanes supervisors from Alabama, Florida, Georgia, and South Carolina, are represented in the membership.

Among the consultants have been Madden, director of Audio-l Aids for the State of Virgin-obert W. Platt, assistant specia Division of International Education Relations, U. S. Office of Education; Major David A. Lane, Jr., Information and Education Division, Department of the Army; and Miss Cecil Hickerson, demonstration teacher, Project for Adult Education.

Mr. Madden gave demonstrations in the use of audio-visual aids. He pointed out that 82 per cent of all learning takes place through the eye; that 55 per cent more learning can be accomplished in 35 per cent less time, and that retention is 55 per cent greater through the use of visual aids. Sa 6-27-48

Mr. Platt discussed his experiences in China, pointing out that the more susceptible it is to outside propaganda. He further stated that people who are illiterate tend to lose social consciousness over a period of time.

Major Lane made the following points as a result of the Army's findings: Illiterate adults will learn if they are sufficiently motivated. if materials meet their current needs and interest; if materials are carefully graded in progressive difficulty,, if classes are small, if teachers are trained, and if a variety of devices are used, such as visual aids, debates, and games. Sa 6-27-48

The Workshop is under the direction of Dr. R. O. Johnson. Other consultants who are experienced in the field of adult education will be at the Workshop during the next four weeks.

Scruggs Of Lincoln Heads Adult Project

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — (ANP) — Sherman D. Scruggs, president of Lincoln university, will serve as vice-chairman of the executive committee of the Missouri Association for Adult Education, a special group of the Missouri Teachers association, for the coming year. Tracy E. Dale, assistant commissioner of vocational education in the State Board of Education, will serve as chairman of the new committee.

These and other officers of the organization were elected at a meeting here last week. The major objective of the organization is to devise plans and means to provide adult Missourians with educational experiences wherever possible in their own home towns. Professional training will not be included in the educational program.

4 GROUPS ATTACK NEGRO ILLITERACY

Plan Sponsored by U. S. Office of Education Offers Aid to 15,000 Adults in Year

Four national Negro organizations have pledged financial aid to a project sponsored by the United States Office of Education to wipe out illiteracy among adult Negroes, Dr. Ambrose Caliver, a Federal Security Agency specialist for higher education among Negroes, announced yesterday. The contributions will help maintain the project until adequate Federal funds are procured, the announcement said.

New York, N.Y.

The aiding organizations are the Negro Elks, the Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, the Conference of Negro Land Grant Colleges and the American Teachers Association. The movement, which has been aided by grants totaling $49,910 from the Carnegie Corporation, has been under way for two years at Atlanta University, Fort Valley, State College, Ga.; Tennessee State College, Hampton Institute and Virginia, State College.

Dr. Caliver said that the "timeliness" of a project to attack adult illiteracy was emphasized by the experiences of the military during the last war and the "anticipated problems of the Selective Service here at home."

15,000 To Be Aided

The program has included workshops, college courses and fellowships to provide teachers and community leaders specifically trained for adult work. The assumption of greater responsibility by fifty Negro colleges in preparing 5,000 teachers and 250 supervisors of adult education, will lead to making between 15,000 and 20,000 individuals literate in another year, Dr. Caliver said.

Nearly 1,000 teachers of adults have been aided by the project in the last two years. As evidence of their faith in the work, Dr. Caliver pointed out that the teachers have donated $15,000 to further it.

Through June 30 the project had expended $45,000. Allotments of $17,050 to the six participating colleges were spent within their areas for demonstration classes and college courses in adult education. Hampton Institute has served as custodian of funds provided by the Carnegie Corporation.

Services for the adult illiteracy work have also been contributed without cost to the government by the Miner Teachers College, Washington; several divisions of the District's public schools and those in Baltimore, Albany, Ga.; Little Rock, Ark., and the State Departments of Education of Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina and Texas.

Dr. Caliver reported that representatives of Belgium, Haiti, China, England, India, Indonesia and South Africa and officials of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization have sought information from this project as an aid in combating illiteracy among other peoples.

Jobs Available For Adult Educators

Louisville Courier-Journal

NEW YORK, N. Y.—A nation-wide survey by the American Association for Adult Education to determine the number of full-time jobs opening up in the field of public school adult education is reported in the April issue of the Adult Education Journal, published last week.

New York, Ga.

It showed that the West offers the most job opportunities for adult educators. The South has least. At present there are seven adult workers employed on part-time basis to everyone on full-time.

Sat. 1-22-49

The biggest demand is for teachers "with attractive and positive" personalities who can hold the respect of other adults.

These findings were the result of a questionnaire mailed out by the association to superintendents of public schools in 145 cities. There is evidence that the future for full-time employment in adult education is promising.

Other specialists being sought on a part-time basis: are counsellors, field workers, informal group leaders, supervisors, promoters, and trained office help.

Making Us Literate

IT COMES as something of a surprise to hear that the United States Office of Education is sponsoring a plan to wipe out illiteracy among adult Negroes because we had assumed that there were no more of such extant.

Nevertheless there are, and four leading Negro organizations have pledged sufficient funds to enable the project to continue until ample Federal funds are provided to continue the work.

This information should have a sobering effect in a world in which there are so many other stresses and strains and problems which everybody seems to assume can be easily solved.

At a time when we were under the impression that every Negro could at least read and write, some fifty Negro colleges are pledging their assistance in wiping out the shameful deficiency.

We are wont to assume that those among us who were iliterate were few and far between, but evidently we were wrong; and we would have never believed that our forty thousand churches and other organizations would have permitted such a condition to continue.

Nevertheless the facts are as they are, and it is up to us to do what we can to solve the problem.

Down in Mexico the Government in its zeal to eliminate illiteracy has decreed that each person who can read and write must so, and thus illiteracy here. ded as feasible there it n to be feasible here. orld it is obvious that to measure up to the nless it is literate.

BTW EVENING CLASSES DRAW MANY — Among the many classes taught in the Booker T. Washington Adult Education Classes which specialize in the fundamentals of Reading, Writing, and Arithmetic, and special emphasis is placed on English. The class draws on a large enrollment from folk who are employed on various daily occupations and who find time to study in the evening classes. Many students now attending the evening classes will receive trade certificates in other subjects such as sewing, cooking, beauty culture, and others in the higher classes will receive the same type of diploma issued in the daily public schools. The class featured above is taught by Mr. A. J. Olivier.

Largest Program Ever Offered for Education Of Adults Begins Monday

EMBLEM FLAMES ON COLLEGE CAMPUS—Donald Rasmussen (left, above) and W. H. Brothers, Jr., faculty members of Talladega Negro College, examine a cross burned on the campus last night. The crudely-made cross was set on fire in front of the gymnasium while Negro and white students were having a social hour and the end of a three-day conference on civil rights.

Cross Burned At Talladega As Civil Rights Friends Meet

BY R. E. (BUSTER) HOGAN
News Special Correspondent

TALLADEGA, Ala., April 12—A crudely made cross, which has been partly burned, is on display at Talladega Negro College here today.

It flamed up last night in front of the Callahan gymnasium where some 40 students along with educators, from various Alabama white and Negro colleges, were winding up a three-day conference on civil rights with a social hour.

Those at the scene said the person or persons who burned the cross drove in an automobile with the license plate covered. One person got out of the car, placed the cross on the sidewalk, poured kerosene on it, set it afire and then drove away.

IT WAS PUT OUT almost immediately. Those in the meeting were not aware of it until told by persons who were outside the building.

The cross caused slight comment by those in the meeting. They attributed it to pranksters because of the crudeness of the frame.

The business session of the conference ended at 4:30 p.m. yesterday after the group, known as the Alabama Student Council, went on record as favoring President Truman's civil rights program. The council called for elimination of all race segregation.

W. M. Ferguson, of Birmingham, was elected chairman of the council. Other officers included Donald Myers, Talladega College, vice chairman; Barbara Jean Parker, also of Talladega College, secretary, and Ford Petty, University of Alabama, treasurer.

THE GROUP voted to send copies of the resolutions to President Truman, Gov. James E. Folsom, members of Congress, the State Legislature, the State Department of Education, the newspapers and higher institutions of learning.

The resolutions were presented for adoption by Morrison Williams. He is a student at the University of Alabama and candidate for president of the student body there. He is the son of Aubrey Williams, publisher of The Southern Farmer and former administrator of the NYA.

The elder Williams spoke at the Saturday session of the three-day conference.

THE RESOLUTIONS PASSED by the council were as follows:

"We the students of Alabama, Student Council of Civil Rights, in order to eliminate the evil forms of segregation and discrimination based on race, creed, color, or national origin, recommend that:

1. Action be taken by the states of Congress to end poll taxes as a voting requisite.
2. Congress enact a statute protecting the right of qualified persons to participate in federal primaries and elections against interference by public officials and private persons.
3. Congress enact a statute protecting the right to qualify for, or participate in, federal or state primaries or elections against discriminatory action by state officers based on race or color, or depending on any other unreasonable classification of persons for voting purposes.
4. Citizenship to be considered the basic qualification for voting, and should be protected only by qualifications of legal sanity, age and residence.
5. The age qualifications for voting be lowered to 18.
6. The powers of registrars be limited to the verification of citizenship, age and residence requirements.
7. The secret ballot be instituted and enforced in the state.

THE RESOLUTION ON civil rights in education said:

1. We recommend that all state and federal educational assistance be given only to those institutions free from discrimination and segregation based on race, color, creed or national origin.
2. We recommend that our state Legislature abolish segregation and discrimination in private and public institutions; schools, libraries and hospitals.
3. We oppose the establishment of regional schools if their purpose is to further discrimination on the basis of race, creed or color.
4. In order to create an informed and responsible public, we recommend that better training in the duties and responsibilities of citizenship be introduced into our schools.

THE RESOLUTION ON EMPLOYMENT:

1. We recommend the establishment of a permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee by both the state and federal governments, since discrimination in fair employment represents a menace to the economic security of workers in both minority and majority groups and, therefore, destroys the indespensable basis for the effectiveness of civil rights.

CIVIL RIGHTS IN LAW enforcement:

1. We recommend that the police powers of bus and streetcar drivers be so limited that these powers cannot be used to enforce segregation.
2. That the police forces include elements of any race, creed or color.
3. That no person be denied jury service because of race, creed or color.
4. That all persons, regardless of race, creed or color, receive equal protection under law.
5. That there be strict laws to guarantee all prisoners protection from brutality by ignorant, untrained persons in authority.
6. That the practice of segregation in public conveyances, theaters, eating places and living zones be legally abolished.
7. The professionalization of state and local police forces with the elimination of police brutality and their use of third degree methods be effected.
8. The enactment by Congress of a federal anti-lynching law.
9. The enactment by our state of a law to abolish restrictive covenants.

Alabama Students Defy Klan, Set Up Body to Fight Jimcrow

By Mary Southard

TALLADEGA, Ala.—Forty white and Negro students representing most of the colleges in the state attended a conference on civil rights at Talladega College in mid-Alabama. For three days they held discussions and meetings, and then voted unanimously to set up a permanent Alabama Student Council for Civil Rights.

This conference was the first effort in many college generations to unite white and Negro students of the state in defense of their common interests.

The response was wholehearted and enthusiastic, and became all the more determined after the local KKK tried to intimidate the students.

A crudely made cross was set on fire in front of the Callahan gymnasium on the last night of the conference when the students were attending a farewell social hour.

A PERSON ON THE SPOT said that an automobile drove up with a covered license plate, someone got out, put up the cross, poured kerosene on it and drove quickly away. The fired cross was put out almost immediately. Many of the students wanted to chop it up and sell the pieces for souvenirs to raise money for the work of the student Civil Rights Council, but the college president asked that it be kept for investigation.

Leading speakers to address the conference included Dr. A. D. Beittel, president of Talladega College; Rev. Charles H. Kluge, pastor, Evangelical Church, Birmingham; Dr. Edward Weaver, professor of Social Science, Alabama State Teachers College, and Aubrey Williams, editor of the Southern Farmer.

Officers elected included two white and two Negro students, representing Talladega College, Howard College in Birmingham and the University of Alabama.

The students went on record for the abolition of segregation in all public institutions, schools, hospitals, libraries; for the abolition of the poll tax and the lowering of the voting age to 18 years, and for the limiting of the powers of voter registrars to verification of citizenship, age and residence; for the enactment of a Fair Employment Practice law. They asked that all citizens be protected from police brutality, that a federal anti-lynching law be enacted immediately, and that all restrictive covenants be abolished.

Copies of the resolutions were sent to Governor Folsom, President Truman, members of Congress and the State Legislature, the newspapers and all state institutions of higher learning.

College Students Form Ala. Student Conference On Civil Rights; Pass Resolutions

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga. Tues. 4-20-48

TALLADEGA, Ala.— College students from a majority of Alabama colleges, private and tax-supported, met here April 9-11, forming the Alabama Student Conference on Civil Rights and formulating a set of far-reaching resolutions.

Attending were delegates from the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa; Stillman Institute, Tuscaloosa; Birmingham-Southern College, Normal; Tuskegee Institute, Normal; Tuskegee Institute, Montevallo Teachers College, Montgomery State Teachers, Troy State Teachers College, Howard College, Birmingham and Miles College, Birmingham.

William M. Ferguson, of Birmingham was elected chairman; Donald Myers of Talladega College, vice-chairman and Ford Petty of the University of Alabama, treasurer; and Miss Barbara Jean Parker of Talladega College, secretary.

Tues. 4-20-48

Addressing the group Saturday Aubrey Williams, of Montgomery, former NYA head and now publisher of the Southern Farmer, predicted enactment into law of President Truman's Civil Rights Program. The Montgomery publisher praised President Truman for "being the first and only president ever to come out openly for the Civil Rights Bill."

He added: "The battle for a decent America is being and will be fought in the South and we are fighting it here more clearly than they are anywhere else in America." He went on to caution Negro citizens to be understanding and never to raise a hand in violence to give any one an opporunity "to slap you down." He appealed to them to be good citizens in helping to achieve their right to vote.

Commending the youth for leading ing the fight for civil rights, the publisher asserted that those who call themselves "Christians" bow their heads in shame by letting youth take the lead in the fight for civil rights, real Christian principles, while they were silent."

The publisher's son Harrison B. Williams, was among the six delegates from the University of Alabama. He is running for president of the student government association. One plank in his platform calls for permitting Negro students to enroll at the university. Approximately 40 students attended the conference.

At the wind-up of the three-day conference a crudely made KKK-style cross was set fire in front of the college gymnasium while the delegates were having social hour. It was quickly put out. Several weeks ago a "hate cross" was also burned near the college.

TALLADEGA, Ala.—A flaming cross was left on the Talladega College campus during an hour of social activities Saturday evening, April 10, for students attending the Alabama Student Conference on Civil Rights which held its three-day session here April 9-11.

The crudely constructed cross wrapped in sack cloth was left by unknown individuals who stopped their car just long enough in front of Callanan gymnasium to put the cross out, pour on oil and ignite it. The burning cross was immediately put out by a student on his way to the gymnasium. (Other than this incident, there was no disturbance or threat of disturbance to the conference members or meetings.)

INTERRACIAL

The Alabama Student Conference on Civil Rights is composed of white and Negro students from Alabama College. About sixty or more visiting students from ten Alabama colleges and universities attended the three-day conference. The lack of adequate facilities limited the number of students invited from each institution.

Principal speaker at the Saturday session was Aubrey Williams of Montgomery, Ala., editor of The Southern Farmer. Mr. Williams praised President Truman for "being the first and only President ever to come out openly for the Civil Rights Bill." Mr. Williams declared that "the battle for a decent America is being and will be fought in the South and we are fighting it here more clearly than they are anywhere else in the Nation." He predicted the FEPC and the anti-lynching bills will soon become laws.

OPENING SPEAKERS

Sat 4-24-48

After a panel discussion led by Jerome Shaw on "Our Historical Heritages," group discussions were scheduled for the entire afternoon.

William Ferguson, a Birmingham student, was elected chairman of the Alabama Student Conference on Civil Rights; Donald Myers of Talladega College, vice chairman; Barbara Jean Carter, Talladega, secretary, and Ford Petty, University of Alabama, treasurer.

RESOLUTIONS

The conference adopted a constitution and resolutions endorsing President Truman's Civil Rights program. The group voted to send copies of its resolutions to President Truman, Governor James E. Folsom, members of Congress and the State Legislature, the State Department of Education, the press, institutions of higher learning and interested persons.

All persons who attended the conference were housed in the college dormitories and ate in the college dining hall.

FOR REPEAL OF SOME LAWS

Those Limiting Right to Admit Any Who Qualify Assailed —Debate Is Bitter

The Times, New York, N.Y.

By BENJAMIN FINE
Thurs. Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES 1-15-48

CINCINNATI, Jan. 14—Taking an unprecedented step, the Association of American Colleges voted today to create a national commission to help eliminate discrimination practiced against minority groups seeking admission to college. The Times

Acting upon a report presented by a special committee headed by Chancellor William P. Tolley of Syracuse University, the educators declared that discrimination and the evils of the quota system could be treated more effectively by voluntary means than through legislation. New York, N.Y.

However, many college heads did not think that the action of the association went far enough. They insisted that state laws be established that would deny tax-exemption to any institution that resorted to discrimination. Unless this were done, they maintained, the problems of discrimination would not be solved. Herald Tribune 1-15-48

Sharp Division in Debate

A bitter discussion lasted for the major part of the morning session. At the conclusion of the debate, which was even more intense than was yesterday's on the issue of compulsory military training, the association took these steps:

1. Voted to establish a commission to report annually on factors dealing with college discrimination.

2. By a vote of 261 to 40 adopted a resolution holding that "the problem of discrimination in admission to colleges should be solved by education and voluntary action and not by coercive legislation."

3. Approved by a vote of 22 to 91 a resolution calling upon the association to work for the repeal of state legislation limiting the right of any qualified person, regardless of race, creed or color, to enter a college or professional school. The Times

Those who argued for the support of "coercive legislation" charged that the association was "selling out" to reactionary interests. On the other hand, those who held that the colleges had the right to select their students warned that the association had gone too far. New York, N.Y.

Tolley Warns of State Action

In presenting his report, Dr. Tolley said that in several states measures had been introduced which threaten the tax-exempt status of non-sectarian colleges found guilty of racial or religious discrimination in the admission of students. Times 1-15-48

"However well intentioned such legislation may be, it would place in the hands of the state a threat of the freedom of colleges now independent of political control," the report continued. It asserted that through the proposed commission it would be possible to set up an active program among all colleges to broaden educational opportunity for qualified youth regardless of race, religion or national origin.

Opposing the report as being too mild, Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University, said it was filled with "pious hopes," was little more than a "feeble document" and "an act of benevolent condescension."

"There are seventeen states in which the will of the colleges to act on the question of segregation is curtailed by law," Dr. Johnson continued. "The colleges cannot admit qualified students even if they so desired." Times

Vigorous opposition greeted the resolution that states enact legislation to curb colleges that practice discrimination. 1-15-48

"Tolerance cannot be coerced by legislation," President Daniel L. Marsh of Boston University asserted. "We must not let the nose of the legislative camel get under the tent of the independent college." The Times

Objecting to this viewpoint, various educators urged the association to take "a forthright step" in sponsoring measures against discrimination. New York N.Y.

Heads of Nation's Colleges Discuss Ways to Meet Financial and Other Problems

14b

By BENJAMIN FINE

Six years ago this month a thousand college and university presidents met in Baltimore to determine how they could best readjust their programs to meet the emergency caused by the war. They pledged an all-out campaign to help defeat our enemies.

This week the same educational leaders met in Cincinnati, and spokesmen for the Association of American Colleges brought out that education in the post-war world was not entirely free of problems. But whereas six years ago the colleges were afraid their doors might close for lack of students, now they wonder where they can find enough funds to keep going and at the same time provide an adequate standard of education for their huge enrollments.

College heads representing every section of the country indicated that their institutions faced a serious financial crisis. Many colleges and universities that weathered the depression and then the war are now deeply concerned at what the future may bring. Their budgets have become unbalanced and rising costs have begun to make sharp inroads upon their resources.

The tuition a student pays to his college does not defray the costs of his education. Usually it pays for just about half the costs, in some instances 70 or 75 per cent. As the number of students increases, the cost to the colleges grows proportionately greater. And that appears to be the trouble at present. Colleges are bursting at the seams, with a record enrollment of 2,500,000—more than 1,000,000 above the pre-war figure. Sun. 1-18-48

Effect of the Increase

The Times

Various solutions were suggested. One obvious step—and it has been taken by virtually all of the colleges—is that of raising tuition fees. During the past few years colleges have increased their rates 25 to 50 per cent. Unfortunately, however, as tuition rates go up, the colleges are closed to students on the lower economic levels. Most of the educators agreed that, with minor adjustments, they have gone just about as far as they can go.

Private funds are being sought by all of the institutions. Almost every college, large or small, has a fund-raising campaign under way. A recent NEW YORK TIMES survey indicated that $1 billion is being sought by the colleges from alumni and friends of higher education. Educators here reported that the alumni are more responsive than they have been in the past; Colgate University, typical of others, has raised $100,000 in the last year, compared with $20,000 in another post-war year. New York, N.Y.

Can these private gifts meet the needs of the colleges? Educators who attended the conference do not think so. At best the money raised in this way enables the colleges to remain solvent, to pay their faculties and meet various operating expenses. From a long-range point of view, though, these gifts are insufficient to meet the growing demands of youth for a college education. Far greater sums are necessary than can be raised through private sources. Sun. 1-18-48

With a doubled college enrollment expected by 1960, the colleges must increase their facilities. A gigantic building and construction program has been outlined—but thus far it is only on paper. Many college heads reported that the money they had put aside for their expansion programs had melted away because of inflationary costs. A dormitory that could have been built for $500,000 in 1940 will now cost more than $1,000,000. Even where the college is willing to pay the addi[illegible]al price, it cannot find a contractor who will undertake the job.

Federal Assistance Sun 1-18-48

What is the answer? Many presidents argued that the time had come when the colleges, even the privately endowed liberal arts institutions, would have to turn to the Federal Government for assistance. Some of the educators reached this conclusion with evident reluctance. They explained apologetically that they were taking this position only as a last resort.

What form should Federal aid take? All of the educators insisted that if the Government stepped in, it must do so without exerting any kind of control. A great fear of regimentation and loss of independence was expressed. The college heads warned that Federal interference would be disastrous to the high traditions of liberal education in this country.

A majority here were probably opposed to direct Federal assistance. They favored a scholarship program whereby the Federal Government would subsidize the student and not the college. This is the pattern set by the Veterans Administration in providing tuition funds to the ex-service men. According to the officials here, it has worked successfully, with a minimum of interference in the life of the college. Sun 1-18-48

Whether scholarships alone can solve the financial problem now faced by the colleges was questioned by many educational leaders. They felt that if higher education was to expand, a well conceived program of Federal aid, both direct and indirect, would be needed. Moreover, they favored funds for the huge building projects badly needed on most of the nation's campuses.

Military Training Opposed

But the question of Federal support was not the only major issue at the conference. Whether the association should support compulsory military training came in for considerable discussion. At a spirited session, President Harold W. Dodds of Princeton made a stirring plea for universal military training. Despite his appeal, the educators, by a 3-to-1 majority, rejected the concept of peacetime military conscription. The Times

In doing this, however, they emphasized that they believed in a strong national defense. Other means exist, they maintained, to prepare this country for an emergency that might lead to war. It was evident that a sharp cleavage existed on this subject, with followers of both groups deeply stirred by the issues involved. Nothing at the conference brought about so great an emotional flare-up as the discussion of military service. New York, N.Y.

For the first time at any recent association conference, the issue of minority groups in the colleges was raised. A year ago the association appointed a committee, headed by Chancellor William P. Tolley of Syracuse University, to consider the complex problems involved. In its report, the committee made it clear that it vigorously opposed any form of discrimination based on race, creed or color, and called upon the colleges to eliminate any discrimination that may exist.

However, the conference did not agree as to the best solution. The report concluded that the problem of discrimination should be solved by voluntary action and not by coercive legislation. Any legislation, however well intended, would place in the hands of the state a threat to the freedom of colleges, the educators believed.

It was the feeling of the college heads that greater progress could be made through voluntary action than by the enactment of legislation. The conference leaders suggested that a national commission be created, to which instances of discriminatory policies might be referred. The commission would have authority to investigate complaints and make the results of its investigations public. In this way, it was felt, the pressure of public opinion could be exerted on institutions that discriminate against minority groups. Because the colleges are expanding, more instructors are needed today than ever before. Many college presidents complained that they could not obtain an adequate teaching staff, enough qualified faculty members, received its share of attention, also. Frequently they are forced to employ

A purely academic problem, that of obtaining higher education faces today, the college leaders were in an optimistic frame of mind as they departed for the America's colleges and universities have maintained high standards despite the difficult post-war period. That is important because to a large extent our democratic way of life depends upon the continued existence of free and independent institutions of higher learning.

COLLEGE BIAS LAWS HELD UNDESIRABLE

Educators Condemn Admission Barriers, but Ask 'Voluntary Action' to End Them

Discriminatory admissions practices against minority racial and religious groups by institutions of higher learning are criticized by a committee of the Association of American Colleges in a report that will be discussed at the association's annual meeting in Cincinnati next week.

The report opposes, however, any attempt to solve by "coercive legislation" the problem of discrimination in admissions. It advocates that this problem "be solved by education and voluntary action." The committee is composed of the heads of three universities and two colleges under the chairmanship of Chancellor William P. Tolley of Syracuse University.

"The fact that our American colleges have their roots in the soil of religion means that they are expected to provide moral as well as intellectual leadership," the report observes. "The unfinished business of democracy is their special responsibility.

"If the lessons of freedom, justice and human brotherhood are to be learned, they must be taught in our colleges. If the tensions between races and creeds are to be lessened, they should first be reduced on the campus. If the problem of national unity is to be solved, it must first be solved in our institutions of learning."

Taking cognizance of "the fact that many colleges discriminate against minority racial and religious groups," the committee points out that legislation has been introduced in several states "which threatens the tax-exempt status of non-sectarian colleges found guilty of racial or religious discrimination in the admission of students."

"With the motives of the groups supporting such legislation, the members of your committee are in hearty accord," the report declares. "It is our conviction, however, that the problem of discrimination should be solved by education and voluntary action and not by coercive legislation. However well intentioned such legislation may be, it would place in the hands of the state a threat to the freedom of colleges now independent of political control.

"That independence is an effective safeguard of academic freedom in both tax supported and privately endowed institutions of higher learning. It is among our strongest defenses against the misuseof political control of our public schools. It is a powerful weapon protecting American democracy from the peril of state or national dictatorship. We are therefore opposed to any infringement of the freedom of the independent college."

The committee members recommend "that the most practicable approach to the problem is the appointment under the auspices of the Association of American Colleges of a national commission to which instances of discriminatory policies can be referred and which will have authority to investigate and establish the facts as accurately as possible."

Colleges and universities, the report adds, "will never be able to avert legislation requiring greater opportunities for minority groups by defending discriminatory practices or by talking in terms of token representation."

SECURITY, FREEDOM HELD MORAL QUEST

The Times
New York, N.Y.

Namm, White of NAACP and 16 Others Develop Premise at Middlebury Conference

Mon 4-26-48

By JOHN H. FENTON
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MIDDLEBURY, Vt., April 25—Two days of panel discussions on "man's quest for security and freedom," at the sixth annual Middlebury College Conference, ended today with the conclusion that those twin problems were moral ones.

That premise, observers agreed, underlay talks by eighteen representatives of various fields of endeavor. They were heard at four formal sessions. The enthusiasm all through was such that several of the speakers were importuned to expound their views further at informal moments.

The speakers, among whom were spokesmen for labor, management, religion and education, spoke to audiences exceeding 500 at each of the public sessions. In addition to Middlebury's student and faculty representation, there also were present students from McGill University, Toronto; Dartmouth and Bennington Colleges.

Namm Defends Capitalism

Benjamin Namm, public governor of the New York Curb Exchange, asserted that capitalism, the "best economic system yet devised," was in serious danger from a "cold civil war." This, he said, was being waged by "forces of disunity," who were taking advantage of "economic color blindness."

These are the days of featherbedding, Mr. Namm declared in his summation at the closing session, "of Petrillo's stand-by orchestras, of two and three times as many brakemen as the freight train needs."

The Tribune

Industry, he held, had a thirty-four-hour week and was demanding that "next year we want a thirty-hour week." In the construction field, too, "these are the days of laying only 500 bricks instead of 1,000, as in the old days."

Mr. Namm continued that it would be "scandalously unfair" to lay this "sick baby upon the sole doorstep of organized labor," but "American business must also assume its fair share of responsibility."

New York, N.Y.

Admitting that business probably had done a "poor job of public relations," Mr. Namm held that millions of persons had become prejudiced against private enterprise through "propaganda, statistical distortions and governmental 'name calling.'"

Herald

Dr. Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, charged that "Southern rebels" were combining with "Northern reactionary Republicans" to "wipe out every vestige of enlightenment" set forth in President Truman's civil rights program.

Warns of "Freedom's" Unrest

Further, Dr. White warned that the "stirring of freedom," brought about by the blandishments that the two world wars were fought to break down discrimination against minorities, was menacing the world's supplies of raw materials, including uranium in the Belgian Congo. The "brown natives" of such countries, he continued, "were sick and tired of being kicked around," and intended to submit to such treatment no longer.

He called for immediate abandonment of segregation, asserting it was too late to rely on "education," which he termed a method of avoiding the issue.

Dr. Arthur Schlesinger Jr., of Harvard, called for support of the "third force in Europe," represented by the non-Communist left. This, he said, could be achieved by the restoration of Selective Service for military strength, and by building up "an economic climate where free institutions can thrive."

He accused Henry Wallace of leading opposition to the Marshall Plan (ECA) "in the interests of the Communist party." Declaring that if Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio had been President, no European aid set-up would have been voted. Dr. Schlesinger expressed hope that the Democratic party would "awaken" to its responsibility by nominating a liberal like Justice William O. Douglas, or General Dwight D. Eisenhower for the Presidency.

Other panel speakers were William Agar, chief of the section for lecture services and educational liaison of the United Nations; Luigi Antonini, executive secretary, Italian division, International Ladies Garment Workers Union; Tell Berna, general manager, National Machine Tool Builders Association; Dean Robert R. R. Brooks of Williams College, Courtney Brown, head of the petroleum economics division, Standard Oil Company of New Jersey; Dr. W. E. Brown, dean and Professor of Preventive Medicine, University of Vermont; Bernard T. Feld, assistant professor of physics, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Chat Patterson, chairman of the American Veterans Committee, and Dr. Victor E. Reichert, rabbi of the Rockdale Avenue Temple, Cincinnati.

NAACP CONGRATULATES EWING ON EXCELLENT EDUCATION PROPOSALS

14b 2/27/48

Press Service of The NAACP. New York. N. Y.

New York, N. Y., Feb. 26--Oscar Ewing, Administrator of the Federal Security Administration, was today warmly congratulated by Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP, on the speech made by Mr. Ewing at the meeting, held in Atlantic City on February 24, of the American Association of School Administrators. Fri- 2-27-48

Highlighting the fact that almost 6,000,000 American children have been cheated of their education birthright, Oscar Ewing told the school administrators that the situation demands prompt and expanded Federal aid to remedy it. He stressed the impossibility of obtaining equal education for all citizens unless the South's dual system of white and Negro schools is ended. "But equality of opportunity is not all a matter of dollars and cents," Mr. Ewing continued. "You school people know better than any of us how racial discrimination aggravates economic handicaps....We can not be complacent while large numbers of Americans do not receive their birthright."

Press Service of The NAACP. New York. N.Y. Fri. 2-27-48

Walter White's message of appreciation to Mr. Ewing read: "Here is another telegram of congratulations and thanks -- this time for your courageous and unequivocable speech to the American Association of School Administrators at Atlantic City." Oscar Ewing received a telegram of congratulations from the NAACP executive secretary last week on his success in opening Gallinger Hospital in Washington, D. C. to Negro internes.

Friendly, Intelligent Approach

Monitor Editorial
The New York Herald Tribune

Hardly anybody ever asks the Negro what he thinks. Yet every tenth American is a Negro. This year the Negro is a burning political issue, even threatening to split the Democratic Party. Politicians roar, the courts cautiously ponder. Everybody is aware of the Negro, and yet in all the national turmoil being made over him the Negro himself remains an abstract, impersonal situation. So the Negro is America's riddle, enigma, dilemma, but practicaly nobody goes to the Negro for advice on what to do.

We are agreeably startled at this week's news from the University of Florida, where the South's Regional Council of Education earnestly conferred on speeding up the establishment of interstate schools providing professional and other graduate training that is now generally lacking in many of the individual states. There is no thought of dropping segregation, even on the graduate level, but we are delighted that the white educators and planners assembled in Florida invited Negro teachers to attend. Three Negro college presidents sat in with twenty-two white leaders in executive session. What is more, the governors of fifteen Southern States are asked each to appoint an outstanding Negro educator as working participant in the council. This is a warm and friendly act, let alone intelligent. We are glad that somebody got around to asking the Negro, and hope the idea spreads. Mon. 3-22-48

The Only Sound Position

Daily World

The National Association of Collegiate Deans and Registrars, at their annual meeting last week at Tuskegee Institute, approved without opposition a report of its resolution committee in which it registers its unqualified objection to the proposed regional college plan.

"It is unjust and undemocratic for a state to support institutions within its borders for one racial group and maintain at the same time that lack of funds requires Negro citizens to pursue higher education outside its borders", the committee reported. Atlanta, Ga. Fri-4-2-48

That is a sound position. It is difficult for any person to take any other position and remain on safe grounds. The southern governors' proposal to establish regional colleges is an obvious attempt to steer away from, rather than answer honestly, the provisions in the Supreme Court decision, directing the states to provide equal education for Negroes within their boundaries. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is asking that this be done within the states' boundaries. The United States Constitution requires that it be done. Justice requires that it be done. And the Negro Press as well as public sentiment, both Negro and white, requires that this be done.

ATLANTIC CITY.—(ANP)—An end to the dual system of white and Negro education was urged by Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security administrator, in a speech to the American Association of School administrators at their convention here this week.

Because of the cost of this dual system, he said, 6,000,000 American children have been "cheated" of their educational birthright. In October, 1945, there were 30,350,000 children in the country ranging from five to 19 years old, but only 24,500,000 were enrolled in school.

Aid Essential

The basic cause, he declared, is lack of money by parents, communities and states. He contended that federal aid is essential to "help make equality of education a reality—by overcoming economic, racial and regional discrimination. Other topics discussed at the Thursday session were, "Democracy in Faculty Administration Relationships," by Dr. George N. Redd, Fisk University Head of the Department of Education; "Faculty Morale as it Relates to Rank, Tenure, Salary Scale and Sabbatical Leave," by Dean W. W. E. Blanchett, Fort Valley State College, Fort Valley, Georgia, and "Legislative Function of the College Faculty," by Dr. James Holladay, University of Alabama, Regional representative of the American Association of University Professors.

An address open to students, faculty and visitors was delivered in the Institute Chapel at 6:30 p. m., Thursday. Dr. T. R. Solomon, Registrar, Prairie View A. and M. College spoke on "Students Role in the Democratic Progress" at this public meeting.

BANQUET HELD

A banquet was given in Tompkins Dining Hall at 8:00 o'clock Thursday night at which Dr. Harry V. Richardson, former Chaplain of Tuskegee, spoke on the conference theme.

At the Friday session, a special committee report, "Survey on Educational Trends in Curriculum Planning in the Liberal Arts Colleges" was given by Dean J. Newton Hill of Lincoln University, (Pennsylvania). This was followed by a report, "Student Government and Participation in Activities of the College," given by Dean J. T. Carter, Talladega College.

Other reasons given in the Association's opposition to regionalism were: "Regionalism is unnecessary for all states . . .; The individual states have not maintained equality through the past eighty-odd years of freedom for Negroes . . .; We cannot understand the justification for violation of the principle of states' rights merely for the sake of what might be called economy in education; We reaffirm our belief in the principle of equality of educational opportunity — that democracy demands that all citizens possess the right to attend any type of educational institution open to any other group; We confess that we are in a dilemma to believe that the principle of renationalism is offered in good faith by the leaders who at the same time express an unrelenting opposition to the "Civil Rights" bills as proposed by the President's Commission."

New officers of the Association elected are: Dean Bertram W. Doyle, Louisville Municipal College, Louisville, Kentucky, president; Registrar J. T. Brooks, State Teachers College, Baltimore, Maryland, Secretary; Mrs. Charlie S. Henderson, Arkansas State College, Pine Bluff, Assistant Secretary; Registrar C. D. Prairie View, Texas— According to an announcement from Dr. E. B. Evans the annual educational conference will be held at Prairie View March 5, 1948 begining at 9.

Dr. H. A. Bullock, head of the department of Sociology is again in charge of the study. Because of the new emphasis on better educational facilities for all children it is expected that this year's conference will be the most interesting in the long series. The subject is "The Academic Achievements of Texas Negro High School Graduates." The Standard Iowa High School contest examination is being given freshmen in the Negro Colleges of Texas and a sample of freshmen in eight White Colleges. This is being given to determine the amount of content information the high school student has after one semester in college and to determine whether or not there is a difference in the scores of Negro and white students and if so the nature of the difference. The study will list, in addition, the difference, if any, in Negro and White students grades in rural high schools over against those in urban centers. Appropriate exhibits will be arranged as usual.

Another Bi-Racial Meeting

Dear Sirs: We're certainly glad to hear of the bi-racial legislative session held by North Carolina students, as described in Robert Morrison's article, Revolution in North Carolina, in your issue of January 17. But to say that it was the first bi-racial student conference south of the Potomac is an exaggeration. Last December I attended a bi-racial session of the Southern Area Student Council of the Y. M. C. A. as a delegate from William and Mary. The S. A. S. C. has held bi-racial sessions for some time, and at this last conference it was voted that delegates to the National Council will be elected at our summer conference, to be held in June, which will be both bi-racial and coeducational.

IMPROVED EDUCATION IN SOUTH PREDICTED

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 15—Gov. Millard Caldwell of Florida said here today that racial segregation would take care of itself on a voluntary basis when the South improved its college educational facilities. Negroes would prefer to go to top-flight Negro colleges, he told the Southern University Conference.

Moves by the Southern Governors Conference toward establising regional colleges was not a plan trumped up to circumvent recent anti-segregation decisions, Governor Caldwell asserted. He said such a plan for improving educational facilities for both whites and Negroes had been discussed for twenty years.

Plans for starting regional schools were considered today by the regional education council of the Governors' conference. It seeks an executive director to conduct an eighteen-month survey. Governor Caldwell predicted that a $100,000 budget would be adopted.

In a press conference Governor Calddwell expressed the belief it would be impossible for President Truman to be nominated by the Democratic National Convention. He added:

"Mr. Truman has made an honest effort but he has demonstrated a lack of the fundamentals upon which the nation was founded. The principal of state's rights was the cornerstone of the union."

MALONE URGES 'RIGHTS' POLICY

Historian to South: Drop Sensitiveness

The South should stand fast on its great traditions, but drop its sensitiveness to criticism, Dr. Dumas Malone, noted historian, Wednesday night told the delegates to the eleventh annual meeting to the Southern University Conference at the Biltmore Hotel.

In that way the South could find a solution for its critical social questions, notably that on civil rights, said the Emory graduate, now professor of history at Columbia in New York.

"One of the greatest needs of the South," he continued, "is a positive approach to this question. Hitherto, we have had a negative approach. The result is that people outside the South have gained the impression that we are opposed to civil rights. From the outside, it looks as if the Southern policy is one of complete negation. I cannot believe that it is."

Dr. Malone suggested Southern educational leaders lead in drafting a policy which will result in equality of opportunity.

A Committee headed by Dr. Edward Mims, of Vanderbilt, is now considering such a statement and it may come before the conference today, The Constitution was told.

During the afternoon session, Dr. Ernest C. Colwell, President of the University of Chicago, predicted the entry of a large number of GIs into American universities this Fall will overcrowd classes so as to lower the standards of university education in America.

At today's session, Gov. Millard F. Caldwell, of Florida, will speak on "Regional Education in the South."

Prejudice Termed Most Serious Problem in U.S.

Students From 30 Universities Meet in Detroit, Draw Up Report After Study of Racial Practice

DETROIT—Prejudice is one of the most serious problems yet to be solved in the American Metropolitan scene, concluded the annual institute of the Student League for Industrial Democracy held here last week.

Speakers George Edwards, president of the Detroit City Council; Frank Winn, public relations director of the UAW-CIO, and executives of the major Detroit agencies in the field of human relations condemned the practices which lead to racial discrimination.

Introduced in Techniques

They instructed the students in the techniques of community investigation. Representing nearly 30 of the nation's universities, the students took field trips to factories, housing projects, key neighborhoods, and agencies concerned with the problem of prejudice.

Their findings will be published in pamphlet form, to be distributed as an example of community investigation toward alleviation of racial and religious tension. The three-day conference was followed by the National Convention of the Student League for Industrial Democracy.

Mr. Winn, speaking on "Labor's Program for Combatting Prejudice," said "An economy of abundance is one of the major objectives." He discussed the practice of his union in its constructive program to educate its members in tolerance.

In an additional experimentation, conference delegates met for an evening meal at a leading restaurant which has a reputation of occasionally refusing to serve colored citizens. No difficulty was encountered. Sessions were held on Wayne University and the University of Michigan extension campuses.

Freedom Train Departs After View By Throngs

Thousands Wait Patiently To See Heritage

"Freedom Is Everybody's Business." That slogan of the American Heritage Foundation was gloriuosly exemplified in Atlanta January 1 and 2 as thousands of Negro and white citizens of the Gate City stood in line until the closing hour of the public exhibition at 10 o'clock Friday night. The train went to Chattanooga from here.

The "freedom" symbol of freedom" has come and gone. Following its departure, however, was left a wake of inspired patriotism and revived faith in the principles of American democracy as old and young alike turned out en masse to view the legislative milestones and relics of sacred reverence.

Friday saw increased numbers join the extended single file of intent Negro and white spectators who took the prolonged trek from Marietta Street over Spring Street viaduct, winding into Union Station and down to the train itself.

CHATS FRIENDLY

Friendly chats were engaged among them to while away the time as each waited patiently to board the streamlined "Spirit of 1776." The aged and young alike expressed the heritage of the American way of life.

The old apparently sought the opportunity to reflect in restrospect the milestone of American history while the youngsters, energetic and "all eyes," wanted the opportunity of bringing a closer correlation to their studies of American history.

There on exhibit they saw the Emancipation Proclamation, Declaration of Independence, the Bill of Rights, the Gettysburg Address and many others, while the strains of patriotic and familiar State songs emanated from the background.

Immaculate Marines stood guard over the priceless documents and were seen to offer helping hands to the elderly ladies as they debarked

GEORGIA EXHIBIT

Augmenting the Freedom Train exhibit was the Georgia Heritage exhibit which contained historical documents of the state.

Marine guards inside the Freedom train said that there was keen interest in the section devoted to the freedom of American Negro slaves In this section were Abraham Lincoln's Baltimore Address, delivered April 1, 1864; his Gettysburg Address, delivered November 19, 1864; his own draft of the Emanciaption Proclamation and the official draft of the Emancipation Proclamation signed by Lincoln and Secretary of State Seward and the copy of the 13th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States which outlawed the institution of slavery.

The display of historical flags of the Republic probably slowed up the lines more than any other section.

Neither intermittent nor driving rain failed to keep thousands of Atlantans from seeing Freedom Train and its historical contents Thursday, the first of a two-day stay in the Gate City of the South.

Carnegie Fund Supported Important '47 Activities

Federal Aid Bill Aimed to Help States Equalize Educational Opportunities

No Boon to Colored Pupils in Dual Systems Since Local Legislatures Apportion Funds

By LOUIS LAUTIER
NNPA News Service
WASHINGTON

The purpose of the Federal-aid-to-education bill ostensibly is to assist States in equalizing educational opportunity through Federal allotments of not less than $5 per school age child in each state, with additional amounts for poorer States which are unable to guarantee a minimum educational program.

The bill does not propose to equalize education opportunities among the States or within individual States. It simply sets up a national floor of $50 per child in average daily attendance.

Classroom Expenditure Rates

The best financed school systems in the U.S. expended $6,000 or more per classroom unit in 1939-40. The term "expenditure per classroim unit" includes all current expenses — teacher's salary, books and instructional supplies, heating, cleaning, and the like.

The poorest financed school system varies from State to State. In New York the median expenditure per classroom unit is $4,100. In Mississippi it is $400.

Dual System Low

The median for the unsegregated schools of the North and West is $2,199 per classroom unit per year. For white schools in the 17 States which maintain dual systems, the expenditure is $1,166. For the colored schools in these States, it is $477.

The States which maintain separate schools have 92% of 80,946 classroom units supported at a level of less than $600. Sixty-nine per cent of 44,993 units costing less than $600, with an attendance of 1,270,881 children, are for colored children.

Only 23% or 18,250 units, with an attendance of 383,981, are for white children in these states, while 8% with an attendance of 68,720 children are in the 31 States with unsegregated schools.

No Boon to Colored Pupils

The bill provides that in States where separate schools are maintained, State legislatures shall provide an equitable apportionment of such funds for schools maintained for minority races, without reduction in the proportion of monies expended during 1947.

It further requires that the State plan shall provide that in local school jurisdictions where separate schools are maintained, current expenditures maintained for each racial group shall average not less than the minimum of $50 established for all local school systems.

This provision will permit the States having dual systems to continue to spend a smaller proportion of their State and local tax resources for colored pupils so long as Federal funds are equitable divided between white and colored schools.

Says Equal Schooling in States More Likely

WASHINGTON

"Passage of Federal Aid to Education Legislation, will enable colored Southerners to secure their civil rights in half the time required without such Federal educational assistance," Dr. John W. Davis, president of West Virginia State College, said at the National Education Association headquarters here recently.

Informally discussing the two bills now pending in the 80th Congress, one in the Senate, and one in the House, Dr. Davis declared that equalization of educational opportunities for ALL American children will do much to strengthen the democratic way of life.

A member of the important National Commission for the Defense of Democracy Through Education, of the NEA, Dr. Davis says that, this country must provide for all people the kind of education which will both teach the ideals of democracy, and enable all people to apply them intelligently.

Would Provide $5 Per Person

The Federal aid bills now in the Congress authorize Federal funds up to $300,000,000 a year to supplement local and State support of public elementary and secondary schools. They provide aid to States on the basis of a flat $5 per person.

In addition, an equalization fund would be created, which, in States where there is much inequality in opportunities, would be particularly helpful. According to recent statistics, Dr. Davis said, the greatest percentage of minority groups reside in States which will receive the greatest relative benefits.

Cost of Living Cited

Explaining the need, Dr. Davis pointed out that although the inadequate school expenditures for 1940 had increased by 1947, the increase did not correspond with the economic change. As a result, he added, the high expenditure districts have not been able in 1947 to purchase the first-rate education they were able to afford in 1940. Moreover, he pointed out that enormous inequalities in expenditure per pupil continue to exist both within individual States and among the States.

Louisiana, Mississippi Prefer Segregation To Federal Funds

NEW ORLEANS — Education spokesmen of Louisiana and Mississippi said last week they want no federal funds for college scholarships, if, as suggested by the president's commission on higher education, they must erase racial segregation from the states' colleges.

The president's committee two weeks ago in Washington D. C., recommended that $135,000,000 be appropriated to aid 300,000 needy students to complete their education. It also proposed that funds be allotted only "those institutions where discriminatory practices do not exist."

A campaign to erase school segregation laws from state statute books and to write new laws preventing racial discrimination by colleges was urged by the president's committee on higher education.

Need For Federal Aid To Schools Noted By NEA

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Each year between 1,000,000 and 1,250,000 of the nation's children, both white and Negro, are dropping out of school before completing a high school education, according to a study just completed by the National Education Association.

The group of states ranking in the lowest one-third, it is to be noting power and also in per child expenditure, the report reveals, are: Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, Arkansas, Florida, West Virginia, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Arizona, Kentucky, Virginia, Tennessee, Maryland and Vermont.

While the Research Division made no attempt to make a population breakdown in the states reported in the lowes one-third, it is to be noted that the Negro population of the United States is greatest in some of the states in the list. This leads to the conclusion that large numbers of Negro children are among the total "drop-outs" per year.

Figures noted in the beginning mean that 12,000,000 to 15,000,000 children discontinue their formal training some time before the final year of high school. About 547 out of every 1,000, the report reveals, thus leave school prematurely, failing to acquire the secondary school training, which should be considered a minimum essential.

Powerful Influence

The level of school financial support, it is pointed out, clearly exerts a powerful influence on the rate of survival in school, and support the need of federal aid to education in order to assure a minimum educational opportunity for all American youth.

Thus the states lowest in pupil attendance are states urgently in need of federal financial assistance for public education, it is pointed out.

Under the federal aid bill, which was passed by the Senate April 1, $300,000,000 would be appropriated for apportionment among the states on the basis of their need, ability, and effort in school support in an attempt to equalize basic educational opportunity.

The bill corresponding to S 472 in the House must be reported by the House Committee on Education and Labor before it can be acted upon by the entire House, where the legislation also has strong bi-partisan support.

Under the federal aid program the funds are to be spent under the constitution and statutes of each state, guaranteeing continued state control of the schools and enabling each state to give a minimum educational opportunity to every public school child.

The NEA says that "the federal aid program therefore is urgently needed in reducing effectively the number of pupils dropping out of school in all states, and particularly in those ranking low in income and in school support."

U. S. Aid to Schools Favored

PRINCETON, N. J.—A majority of American voters believe that the Federal Government should help State governments finance their school systems.

Almost one in three, however, thinks that the cost of education should be financed entirely by the individual States.

This issue is now before Congress in the form of the Taft bill, already passed by the Senate, under which the national government would spend about $300,000,000 annually in school aid. A similar bill is being considered by the House Committee on Education and Labor.

Public sentiment on the issue was tested by this question asked of representative voters throughout the country:

"There is a bill now before Congress which asks that the Federal Government distribute about $300,000,000 a year to the states for school aid. Do you think Congress should provide the money for this purpose or should school aid be left up to each state?"

The answers:

Approve Federal aid	51%
Qualified approval	5
Left up to State aid	31
No opinion	13

Respondents giving qualified approval said mainly that Federal aid should go only to the states most in need of financial help in raising educational help, which is the general intent of the Taft bill.

Half the voters in today's poll believe some states are below standard in providing education. The cross-section was asked:

School-Aid Bill Planned To Guard Segregation

Washington, July 26 (AP)—A federal-aid school bill designed to guard against possible attempts to ban segregation is planned by Senator Robertson (D., Va.).

States Have Absolute Control

Memphis World
Memphis, Tenn.
Fri. 4-9-48

BY LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—The Senate last Thursday passed by a vote of 58 to 22, a Federal aid to education bill containing a provision designed to give the states absolute control of their education systems and prevent Congress itself from imposing any limitation on appropriations authorized by the measure which might require abolition of the dual school system in the South.

Although the bill as originally reported contained a positive prohibition against impairment of local and state control over public elementary and secondary education, Senator Tom Connally, Democrat, of Texas, last Wednesday offered an amendment to prevent a limitation from being placed on an appropriation bill. 4-9-48

The Connally amendment, adopted by a voice vote, provides that appropriations authorized by the bill shall be made "without any limitation of such appropriation or condition inconsistent with or contrary to the terms of this Act."

"RIDER" PREVENTED

Debate on the Connally amendment clearly indicated that its purpose was to prevent a "rider" from being attached to an appropriation bill prohibiting the expenditure of funds in aid of education in states which maintain separate schools.

In opposing the bill last Thursday Senator Harry F. Byrd, Democrat, of Virginia, said the guaranties in the bill designed to give the states absolute control were not "worth the paper on which they are written." 4-9-48

"I wish to say, to the southern Senators that there is no guaranty that a provision will not be adopted, sooner or later, to the effect that no part of this money will be available to states which practice segregation in the schools", Senator Byrd said.

Memphis, Tenn.

FUTURE CURBS POSSIBLE

Despite the Connally amendment, he asserted, a majority in the House and Senate, under the rules of the two chambers, can prscribe limitations in an appropriation bill at any time.

Memphis

He cited an amendment offered to previous aid to education bill by Senator William Langer, Republican, of North Dakota, which would have compelled the operation of mixed schools in states having dual systems or would have denied such states the benefits of the bill. The Langer amendment was adopted but the bill was killed by sending it back to committee.

World

Senator Byrd also directed attention to the fact that the report of President Truman's Civil Rights Committee recommended that Federal grants-in-aid and other forms of Federal assistance denied to states which practice racial segregation or discrimination. 4-9-48

AREAS RECOMMENDED

An import-expert official, Franklyn A. Ajaye, suggested that West Africa also offered great opportunities for development. Other recommended points were Liberia and the African Gold Coast.

Fri.

The conference, third of a series sponsored by the Commerce Department, ended last Saturday. The meetings were directed by Emmer Martin Lancaster, adviser on Negro Affairs to Secretary of Commerce W. Averall Harriman. In addition to reports made by Government to officials, business men from all sections of the country related their experiences. 4-9-48

William R. Hudgins, young executive member of a New York mail order firm, proposed the organization of a half million dollar buying syndicate to serve retailed establishments owned and operated by colored people throughout the country.

The possbilities for colored persons in the Liberian trade revival undertaken by the Stettinius interests through the Liberia Company of 521 Fifth Avenue, New York City, would improve as plans were carried out for the production of cocoa, gold, iron ore, petroleum products and agricultural produce Stanley B. Adams, vice president of the company, declared.

Aid For U.S. School Bill Urged

Norfolk Journal & Guide

Washington - (ANP) - Mrs. Eugene Meyer, member of the President's Commission on Higher education and wife of the chairman of the board of the Washington Post, gave two reasons why the $300,000,000 school aid bill, now pending before the congress, should be supported, even though it recognizes and strengthens segregated public schools. Speaking before a Conference on Human Rights, Civil and Cultural, in Howard University last week she said:

5-29-48

"Because we need federal aid to education at once if we are going to salvage what's left of out school system, and segregation cannot be eliminated overnight.

"Because one of the most practical methods of working our way out of segregation is to make Negro schools just as good as white schools. The present bill is a first and essential step in this direction."

She pointed out that the President's committee had recommend among other things the repeal of segregation legislation, or where this could not be done at present, the establishment of "truly equal" educational facilities for Negroes from the lowest to highest levels.

"Only as the opportunity for higher education is equalized for every potential student who has the interest and ability to profit from higher education, can the ideals of democracy in education be recognized. Only if our children start with an even chance, will they have an equal chance in later life," she said.

The commission also recommended a scholarship program, but she said the first and most essential act must be the passage of the federal education bill by the house.

Other speakers attending the three-day conference were Edward H. Lawson of the United Nations Commision on Human Rights; and Robert K. Gardner, area specialist, United Nations Trusteeship division.

U. S. AID TO EDUCATION ON ALL LEVELS URGED

Times

Federal aid to education is essential on every level if the democratic principle of equality of opportunity is to be maintained, Dr. Bryn J. Hovde, president of the New School for Social Research, 66 West Twelfth Street, declared yesterday.

Wash. Post

Dr. Hovde spoke at the commencement exercises at the New School, at which sixteen students received certificates of proficiency in public relations. These students completed the training course in public relations and publicity, established by the college last year.

"Without Federal aid to education at every level, children and young people in the United States are not going to enjoy equality of opportunity in this supposedly democratic country," Dr. Hovde said. "There is just as much talent being born in rural districts as in cities, just as much in Mississippi as in New York. But much of it is wasted in rural districts and in the poorest states because the opportunities for education are incomparably poorer."

The division of public relations and publicity of the New School is the first of its kind in the country to offer specific and professional training in the field. It now enrolls 500 students each term in fifteen courses led by authorities. The curriculum covers public relations, writing for publicity, fact-finding and market research, motion picture publicity, social work publicity and international broadcasting.

Wash. Po. 6-13-48

James E. O'Bryon, director of press relations, Mutual Broadcasting System, spoke on "Where Do We Go from Here?" John D. Silvera and Miss Florence Wohlken spoke in behalf of the students. Homer C. Wadsworth, vice president of the New School, presented the certificates.

AID TO EDUCATION—A majority of American voters believe the federal government should help states finance their school systems. Already passed by the Senate, the Taft bill would distribute about $300,000,000 annually to the states in school aid. Fifty-one per cent of voters approve this step, but one in three thinks the cost of education should be borne entirely by individual states.

LOVE OF ALL CHILDREN IS A POLITICAL 'MUST'

So Federal Aid To Education Bill Has Great Chance

TROUBLE SEEN ELSEWHERE

By KENNETH L. DIXON
International News Service Writer

WASHINGTON, July 28.—It is axiomatic that all good politicians must love children—from the baby-kissing stage on up—and, naturally, they must favor legislation to improve the lot of same, just as they must oppose death, high taxes and the man-eating shark.

So perhaps it will come as no great surprise to the average citizen to learn that the measure most likely to be passed by the hot and bothered 80th Congress this special session is a bill supplying Federal aid to education.

Mr. Dixon

Or, at least, so said leaders of both parties when separately quizzed on Capitol Hill . . .

Actually, from their different points of view, the Democratic and Republican spokesmen list a good many pieces of legislation which they insist can well be passed during this session. But the gimmick is that they seldom agree on the same measures.

South Is Factor

The Federal Aid to Education Bill happens to be one of the very few which both sides feel can well be passed with a minimum of controversy. One of the factors deemed likely to expedite its passage is a change of mind, even though not of heart, of certain Southern states over the matter of whether the state's rights issue is involved.

Previously, some of the Deep South congressmen, eternally vigilant over the States' Rights issue, had insisted they would oppose the measure due to certain phraseology which they felt would lead to considerable Federal interference within the framework of their educational systems.

Recent revival of the Fair Employment Practices Commission issue did little to minimize their fears, to say the least. However, another factor has been brought forcibly to the fore in the matter—namely, that the same states tending to oppose the Federal Aid Bill are those whose educational systems need help the most!

After several huddles, it became probable—according to party leaders in the House—that the objections would be removed when the measure came up for debate.

Rewriting Is Likely

Just how this would be accomplished remained to be seen, although it could be done by some rephrasing of the measure to make it more palatable to the objecting states. Or, although this is less likely, the state's rights issue could be overlooked altogether in this instance in order to get the measure functioning in time for the forthcoming school term.

In any case, the House probably will do considerablye rewriting of the Senate-approved version of the Education Bill. Among other things, it is expected to trim considerably the Senate allocation of some $300,000,000 a year for the project.

But, of course, the bill is expected to be one of the first major measures enacted into law by the special session . . . .

A much more cloudy fate obviously awaits the more controversial measures, although Republican leaders solemnly insist that they can pass the Anti-Poll Tax and Anti-Lynching Bills that the President says he wants—if the President's own party will co-operate.

The catch of course, as the Republicans well know, is that the small but solid group of Southern senators is all set to filibuster until the cows come home before permitting passage of either measure. The fact that they are Democrats only pleases the boys across the aisle.

Neither Republicans nor Democrats saw much likelihood of any action on price control, rationing, other civil rights measures, minimum wage increases or a revised statute on admitttange of displaced persons.

Real Estate Lobby Confident

The housing issue remains one of the most confused of all. Leaders of both parties insist, and in all apparent sincerity, that there is no reason why some constructive action cannot be taken by the special session. But they grow immediately vague on terms of such a measure—and the Republicans in particular tend to shy away from any talk of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner Bill.

In that regard, the National Association of Real Estate Boards, long the leading foe of the T-E-W Bill and one of the most powerful of all local lobbying groups, seems to place renewed faith in the measure's defeat this session.

Recently the N.A.R.E.B. publicity releases gleefully quoted Herbert Brownell, Dewey campaign manager, as saying that fulfillment of such party platform promises as housing "obviously cannot be done at a rump session called at a political convention for political purposes in the heat of a political campaign."

This, according to the N.A.R.E.B. blurb, definitely strengthened opposition to any such housing legislation this session.

Pass This One Bill

THERE is every evidence that this politically inspired extra session of Congress will accomplish very little if anything except to waste the taxpayers' money.

The session will be justified, however, if it enacts into law the bi-partisan Aid to Education bill (HR 2953 and S 472) which would begin with an expenditure of $300,000,000 annually to aid the States to meet present educational needs.

It is difficult to exaggerate the value of this legislation to the Nation, especially to the colored children of the Southern States where per capita expenditure for schooling falls so far below the national level.

There can be no sound reason for delaying the passage of this legislation because both the Republican and Democratic parties are backing it and have favored it in their respective platforms.

Congress should therefore pass it without delay during this special session.

Organization Steadily Fights Wide-Open Measures

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Passage of the federal bill for $300 million annually to the states to equalize education with safeguards for segregated schools in the South gave more urgency and significance to the NAACP's fight in the South for equal school facilities for Negroes.

In Virginia where four county school cases are pending in the courts and where the Laury county school case was won at Richmond March 30, the public schools on last year's estimate would get $8,070,000 next year as a result of the bill.

Under the act, Virginia, like all other southern states, would be required to do more as regards the equality issue of expenditure of public school funds than to do refrain from falling below the proportionate spending of money between white and colored schools than that for the current school year.

CONTINUATION

In effect, it means that the system of robbery amounting in Virginia to more than several thousands of dollars annually would be continued with reference to expenditures per Negro education. The same situation would obtain for the entire south, amounting to millions yearly. In Maryland alone NAACP efforts to equalize the salaries of Negro teachers with those paid whites brought $750,000 annually into the pockets of Negro teachers.

Mississippi, which last week voted an appropriation of $25,000 in the house to fight suits filed by Negro teachers in that state seeking equal pay to white teachers, would get $16,985,000 from the federal government.

Rep. Tyler Homes told his colleagues that in addition to the the suit already pending in federal court at Jackson, Miss., there are threats of several more suits. The house voted anti-suit funds last week and at the same time offered a proposed constitutional amendment to bar Negroes from voting in the state.

MILLIONS IN "CHEAT"

Incidentally, Mississippi cheats Negroes annually out of a million or more of public funds for education. A similar situation obtains in Texas, one of whose senators, Tom Conaly, proposed the amendment to the federal bill to aid state education to safeguard segregation of Negro and white school children in the south while obtaining such aid.

In one or two previous proposals for federal aid to education, a provision was included to deny aid to education, a provision was included to deny aid to any state that discriminated against Negroes in the use of public funds for education. No bill has unitl now passed both houses of congress and the non-bias amendment was always defeated by southerners.

The NAACP has steadily fought any federal education and measure without the anti-discrimination stipulations and the south has fought as hard against any such provisions. Sen Byrd of Virginia fought the bill bitterly in the senate last week and Virginia's Gov. Tuck fears federal aid to state education will eventually lead to federal control of state education. Other southern political leaders in several instances share their apprehensions.

NEGRO EDUCATION HELD U. S. MATTER

(Special to The Times-Picayune)

Meridian, Miss., Dec. 31.—Federal aid to state school systems must be obtained to help bear the increasing burden of Negro education, H. M. Ivy, superintendent of schools of Meridian, Miss., announced here Tuesday.

Dr. Ivy, chairman of the legislative committee of the National Education Association, has just returned from addressing more than 250 teachers from 10 states at the Southeastern Conference of Classroom Teachers in Atlanta.

Dr. Ivy said Negro education is the biggest school problem in the South and that it would grow more difficult as years pass. He added that it is of federal interest that Negro education be expanded and therefore imperative that the nation undertake part of the cost through federal aid.

"We are not combatting improved Negro education," he explained. "We know that only by improving our average income can we improve our communities.

"So many people are confused and believe we must offer academic education to Negroes. They are wrong. The emphasis must and will be placed on elementary and secondary facilities."

Senate Passes School Aid Bill; $28 Per Child

$5 Annually Is Least, But Poorer States Will Be Given More

Byrd Is Against It

Taft, Pepper Recommend Passage Of Measure; Segregation Pondered

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The Senate passed and sent to the House Thursday legislation to authorize $300,000,000 of federal aid to the nation's grade and high schools each year.

The bill is aimed at more nearly equalizing the amounts spent for education throughout the country.

It would authorize grants in the poorer states up to about $28 a year for each child of school age. No state would receive less than $5 a year for each child from 5 to 17.

Passage was on a 58 to 22 vote.

It came after one of the Senate's leading advocates of federal economy, Senator Byrd (D), Virginia had protested in vain.

"Never in our history," Byrd shouted, "has there been a more unpropitious time for the Federal Government to enter into a long range proposition such as is proposed in the pending legislation."

The bill does not actually carry any funds. They must be voted in subsequent appropriations bills.

Byrd recalled that in 1943 Senator Taft (R) Ohio, a backer of the bill, opposed a similar system of grants.

Better Off, Then

Taft said then that states were in a much better position to finance education, than the federal treasury. He also protested about federal controls over local and state schools through the grants.

"I was wrong in that statement," Taft said, adding that when he examined detailed figures on state spending for schooling they "changed my mind."

Taft insisted that the pending bill carefully guards against federal control over education in the states and communities.

Senator Pepper (D), Florida urged passage of the bill. He said it will particularly aid the South which has 30 percent of the nation's school children and 17 percent of the income.

However, Byrd questioned whether there are adequate safeguards in the bill to assure against future tampering with segregated schools for whites and Negroes in Southern states. Despite guarantees in the bill, Byrd said, its passage would open the way to federal interference with the schools.

Rejects Amendment

Before the final vote, the Senate rejected an amendment by Senator McMahon (D), Connecticut to authorize $5,000,000 a year to help church and private schools meet the costs of pupil transportation, health services and non-religious textbooks. The vote was 66 to 14.

Principle provisions of the bill:

1. $300,000,000 would be authorized each year, to be allocated among the states on a formula based on the number of children of school age and the average income tax payments of the state. The first appropriations could be made for the fiscal year starting July 1.

2. No state would receive less than $5 a year for each pupil. Payments would range up to $28.50 a pupil, under present conditions. States would not have to put up matching funds to get the payments.

3. States would be required to develop plans for placing a floor of $50 per pupil a year under expenditures for education.

4. Federal grants would be reduced in proportion if state and local school expenditures fell below two and one-half per cent of the state's gross income.

Could Be Cut

5. They would also be reduced if the states reduced the relative amounts of their own funds they spent on schools. After the fourth year of operation under the act, a state would be required to spend at least two per cent of its gross income or $120 a child, which ever was greater, to qualify for federal funds.

6. Federal funds would have to be used for current expenses —salaries, supplies, upkeep and so on. They could not be used for new buildings or interest payments.

7. States whose constitutions allow them to aid church and private schools could so use federal funds.

8. States would be required to accept the provisions of the act through legislative action. Governors could so act until legislatures met.

9. States which maintain segregated schools would be required to maintain the same proportion of expenditures on white and Negro schools as they are spending this year.

10. Each state treasurer would act as a trustee of the funds, and state educational authorities would be required to furnish the U. S. commissioner of education with an audit showing how funds were used.

It Means $19,390,000 For Alabama Children

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Alabama will receive $19,390,000 as provided for the Federal Aid Bill for education which passed the Senate Thursday. Alabama's total will be the next largest amount of any of the other states. North Carolina is frist with $22,825,000.

Both of Alabama's Senators —Lister Hill and John Sparkman—voted for the bill.

Dual System Of Education

Waste--Ewing

ATLANTA CITY, Feb. 24—(AP) A top Federal Administration figure came out Tuesday for elimination of the dual educational system for whites and Negroes in the South.

Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator, addressed a conference of school administrators, stressing President Truman's recommendation of $300,000,000 for Federal aid to education.

The South's dual system, he said, should be eliminated to decrease the economic burden. He said: "Two sets of schools . . . two sets ow teachers. How costly this is. How wasteful."

Ewing declared Federal aid is essential to help make equality of education a reality all over the country—by overcoming economic, racial and regional discrimination."

"But equality of opportunity is not all a matter of dollars and cents," he said. "You school people know better than any of us how racial discrimination aggravates economic handicaps.

"Discrimination has had a lot of attention lately. I think it needs a lot of attention. Most people in this country want to do something about it. We cannot be complacent while large numbers of Americans do not receive their birthright."

EDUCATION AID BILL PASSED BY SENATE

First Year Cost Is Put at $300,000,000 With Parochial Aid Left to States

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, April 1—The Senate passed tonight, 58 to 22, the Taft Aid-to-Education Bill authorizing Federal grants intended to make certain that no state should spend less than $50 per pupil per year in any of its schools.

It was left to the states individually to determine, by way of their own constitutions, laws and policies, whether any of this Federal help could be extended, even indirectly, to private and parochial schools.

A similar measure lies inert in the House Labor Committee.

The estimated cost of the program to the Federal Government for the first year of its operation would be $300,000,000. Aid would be given primarily on the basis of need, so that the rich states would receive very little and the poor states a great deal.

The minimum received from the Government per school child would be $5 a year, as specified in an amendment by Senator Irving M. Ives, Republican, of New York. The maximum would go to $25 a year, or perhaps more.

New York, the wealthiest and most populous state, would have an allotment of about $12,010,000 while North Carolina would head all the forty-eight states with some $22,825,000.

The measure emerged from the Senate at the end of a long day of hard, acute debate in which the principal sponsor, Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, was heavily engaged.

In the last roll-call seventeen Republicans, among them his Ohio colleague, Senator John M. Bricker, repudiated Senator Taft's leadership and voted against the bill. They were joined by five Southern Democrats.

Thirty-one Democrats stood with twenty-seven Republicans to approve the measure.

The defections among the Republicans included that of the party whip, Senator Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska, and other such prominent party figures as Senator Chan Gurney of South Dakota, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, and Senator Eugene D. Milliken of Colorado, chairman of the Finance Committee.

This opposition came primarily against the whole theory and structure of the bill; Mr. Taft had little trouble in fighting off amendments.

Amendment Is Defeated

He took the lead in defeating, by 66 to 14, an effort by Senator Brien McMahon, Democrat, of Connecticut, to provide that where states had laws or policies against any sort of public help to parochial schools these schools could nevertheless apply directly to the Federal Government for their share of the aid fund.

All together they would have been permitted to receive a maximum of $5,000,000 a year, this not to be used as contributions to their actual educational programs but only in such collateral matters as bus transportation, health services and non-religious textbooks.

Mr. Taft, appealing for "the safe middle way," argued against this, as he had argued yesterday against a subsequently defeated amendment by Senator Forrest C. Donnell, Republican of Missouri, which stood exactly opposite to the McMahon plan.

Mr. Donnell would have specifically excluded any benefits, indirect or otherwise, to parochial or private schools, regardless of whether an individual state might be prepared to grant them.

After Mr. McMahon had gone down in defeat, two other proposed alterations in the bill were smashed. One, by Senator Albert

For the bill—O'Mahoney and Murray, Democrats, and Tobey, Republican.

Against the bill—Martin and Bushfield, Republicans, and Overton, Democrat.

W. Hawkes, Republican, of New Jersey, would have required instruction upon the Constitution in the schools.

The other, by Senator Theodore Francis Green, Democrat, of Rhode Island, would have provided Federal aid amounting to $15 for every school child but would have restricted the use of this money solely to raising teachers' pay.

Hotly beset from the floor and often by men who have long been among his closest conservative colleagues, Mr. Taft in taking a position of leadership on a so-called "liberal" issue voluntarily declared himself on questions far broader than the single one then in hand.

He took a stand for Federal aid not only in education but in housing and in health, and declared as well that action should be taken now to set up a "Federal aid system for relief" against the possibility of "another unemployment crisis."

It was not a "defensible proposition," he asserted, to take the line that "if there are poor states which are unable to give their citizens what they need, why that is just too bad and those people cannot have equal opportunity."

The way to "resist the impulse to Federal control," he declared, was to help, through grants, to "make the states strong."

Senator Taft was moved to issue a manifesto of his position, which was etxraordinarily detailed in the circumstances, largely by the de-

CONGRESS:

Taft and the Schools

It was Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio who almost singlehandedly, in October 1943, defeated a $300,000,000 program of Federal aid to the nation's school systems, sponsored by two Democrats, Elbert D. Thomas of Utah and Lister Hill of Alabama. His reason: It is a revolutionary proposal, one of the most revolutionary ever presented to Congress."

Last week it was the same Senator Taft who almost singlehandedly pushed through the Senate his own bill to provide $300,000,000 in Federal aid to the nation's school systems. In five years he had completely changed his mind.

If the Taft of the Presidential year 1948 sounded inconsistent with the Taft of the war year 1943, his change of heart was not solely motivated by politics. For after the Thomas-Hill measure was sidetracked, he had gone to work to rewrite it to make sure it could not be used as the opening wedge for Federal control of the schools.

Children and Dollars: As rewritten, the Taft version placed a minimum of $50 on the nationwide annual expenditure per student in elementary and secondary schools. By its terms, $300,000,000 in Federal funds would be doled out annually to the states in accordance with their needs. The poorest states would get as much as $28.50 per child, the richest at least $5. Because, as Hill put it, "the children are where the money ain't," half the total would be given to the eleven states of the Solid South. The biggest beneficiaries: North Carolina, $22,825,000; Alabama, $19,390,000; Texas, $18,675,000.

To guard against Federal control, the Taft bill provided that each state decide for itself, in accordance with its own laws and policies, whether any Federal aid should go to private and parochial schools.* But not all senators were satisfied. Forrest C. Donnell of Missouri wanted to ban any aid to private and parochial schools for fear of "undermining our public education and the future development of our republic." Brien McMahon of Connecticut wanted to authorize Federal aid to all parochial schools even when their own states do not help them. Rejecting both these proposals, Taft succeeded in holding his bill intact.

But in keeping with his aim to ban Federal interference, the Ohioan did accept an amendment from Tom Connally of Texas. Its effect was to outlaw any future attempt, by means of appropriations riders, to withhold Federal funds from states which segregate white and Negro children.

Without Strings: "If we want to defend against Federal control," Taft argued, "the thing to do is to refuse Federal control, draft our law so there is no Federal control, as the pending bill is drafted. I would rather stand on that ground than stand on the ground suggested . . . that the Federal government has no concern with education, has no concern with housing, has no concern with health, that these are matters solely for the states to take care of."

His view: It is not a "defensible proposition" to maintain that because some states are poor "these people cannot have equal opportunity."

Last Thursday, April 1, the Senate approved Taft's bill 58-22, with the opposition consisting mostly of GOP conservatives who usually are on Taft's side, like Eugene D. Millikin of Colorado, Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska, and his Ohio colleague, John W. Bricker. But whether Taft's bill would become law was still doubtful. The companion House measure, authored by Rep. Edward O. McCowen, himself an ex-president of the Ohio State Education Association, had only a 50-50 chance of emerging from an Education and Labor Committee pigeonhole.

*At present, nineteen states give state tax money to church-sponsored schools either for bus transportation, textbooks, or health training. Fifteen states allow nuns and priests to teach regular subjects in public schools.

Ban on Sectarian School Aid Rejected by Senate, 80 to 5

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, March 31—The Senate beat down today by 80 to 5 an attempt to deny to private and parochial schools any benefit under the Taft aid-to-education bill. The measure's principal sponsor, Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, then quickly accepted a Southern amendment which would lay a barrier against any future attempt by way of appropriations riders, to withhold such Federal help from states which segregate white and Negro school children.

The result of all this was to bring the bill close to final passage. This was expected to come tomorrow.

Mr. Taft agreed to the Southern proposal, which was put in by Senator Tom Connally of Texas, with the observation that it was entirely "consistent" with one of the principal declared objectives of the measure.

This objective was to guard against any sort of Federal interference with the administration and local control of the country's local school systems.

The effort to exclude private and parochial schools from either "support or benefit" of Federal funds was made by Senator Forrest C. Donnell, Republican, of Missouri.

Connally Amendment Adopted

Its effect would have been to lay it down, in what Senator Donnell termed "unmistakable" language, that Federal money could not be used directly in aid of parochial or private schools or indirectly in such ways as helping to make bus and free textbook service available to children in such schools.

Senator Taft had first given notice that he would attack the Donnell amendment on the floor. As the day wore on, he did not do so, apparently in the belief that it would in any case be overwhelmingly defeated.

In the roll-call, Mr. Donnell was joined by four Democrats, all from the South. They were Senators Olin Johnston of South Carolina, John L. McClellan of Arkansas, W. Lee O'Daniel of Texas and William B. Umstead of North Carolina.

The bipartisan opposition majority of eighty included thirty-

Senator Connally's amendment was adopted without objection on a voice vote. It simply stated that no future appropriation bill brought out to support the Taft program could carry any condition that was "inconsistent" with the terms of the aid act itself.

Tonight only a single major controversy in the bill was left unfought. This involved a pending amendment by Senator Brien McMahon, Democrat, of Connecticut, which would have about the opposite effect of that by Senator Donnell.

Where Mr. Donnell would have denied even incidental aid or support to Catholic or other religious or private schools, Mr. McMahon would permit them to receive such aid, even in states with policies of hostility to it, so long as help was limited to transportation and health services and the like.

Specifically, his amendment would provide that wherever a state administration was prohibited by state law from distributing funds to non-public and tax-exempt schools, the Federal Government could hand the money in to it directly.

In no case, however, could such Federal help be used to support the school's vital functions—its curriculum and the like—but only to supply related services and to buy non-religious textbooks and so on.

Mr. Taft opposed Mr. McMahon, as he had Senator Donnell at the other end of the controversy. He argued that both plans would constitute Federal intervention in the school policies of the states and thus that both should fall.

Defeated Equal Facilities For Negroes Provision

Mr. Whitten and Representative Andresen joined hands to cut by 40 per cent the amount of money that could be spent for farm machinery under the foreign relief program and was author of the amendment to that appropriation act which limited the amount that could be spent for nitrate fertilizer to not more than twice that which could be provided by the Army, thereby giving American farmers more fertilizer. The amendment was designed to insure that those in charge of the relief program would not violate the amendment by Representative Abernethy (D., Miss.) which limits the exports of

Phelps-Stokes Fund Elects Officers, Hears Dr. Tobias

NEW YORK (ANP) — The Phelps-Stokes Fund, philanthropic organization which has played an important role in education in the United State as well as that of Africans coming to this country, held its annual meeting in its offices at 101 Park Ave., last Wednesday.

I. Newton Stokes was re-elected president. Dr. Emory Ross, who had served as secretary, was elected vice president succeeding Mrs. John D. Hatch, a member of the Stokes family now residing in Oregon. John Reisner was elected secretary. Frederick L. Rowe is the new executive secretary of the fund, succeeding L. A. Roy who resigned after many years' service.

Continued efforts to counsel and aid African students who are studying in the United States will be made. A separate office is to be established in NYC for the Booker Washington Institute of Kakata Liberia. Its work and representation here in the United States have largely been carried by the Phelps Stokes staff heretofore.

Sidney Hillman Scholarship Funds Awarded Howard U.

WASHINGTON — Among the first colleges to receive funds from the $1,000,000 Sidney Hillman Foundation established in memory of the late president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of American, was Howard University.

Trustees dispensed $30,000 for 1948-49 and will distribute awards yearly for 25 years to schools motivated by the aims of the late Hillman, union leader and humanitarian, who died in 1946.

Howard university received $2,000. Roosevelt college of Chicago received $5,000; New School for Social Research, New York City, $2,000 and School of Industrial and Labor Relations, Cornell university, Ithaca, N. Y., $2,000.

Negro Education Press Fund of Wall Street

Why Bankers Aid Negro Colleges

Daily Worker, Cambridge, Mass.
Editor, Daily Worker, New York, N.

I enjoyed Abner Berry's column on Negro education in the Feb. 19 issue. There is one thing which I could add to it. In the February, 1948 issue of Fortune, there is an article which speaks of the Negro Education Press Fund of Wall Street. On pages 145-6 there is a quotation from one of the big bankers—Winthrop Aldrich, I think, where he says that the reason the bankers contribute to this fund is because if the colleges did not get the money from the fund, they would go to the government and this would be "socialism." Here's the information right from the horse's mouth!

John D.'s Magic Millions Multiply For Man's Welfare—35 Years Later

The News Birmingham, Ala.
Mon. 14c

BY SAUL PETT

NEW YORK, May 17 — (AP) — Thirty-five years ago this week John D. Rockefeller, Sr., set out to improve the "well-being of mankind" through the Rockefeller Foundation. 5-17-48

Since then, the foundation has grown into a global giant with cash in every pocket. It has spent $413,907,068 in every country of the world and in virtually every type of effort to improve human life.

It has spent twice as much as it started with and still has almost as much as Rockefeller put into it. And with what's left, says President Raymond B. Fosdick, the foundation can go on spending for "perhaps another two generations' 'before running dry.

Just how much mans' well-being has been advanced by this money is incalculable, but the score in lives saved might be measured in millions. The contribution to man's knowledge also has been great, also incalcuable. Among its achievements, money or men supplied by the foundation have:

Developed the vaccine which brought yellow fever under control; sharply reduced deaths caused by malaria and hookworm; built the world's first big atom-smasher at the University of California; built the 200-inch Mt. Palomar telescope, which will project man's sight into the universe two times farther than was possible before; helped improve scores of public health systems around the world as well as start 25 nursing schools in 14 countries; trained more than 9,000 men in all branches of science.

THE FOUNDATION BEGAN spending money on May 22, 1913, shortly after Rockefeller told his aids: The News

"I know how what I want to do with my money. I made it all over the world and will spend it there. Get the people interested in their diseases. . . . Get knowledge into the minds of the people."

The foundation is still spending money all over the world and for a breath-taking variety of reasons. Right now, more than 90 different institutions and a half dozen foreign governments are working with foundation funds appropriated in 1947—a record year when $23,000,000 was allocated.

Medical research and medical education in China are being expanded with a new $10,000,000 grant. Mexico has another $266,000 to try to increase its corn yield. Mon.

AS A RESULT of Rockefeller money recently appropriated, researchers at the University of Copenhagen are working on the biological uses of isotopes; Columbia University is studying trends in labor union leadership; Uruguay's minister of public health is installing new equipment for biological research; Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey is polling the nation on its sex habits; Chicago University is studying and training people for race relations work. Birmingham, Ala.

The National Bureau of Economic Research has another $1,300,000 for the academic war against depressions; the University of Alabama is analyzing the poll tax issue; the Royal Institute of International Affairs, London, is preparing a history of the war; the Social Science Council, New York, is studying housing problems; the University of California is training personnel for Slavic studies; a Dutch institute has $25,000 to hold a conference on German problems; the British Museum, London, has $56,000 to set up a microfilm laboratory. 5-17-48

In all, Rockefeller set aside about $500,000 for philanthropic work. There are now three separate Rockefeller organizations spending the money—the Foundation, the Institute of Medical Research and the General Education Board.

Profitable investments explain why the foundation is still worth almost as much as when it started. Old John D. set it up with $100,000,000 and before his death in 1937 added another $100,000,000. With most of its money invested in oil securities, the foundation has been able to spend almost $296,000,000 from income and more than $118,000,000 from capital.

Its investments now have a market value of more than $198,000,000, making it one of the greatest, if not the greatest single foundation in the world. Mon.

TO SPEND ALL ITS MILLIONS, the Rockefeller Foundation maintains a staff of about 200 and branch offices in London, Paris, Shanghai and New Delhi. Its headquarters are on the 55th floor of the RCA Building in Rockefeller Center, presided oved by the quiet, graying Fosdick, who is about to retire at 65 after 13 years as president. 5-17-48

Fosdick is especially proud of the total $44,000,000 spent in China and thinks this one achievement will be best remembered.

He thinks that the chief purpose of a foundation should not be to support accepted principles but "to work on the frontiers of knowledge, for this is venture capital we're using."

In recent years the foundation has been emphasizing the social sciences, where the return is less measurable and, so far, less rewarding.

"That is the challenge now—how are we going to organize the world on a rational basis," Fosdick says. "Unless this is solved, we won't be able to enjoy the results of a cyclotron or new telepscope or anything else that comes out of the pure sciences."

The News Birmingham, Ala.

REPEATEDLY, the foundation announces:

"The foundation does not make gifts or loans to individuals or finance patents or altruistic movements involving private profit, or contribute to the building or maintenance of churches, hospitals or other local organizations, or support campaigns to influence public opinion." Mon. 5-17-48

Nonetheless, it gets a strange variety of requests: A widow needs $5,000 by return mail to save the farm. A mother wants medical advice about her daughter's sinus. A father could educate his five daughters if only he had a $40 monthly pension. Finally, there was the immigrant who arrived at Ellis Island and wrote:

"Here I am, Mr. Rockefeller please send my check for $1,000,000 here."

Rosenwald Gave $22 Million; Fund Ceases Operation in June

CHICAGO—(ANP)—The Julius Rosenwald Fund established in 1917 "for the well-being of mankind," will cease operations as of June 30, it was learned here last week.

Set up by the Chicago philanthropist more than thirty years ago, it has expended some $22,500,000 on varied projects ranging from rural schools for Negroes to coveted fellowships for writers, artists, musicians, scientists and educators of all races.

The money came from the capital and interest on the original endowment made of 227,784 shares of Sears, Roebuck and Company stock. As head of the firm, Rosenwald specified that returns from it be spent within twenty-five years after his death. He died in 1932.

Negro colleges, especially Howard, Dillard and Fisk Universities and the six schools of the Atlanta Federation of Colleges, received $5,000,000 of this sum. Another $5,000,000 went to establish 5,357 Negro public and rural schools in fifteen Southern States.

The grant was made with the understanding that local authorities would be responsible for the upkeep at a total of $20,000,000.

In fellowships, $2,000,000 has benefited 600 Negroes and 250 whites. Among those receiving grants were the internationally famous Marian Anderson, who was able to continue her musical studies, and Katherine Dunham, who left the University of Chicago campus to study native dances in the West Indies.

A grant to Willard Motley enabled him to finish his best seller, "Knock On Any Door."

PRIVATE PHILANTHROPY PASSING

Thirty-one years ago, Julius Rosenwald put ten million dollars into a fund to help mankind, the whole of which was to be spent within 25 years of his death.

Mr. Rosenwald died in 1932. The money was invested in stock of Sears, Roebuck and Company and increased in time to 22 millions. Nine years ahead of schedule, the fund trustees last week announced that they had spent the entire sum and that, come June 30, the fund would cease to exist.

The Rosenwald Fund appropriated 5 millions for the building of some 5,357 rural schools in the South, 5 millions to Howard University, Meharry Medical College, Fisk, Atlanta and Dillard universities, and 3½ millions for equalizing health facilities, services and clinics. Some 2 millions more were appropriated for fellowships for advanced training of members of both races and 3 millions went into the general field of race relations.

Thousands of children, now grown, once traded a broken down shack for a new and clean Rosenwald school, one-third of which was paid for by the county school board, one-third by the citizens themselves and one-third by Rosenwald.

No other benefactors we know of spread 22 million dollars to cover so many causes and did it so well.

Another philanthropist, Miss Anna Jeannes, provided a million-dollar fund now being used to raise the standards of rural school teachers in the South.

The Carnegie Corporation, the Rockefeller Fund and the General Education Board are other public trusts with large endowments which have contributed much in the field of philanthropic endeavor.

As these benefactions end (and they all will some day) their place is being taken over more and more by Federal appropriations.

Recently, Congress took steps to pass a bill appropriating millions to education in the poorer States. It has been buying school lunches for children, providing scholarships for veterans and building hospitals.

Then, too, there has been an increase in money given by small donors representing alumni of our many educational institutions. We are reminded of this responsibility with the current campaign of the United Negro College Fund to raise $1,400,000 for 32 participating colleges.

What these colleges are asking amounts to only 10 per cent of their operating costs. They should receive a generous and immediate response.

Slowly but surely, the days of the Carnegies, Rockefellers and Rosenwalds are passing. Where private philanthropy stops, public appropriations and individual giving must begin.

THE END OF THE ROSENWALD FUND has been reached. Now the eye of want and the hand of "thank you" will now look for other fields of plenty.

June 30 the books will be closed, the desk cleared and the door shut, and the name Rosenwald will be added to the great story of American philanthropy.

The Rosenwald Fund is another chapter in the unending story of Booker T. Washington. One evening Washington met Rosenwald after Washington had delivered one of his famous speeches on "Education."

Next morning Mr. Rosenwald had joined Washington's organization, for which Washington supplied the needs and his rich friends supplied relief. A few months, and Mr. Rosenwalk was a Tuskegee trustee.

As with Carnegie so with Rosenwald, Mr. Washington was kept busy reaching him for first one cause, then another.

Mr. Rosenwald's benefits covered not only education, but business, ventures of the boisterous imaginative and specifications of the daring. He held out to the last.

The bulk of Kennon's time in Africa was spent in Ethiopia where he made a thorough commercial survey of that country and the surrounding regions.

He plans to conduct a nationwide lecture tour shortly to explain to the American public the commercial opportunities available in the Orient.

Social Work School Gets Rosenwald Gift

CHICAGO—(ANP)— Trustees of the Julius Rosenwald fund at their final meeting just held voted $100,000 to four southern universities in appropriations of $25,000 each to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Fisk University, Nashville; Dillard University, New Orleans, and to the school of social work of Atlanta University, according to an announcement by Edwin R. Embree, president of the fund.

In choosing these four southern Universities to receive the bulk of the remaining resources of the fund, Fisk, Dillard, and Atlanta were recognized as places offering the highest opportunities for the Negro group. The University of North Carolina was chosen because of its distinction in higher education and its intellectual leadership in southern liberalism.

Total contributions of the fund to these four institutions in which it has been especially interested during the past 20 years have exceeded $2.500.000.

ROSENWALD FUND LISTS LAST GRANTS

$100,000 in Study Fellowships Awarded to 29 Negroes and 18 White Southerners

New York Times

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The fund will have spent $22,000,000 to "enrich and equalize opportunities for all Americans" when it closes its work late next month.

Atlanta U Given $25,000

The Constitution

The School of Social Work of Atlanta University has been recognized as one of four Southern schools "offering the highest opportunities for the Negro" by the Julius Rosenwald Fund. The Atlanta school received a grant, of $25,000 from the Fund.

The Trustees of the Rosenwald Fund, at their final meeting held recently in Chicago, voted $100,000 to the four Southern Schools, in appropriations of $25,000 each. Other schools named are the University of North Carolina, Fisk University, Nashville, and Dillard University, New Orleans.

In choosing the universities to receive the bulk of the remaining resources of the Fund, Fisk, Dillard and Atlanta were recognized for their leadership in the Negro group. The University of North Carolina was chosen beacuse of its distinction in higher education and its intellectual leadership in Southern liberalism.

The grant received by the Atlanta University School will be used to help develop child clinics, and also as a means of providing training and service in psychiatric social work.

Total contributions of the Fund to these four institutions in which it has been especially interested during the past 20 years have exceeded $2.500.000.

Primus Is Rosenwald Fellowship Winner

New York Amsterdam News

Following the announcement by the Julius Rosenwald Fund that Pearl Primus, well-known dancer was commissioned by them to make a survey of the native dances of Africa, Miss Primus is completing plans to sail for Africa Sept. 1.

She will stay several months and will go deep into the interior to territories never before studied from the standpoint of the dance. Recently at a concert at Fisk University in Nashville, Edwin R. Embree, President of the Julius Rosenwald Fund and other members were present, and were so impressed with the quality of her work and authenticity of her dances, that they were surprised to learn she had gathered all her information from films and books and had never yet been to Africa, and so the fellowship was awarded then and there.

Chicago U Gets Rosenwald House

New York Amsterdam News

CHICAGO (ANP)—The Julius Rosenwald Fund has deeded the house and property at 4901 Ellis Avenue to the University of Chicago, according to an announcement by Edwin R. Embree, president of the fund.

"The deed," Mr. Embree said, "provides that the ownership, use or occupancy of the property shall never be restricted on the grounds of race, creed, color, or national origin. This building, the former home of Julius Rosenwald, has been the headquarters office of the fund since 1932. It will be used by the university to house agencies that will continue certain aspects of the fund's work: The American Council on Race relations and the National Research Center."

Phelps accompanied the presentation by singing, "Let Us Break Bread Together."

Rosenwald's Final Gifts

Memphis World Memphis, Tenn

We have already had occasion to mention the great benefits which have come to Negroes and whites of the South particularly, from the late Julius Rosenwald Fund. And although we shall not be permitted to go into that impressive record here, we can assure our readers that it is well worth repeating.

At a special meeting at Dillard university recently appropriate exercises were held, signaling the windup of these charities. At a subsequent gathering a special banquet was held in Chicago, Illinois to which several hundreds of Negro and white scholars, who, during the lifetime of the Fund, had been recipients of grants, scholarships and fellowships.

Now comes the final cleanup with the Trustees voting $100,000 to four southern universities as follows: University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; Fisk University at Nashville, Dillard University at New Orleans, and Atlanta University School of Social Work at Atlanta. Each of the above institutions has been granted $25,000. Edwin Embree, the Fund director, said of the gift: "In choosing these four southern universities to receive the bulk of the remaining resources of the fund, Fisk, Dillard and Atlanta were recognized as places offering the highest opportunities for the Negro group. The University of North Carolina was chosen because of its distinction in higher education and its intellectual leadership in southern liberalism.

From our standpoint, we cannot think of any institutions beyond the ones chosen, which so richly merit and deserve the gifts coming from the Rosenwald Fund. We rejoice that they were honored with the gifts and pray sincerely that this additional gift will enable them to prosecute a stronger and more vigorous leadership program in the future. We think it significant that the total gifts to these four institutions during the past 20 years have exceeded $2,500,000.

Appreciation To Philanthropist Is Expressed

CHICAGO— (ANP) — The banquet in Stevens hotel here Friday night, signalizing the cessation of activities on the part of the Julius Rosenwald fund, was a brilliant climax to a day which brought together former Rosenwald fellows, friends and well wishers from all over the country. It was a gesture of appreciation to one of the most effective and interesting philanthropic efforts to touch and affect Negro life in America.

Part of a program honoring the trustees and officers of the fund, it followed an outstanding seminar held in the afternoon during which Dr. W. E. B. DuBois and Gunnar Myrdal spoke on "Human Relations in the 20th Century". Dr. Robert C. Weaver presided over the seminar.

First speaker at the dinner was Lessing Rosenwald, eldest son of the founder, who thanked officers, trustees and friends on behalf of the Rosenwald family, for the honor paid his father, and presented a gift to Edwin Rogers Embree, the fund's president. Toastmaster Ira DeA. Reid remarked that this was the first time a great fund had dispersed its capital and career even before the time limit had expired, thereby carrying out the expressed wish of Mr. Rosenwald.

Next in line came words of thanks and appreciation from Rosenwald fellows. Miss Lillian Smith, editor of "The South Today," described the inner urge which kept her and other authors and artists fighting to express themselves in other than ordinary patterns."

Sterling Brown read his folk poems, "Slim Green," "Long Gone."

Trustees of the Rosenwald fund had 25 years to spend $10,000,000. The fund was a gift of Sears, Roebuck & Company stock from the late Julius Rosenwald, internationally known philanthropist. He directed it be used solely for "the well-being of mankind."

WORK ENDS JUNE 30

America to Miss Rosenwald Fund

The Courier Detroit, Mich.
Sun. 5-30-48

BY WALTER WHITE

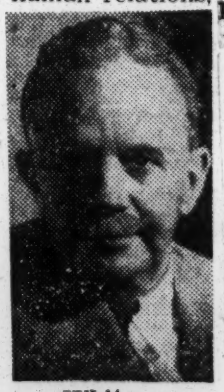
Secretary, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People

WASHINGTON—The demise of the Julius Rosenwald Fund on June 30 will leave a void in the American scene which it will be hard to fill.

Even in times like ours, when astronomical sums are voted for armaments programs and European relief which would have been incredible to previous generations, 21 million dollars is still a lot of money.

That is the sum which the Rosenwald Fund has expended in the last 31 years to the enormous enrichment of American life and in particular on the raising of educational, health and civil rights standards for American Negroes. 5-30-48

BUT GREAT as has been the material aid the Fund has given to education and human relations, fare more important has been the social philosophy which has guided much of the activities of the Fund, particularly in the past decade. Like all other mortal institutions, it has made mistakes. Its efforts to establish a segregated medical school for Negroes in Pennsylvania in 1931 as a means of supplying the training denied to Negroes in tax-supported and privately endowed medical schools and hospitals was ill considered.



White

But tne Fund was wise enough to abandon that proposal when considerable opposition developed.

DURING ITS early years, the Fund followed the then current pattern of contributing chiefly to "safe and sound" institutions and individuals instead of to those who saw that a basically rotten system based on racial discrimination could not be patched up or made permanently workable or desirable.

But the Rosenwald Fund, more than any other philanthropic foundation, kept abreast of the times and continued to grow in its basic philosophies with the passing of the years.

It was this capacity to continue growing which made the Rosenwald Fund more effective in its distribution of $22,000,000 than might have been the case had it expended many times that amount.

IT WAS responsible for the erection of 5,367 rural schools in the South. But it did not make this contribution outright. It required the matching by the community of the sums given by the Fund. 5-30-48

Another $5,000,000 was given by the Fund to aid Negro colleges to supply education to Negroes which their white fellow Southerners received from tax-supported schools.

In the field of public health the Fund contributed more than $2,000,000 for health facilities in areas chiefly in the South where states refused or failed to give medical care to Negro citizens.

PERHAPS MOST lasting of the contributions the Fund has made are the fellowships and scholarships which have been given to white and Negro Southerners to fit them for more effective attack on the economic, social, political and racial problems of the South and of America. 5-30-48

The climate of public opinion on the problems of the South and of race relations in America generally has been more materially changed by the work of the Rosenwald Fund than it will ever be able to establish.

CHICAGO—(SNS)— With a little over two months left before termination of the Julian Rosenwald fund which contributed millions toward the advancement of opportunities for the underprivileged, the fund's president, Edwin R. Embree, made the following statement Monday:

Although the fund (having spent $22,000,000 since 1932) was used to enrich and equalize opportunities for all Americans, opportunities in America are not yet nearly equal. Negroes who make up 10 percent of our total population are under legal disabilities in every Southern state and suffer social and economic their job nine years ahead of schedule.

Expenditures listed by Mr. Embree are:

1. $5,000,000 for building of 5,357 rural schools for Negroes.
2. $5,000,000 to Negro Colleges.
3. $2,000,000 for development for Negro health service.
4. $1,500,000 for pay clinics and other facilities for persons of Moderate means and establishment of hospital insurance.
5. $2,000,000 for fellowships for advanced training of 600 Negroes and 250 white Southerners.
6. $3,000,000 in race relations.
7. $4,000,000 in general education.

Many other groups are subject to prejudice and discrimination."

Mr. Embree added, however, that tremendous progress has been made. Steadily, though too slowly, all citizens are enjoying more and more of the rights and opportunities of American life."

Rosenwald fund trustees had 25 years to spend $10,000,000 which was a gift of Sears, Roebuck & Co. stock from the late Julius Rosenwald, philanthropist, who directed that it be used solely for "the well being of mankind."

Rosenwald Charities

Administrator of the estate of the late Julius Rosenwald have announced that Fund will cease operation as of June 30, 1948. Established in 1917 "for the well-being of mankind," the Fund has come to be a household word in the hearts and homes of colored Americans, especially in rural and southern communities.

Atlanta Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

The thirty year-old Fund has expended some twenty-two and a half millions on varied projects ranging from rural schools for Negroes to coveted fellowships for writers, artists musicians, scientists and educators of all races.

This money was made possible from the capital and interest on the original endowment made of 227, 784 shares of Sears, Roebuck and Company stock. As head of the Fund Rosenwald specified that returns be spent within 25 years after his death.

Fri - 4 - 2 - 48

Negro colleges, especially Howard, Dillard and Fisk Universities and the six colleges of the Atlanta University system, received five million of the 22 millions another 5 millions went to erect 5,357 Negro public and rural schools in 15 southern states. In fellowships, 2 million dollars has benefitted 600 Negroes and 250 whites.

Of course Negroes will miss the benefits which the Fund has provided over the years. Of course Negro school children will miss the comfort which the familiar Rosenwald schools provided in the principal counties of the southern states. And Negro students will miss the advantages of scholarship grants which the Fund has so generously provided. Subtracting the great gains Negroes and the South have made through the Rosenwald Fund, it would be difficult to imagine the plight of Negroes today.

Rosenwald Fund To Cease Operations On June 30

Atlanta Daily World
atlanta, Ga.

CHICAGO.—(ANP)—The Julius Rosenwald fund, established in 1917 "for the well-being of mankind," will cease operations as of June 30, it was learned here last week. Set up by the Chicago philanthropist more than 30 years ago, it has expended some $22,500,000 on varied projects ranging from rural schools for Negroes to coveted fellowships for writers, artists, musicians, scientists and educators of all races.

Fri 4-2-48

The money came from the capital and interest on the original endowment made of 227,784 shares of Sears, Roebuck and Company stock. As head of the firm, Rosenwald specified that returns from it be spent within 25 years after his death. He died in 1932.

Negro colleges, especially Howard, Dillard and Fisk universities and the six schools of the Atlanta Federation of colleges, received $5,000,000 of this sum. Another $5,000,000 went to establish 5,357 Negro public and rural schools in 15 southern states. The grant was made with the understanding that local authorities would be responsible for the upkeep at a total of $20,000,000.

In fellowships, $2,000,000 has benefitted 600 Negroes and 250 whites. Among those receiving grants were the internationally famous Marian Anderson, who was able to continue her musical studies, and Katherine Dunham who left the University of Chicago campus to study native dances in the West Indies. A grant to Willary Motley enabled him to finish his best seller, "Knock on Any Door."

The South and The Rosenwald Fund

Thurs 6-10-48

The South has no single benefactor as generous as the Rosenwald Fund, now ended, according to original plans. The Rosenwald Fund spent its millions in the South—always separately on the two races, with the greater amount spent in the field which the South was not reaching, Negro education and public health.

Whatever the personal feelings of the executives may have been—and some were considered radical and objectionable by some Southerners, and none believed in segregation, the undisputed fact remains that the money was spent separately and with good intent and results. While it strove to improve interracial problems, it "bought up" no Southerners; it kept none on a pay roll; it was always a philanthropic fund whose books were audited annually and the results published. That such a benefactor should have been made a political smear remains one of the puzzling and disturbing evidences of fuzzy and distorted thinking which too often is a part of our public opinion.

Founded in 1917 by the late Julius Rosenwald, who dreaded "the effect of a dead hand on social progress," it was stipulated the principal and interest should be spent within 25 years, at which time the Fund would go out of existence. Each generation, he felt, should take responsibility for its own problems. One of the problems of his generation, he believed, was that of education in the South, particularly that of Negro education.

Millions The South got $5,184,381 in badly needed school buildings. It received $1,729,850 in teacher education. Negro colleges and universities, all in the South, received $3,359,502, most of which, like the other money, found its way into the channels of trade and business. Negro health, with attendant establishment of health clinics and employment of nurses, received almost $2,000,000 in the span of 25 years.

Thurs.

Altogether, $22,104,749 was spent—all in the South.

Construction of school buildings was the first project of the Fund. By advancing relatively small contributions, the Fund stimulated the construction of 5,357 school buildings in the South. It never gave the full cost. These were built for Negroes in 883 counties in 15 States at a total cost of $28,400,000, of which the Fund paid 15 percent only.

Buildings North Carolina got the most buildings—813. Mississippi was second with 633. Florida was low with 125. Georgia was low with 261. Texas, for example, was helped with 527, South Carolina with 500, Louisiana with 473. There was also help with extending school terms, establishing school bus service, and so on.

The Constitution

The need for help, which still exists, was great.

In addition the Fund helped white schools which had rural teaching programs and it assisted in building school plants. It never sought to mix the two.

Atlanta, Ga.

It is true that the members of the administration staff were opposed to the pattern of segregation and said so in their writings, and their public utterances. But never did they seek to use the money save as directed, and this did not mix schools or services.

Yet, all the while these millions were flowing into Southern business, there were State administrations which eagerly accepted the money for their schools, and at the same time loudly damned the Fund in political campaigns. This was true in Georgia, which during the violent attacks on the Fund, eagerly accepted its money for white and Negro education.

Thurs 6-10-48

Fellowships In all its 25 years the Fund awarded only 741 fellowships, in amounts of about $1,500 each. This was but a minor part of its financial expenditures. Of the 741 total, 218 were to white persons and 523 to Negroes. The fellowships were given in the fields of education, dentistry, fine arts, music, home economics, religion, social work, labor, law, nursing, agriculture, drama and so on.

The critics of the Fund often hinted darkly the Fund was buying up newspapermen with fellowships. In its 25 years the Fund

THE ROSENWALD FUND

By June 30 the last dollar of the Rosenwald Fund is to be spent. That will bring to a close the story of a unique philanthropy that has had its effect on the trend of American charity. It was the founder's purpose to spread the idea that each generation should take care of its own.

Julius Rosenwald was strongly opposed to philanthropic perpetuity. He felt, that the dead hand, however carefully guided, had a paralyzing effect on in accord with Mr. Rosenwald's wishes. He wanted the fund used up, but not to be foolishly generous. No donation was made without the strictest in-

Rosenwald Fund Out of Business

Atlanta, Ga. Wed. 6-9-48

This is a piece about the Rosenwald Fund.

I most earnestly desire that it be cut out and pasted in the hats of those persons most accustomed to talking through their hats.

The Rosenwald Fund is no more.

It has ended its business by expending its money. I do not know what demagogues and uninformed people who knew nothing about it, but who damned it on the word of demagogues and race-baiters, will do now that the Fund is ended, completely and finally, but I believe it important to write of it factually for the matter of record.

The Fund followed the directions of the late Julius Rosenwald, who did not believe in perpetual endowments.

Purpose It had been the chief purpose of the Fund to aid Negro education in the South—since the South had little money for schools. It was never at any time contemplated that the money expended should be for the purpose of mixing the races. It was never attempted. The schools built were segregated schools.

The South received, largely in school buildings, payments to teacher funds to enable schools to hire badly needed help; in public health work and clinics, many millions of dollars. All of it was patiently spent in segregated fields with no strings attached.

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

Club This makes all the more amazing the fact that the Fund was used as a political club by many politicians who were exploiting the race issue. The most absurd, false and unworthy statements were made about the Fund. The opinions of one of its officers were seized upon and presented as the aim of the Fund. An effort was made to create a sinister atmosphere, when all the while white schools in the South were receiving thousands as well as Negro schools. For example, the late Eugene Talmadge, at the time he was most violent in his abuse of the Fund, never once interfered with the thousands of dollars it was giving each month to the college at Carrollton, Ga., to pay for a teacher-training program in rural white education.

Wed.

Uninformed persons used to speak of Southerners being "on the Rosenwald pay roll." The facts were it never had a Southerner on its pay roll save those who might have been employed in its office or on its staff of workers.

Fellowship It did award fellowships to persons of both races who were found to be engaged in work which might be better and more intelligently done if opportunity were had to obtain advance experience of training. This was but a small part of the Fund's spending, only a few fellowships being awarded each year.

These fellowships averaged about $1,500. Once awarded, there was no obligation on the part of the recipient, save that of principle and self-respect.

Wed. 6-9-48

The recipient could have spent it on booze and women, lost it at the craps table or spent it as he might otherwise have pleased. There was no report to make to the Fund; no writings to submit; no obligation in the future. Once it was made it was done.

Self I know of this because, in 1937, I was one of about 40 of about 850 seeking them, to get one. It was one of the finest things that ever happened to me, and the most valuable. I was considered because I had been writing some articles on the farm problems of the South and on the need for co-operative marketing for the small farmers. I received a $1,500 fellowship. The Constitution granted me leave and also helped me. I had sold historical articles which brought in another $1,500. This enabled me to take my wife and go to Scandinavia where I diligently visited, lived with, talked with, and wrote about the farm marketing problems and methods of small farmers in countries with a population akin to that of Georgia. I also visited, and spent time in, the rural schools and I have been gratified by the fact that our own rural school program is turning more and more toward the intelligent one they had—designed of, for and by rural people. A number of papers took the articles and, by living in cheap hotels and boarding houses, I managed to travel on the continent, visit Great Britain and to have the great luck to catch on with the German movement into Austria. I never heard from the Rosenwald Fund and they heard nothing—and expected to hear nothing—from me. I regard the experience and the Fund with gratitude. The South has been well served and benefited by the millions spent in our region.

Wed. 6-9-48

These fellowships were but a small part, and a very small part, in truth, of the Fund's activities. For the most part, it poured money into the South in a field where the States had not the money to spend. And never once did it seek to upset the social pattern, however executives of the Fund may have felt about that system, or to mix the races in the schools. This needs to be said, in the name of truth and right. What did the Southern States receive in money? That will have to be a second chapter for tomorrow.

Rosenwald's Final Gifts

Daily World

We have already had occasion to mention the great benefits which have come to Negroes and whites of the South particularly, from the late Julius Rosenwald Fund. And although we shall not be permitted to go into that impressive record here, we can assure our readers that it is well worth repeating.

Atlanta, Ga.

At a special meeting at Dillard university recently appropriate exercises were held, signaling the windup of these charities. At a subsequent gathering a special banquet was held in Chicago, Illinois to which several hundreds of Negro and white scholars, who, during the lifetime of the Fund, had been recipients of grants, scholarships and fellowships.

Now comes the final cleanup with the Trustees voting $100,000 to four southern universities as follows: University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; Fisk University at Nashville, Dillard University at New Orleans, and Atlanta University School of Social Work at Atlanta. Each of the above institutions has been granted $25,000. Edwin Embree, the Fund director, said of the gift: "In choosing these four southern universities to receive the bulk of the remaining resources of the fund, Fisk, Dillard and Atlanta were recognized as places offering the highest opportunities for the Negro group. The University of North Carolina was chosen because of its distinction in higher education and its intellectual leadership in southern liberalism.

From our standpoint, we cannot think of any institutions beyond the ones chosen, which so richly merit and deserve the gifts coming from the Rosenwald Fund. We rejoice that they were honored with the gifts and pray sincerely that this additional gift will enable them to prosecute a stronger and more vigorous leadership program in the future. We think it significant that the total gifts to these four institutions during the past 20 years have exceeded $2,500,000.

ROSENWALD FUND SPENT $22,000,000

The New York Times

Founder's Wish for Generation of Social Aid Is Completed, Work Will End June 30

Mon. 4-26-48

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CHICAGO, April 25—With June 30 set for closing of the work of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, Edwin R. Embree, president of the fund for more than twenty years, enumerated today the "major efforts" of the organization to "enrich and equalize opportunities for all Americans" since its creation thirty-one years ago.

Spent was $22,000,000, the capital and income of 227,784 shares of stock in Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago mail-order house, which Mr. Rosenwald headed.

In officially announcing the termination date decided upon by the fund's trust, Mr. Embree said:

"The fund has followed the instructions of its founder in expending principal as well as income. Mr. Rosenwald did not believe in perpetual endowments.

Task for Each Generation

"Feeling that each generation should care for its own progress and that funds should be used while ideas and enthusiasms were fresh, he stipulated that the foundation he created should expend itself and close its work within twenty-five years of his death.

The New York Times

Mon. 4-26-48

"The present vote of the trustees, following active work and generous expenditures, sets the closing date eight years earlier than actually required by the terms of the trust."

In reviewing the "tremendous progress" of the fund since its founding, Mr. Embree warned that "opportunities in America are not yet nearly equal," adding:

"Negroes, who make up 10 per cent of our total population, are under legal disabilities in every Southern state and suffer social and economic handicaps throughout the nation. Many other groups are subject to prejudice and discrimination.

"Yet the progress during the thirty-one years of the fund's life has been tremendous. Negroes now rate in education, health, economic status and other measures of achievement far above the total population of all but a few very favored nations. They are participating in every phase of American life—labor and industry, science and scholarship, music and the fine arts, public leadership of all sorts.

Goal Is Handed Along

"Steadily, though too slowly, all citizens are enjoying peace and more of the rights and opportunities of American life. In closing its work the fund confidently counts on other American agencies and individuals to continue to enrich and equalize opportunities for all the people."

The New York Times

Mon. 4-26-48

Mr. Embree listed these "major efforts" of the fund:

"1. The building of 5,357 rural schools for Negroes in cooperation with Southern states and counties. Into this work the fund put $5,000,000, which attracted almost equal amounts from Negroes and white friends and over $20,000,000 in tax funds from the Southern communities.

"2. Contributions totaling $5,000,000 to Negro colleges, especially the four major university centers in Washington, Atlanta, Nashville and New Orleans.

"3. Efforts to equalize health facilities, including $2,000,000 for the development of health services and $1,500,000 for paying for Negroes and white scholars, who, during the lifetime of the Fund, had been recipients of grants, scholarships and fellowships.

Now comes the final cleanup with the Trustees voting $100,000 to four southern universities as follows: University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; Fisk University at Nashville, Dillard University at New Orleans, and Atlanta University School of Social Work at Atlanta. Each of the above institutions has been granted $25,000. Edwin Embree, the Fund director, said of the gift: "In choosing these four southern universities to receive the bulk of the remaining resources of the fund, Fisk, Dillard and Atlanta were recognized as places offering the highest opportunities for the Negro group. The University of North Carolina was chosen because of its distinction in higher education and its intellectual leadership in southern liberalism.

From our standpoint, we cannot think of any institutions beyond the ones chosen, which so richly merit and deserve the gifts coming from the Rosenwald Fund. We rejoice that they were honored with the gifts and pray sincerely that this additional gift will enable them to prosecute a stronger and more vigorous leadership program in the future. We think it significant that the total gifts to these four institutions during the past 20 years have exceeded $2,500,000.

Bush Mt. Group Meets With City School Head

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

A group of Negro citizens, representing the Progressive League of Education committee of the Bush Mountain vicinity, called on City Schools Superintendent Ira Jarrell at her office Tuesday seeking alleviation to the acute inadequacies suffered by their two room portable elementary school. Wed.

When the conference ended, the committee expressed itself as having gained naught. 3-10-48

Although this isolated school has an enrollment of 204 pupils and staffed by five teachers, it has no facilities for running water, inside toilets, paved streets. The committee feels that it is part of the City Education system and as such should be granted adequate accommodations.

What they got from Miss Jarrell is summed up in the expression "nothing definite."

The committee comprised: C. J. Jackson, president of the organization; Mrs. Christine Winn, P.T.A. Chairman; Willie Shyne, Chairman of the organization; Miss Ola Jackson, Mrs. Grace Walker Trammell, Ham Jordan, Walter Reynolds and Jamts McDower.

Miss Jarrell admitted the urgency of the Committee's request but said it would be some time before such could possibly materialize.

The pupils at the school have to get their drinking water from nearby wells.

Meanwhile, a petition from the organization has been forwarded to Mayor William Hartsfield, requesting that he lend his support in easing the situation.

The recommendations submitted to Miss Jerrell are as follows:

"It is recommended that the following improvements be made regarding the Bush Mountain School, they are as follows:

1. That all double and triple sessions in the Bush Mountain be eliminated; Daily World

2. That the length of the school day for students of the Bush Mountain school be lengthened to that of white pupils in the same division; Atlanta, Ga.

3. That the same teacher-pupil ratio shall exist in the Bush Mountain school as that which exist in white schools; Wed.

4. That there be established a library, cafeteria, auditorium and teacher's lounge in the Bush Mountain school; 3-10-48

5. That adequate playground facilities and equipment be made available;

6. That running water and inside toilets be establishtd in the school; and

7. That the Atlanta Board of Education use the $17,000.00 for additional classrooms, allocated by the Bond Issue as of August 14, 1946, for the improvement of the Bush Mountain School."

Peters Asks Equal Schools

14d(1) Discrimination (Georgia)

The Constitution

Constitution State News Service.

WEST POINT, March 25—The Chairman of the Herman Talmadge-controlled State Democratic Party—a "white primary" exponent himself—Thursday said that Georgia should provide its Negro children with schools as good as those of its white children.

Urging a multi-million dollar expansion of Georgia's educational facilities, Chairman James S. Peters, of Manchester, told the West Point Rotary Club; 3-26-48

"The time has passed when we can afford to give the Negro children any less advantages than the white children, but I don't favor any modification of our system of segregation." Atlanta, Ga.

"Georgia can no longer plead poverty," he asserted. "If she doesn't provide her people with good schools, good roads and adequate health and welfare services, it will be because of inertia and not lack of money." Tue.

Board Blamed For Gary Strike

Memphis World

CHICAGO— (ANP) —Ray O. Sine, attorney for the parent-teacher association of the Emerson school, Gary Ind., has placed the blame for last year's student strikes against the admission of Negro pupils on "intercultural experiments" by the Gary board of education. Memphis, Tenn. Tues. 4-27-48

Sine's denunciation of the board was aired on station WBBM here Sunday morning as a "reply" to a dramatization of the Gary affair over WBBM last September on the program "Democracy U. S. A."

Sine shadow-boxed with the "democracy" and sought to show that the student strike. referred to as "truancy," was in keeping with the American ideal of democracy. He implied that both the colored and white students were happy in their separate schools, and that neither was in favor of a mixed situation. Tues.

It was not a question of school districts that led to the presence of Negro students at Emerson, he said, rather the desire of the school board to try out intercultural education. 4-27-48

Sine's statement, which was based upon technicalities of the law rather than upon fundamental questions of justice, looked forward to a return of the separate status.

SEGREGATION NOT AN ISSUE
SUPERINTENDENT SAYS

Atlanta Daily World

Indianapolis—(ANP)— White parents kept 150 elementary school children from public school 32 last week in protest against the enrollment of 90 Negro pupils from overcrowded segregated schools. About 260 white children attended the school. Wed 9-22-48

The enrollment of Negro pupils climaxed a fight against segregated schools in Indianapolis led by the NAACP. The school board ordered the transfer of the colored children from schools 23 and 87 after hearing complaints from their parents about the overcrowded conditions of these schools and the inconvenience of sending their children as far as three miles from home to school.

According to Supt. Virgil Stinebaugh, the question of segregation did not enter into the board's decision to transfer the colored children to the white school. The overcrowded situarion at the two schools while school 32 had empty classrooms caused the decision, he said. Wed 9-22-48

Irate white parents called a mass meeting in the neighborhood and voted unanimously to keep their children home, then chased up and down the street to get other parents to support their action.

One parent, C. Arthur Landes, said, "It isn't that we don't want our chi children to go to school with colored kids. We just don't like the idea of our children being used as guinea pigs. If they are going to end segregation, we insist they end it in all the schools at the same time."

PARENTS ORGANIZE

The protest meeting was organized after the school principal, Mary R. Konk, told the PTA of the board's decision.

In making his decision Supt. Stinebaugh explained the conditions at the colored schools and the white, and said, "Acting on these facts the board decided to transfer the pupils. Providing adequate school ficilities for our children transcend any other policy."

A board member commented that 12 other schools are mixed already. He added that the board has "no definite policy on segregation and it certainly didn't have anything to do with our moving the school 23 pupils."

In protest to the board of education colored parents in the neighborhood of school 32 pointed out that some of them had to send their children as far as three miles from home to go to school. They noted that the colored schools were overcrowded while the white school had empty class rooms.

Although parent of colored children in the neighborhood of school 43 complained of like conditions in the cases of their children the board refused to open that white school to colored children.

School 32 is located at 2110 N. Illinois St. and school 43 is located at 150 W. 140th St. The two Negro schools in question are school 23 at 360 W. 13th St. and school 87 at 2411 Indianapolis Ave.

Some of the comments made by Negro parents at the historical board meeting were:

"My neighborhood's been filled with white children all summer. I welcomed them then and I welcome them now. But when my little child entered school 87 last week the white kid came and asked, "Why weren't you in school today?" I don't like it, and I'll never like it." Harry Harper.

My boy doesn't even have a seat in school 87. Yet at 43 the teachers don't have full classes." George W Robinson.

"I have just one question to ask the board. My daughter attended a white kindergarten last year and now she has entered school. She came home and asked me, "Why can't I go to school with Patsy Ann?" I'm asking you that same question. Thomas Taylor.

Henry J. Richardson, Jr., an attorney, pointed out the legal aspects of the case. He said that the group did not want to take court action but would rather work with the board to solve the the problem.

New Orleans School Board Sued on Bias

NEW ORLEANS, June 3 (UP) — fourteen Negroes, seven of them minors, filed suit in Federal District Court today charging the Orleans Parish School Board has discriminated against Negro students.

The suit asked judgment declaring the Board's policy has denied Negroes residing in Orleans Parish their right to receive instruction equivalent to that given white children.

The plaintiffs also sought a judgement which would declare the board has denied Negro adults their right to participate in adult educational courses.

High Court Gets New School Case

By Dillard Oakes

NEW ORLEANS (FP).—The courts will now have a chance to decide whether "separate but equal schools"—that is, Jimcrow schools—are constitutional. The test will come on a suit filed in federal court here charging that educational policies of the Orleans Parish School violate the 14th amendment. The suit was brought by a Citizens Committee of seven Negro adults on behalf of themselves and seven Negro children.

Presented by Atty. A. P. Tureaud of the state office of the Natl. Assn. for Advancement of Colored People, the suit charges that Negro children are denied the right to receive instruction in courses of study and in modern and sanitary schools such as are provided for white children. It further charges that adult Negroes are denied the right to participate in the public education programs.

THE NAACP is throwing its resources behind this crucial suit and plans to carry it to the U. S. Supreme Court if necessary.

The move actually began two years ago when the Citizens Committee petitioned the school board for correction of the same injustices charged in the suit. The board did nothing about it. School Supt. Lionel J. Bourgeois, however, has been forced by the flagrant inadequacies of Negro schools here to report time and time again that some steps would have to be taken. His recommendations have usually taken the form of suggesting that old and little-used white schools be turned over to Negro students.

The superintendent's suggestion and the reasons he gave for them have supplied invaluable ammunition to the NAACP in bringing its suit.

IT IS A FACT, for example, that only one high school in New Orleans prepares Negro youth for college, and that school was condemned for use when it was attended by white pupils. The only other high schools for Negroes are the Booker T. Washington, a trade school, and a small high school across the river in Algiers.

It is also a fact, admitted by Bourgeois, that at the end of the present school term 1,109 Negro children will graduate from elementary schools and will have no adequate secondary schools to attend.

New Suit Charges School Inequality

Another suit alleging discrimination against Negroes in the Iberville parish schools was filed Thursday in federal district court.

The action was taken by the parents or guardians of 36 Negro children against the Iberville parish school board. It asks a declaratory judgment and demands that Negro children be provided with bus transportation facilities equal to white children.

It also repeats charges contained in a similar suit filed Wednesday against the Orleans parish school board that Negro children are not given the opportunity to pursue courses of study equal to white children and that buildings and other physical facilities are not equal.

Schools In Louisiana Discriminate Against Negroes, Suits Charge

NEW ORLEANS, June 3—(AP)—Two Louisiana parish school boards have been charged in U. S. District Court suits with discriminating against Negro students and violating the 14th amendment to the Constitution.

The suits were filed by 24 Negroes against the Orleans and Iberville parish school boards yesterday.

The Orleans parish board was charged with denying Negro children instruction in certain courses of study afforded white students. It is also charged that adult Negroes are barred from the public education program and that modern and sanitary schools, such as are provided for white students, are not provided for Negroes. The suit also claims that there will be no adequate secondary schools available for the 1,100 Negro children who will be graduated from elementary schools this year.

Local Daily Urges Better Education For Negro Youths

Courier-Pittsburgh 1-8

JACKSON, Miss.—(ANP)—A local daily, the Jackson Daily News, indicted the educational program for Negroes in Mississippi, in a recent article. It brought out the fact that the State spends more money for the transportation of white children to and from school than for the whole educational program of Negro children. 1-31-48

Although there are 477,000 colored to 377,000 white children of school age in the State, it spends $3,500,000 on transportation alone for the latter and a total of $3,333,000 in all for the former, the article pointed out.

Of the Negro students, 207,752 children are not even in school, the article revealed. The State must do something to educate these children and provide better education for the others for the improvement of Mississippi as a whole, the paper said. Pittsburgh

INTERFERENCE Pa.

The article also declared that if the State wants to avoid outside interference, particularly Federal funds for the education of colored, the State must educate Negro children. Courier

"We of the South," the article said, "must comprehend that ignorance, poverty, illiteracy, disease and criminality are costly factors in our society. It makes no difference what race contributes more to these community evils.

"Many a white person has died from disease spread by Negroes—and vice versa. We must rise above our prejudices and recognize that the means of overcoming these liabilities is through a constructive system of public school training."

9 Miss. Men Seek Equal Rights For Negro Children

the Lighthouse and Informer

CANTON, Miss.—(ANP)—A move to obtain equal educational privileges for Negro children of Madison county was started here recently when nine Negro men filed a petition with G. R. Bennett, county superintendent of education, asking that Negro school children be given opportunities equal to that afforded white students. The petition, sent registered mail from Meridian through Atty. Robert A. Burns, concerns the Farmhaven Consolidated school district. Columbus, Miss.

Madison county carries one of the heaviest Negro populations in the state. There are 4,000 Negro farmers in the county, with 709 owning their own farms. The latter own 65,092 acres with land and buildings worth over $1,500,000. Contrasted to this, there are 810 white farmers, with 610 owning their own farms. This group owns 138,000 acres with land and buildings valued at over $4,500,000. Sun 4-4-48

In Canton, white people compete with Negroes in business in all lines except embalming and barbering. On Saturdays, the merchants do a thriving business with practically 90 cents out of every dollar received coming from Negroes.

DEPLORE INEQUALITY Sun.

The petition was addressed to Bennett, the president of the county board of supervisors and the board of trustees of the Farmhaven school district. It pointed out the "pronounced inequality of the educational opportunity" between colored and white children of the district. In a table, the nine signers showed that the length of school term for whites was eight months against six for Negroes; equipment for whites was meager, for colored, none; white pupils went from grades one through 12, colored, one to eight, and no transportation was provided colored while the white pupils received free transportation.

In addition, the petition cited that "a wide difference in the total investment of facilities and buildings and equipment exists, as well as the quality of instruction, resulting from differences made in the qualifications of teachers." The petitioners asked that "early action be taken definitely on this petition in order that these injustices may not further hamper and retard the training of the children." 4-4-48

Modern School System Makes Debut In Mississippi County

JACKSON, Miss. — Marion County's 3,000 Negro school children are starting their 1948-49 school term this month in one of Mississippi's most modern school systems.

Not only is this the second county in the state to consolidate its rural school system, but building programs are underway in almost every school in the county. There are also further plans for more consolidation and more school transportation in the future. Most of these plans are already underway.

The work of consolidating the school system was done this summer, so that the county has 10 schools in operation this year to serve the same number that 14 were serving last year. The work is not completed, according to N. L. Watts, county superintendent of education, as the number of schools will be further reduced to about seven or eight as the present building programs are completed to make this possible.

There are 18 school busses serving Negro schools and transporting the Negro children to the schools. Fifty-six teachers are employed in the present school system for the county's Negro children and the system is supervised by Eunice B. Martin, county Negro education supervisor under the Jeanes Foundation.

Harlem Report

Sir:

In September 1943 a group of public-spirited laymen joined with the Board of Education of New York City in a two-year project to reduce delinquency in Harlem by providing additional school services and personnel to P.S. 10, J.H.S. 101 and J.H.S. 120 . . . The Report [on that project] stressed the delinquencies of some young people and the inability of the schools to do much about them.

In the April 5 issue of TIME, you took . . . only unfavorable, isolated excerpts from this Report . . . By making it appear that occasional incidents are characteristic of the school and community life, you gave your readers an entirely false picture of the schools concerned, their pupils and their teachers.

You described the schools as "dingy and dilapidated." What are the facts? The Report itself is in error when it says "many of the buildings were erected before 1900." Out of 26 schools in Harlem, only three were built before 1900.

Yes, Harlem had its gangs that mimicked on the streets the warfare their older brothers were waging in Europe and in the Pacific. But such activities were not confined to Harlem, nor to the city of New York. Actually, the school was one bright spot where law and order prevailed. We quote from the Harlem Report: "The school (J.H.S. 120) was run in a businesslike, efficient way with discipline well maintained, pupils orderly in halls and on stairways—a generally well-kept building. Principal, teachers and pupils deserved credit for this . . ."

During the entire life of the project we were in the midst of a world war . . . There was a real teacher shortage . . .

Under the circumstances it is understandable that . . . an occasional teacher under provocation would lapse in the matter of corporal punishment. That any of these teachers "hated" children simply is not so . . .

WILLIAM JANSEN
Superintendent of Schools
New York City

¶ TIME, which read (or misread) the Report in substantial agreement with the New York City press, is glad to hear that conditions in the Harlem schools are better than reported.—ED.

Harlem Report (Cont'd)

Sir:

TIME had no need to apologize to Superintendent of Schools Jansen for its report on Harlem [TIME, May 17]. Eight years before his ". . . two-year-project to reduce delinquency in Harlem," I established a psychiatric clinic at P.S. 89, in deep Harlem, under the sponsorship of the boss of the Truant Officers, George Chatfield. My final report, after two years of zealous effort, is so close to your April 5th [review of] the present Harlem Report, that I shall spare you the actual comparisons. And this was six years before Jansen's special pleading that Harlem gangs "mimicked on the streets the warfare their older brothers were waging in Europe and in the Pacific."

NEGROES ASK PLACE ON EDUCATION BOARD

A public meeting of Harlem residents unanimously adopted a resolution yesterday asking that Negro be appointed to one of three Board of Education posts to be filled next month.

The resolution declared that Negro children were suffering from "mass educational retardation, overcrowding, discriminatory zoning restrictions and from being housed in dilapidated school buildings," and that the board was responsible for the "disastrous" conditions prevailing.

The meeting was called jointly by the Harle mCouncil on Education and the Citizens Committee for the Appointment of a Negro to the Board of Education. It heard a city-wide panel of educational, religious and civic leaders, both white and colored, denounce the present board as unrepresentative and neglectful of the educational needs of the Negro community.

Mrs. Rose Russell, legislative representative of the Teachers Union, CIO, charged that the board members were not responsible to the people of the city but only to themselves and to their class—"the entrenched wealth of the city."

"You don't have to go to Central Europe to find the Iron Curtain—it's right here," she declared. "We're not going to be Red-baited—we won't give up the fight because of name calling when we embarrass certain school officials."

Not only a Negro but a woman, a parent and a labor representative should be included in the board membership, Mrs. Russell asserted.

C. W. Hill School Teachers, Pupils In "Fence Drive"

Daily World Atlanta, Ga. Fri. 3-19-48

Tired of waiting and more waiting; apparently seeking and hoping in vain that responbile officials would come to their rescue by expending some of the collected taxes on their school, pupils and school officials of Charles W. Hill Elementary school decided to tackle the problem themselves.

Since the opening of the school to Negro children, the school grounds have wallowed in mud puddles and served as a dumping ground for the many trespassers who trod it as a "short cut."

Bootleggers and other criminals reportedly have exploited the once fervently clustered shrubbery as a haven to hide their illegal wares. Evidences of improper nocturnal conduct are strewn and left for eyes of unsuspecting pupils to see. And last, but not least, the outsiders move unrestrainedly across the unfenced campus. 3-19-48

Within the midst of school personnel was heard the cry: "Let's do something about it." That lone cry swelled with each passing day. It touched on the lips of every teacher and pupil. And today, they are doing something about it.

DRIVE UNDERWAY

There is currently underway a drive to raise $1,800 to be used for fencing in the school grounds. Each class has been asked to raise at least $50. Although the current amount raised was not disclosed, a reliable source stated that the drive is progressing nicely. 14d(1)

The students and teachers have sponsored a number of affairs to muster the needed finance. At the school recently a skit was sponsored by students to give impetus to the drive. In pantomime and representing things beautifull to the school grounds, the youngsters turned in a wonderful performance.

THEME SONG

Growing out of the skit is a song which could ostensibly be considered the youngsters' theme song for their drive. Set to the tune of Don't Fence Me In" and entitled "Please Fence Us In," it goes thus:

Daily World

Give us a fence round our school under starry skies above;
Please fence us in!
Let us romp all around on the school grounds that we love;
Please fence us in!
Don't let peddlers from miles around;
Sell their goods on our school grounds.
Fence us in forever-we beg you
please; Fri.
Please fence us in!
3-19-48
We've got the building, some fine
teachers,
And some nice principals;
They work and slave from day to day
With patience for us boys and girls

O give us money on our contributions;
Help us to make this a great institution
Fence us in forever, we beg you
please;
Please fence us in!

The song is a creative music product of a group of seventh grade pupils of Miss Martha H. Singleton. The pupils who worked toward its completion are:

Elaine McEwen, Lillian Owens, Barbara Cleveland, Jencie Shedrick and Narvis Hill.

FOR THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

The Negro population of New York City has increased steadily since the Harlem community first became the center of a marked migration from the South and the West Indies, and research reports have indicated lately that far more than 500,000 Negroes—some estimates have gone as high as 700,000—now reside in the five boroughs. Because most of the population is centered in old sections of the city, the majority of the Negro population has fallen heir to many inadequately equipped and poorly placed school buildings.

Although in many ways the general school problem has affected all races alike many problems that are peculiar to Negroes have arisen, all necessitating special treatment by a trained personnel. So far as the School board has been acquainted with these unique conditions it has acted to place every student in the line of equal treatment and opportunity. Nevertheless, the over-all picture seems to indicate that there ought to be a Negro citizen on the Board of Education, who would be of invaluable service to the Board in keeping it informed of the needs and feelings of the Negro community.

The system under which Board members are now selected would indicate that the next choices will be made from the Bronx and from Queens. However desirable it might be to keep the Board balanced with respect to city regions, it is also desirable that the Board membership be made fairly representative of the city's race and religious groups. Several organizations which are concerned with Negro social problems have asked Mayor O'Dwyer to act upon the matter and, considering the weight of expert testimony, the appointment of a Negro member to the Board of Education would be appropriate at this time.

Growing Dualism in Schools Hit

Integrated Policy Not Enforced, League Avers

PHILADELPHIA

Whether by design or by accident, pupil integration in Philadelphia public schools has reached a stage where it is more or less merely a policy on paper.

And while there has been progress in the matter of teachers, it is quite apparent that colored teachers are being restricted as far as possible to schools that are predominantly colored.

So far has the pupil integration policy slipped that the Educational Equality League has expressed "alarm" over the way in which certain schools are becoming "all-colored."

Whites Sent Out of Areas

The situation was brought to the attention of Louis P. Hoyer, new superintendent of schools, by Floyd L. Logan, league president, who cited figures to bear out a contention that integration needed considerable bolstering.

Mr. Hoyer said he would look into the matter.

A survey of pupil distribution made by Dr. Alexander J. Stoddard, former superintendent, Floyd said, showed for example that in the area of the Durham-Arthur School, 16th and Lombard Sts., there were 128 white pupils who were eligible to attend the school but were being sent out of the area to other schools.

Figures Show Trend

As of June, 1946, Logan said, there were 29 elementary schools with colored pupils forming from 65 to 99 per cent of the student body.

There were no colored pupils in 48 elementary school. The percentage has increased considerably in two years, Logan declared.

It was noted that with one exception, colored teachers are placed in these elementary schools with high percentage of colored pupils. There is one colored teacher at the Morris School, which has a majority of white pupils.

Teachers Being Proscribed

In the junior high schools, colored teachers are concentrated in five schools that have better than 50 per cent colored student bodies. These schools are the Barrett, Fitzsimons, Stoddart, Sulzberger and Vaux. At Barrett, Sulzberger and Vaux, the pupils are better than 85 per cent colored.

There is one colored teacher at the Gillespie Junior High, which is about 70 per cent white, and five special teachers throughout the system.

The only colored teachers in senior highs are located at Benjamin Franklin and William Penn, both with exceptionally high colored pupil population. There are four teachers in the vocational schools.

Parents' Picket on '2 by 4' School Ends

(Special to The Courier)

DALLAS, Tex.—Pupils of Sowers School near here, returned to their desks last week after a five-day absence due to picketing by their parents which stopped classes.

The children went back to school last Monday when their parents called off their week-long protest picketing against the inferiority of the two-room school which Texas' jim-crow educational system compelled them to attend.

Mrs. Charles Ritchie, one of the pickets, said the parents had decided to take their case to an attorney. She intimated that they would likely enter suit either against the segregated school system or in an effort to force the county school officials to provide equal equipment and facilities.

FORMED PICKET LINE

On Sept. 13 the parents threw a picket line around the jim crow elementary school and stopped all children from entering the building.

The pickets carried placards demanding new teachers, a share of the bond issue voted for the Sowers white school, and a board of Negro trustees for their school.

"NO DISCRIMINATION"

County Superintendent Joe P. Harris said that school officials would go ahead with plans to "equip the school as well as our white school. I've assured the parents that there will be no discrimination in the future, as there has been none in the past."

Negro parents refuted the superintendent's assertion that the Negro school was equal to the larger and far better equipped white school.

Contract Awarded For Negro School

Montgomery, Ala

Contract for erection of an annex to the Booker Washington High School, on Union Street, was awarded Thursday by the Montgomery County Board of Education to the Bear Lumber Company on a base bid of $199,860. Bear was the lowest bidder.

It was said by Dr. C. M. Dannally, superintendent of schools, that alternates accepted by the board probably would reduce the cost of the structure to less than $190,000.

The building will be erected at the northeast corner of the old Swayne School property located at the corner of Union and Grove Streets. The three-story building will contain 30 classrooms and will be practically of fire-proof construction.

The classroom annex will include only classrooms, among them science and home economics rooms, since the offices, library, and other classrooms are in the main building of the school.

The building will be of red brick construction with steel windows and modern installations of all kinds.

Dr. Dannnelly stated that funds for this building, together with the new high school on Fairview Avenue, are funds allocated for Negro school construction by the state. Plans have been approved by the State Building Commission and the State Department of Education. Sherlock, Smith and Adams is the architectural firm responsible for the plans.

County Acquires 52 New Teachers

Fifty-two new teachers have been employed by the Montgomery Board of Education for the school year of 1948-49, it was announced at the August meeting of the board, Friday. A total of 607 teachers will be in service in the city and county schools for next year, 348 white teachers and 259 Negroes.

Twenty-nine of the new teachers will be in elementary schools and 23 in high schools. Of this number, 23 elementary teachers are in white schools and nine in Negro schools.

Included in the 52 new teachers are seven at Maxwell School located at the Air Force Base.

All new teachers are college graduates with three exceptions among the white elementary instructors. These are scheduled to receive college degrees in the Summer of 1949.

The new teachers come from 12 white colleges and four Negro institutions. Huntingdon College supplies the largest number of white teachers with nine graduates. The State Teachers College in Montgomery supplies the largest number of Negro teachers with eight graduates. Alabama College, Auburn, the University of Alabama, Birmingham-Southern, Teachers Colleges at Troy, Jacksonville, Livingston, and Florence, Georgia State College for Women, the University of Tennessee, Murfreesboro, Tenn., State Steachers College are represented in the new personnel for white teachers. Stowe Teachers College in St. Louis, Knoxville College, and Capitol University in Ohio, are other schools represented in the Negro personnel.

State Has Already Begun Work in the Elementary Schools

14d(2) Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 1-31-48

LITTLE ROCK—(ANP)—Arkansas is not waiting for the rest of the Southern States to find a solution to the recent Supreme Court order to provide equal educational facilities for Negroes in graduate and professional schools. Instead, it has voluntarily begun the work of improving educational facilities by starting in on the elementary schools.

A recent report showed that the elementary school boards spent more in the current biennium than in the last two years, for all Negro grade and high schools during the year ending June 1, 1947-1949.

NEW TREND 1-31-48

Evidence of the new trend in education for Negroes is best revealed in the cotton country or so-called Negro belt of Eastern Arkansas. Planters in the area saw Negro farm population drifting into the Army and war plants during the war, leaving them without sufficient labor. They decided that the best way to bring Negroes back to the farm was to improve their standards. This meant better school facilities, including vocational high school training to develop skills for mechanized farming.

An education survey conducted recently showed that taxpayers spent $20,162,066 last year on the education of white children in grade and high schools. The average was $78.65 each. For 79,684, an average of $39.75 each or a total of $3,168,277 was spent.

$10 MILLION NEEDED

Last May, Ed McQuistion, State supervisor of Negro education, estimated that $10,414,350 was needed to bring Negro schools up to the level of white facilities.

The survey also revealed that Negroes prefer to live in counties through which major rivers flow. These counties, twenty-five in all, contained 30 per cent or more of Negro residents. Pulaski, Jefferson, Mississippi, Crittenden and Phillips Counties contain more than 25,000 Negroes.

Added Funds Will Speed Schools Building Program

Results to Be Visible in 6 Months, Says Bourgeois

BY ELLEN MIDDLEBROOK

Results of acquiring additional money for Orleans parish schools will be visible within six months as the new building program gets under way, Supt. Lionel J. Bourgeois said Wednesday.

He said first consideration for new buildings to be constructed from approximately $600,000 annually to be derived from the additional one-mill property tax would be for Negro schools.

But the first building to be started will be the Gentilly school for which $400,000 out of the McDonogh fund is already available. About $400,000 more will be added and construction is expected to begin within six months, he said.

Within eight months the rest of the building program will be started," said Bourgeois. "The school board is anxious to proceed as soon as the money is at hand and it doesn't want any unnecessary delays.

"Number one on the list is the replacement of Hoffman school (for Negroes) which is in a deplorable condition from roof to floor as to lighting, sanitation and everything else.

"The building is in no way adapted to school room instruction and is now crowded with about 1000 students."

Bourgeois said part of the $1,000,000, which the school board expects to get out of the $8,000,000 special teachers' salary fund will go toward the building program.

The superintendent and Board President Robert M. Haas have been directed to demand $1,000,000 out of the fund at a meeting of the state board of education eary next week.

Second step in the building program in the Negro division will be construction of a downtown comprehensive high school. Then construction of several elementary schools for Negroes, to be built simultaneously over a possible 15-year period, will begin, Bourgeois said.

In addition to the Gentilly school for white children, Bourgeois named as "examples of replacements that have to be made without delay" Lakeview, McDonogh No. 11 and the Adolph Meyer school in Algiers.

"And before the entire building program is completed, consideration must be given for a citywide coeducational high school for white students," he said. Extensive repairs will have to be made on many existing school buildings as soon as possible."

While the old Hoffman school for Negroes is being torn away and the new building is under construction, the students will attend the school to be opened February 1 in the Edward Douglass White school building and two other schools.

Louis H. Pilie, school board vice-president said Wednesday that changing the White building to a school for Negroes will test the legality of an act of the 1948 Legislature which prohibits conversion of schools from white to Negro without consent of adjacent property owners.

Expressing doubt that the act would hold up in court, Pilie said the board's action in changing the school was deliberate to test its constitutionality. The building is now occupied by draft boards.

The act requires that the school board gain consent of 70 per cent of the property holders within 600 feet of the school before a building can be converted from white to Negro use.

Property holders near the White school have objected to the move, proposed by the school board as an economy measure. It is the first school to be converted under the proposed improvement program for the schools.

Dental Program in Arlington's Negro Schools Starts Today

Times-Herald
Dec 12-6-48

A program of dental care for pupils in Negro schools in Arlington County will be inaugurated today when examinations of the first of nearly 1000 pupils will begin at the Kemper School.

The program will be conducted through the State Health Department and will be under the direction of Dr. Fred D. Morton, senior clinician of the department's Bureau of Mouth Health, school officials said. His services were obtained through the joint efforts of Dr. Thomas W. Pumphrey, dentist of the local school health department, and the Arlington School Board.

Dr. Morton is expected t oremain in the county for several months, during which he will examine all Negro pupils and then report their findings to their parents. Corrective treatment will be charged those able to pay.

Negro pupils in Arlington schools have been without dental care for six years, due to a wartime interruption in the program coupled with a shortage of personnel, although a full-time dentist has been maintained in the white schools.

A schedule for the current clinic wil be adjusted to meet needs in each of the county's three Negro schools, according to school officials. Mon. 12-6-48

FORMER KIRKWOOD TEACHER ENTERS SCHOOL BOARD RACE

Mrs. A. H. Arnold, housewife and former teacher of Kirkwood, has filed for election to the Kirkwood School Board. She is the first member of her race to seek this office in the county.

There are about 3,000 Negro residents in Greater St. Louis and the outlying district of Meacham Park who are expected to support her candidacy 100 per cent.

Mrs. Arnold in announcing her filing stated:

"I am running to serve the entire school district, not to serve any special group or any particular school."

The petition certifying her for a place on the ballot April 6 contained nearly 100 names. To vote in the school election residents need only to have lived in the area sixty days.

Mrs. Arnold who resides at 421 S. Filmore was reared and educated in Kirkwood. She attended Western College and Lincoln University and has taught in the city's schools where she now has children. She is a member of the PTA council, and Milton Turner and Booker Washington PTAs and the Kirkwood Civic Club.

The wife of Rev. Ben Arnold, a Kirkwood businessman, she is the daughter of the late Missouri and Bert Hayden, Kirkwood pioneers.

N. J. City Ends Segregation in Grammar Schools

FREEHOLD, N. J.

There will be no segregation of Negro and white pupils in Freehold grammar schools beginning next September.

The move, which does away with the 100-year-old custom, was announced yesterday by the Board of Education. Freehold, which has a population of about 7000 maintains three municipal primary schools and until recently Negro children have been going to the Court Street school.

Floyd S. Cassel, supervising principal of schools, explained to PM that the Board has been considering the move for some time, especially since the population of Freehold has steadily been growing.

"Since enrollment in our primary schools has been growing, too," Cassel said, "it became a logical time to make the move."

He added that such details like dividing the community into school zones will be worked out at a later date.

There has been no segregation in Freehold High School.

Atlanta, Ga.

FREEHOLD, N. J.—(ANP)—When Freehold's four grammar schools open next September, colored and white children will attend classes together for the first time in this community.

The board of education voted unanimously last week to have pupils attend whichever school is nearest their home, regardless of race. Previous practise though never law, has been for all colored youngsters to attend one school, the Court Street school, and for all white children to attend one of the other three, no matter how far a child of either race might have to travel.

Ira Tilton, district clerk of the board, said that the new ruling, effective with the next school year, was passed in accordance with New Jersey's new constitution. "The Problem was geographical," he said pointing out that one section of the two was entirely inhabited by Negroes. "We haven't been forcing anyone," he continued.

The Rev. J. N. Washington, pastor of the AME church, observed, however, "It has been very inconvenient here." He thought the new arrangement would be more satisfactory.

Tue. 3-5-48

In addition to the non-segregation ruling, Mr. Tilton said new school districts would be laid out and the Court Street will have classes only through the fourth grade, instead of the eight as at present. Freehold High school does not have segregated classes.

22 Jersey Areas to End Segregation in Schools

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TRENTON, N. J., June 4—New Jersey educational authorities announced today that racial segregation, practiced in some school districts for many years, was being ended in twenty-two communities in time for the September opening of schools.

Dr. John H. Bosshart, state commissioner of education, reported this progress to the state board of education. He was directed to commend the school authorities of the twenty-two municipalities and continue the work among about thirty more where segregation continues. A survey by the department in January indicated most of the separation existed in south Jersey.

Sat. 6-5-48

The communities in which the system will end in September include Camden, Haddonfield, Burlington, Bordentown, Cape May, Egg Harbor, Fairhaven, Florence Freehold, Greenwich, Long Branch, Lower Penns Neck, Palmyra, Penns Grove, Pleasantville, Princeton, Princeton Township, Quinton Riverside, Salem, Shrewsbury and Woodstown.

3 GIRLS WINNERS IN ESSAY CONTEST

Triumph Over 300,000 School Entrants in City's Annual Americanism Competition

New York, N.Y.

Triumphing over 300,000 competitors in New York public and parochial schools, three girl students received top honors yesterday in the annual Americanism essay contest conducted by the State Chamber of Commerce in conjunction with the Board of Education and the Catholic School Boards. Sat. 6-5-48

In a ceremony held in the chamber's great hall, 65 Liberty Street, 350 pupils and parents witnessed the presentation of cash prizes ranging from $2 to $40 to 143 girls and forty boys who wrote the best compositions on "Why I Believe the American Way of Life is the Best." The audience also heard the top winners read their essays.

The three girls who led the field were Dorothy Suchman, 16 years old, of Washington Irving High School, for the best public high school essay; Margaret Boyle, 15, of the Academy of the Sacred Heart of Mary, for the best parochial high school essay, and Evelyn Mallette, 15, of Junior High School 136, for the best public junior high school essay. The Misses Suchman and Boyle each received $40 in prizes and Miss Mallette received $35.

The winners were congratulated by Dr. William Jansen, Superintendent of Schools; the Right Rev. Msgr. Henry M. Hald, Assistant Superintendent of Schools in the Roman Catholic Diocese of Brooklyn, and Robert F. deGraff, chairman of the chamber's committee on education. James G. Blaine, president of the chamber, welcomed the winners and their relatives at the opening of the ceremony.

Elementary School Winners

The Times

First-prize winners in the public elementary school division, each of whom received $25 awards, were John Devir, 13, Public School 183, Manhattan; Audrey Cerny, 12, Public School 90, the Bronx; Arnold Arans, 11, Public School 102, Brooklyn; Ann Doris Bier, 13, Public School 36, Queens, and Elizabeth C. Diack, 13, Public School 22, Richmond. New York, N.Y.

Parochial elementary school first honors were captured by Patricia Moore, 13, of St. Mark's School, Brooklyn, and John Kelly, 12, of St. Athanasius School, the Bronx. Each received $25 prizes. Sat.

In the public vocational high schools division $15 first prizes went to Yolande Chireau, 19, of the Jane Addams School, the Bronx; John Harrington, 17, Brooklyn High School of Automotive Trades; Cathe Glackin, 15, of Bronx Vocational High School, and Ellen Lettenberger, 14, of the Woodrow Wilson School, Queens.

The only first-prize winner for the public evening high schools was Robert Lap, 23, of the George Washington High School, Manhattan, whose award was $15. 6-3-48

SCHOOL LUNCH PROGRAM
BACKED BY N.A.A.C.P. 2/27/48

Washington, D.C.--The House Appropriations Subcommittee on Agriculture, considering the School Lunch Program appropriation, departed from its rule of allowing only government witnesses to hear Leslie Perry of the NAACP's Washington Bureau and a representative of the American Parents Committee. The NAACP urged an appropriation of $100 million to operate the program for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1948. The Bureau of the Budget, however, has recommended an appropriation of only $65 million.

Press Service of The N A A C P. New York, N. Y.

Perry pointed out that the $65 million recommendation is $16 million less than that appropriated in 1947. "Last year the program reached only part of the children who needed it", the NAACP representative said. "Considering the normal increase in school population plus the tremendous rise in food cost, the contemplated appropriation will provide little more than a token nutritional program."

Fri. 2-27-48

Perry said that he thought that "every reasonable" economy should be practiced but that the "reduction of the school lunch appropriation below the level of the children's need is a false economy, and is folly."

Health Linked With Three R's As Fayette County Puts Tax To Work Improving Schools

Two-Year, $100,000 Program Revives Neglected Buildings—Sanitation Given Attention—Examinations Stepped Up With Sales Levy Monies

(Fourteenth of a Series)

By ROBERT TALLEY

Staff Correspondent

SOMERVILLE, Tenn., June 22.—Believing that a healthy body is just as important as the teaching of the "three R's," Fayette County is using a large share of its sales tax money to safeguard and improve the health of its 7000 school children.

In a $100,000 building improvement program, every repairable schoolhouse is being repaired, cleaned up and put in thoroughly sanitary condition, according to Joe Martin, county superintendent of education. The program is expected to require two years.

"Many of our schools have been run-down and neglected for years," Mr. Martin said. "The only reason this situation wasn't corrected before is that we just didn't have sufficient money to do it."

Provided By Sales Tax

The money was provided by the sales tax, which Governor McCord fathered in the 1947 Legislature. Here are a few things that are being done:

1. Open wells at numerous rural schools whose water supply the State Department of Health has refused to approve because of the danger of pollution, are being concreted over and pumps installed, or new, protected wells dug. Schools that have obtained their drinking water from nearby springs are getting safe wells.

2. Outdoor toilets at country schools are being made sanitary, according to the standards of the Department of Health.

3. Soap, towels and wash basins (where the latter are necessary) are being provided at public expense, and every child will be required to wash his hands before eating lunch.

4. Lighting deficiencies which cause eye-strain are being corrected by the repainting of numerous classrooms and, in the case of schools that have electricity (many are now on REA lines), by replacing obsolete lighting fixtures with modern ones.

5. Leaky roofs are being replaced, buildings are being painted, carpenters are making necessary repairs and school grounds are being cleaned up.

Given Examinations

This year, for the first time, all preschool children who are due to enter the first grade at the coming term are being given free physical and dental examinations with the co-operation of the Fayette County Health Department. Doctors and nurses examine the youngsters and give parents a written report of any deficiencies, which they may take to their family physician or family dentist.

These preschool examinations, formerly made only in certain areas, are now countywide and it is estimated that some 700 children will be so examined in preparation for the approaching term. The program has the strong support of Parent-Teacher Associations.

"We hope some day to provide physical examinations for children in all the grades, but we are unable to do that as yet," Superintendent Martin said. Memphis, Tenn

The county also is spending several thousand dollars for new school seats, to replace broken ones and to take care of the children in some overcrowded schools who had no seats. They have had to sit on boxes and similar improvisations.

Businesslike Project

The task of reconditioning the schools was approached in a businesslike manner. When the first sales tax money began to flow in, the Board of Education employed a supervisor of building maintenance and began a survey of every school to ascertain what each needed. The work followed. Wed. 6-23-48

In the matter of school sanitation, the Board of Education has had the close co-operation of the Fayette County Health Unit and R. A. Rhodes of Somerville, a sanitary officer. The latter is under Dr. R. L. Cobb of Bolivar, health officer for Fayette and Hardeman counties.

Despite the emphasis it is placing on improving its present schools, Fayette County also has a school building program.

Construction of a new three-teacher school at Rossville, near the Shelby County line, has begun. The cost is estimated at $35,000 to $40,000. This structure will replace the old two-teacher Rossville School that was built originally in 1906, and added to in 1926. It will have indoor toilets, a combination auditorium and playroom and ample recreation grounds. Walter R. Nelson of Memphis is the architect.

A school of the same type will be built at the Parks-Tan Yard community, eight miles east of Somerville. This will replace three one-room schools in that area, all badly run down.

Wilkinson of Somerville, also a member of the board. Other board members are Rhea V. Taylor of Somerville, chairman; W. A. Weber of Hickory Withe, H. L. McCraw of Braden, Dr. M. B. Femster of Moscow and John C. Cocke of Macon.

Fayette County's educational problem is unusual because of the large number of negroes, who represent approximately half of the county's school enrolment. There are 21 white schools and 70 negro schools in the county, most of the latter being small ones. The total number of teachers is around 200.

Superintendent Martin is strong in his praise of the sales tax which, in addition to its other benefits, has provided a salary increase of at least $300 a year for every teacher, in some cases much more.

Still A Teacher Problem

"Without this help, it is difficult to see how we could have obtained teachers to operate our schools much longer, as the teachers were quitting to take better-paying jobs," said Mr. Martin. "There is still a teacher problem, but there has been much improvement." Memphis, Tenn.

State finance statisticians have figured that if Fayette County had been required to raise the extra money it now receives from the sales tax, plus its regular county taxes, it would have been necessary to increase the county tax rate from a present $2.42 to $5.44 on each $100 of property valuation. Alabama

To Reject 'Token' College in 'Bama

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Neither regional nor "makeshift" universities will be acceptable to NAACP in Alabama.

This position was taken by E. D. Nixon, president of the Alabama Conference of NAACP Branches when interviewed here by The Courier. Nixon's statement came on the heels of an announcement by State Superintendent of Education A. R. Meadows following the Oklahoma decision that a medical school and school of law probably would be set up at State Teachers College here, headed by Dr. H. Councill Trenholm. Cpt. 1-31-48

The NAACP leader suggested that training at State Teachers College would be acceptable "only if the expanded facilities will be comparable with those found at the University of Alabama and Auburn." Courier

TAX BURDEN SEEN

"Regardless of what might be done in the matter of higher education," he asserted, "for Negroes in Alabama, all Negroes are aware of the fact that equal opportunities cannot be made possible overnight and it puzzles us why those in authority will create a double tax burden on the citizens of Alabama just to maintain a dual jim crow educational system."

The Birmingham Post, Scripps-Howard newspaper, in an editorial calls the regional college plan "the practical approach to the problem of adequate professional training for Negroes of our area." The editorial said "we assume Governor Folsom will lend it his hearty support."

The Birmingham News-Age Herald said, "Alabama faces the necessity of making a decision. The choice has alreay been forced upon her. The handwriting is on the wall very plain."

Negro Enrollment Favored By Emory 'Wheel' Writer

Another Georgia college student writer has recommended admitting Negroes to white universities.

Ted Spivey, of Swainsboro, suggested in the Emory Wheel that Negroes be admitted on a limited basis at Emory University. He said Negroes might be permitted to take certain courses at Emory which are not available at local Negro schools, and outstanding Negro students might be admitted to Emory's Graduate School.

Recently, the Editor of the Red and Black, student publication at the University of Georgia, observed that admission of Negro students is the only "ultimate solution" to the problem of equal education for all races.

The University System now pays part of the tuition fees to Negro colleges for Georgia Negroes desiring a higher education. Some of these Negroes go to Atlanta University, some to Meharry Medical School at Nashville, Tenn., some to Ohio University, and some to Columbia University.

Southern States are working on plans for establishing regional colleges and universities for Negroes.

White Students Vote High for Negroes' Entry

BIRMINGHAM. — White college students in Alabama, like those in Texas, Oklahoma and Georgia, are by no means convinced of the sacredness of segregation in institutions of higher learning.

A recent poll conducted at Alabama Polytechnic Institute, second largest state-supported institution for white students, showed that over 60 percent of the polled graduate students were in favor of the admission of qualified Negro students to API, and that 30.46 percent of all students polled favored admission of Negroes.

The poll was conducted among some 350 students—about 5 percent of API enrollment—by the Auburn Plainsman, campus weekly.

The question asked in the poll was: "If an educationally qualified Negro applied for training at Auburn (API), which he could not obtain at a comparable Negro university, what would your attitude be?"

THE ANSWERS showed 30.46 percent in favor of admission, 58.91 percent against and 10.63 percent neutral. The high favorable vote of the graduate students was counterbalanced by the freshman vote in the total results.

The occasion for the poll was the recent application for admission to the API School of Architecture by a Negro student at Montgomery State Teachers College, William Bell. Bell, a young veteran with four years overseas service, was told that his application was being handled through regular channels, and that no decision would be made until July 1, when all applications are brought before the Dean of the School of Architecture. No decisive comment has been made by educational or API officials on the admission of Bell.

Hats Off!

If the 348 representative students at Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn were to file through PM's offices, PM would take its hats off individually to 106 of them who voted to allow Negroes to enroll at Auburn. The whole 348 wouldn't be on their feet anyhow; 35 of them were asleep when an unofficial poll was taken and didn't have any opinion. And there's no way of telling how many of them would venture this far away from home in the first place, because 207 of them voted against admission of Negroes to their classes. The vote was an outgrowth of the application of William Bell, a Negro ex-GI, to study architecture at Auburn, although the vote question did not refer to Bell's specific case.

Runs for Student Prexy On Anti-Bias Platform

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — In late April some 8,000 students at the University of Alabama will choose a new president for the Student Government Association.

This year's election has won statewide interest because one of the four candidates is running on a platform of the admission of Negro students to the University's graduate schools, and of general support to the enactment of civil rights laws.

He is Morrison Williams, law student, son of Aubrey Williams, liberal editor of the Southern Farmer, and president of the Alabama Farmers Union.

A University student interviewed over the week end said that he was sure Williams could pile up a sizeable vote, on his platform, especially among the independent (non-letter) students.

This election will be the first in many years where real issues confronting the students will be discussed at U. of Alabama.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala.—Morrison [illegible] Montgomery, running on a [illegible] platform calling for admittance of Negro students to the University of Alabama, placed third in the campaign for presidency of the Alabama Student Association. His platform also included the employment of Negro instructors. He polled 233 votes.

Mr. Williams asserted as he re- turned from a political rally April 20 he found the letters "K. K. K." and "a "hate cross" on his door. He attributed the stunt to a childish prankster, rather than to the Klan whom he said doubtless would have done a better job. ALABAMA U. STUDENTS POLLED ON ADMISSION

UNIVERSITY, Ala.—(ANP)—Students of the University of Alabama voted that they would prefer to keep Negroes out, it was revealed here last week by results of a survey conducted by a graduate student here recently. The survey was sponsored by the university.

Other results of the poll showed the students were against President Truman's civil rights program as a whole, anti-poll tax legislation and unsegregated interstate travel.

On the other side of the fence students opposed the Boswell amendment of the state constitution and favored passage of federal legislation against lynching.

In the poll of 835 students, 62 per cent said they would not like to have Negroes admitted to the college, even if such action were necessary to receive federal funds. Five per cent had no opinion, and 33 per cent favored admission under these circumstances.

32 PER CENT APPROVE

Without reference to federal funds 50 per cent said they would not like to see Negro students admitted to the college under any circumstances, 18 per cent favored admission without any segregation and 32 per cent approved with certain degrees of segregation.

In answer to the question, "Do you think congress should pass President Truman's civil rights program as a whole; 76 per cent said no, 12 per cent said yes and 12 per cent had no opinion.

On individual points of the program, 68 per cent favored anti-lynch federal action. On the question of poll tax laws, 52 per cent said no, 41 percent said yes and 5 per cent undecided. Only 21 per cent were for unsegregated interstate travel, 66 per cent disapproved, and 3 per cent had no opinion.

Students were against the Boswell amendment to the Alabama constitution passed two years ago and requiring a person to "understand and explain" any article of the U. S. Constitution in order to vote.

Students were (among those who knew of the amendment) 57 per cent against, 24 percent for and 19 per cent, no opinion. About 80 per cent knew of the amendment.

Negro Students Stage Food Strike; Hot Dog Sales Rise

Montgomery Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

Complaining about the food, several hundred students at the Negro State Teachers College here refused to eat in the college dining hall Friday night.

They cooked and fixed sandwiches in their rooms, and some of them—who had stocked up in advance—sold hot dogs to the others three for a quarter. A few, declining to give their names, said they had eaten in their rooms for a week.

Student Ed Moore, of Birmingham, said the "strike" was called in protest against the food served in the dining hall, but C. A. Johnson, assistant manager of the cafeteria, denied receiving any complaints. Sat 3-6-48

Only 15 Served

Johnson said he served only about 15 students tonight compared with about 850 who usually eat there.

"We stayed open until the regular closing time," he related, "then closed up. There was no violence."

College President H. Council Tsrenholm said he had been informed some of the students refused to eat in the cafeteria but that he had no details. "Nothing has come to me at all," he added.

Johnson said he understood the demonstration was "perhaps a sympathy strike" on behalf of some 300 to 400 students who haven't paid their fees and have not been issued meal books.

Not Enough

Moore said boarding students, numbering some 900, were participating in the strike because the food is "not sufficiently nourishing, doesn't have enough calories, and there isn't enough of it." Sat. 3-6-48

He said the resident students had asked some 300 other students who live in Montgomery to join in the strike and not attend classes until the food is improved.

The assistant dining hall manager said he was unable to understand what motivated the student demonstration.

"Their fees are so small in comparison to other costs," he said, "that I don't see where they have any room to complain. They pay only about 45 to 50 cents a day for three meals. I think they certainly have been getting their money's worth." 14e(1)

The Birmingham student described the meals as "very meager." A typical menu, he said, would include: Sat. 3-6-48

"Grits, stale coffee and sausage for breakfast; baloney, dried apples, turnip greens and tea for dinner; left-overs for supper and only one glass of milk a day."

State Teachers Demonstrations Come To Finish

The Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.
Tues. 3-9-48

Students demonstrations protesting bad food and other unsatisfactory conditions at the Negro State Teachers College here had yesterday apparently ceased.

Labeling the initial "strike" last Firday a "case of misguided leadership" among the students, Dr., J. G. Harvey, Dean of the Junior College, revealed yesterday afternoon that a student committee has been named to work with college President H. Council Trenholm in an attempt to alleviate the protested conditions. Tues. 3-9-48

"Complications are being cleared up," Dr. Harvey said, "and there have been no further signs of mass protest."

Although some students had not been eating in college dining halls for over a week prior to the major "strike," some 835 of a normal 850 students who eat in the dining halls failed to show up last Friday night for the evening meal.

The "strike," a Birmingham resident student said, was because food was "not sufficiently nourishing, doesn't have enough calories, and there isn't enough of it." Tues. 3-9-48

Other grievances listed by students after a mass meeting were: inadequate laundry facilities; unsanitary facilities in the college dining hall; need for an investigation into quality and preperation of food; need for a student council, and inadequate dormitory facilities.

Ala. State Chorus Scores Under Hall

Atlanta Daily World
Wed. 12-29-48

Frederick Hall did it again! That was the unanimous opinion of music-lovers here in Montgomery and over the state, who gathered here Sunday and Monday evenings, December 19 and 20, when the Alabama State College chorus presented its annual Christmas carol program. The mixed chorus of 150 students under Prof. Hall's direction, sang first a program of traditional Christmas music, after which, assisted by student soloists, they sang the Christmas section of Handel's Messiah. Wed. 12-29-48

Familiar Christmas songs, sang antiphonally by the choir, achieved a beauty which made the listener utterly forget the droning repetition of those same carols heard on street corner and in department stores in the days preceding Christmas. O Come All Ye Faithful, The First Nowel, and Silent Night were surpassed, if at all, only by Angels We Have Heard on High.

The female section of the choir achieved special distinction in their rendition of two french carols, Bring Your Torches Jeanette Isabella, and Sleep of the Child Jesus. Both of these numbers lent themselves especially well to the unusually fine tone quality achieved by the choir. The male choir gave a splendid rendition of two spirituals, Go Tell It On the Mountains, and O Mary, What You Goin' to Name That Baby.

"Montgomery is accustomed to hearing the Messiah done well," declared Paul W. Mathews, white supervisor of music for the State of Alabama, in his appraisal, "and this performance of the Christmas section surely ranks with the best, primarily because of the outstanding excellence of the choral singing as achieved under the direction of Prof. Hall. Tempo and general interpretation were entirely in keeping with the best English tradition, which was not surprising, in view of Prof. Hall's extended study in England."

In tone quality, dictation and careful attention to detail, the choral singing was especially fine. Capable accompaniments were played by Mrs. Mildred G. Hall and Rosemond Satterwhite, pianists, and Julius Carroll, organist.

Mr. Hall, as director of the school of Music, heads the largest music department in the South at the Alabama State College. Under him is a music faculty of 12 members with over 300 students specializing in music. Critics say that this year's presentation was the finest since the series began seven years ago when he reorganized the music department.

Grits, stale coffee and sausage is usually the breakfast menu, he asserted, while balongna, dried apples, greens and tea is served at dinner, with leftovers for supper. He stated further that only one glass of milk per day is allowed diners.

The assistant manager of the cafeteria, C. A. Johnson, said he had not received any "formal" complaint against the food.

Small Meal Fee Cited

He stated that he thought the strike was a gesture of sympathy toward the 300 or 400 students who had not paid their fees and hence were denied meal tickets.

Students pay only 45 to 50 cents a day for three meals, he pointed out, adding, "I certainly think they have been getting their money's worth.

800 Alabama State College Students Strike Over Food

Baltimore Afro-American
Sat 3-13-48
Baltimore, Md.

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Approximately 800 boarding students of Alabama State College here went on strike Saturday in protest against the meals being served in the college dining hall.

After refusing to eat the evening meal in the school cafeteria, many of the students returned to their rooms and cooked hot dogs or made cold meat sandwiches. Several stated that they had not eaten in the lunch room for a week or more.

The president of the college, H. Council Trenholm, disclosed that he had no information as to what issues were involved in the strike and refused to issue a statement.

Food Branded "Bad"

However, one of the student demonstrators, Ed Moore of Baltimore, stated thatt the motivating factor for the strike was "bad" food. They said that the food served was "not sufficiently nour ishing" and that "there isn't enough of it."

1,003 Students Register At Albany State College

Daily World
Wed 10-27-48

ALBANY—(SNS)—Enrollment in all departments of the Albany State College for the fall quarter of the academic year has reached the all-time high of 1,003 students, it was revealed this week by the schools Office of Public Relations.

Atlanta Daily World
Wed 10-27-48

The final tabulation contradicts an earlier report by the Regents Office of the University System, Atlanta, which stated that Albany State had suffered a decrease in enrollment as compared to the total enrollment for the fall quarter of the school year, 1947-48.

Last year's records show that the first term registration totalled 655, including 182 In-Service teachers who are classified as part-time students. The present College enrollment totals 757 and includes 381 In-Service teachers.

Actually, there has been no decrease in regular student registration, while In-Service registration has increased substantially. The College also operates a training school nursery, and adult school with enrollments of 194, 27, and 25 students respectively; boosting the overall registration to 1,003 students.

American Association of University Women

RULE BACKING RACE

14e(1)

BARRIER TO GET TEST

Journal Guide

Washington, D. C.-(ANP)

The American Association of University Women is all set to appeal a recent court ruling that it cannot drop the local chapter from membership because of its racial discrimination tactics, it was learned here last week.

The dispute between the two groups arose when the local outfit refused a accept a Negro woman member of the parent body into its organization. The National Association issued a sharp reprimand to the Washingtonians and reminded them that the only qualification for membership was the "educational requirement."

When the local group persisted in refusing to admit the woman, the national group moved to expel the rebels from membership, only to be thwarted when the latter group obtained a court injunction halting such action.

The national group's board of directors also hinted it would seek a revision of by-laws to prevent any possible repetition of the internal squabble which has raged since 1946.

College Women Indorse Order To Admit Negro In Washington

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

Special to The New York Times and The Courier-Journal.

Washington, May 8.—Members of the national board of the American Association of University Women from all over the country today joined in a statement defending the board's action against the stand of the Washington branch on the racial issue.

The national board unanimously ruled that failure of the Washington branch to bring its bylaws into conformity with the national by-laws automatically would exclude the local group from the national organization.

Under the bylaw in question, the Washington branch had refused local membership to a national A.A.U.W. member who is a Negro. The Washington branch has taken court action in an attempt to prevent dissolution. A minority group wishing to conform to the national bylaws has made plans to form a new group, based on a court decision favorable to the national board.

Dr. Althea K. Hottel, dean of women, University of Pennsylvania, national A.A.U.W. president, called the Washington branch's membership policy "contrary to the very concept of the association as a serious educational agency," and at variance with an international-federation agreement not to discriminate as to race, religion, or political opinion.

AAUW Membership

The Post

I have just read the letter of April 16 of Mrs. Laura Puffer Morgan, a former president of the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women.

Washington, D.C.

The majority of the branch are asking that the national organization modify its by-laws so that the branches may have a certain amount of flexibility in operation.

What Mrs. Morgan carefully failed to emphasize is the fact that the Constitution of the United States can be changed and has been several times.

Wed. 4-21-48

This idiotic by-law welcoming all women college graduates is untenable especially at this time with Communists rife in the land. Our request to try to improve the national by-laws and to bring them up to date was flatly refused. We were ordered to conform by May 5 or to get out.

UNIVERSITY WOMEN SUE IN NEGRO RIFT

The Times

WASHINGTON, April 16 (AP)—A dispute over admitting a Negro woman to membership in the Washington chapter of the American Association of University Women landed in the courts today.

The local chapter brought suit to prevent the national organization from excluding it from membership after May 6 for barring the Negro applicant. It also seeks to block eviction from the clubhouse it shares with the national organization.

New York, N.Y.

The membership dispute began more than eighteen months ago when the local chapter refused to admit Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, widow of a former Municipal Court judge. Mrs. Terrell is a member of the national association.

Sat.

The chapter asked the District Court to decide whether the association's "ultimatum" was a "valid exercise of authority." An injunction is also sought to prevent the national organization from taking action before the case comes to trial in October.

The local group contends that it has the right to choose its own members. The national board has ruled that a college degree from an approved institution is the sole requirement for membership.

Racial Suit Taken Under Advisement

The Post

University Women Seek to Prevent Ouster From Group

Fri 6-25-48

The American Association of University Women suit over the exclusion of Negroes from membership in the District chapter was taken under advisement yesterday by Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws of District Court.

It was indicated that a decision may be rendered within the week.

The local chapter brought suit against the national organization of university women for an injunction. It was designed to prevent a threatened buster from the group and from the clubhouse at 1634 I st. nw. Yesterday's action was for summary judgment on the injunction suit.

Violation Charged

The national organization charged that the local group violated the constitution by placing in the bylaws a provision whereby the directors of the local group could decide whether any applicant could become a member.

With this bylaw, the directors refused admittance to Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, a Negro and widow of a Municipal Court judge.

The national organization protested and then declared that unless the local group complied with the organizational constitution which made eligibility depend solely upon receiving an accredited degree from an accredited university, the local group would be ousted.

The Post

Then a "middle-of-the-road" minority group of almost 40 per cent of the membership of 1000 here filed an action that the court approve the admittance of Mrs. Terrell, but prevent the threatened eviction.

Washington, D.C.

The crux of the case may depend, it was indicated yesterday, upon the meaning of the word "eligibility." If it means that membership solely by educational requirements it might mean that the local group has violated the constitution.

Fri. 6-25-48

Or, as Justice Laws querried yesterday, "Does it mean that applicants must have the requisite education to be eligible to apply for membership, but that the applicant's fitness on other grounds might be considered?"

Group, Racial Tensions Seen as Leading to War

The Post
Washington, D.C.
Wed. 6-16-48

By Genevieve Reynolds

When it comes to group tensions, the Nation's Capital is one of "the sorest spots in the country." So declared Dr. Sarah Blanding, president of Vassar College.

The college head made her assertion yesterday when she shared a platform discussion on "Group Tensions in the American Community" with Dr. Ina Corinne Brown, professor of social anthropology at Scarritt College, Nashville, Tenn., and lecturer at Vanderbilt and Fisk Universities. Both spoke at the morning session of the American Association of University Women's conference of State presidents, which opened Wednesday at the National Cathedral School for Girls.

Alluding to but not mentioning by name the current racial membership issue between the Washington branch and the national board of the AAUW, Dr. Blanding asserted, "I felt a tremendous satisfaction that one phase of this problem of group tension has been faced by the AAUW board, which has put itself on record as believing that those who meet standards of the association as a serious educational agency, and at variance with an international-federation agreement not to discriminate as to race, religion, or political opinions, she advocated "starting

Negro Problem Most Acute

Dr. Brown called the Negro problem the most acute and difficult to solve because of deep seated prejudices, and pointed out that it has become the Nation's problem as well as that of the South.

"It's dangerous for one region or section to say we are doing so much better than you are in solving group tensions," she asserted, "while at the same time ignoring the problems on their own doorstep."

For example, she said that "certain cities and regions of the country are far more interested in what happens in Tennessee groups than in solving their own group tensions problems."

"One of the most significant movements in the South is the recent policy of putting Negroes on the police force," she continued. "In October, 1947, 41 cities in 10 Southern States were using Negroes on the police force. This has had a very favorable effect in reducing juvenile delinquency and crime."

Dr. Brown cited discrepancies o. school opportunities for whites in the North and South. She called upon the AAUW presidents to consider the matter when requesting Federal aid to education.

Court Rules Against Ouster Of D. C. Unit

Wed. 7-21-48

Washington Body Of University Women Upheld

WASHINGTON, D. C.— (NNPA) — The Washington branch of the American Association of University Women cannot be ousted from the national organization because it refused to accept colored members, District Court ruled last Friday.

In an opinion written by Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws, the AAUW was informed that under its present by-laws it cannot compel its local chapter to admit colored members.

He issued a temporary order forbidding the national organization from expelling the local chapter and said he would issue a permanent injunction along the same lines soon.

TERRELL CONTROVERSY

The controversy arose in October, 1946, when the Washington branch of AAUW refused to admit as a member Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, widow of the late Judge Robert H. Terrell of the Municipal Court.

In December, 1946, the board of directors of AAUW passed a resolution stating that persons should not be denied membership on racial, religious or political grounds.

The Washington branch held fast to its position in 1947 by amending its by-laws so its board of directors would have the power to pass upon persons who have applied for membership.

SUIT AGAINST OUSTER

The national then notified the Washington branch that its by-laws were in conflict with those of not corrected by May 6, 1948, the branch would be expelled from the AAUW.

Wed 7-21-48 Daily World

The branch brought suit to prevent ouster.

In his opinion, Chief Justice Laws said he had "no doubt as to the right of the national organization to pass a by-law requiring admission of those of all races to membership in branches as well as in the national." Atlanta, Ga.

But this was not the question, he said. The question he continued, was whether such a by-law had been adopted by the national, and if not, whether the national directors had the legal right to expel a branch for failing to observe a policy declared by the national directors.

University Women Must Admit Mrs. Terrell or Lose Charter

Sat 7-17-48 The Afro American

WASHINGTON

The Washington branch of the American Association of University Women must admit Mrs. Mary Church Terrell or lose its charter, the national board ruled, Saturday. Baltimore Md.

The controversy that began a year and a half ago over the admission of Mrs. Terrell, prominent club woman, graduate of Oberlin College and widow of Judge Robert H. Terrell, reached a climax Saturday, the national board gave the branch until May 6 to mend its membership rules or cease operating as part of AAUW. The ultimatum was voted by the national board following a hearing of a Washington delegation, here.

Degree Only Requirement

The national board took the position that the sole requirement for membership in AAUW is a degree from an AAUW approved institution. It was guided in its decision by a legal opinion prepared by former Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts, the board said.

Justice Roberts is quoted as stating:

"It is a necessary conclusion that the eligibility to branch membership must be the same as the eligibility to membership in the association.

Automatically Excluded

"It is my judgement that since the local corporation has now attempted to affirm and implement corporate purposes inconsistent with the eligibility to national membership as prescribed in the by-laws of the association, the corporation as such has automatically excluded itself as a branch of the association."

The board said it had accepted Justice Roberts' opinion without a dissenting vote.

Upholds Principles

"The board of directors hopes very much that the Washington branch will not make it necessary to sever such a long and mutually satisfactory association," the branch was told, "but it is convinced that the principle of unity in the common cause of education on which this association was founded is at stake and that the continued growth and influence of the association as a creative force in the world of education depends upon this principle."

Dr. Althea K. Hottell, dean of women at the University of Pennsylvania, and national president of AAUW, pointed out that in December, 1946, the rejection of Mrs. Terrell by the Washington branch came to the board's attention. At that time the board ruled that branches "Will practice within their own groups those principles which are in line with the association's history, its expressed international policies, its membership in the International Federation of University Women and its deep concern with all agencies seeking to rebuild a world shattered through discriminations and intolerance."

D. C. Branch of Univ. Women Rejects Colored Applicants

Journal Guide

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—The Washington chapter of the American Association of University Women last Tuesday defied an order of its national board to stop barring colored women from its membership .

The National Board has ruled that any woman who holds a degree from an association-approved institution should be admitted to membership in a local chapter.

The District of Columbia chapter, in a closed membership meeting last Monday night, voted to ask the national board to reconsider its ruling.

Mrs. G. Raymond Wilhelm, chapter president, said the subject came up when the chapter refused to admit Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, a graduate of Oberlin College and the widow of the late Judge Robert H. Terrell, a graduate of the Harvard law school.

MEMBERSHIP VOTE

She said the membership voted against admitting colored women in a referendum a year ago, but there is no formulated policy. The controversy, she added, now involves the local chapter's autonomy and its right to select its own members from among eligible women.

Mrs. William O. Burtner, public relations chairman of the local chapter, said she did not know whether the national board would suspend or expel the local chapter for its action, but she thought it likely that such an issue would await the next national convention.

A statement, prepared at the meeting of the local chapter for submission to the national board, denied that the chapter was practicing race discrimination and expressed the regret that the national board has taken the position that it will entertain no solution short of depriving all branches of the AAUW of any degree of autonomy in the matter of local membership.

FOR LOCAL ELECTION

The statement said the local chapter desires the right to select its membership as a means of protecting itself "from pressure groups seeking to infiltrate into voluntary organizations for ulterior purposes."

The statement added that the local chapter believed that "such protection is also a means of averting racial and group frictions and antagonisms within the AAUW."

The local chapter also suggested that the national board invite the president of the local branch and other members to meet with the board and discuss an interim agreement on which to operate until the next convention.

CLAFLIN U. APPROVED BY COLLEGE BODY

ORANGEBURG, S. C.—Claflin University has been approved for membership in the Association of American Colleges according to information received this week by Dr. J. J. Seabrook, president of Claflin University.

Claflin was approved for A-Rating in the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools last year, December, 1947, and now comes membership in the Association of American Colleges.

BARS PRO-NEGRO MOVE BY UNIVERSITY WOMEN

Journal Guide

WASHINGTON, July 16 (UP)—Federal District Judge Bolitha A. Laws ruled today that the American Association of University Women cannot, under its present by-laws, compel its Washington chapter to admit Negro members.

He issued a temporary order forbidding the national organization to expel the local chapter, and said he would issue a permanent injunction along the same lines soon.

The association threatened to oust the Washington group if it persisted in refusing to admit a Negro, Mrs. Mary Church Terrell. The local chapter took the issue into court.

Judge Laws said that the association's by-laws give "discretion" to local chapters in the selection of members. The Washington chapter could be expelled, he added, only if the by-laws were changed and it then refused to follow them.

Women Grads May Join Association

RALEIGH, N. C. — Women graduates of Shaw University in the future will be eligible for membership in the National Association of College Women, President Robert P. Daniel has been informed by Mrs. Juanita H. Thomas, chairman of the association's Committee on Standards.

The announcement came following a study of the institution and its unanimous approval by both the Executive Committee and the Convention of the National Association of College Women, held in March of this year.

A letter from Mrs. Thomas to Mrs. Daniel stated: "May we take this opportunity to welcome all women graduates of Shaw University into membership of the Association and to thank you for your cooperation in our study of your in

The Black Dispatch

CINCINNATI — (ANP)— Acting upon a report presented by a special committee, the Association of American colleges voted here last Wednesday to set up a national commission to help eliminate discrimination practiced against minority groups seeking admission to colleges, by voluntary means. However, a bitter debate preceded the action because many of the college officials did not think the action of the group went far enough.

Oklahoma City Okla.

The association voted to establish a commission to make an annual report on college discrimination; adopted a resolution, by 261 to 40, holding that "the problem of discrimination in admission should be solved by education and voluntary action, not by coercive legislation;" and approved 22-19 a resolution for the repealing of state legislation limiting the right of qualified personsfi regardless of race, creed or color, to enter a college or professional school.

Proponents of the "coercieve legislation" issue, charged that the association was "selling out to reactionary interests." They insisted that state laws be established to deny tax-exemption to institutions guilty of discriminatory practices. They were opposed by those held that college have the right to select their students.

Chairman of the committee presenting the report. Chancellor William P. Tolley of Syracuse university, said several states had measures pending which threatened the tax-exempt status of non-sectarian colleges practicing racial or religious discrimination in admissions.

Sat. 1-31-48

"However well intentioned such legislation may be, it would place in the hands of the state a threat to the freedo ı of colleges now independent of political control."

Dr. Morlecai Johnson, Howard university president, took an opposite view to the resolution, because "there are 17 states in which the will of the colleges to act on the question of segregation is curtailed by law. The colleges cannot admit qualified students even if they so desired."

President Bluford Tells Board Of Dire Needs At A. and T. College

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

GREENSBORO, N. C. — In a forthright evaluation of staff, facilities and equipment of A. and T. College, president F. D. Bluford pointed to numerous shortcomings of the institution in his annual report to the board of trustees, last week.

Commenting on enrollment he expressed the fear that the school will be unable to continue attracting students unless "something is done to improve housing conditions."

"We have permanent dormitories for 600 students, while more than 1,300 students are now living in dilapidated army barracks and temporaray buildings supplied wholly by the federal government and the college, without any cost to the state. More than 700 students are living in homes in the city, many of which are unsatisfactory to them from a financial side, as wel as from the unsanitary conditions and unwholesome social surroundings."

The loss of the poultry plant by fire more than three years ago was deplored by Dr. Bluford who acknowledged that during the time the college has been unable to do any practica! work in this field.

ENGINEERING UNIT

The trustees were told by Dr. Bluford that the War Department sought to establish an engineering unit of the ROTC at the college last year but the application was denied because the institution was not accredited by the National Engineering Association.

He suggested that the college "move as rapidly as possible toward securing the faculty, buildings, and equipment to enable this department to meet the requirements of the National Engineering Association."

"There is no place in the South where a Negro can secure an accredited course in engineering. If he wants training in this field he must go to the expensive schools in the East and West He prefers to get his training in his own school. He has no desire to go to the A. and E. College in Raleigh (State College for whites), but he feels that the training here at A. and T. should be comparable to that offered at A. and E."

TEACHER LOSS

Dr. Bluford called attention to the loss of several teachers because of low pay and unfavorable living conditions. Only last week, he said, the head of a department whom the college was paying $4,000 resigned to accept a similar position at another institution at $6,000 a year, plus a house. He pointed out that for a faculty and staff of nearly 200 the college has only two houses and three apartments for married teachers.

Bidding for equalization of teachers' salaries Dr. Bluford pointed to the fact that salaries of public school teachers have been equalized but nothing has been done to bring Negro college teacher's salary in line with salaries of other college teachers of the state.

REPORT ATLANTA UNIV. COMMITTED AS "REGIONAL"

Dr. Rufus E. Clements, president of Atlanta University, is reported to have committed the Atlanta University System to the Regional Education Plan, in his Annual Report to the Trustees, dated April 1948.

The charge was made by James W. Mack, Memphis, Tenn., June, 1948 graduate of Morehouse College, in an editorial in the May-June issue of Maroon Tiger, Morehouse College student publication The article is entitled "Don't Sell University System Down the River."

Dr. Clements, who is out of the city, could not be reached for comment on Mack's story which stated that the Atlanta University president reported to the trustees that "in contemplating the future of Atlanta University one must take into consideration its role as a regional institution."

FOR RECOGNITION

The story quotes President Clements as informing the Atlanta University Trustees: "the time has come when the State of Georgia should recognize the value and worth of the institution and should attempt to insure its usefulness through underwriting certain specific programs . . . With the consent of the Board of Trustees the president will delight in seeking to effect such recognition of our worth as may be mutually acceptable."

The Maroon Tiger writer recalls the prediction of Chancellor Raymond Paty last Spring which emphasized the fact that the regional schools would be in operation over the South by September.

According to Paty, instead of joint ownership of an institution by several states, one state could actually own the institution.

The student writer states:

"Paty was careful to ignore the immediacy of establishing schools of Law, Medicine, Engineering and other professional and technical schools. Instead he placed emphasis upon schools of Social Work, Library Science which are conveniently accessible to Atlanta University. Concluding that these are the professional areas in which Negroes wish to prepare."

"HAS THE FACILITIES"

Special attention is given Chancellor Paty's statement which reads "A major number of such specialized regional schools would be developed at Atlanta University SINCE IT ALREADY HAS THE FACILITIES ON HAND."

The story quotes the A. U. President's contention that A. U. is already a regional school, but the writer hastens to assert: "A. U. is regional in the sense that Yale, Chicago, and Harvard are regional. It is only reasonable that an institution will attract those first that are close at hand. But this does not justify one's use of this fact as a means of subterfuge by which to surreptiously acclaim A. U., as a regional institution as a "fait accompli."

The article continues: "It is difficult to work out an agreement with the State of Georgia, or any other Southern State that is acceptable to those who sincerely believe in the ideals and objective of A. U. The whole idea of regional schools was conceived for the purpose of both perpetuating and extending the boundaries of segregation.

"The fact of the apparent impossibility of such an agreement is evident in the history of A. U., and its controversy with the State of Georgia. From 1874 to 1887 the state of Georga made an annual appropriation of $8,000 to Atlanta University. But when in 1887 a special committee for the state found "Colored" and "White" students attending classes together there was no small commotion in the Georgia Legislature. There was an attempt to pass a bill known as the Glenn Bill to punish officers of administration and Trustees who educated "White" and "Colored" students in the same school. However the charter of Atlanta University, which stated its purpose as being, "for the liberal and Christian education of youth," prohibited this action unless the charter was revoked. A substitute resolution known as the "Calvin Resolution" was passed. The resoluton stipulated the appropriation of $8,000 to be used for the exclusive education of "Colored" students. The president at that time was Dr. Bumstead. It is a credit to his vision and courage that the policies of Atlanta University were not changed and because of which, the appropriation was withdrawn."

Atlanta U. 81 Years Old

Atlanta University today will celebrate the eighty-first anniversary of the granting of its charter.

The day's observance will begin in Sister's Chapel, Spelman College, at 11 a. m., when Dr. Fred L. Brownlee, General Secretary of the American Missionary Association, Division of Board of Home Missions of Congregational and Christian Churches, will speak.

Climaxing the celebration will be a Charter Day Dinner at 8 p. m. at the University Dormitories. Special tribute will be paid then to three distinguished alumni—Pres. Aaron Brown, of Albany State College, Pres. James A. Colstjon of Georgia State College, and Pres. Cornelius V. Troup of Fort Valley State College.

Organized to offer only normal and elementary instruction, it has grown to be one of the outstanding educational institutions in the Nation. Affiliated in 1929 with Morehouse and Spelman Colleges, the University offers in addition to its arts and science curriculum both graduate and professional instruction. Dr. Rufus E. Clement, former Dean of the Louisville Municipal College, has been President since 1937.

Dr. Reddick To Library Post

ATLANTA, GA.,—Dr. Lawrence D. Reddick of New York City has been appointed head of Atlanta University library, according to announcement last week by President R. E. Clement.

Dr. Reddick with the rank of professor of history, will take over his new duties April 1.

ATLANTA—Gifted Children (1420)

Graduate students enrolled in a course in school and community problems at the School of Education of Atlanta University have developed an experimental program for gifted children in the fields of music, art, drama and the dance. The general aim of the experiment is to determine the extent to which an applied program of fine arts may change the attitudes of children, eliminate racial tensions, provide wholesome recreation for the underprivileged and develop certain basic skills. Children from five local public schools are participating in the program. Sun. 5-9-48

A. U. Library To Bear Name Of Noted Benefactor Arnett

Sun. 4-18-48 Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

At the annual meeting of the Trustees of Atlanta University on Friday, it was voted that the University Library will in the near future bear the name of the Trevor Arnett Library in honor of the Board's chairman, Mr. Trevor Arnett of New York City. A former president of the General Education Board, Mr. Arnett is also the president of the Spelman College Board of Trustees and a member of the Board of Morehouse College.

The high tribute and signal honor paid to Mr. Arnett is an outgrowth of his invaluable assistance over a long period of years to Negro education, and particularly his cooperation and helpfulness in the development of the Atlanta University System, involving the affiliation of Atlanta University, Morehouse College and Spelman College.

It was due to Mr. Arnett's active leadership in promoting the affiliation of these colleges that the grant for the Library was made in 1930. Mr. Arnett is distinguished in educational circles. At various times has has served on the Boards of the University of Chicago, the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, the Rockefeller Foundation, General Education Board, the International Education Board. He is an authority on college finance and he has written several outstanding books on the subject.

BOND, REDDICK NAMED

Other action taken by the Board included the naming of Dr. J. Max Bond (since September, 1947 the acting director,) as director of the School of Education; and the granting of full academic status as professor of history to Dr. Lawrence D. Reddick, the University librarian.

Atlanta, Ga.

In dealing with the work of the year, President Rufus E. Clement called attention to the fact that the University had achieved high recognition for its academic standing and had been placed on the list of approved institutions by the Association of American Universities. Also mentioned was the full integration of the School of Social Work into the University System so that now, in addition to the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, there are University professional schools in Library Service, Education Business Administration, and Social Work.

Sun. 4-18-48

A financial report on the efforts to increase the endowment of the University and to meet the offer of the General Education Board which expires June 30, 1948, revealed that of the $2,700,000 which the Board originally offered, Atlanta University has claimed over $2,100,000. The Board is now considering plans by which they hope to claim most of the outstanding balance before the expiration date.

Atlanta U. Fund Drive Falls Short

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

Only half of the $600,000 public subscription for Atlanta University to match a like amount from the General Education Board was raised when the deadline passed last night. Thurs. 7-1-48

Dr. Rufus Clement, President of Atlanta University, said approximately $300,000 was raised for the University. This will be matched by $300,000 from the General Education Board. Of a $3,200,000 endowment offered by the General Education Board to Atlanta University a decade ago on a matching basis, Clement said the local university center has matched all but $300,000. This was the final portion of the 10-year program.

Failure to completely match the $600,000 will prevent the school from making some proposed expansions, Clement said.

Adult Education Workshop Ends At Atlanta University

Atlanta Daily World Tues. 7-27-48

The Adult Education Workshop concluded its six-weeks of activities with a panel which discussed the relationship of adult education to community life and progress, and the possible of programs in each community. Participants on the panel were C. L. Harper, executive secretary of the Georgia Teachers Association; Mrs. Grace T. Hamilton, executive secretary of the Atlanta Urban League; Mrs. Helen A. Whiting of the School of Education, Atlanta University; Marion Jackson of the Atlanta Daily World; Mrs. Maenelle Dempsey, consultant, Georgia Elementary Schools; Warren R. Cochrane, executive secretary, Butler Street YMCA; and John P. Whittaker, registrar of Atlanta University and director of the Summer School.

Members of the panel recognized the need for an adult education program for each community and the fact there are adult education programs in operation which are not generally recognized as such. It was brought out that (1:) the best way to provide adult education in each community is through passage of the National Literacy Education Act providing federal aid to states sponsoring adult education programs; (2:) that each community should begin creating sentinent in favor of the bil land urge its Congressmen to vote for it; (3:) that there is need for some organization to serve as a clearinghouse—an adult education council could well serve the purpose. Mr. Harper stated that the Georgia Teachers and Education Association would serve as an agent to see that necessary materials concerning the bill get to help.

Daily World

Visiting the workshop as consultants during the week were: Mrs. Whiting, who discused the preparation of material suitable for both children and adults based on life-related activities; Mrs. A. L. McPheeters, head librarian at the Branch Library on Auburn Avenue who discussed the role of the public library in the adult education program; and W. R. Chivers of Morehouse College who dismissed adult education from a sociological point of view.

Atlanta, Ga.

During the six-week period, workshop participants had experiences in writing materials on the low reading level; use of mechanical and pictorial visual aids such as the 16 mm sound projector, the slide and film projector, the camera, the wire recorder, and pictures from comic strips and magazines. Visiting consultants gave first-hand accounts of adult education programs carried on by the Army, the WPA TVA, public school systems, vocational education an dthe Project for Adult Education of Negroes.

MAKE TOUR

Members of the Workshop made tours to: The Carver Vocational School, Hopkins Book Store, the Atlanta Life Insurance Company, The Atlanta Daily World, the Butler Street YMCA, the Cyclorama, the Municipal Airport, Sears, Roebuck and Company, the Atlanta Constitution, the Georgia Employment Service, and the Federal Penitentiary. The information obtained from these tours gave members of the Workshop an understanding of the broad scope of adult education and an insight into the operation of adult education programs in organizations, institutions, and agencies of the community.

Members of the Workshop who participated in many activities of the Summer School program were W. T. Murphy, assistant director, who assisted with the music at the weekly forums of the School of Education; J. C. Evans, a consultant, who addressed the general summer school assembly; J. . Daves, also a consultant, who spoke at the forum of the Schol of Education; and Miss Ella Washington Griffin and Major David Lane, consultants, who lectured at the Principal's Workshop.

To give an insight into the problem or organizing and carrying on an adult education program a demonstration class was operated which permitted students to observe at first hand the teaching of adults

Social activities designed to implement a "we-feeling" within the group and to demonstrate a wiser use of leisure time included (1) a luncheon at Carver Vocational School sponsored by Mrs. Carrie Connally of the Workshop; (2) a soiree at the home of Dr. and Mrs. R. O. Johnson honoring Miss Griffin; and (3) a musicale at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Graham W. Jackson. Tues. 7-27-48

Arkansas To Admit Negro To Law School

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. —Clifford Davis, a Negro, will be admitted to the University of Arkansas School of Law, it was announced Friday by President Lewis W. Jones.

Arkansas is a neighboring state of Missouri and Oklahoma, which have refused to admit Negro applicants to their schools of law though the U. S. Supreme Court has ordered equal education for all citizens.

REJECTION AT WILLIAM JEWELL COLLEGE

Meanwhile in Libery, Mo., William Jewell College Thursday denied an application of a Negro Baptist pastor for admittance.

Dr. Walter Pope Binns, president of the college, a Baptist institution, said that the application of the Rev. Wiliam L. Blake, 29-year-old pastor in Liberty, was turned down because of the school's policy on racial matters.

Dr. Binnis said: 'The school always had a policy established and Negroes have never been admitted. The school sees no need for

Arkansas To Admit Negro Girl Student

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 24—(AP)—A 20-year-old Negro girl has been admitted to the medical school of the University of Arkansas — without segregation.

Dr. H. Clay Chenault, the university's vice president in charge of medical education and hospitals, said last night that Edith Mae Irby of Hot Springs will enter the school when the 1948-49 terms commence next month.

Dr. Chenault explained that it would be impossible to set up any measure of segregation in the medical school.

"She will be a part of her class, just like any other member," the university vice president said.

He pointed out that the board of regents had established a precedent when it allowed a Negro to enter the law school in 1947. The law student, Silas Hunt of Texarkana, attended classes under a program of segregation.

The Irby girl, a graduate of Knoxville, Tenn., college, was 28th in an aptitude test given to determine the 90 students who will make up the freshman class. Dr. Chenault said 11 other Negro applicants were rejected as a result of the aptitude test. The test was sponsored by the Association of American Medical Colleges.

NEGRO'S ACCEPTANCE BY SCHOOL IRKS LANEY

Says He Was Not Consulted By Medical Board

From The Commercial Appeal Little Rock Bureau

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 24.—Governor Laney Tuesday asserted he could see "no justification at this time' for the admission of a negro girl to the University of Arkansas School of Medicine.

The Governor charged he was not consulted by the board and pointed out he previously had warned the board against such action.

Admittedly peeved over the action, Governor Laney declared:

"I can't see any grounds for allowing any negro to go into the medical school at this time, particularly since there are hundreds of white boys who have been trying to get in. These white boys were told they couldn't get in because the school didn't have room for them.'

Governor Laney said if Arkansas had a medical school large enough to accommodate everybody, "then the boards action would have been correct."

"But the point is,' he said, "that they have pushed other white boys aisde for this negro. I dont think this negro is any better than these white boys."

Governor Laney pointed out that Arkansas provides a subsidy for negroes who want to enter schools of higher learning, but added, "there is no subsidy provided for white boys and girls."

Dr. H. Clay Chenault, University vice president in charge of medical education and hospitals, revealed Monday that Edith Mae Irby, Hot Springs negro, would be admitted to non-segregated classes for medical education.

Dixie School Gets Graduate Courses

PINE BLUFF, Ark.—Steps to relieve "potential" pressure of Negroes seeking graduate work at the University of Arkansas, were discussed here last week with officials of Arkansas AM and N College, Gov. Ben Laney and state education officials.

First step will be to set up a summer graduate school on the AM and N campus with white instructors from the University of Arkansas teaching courses. Under the proposed scheme, students attending the Jim Crow school will be given credit toward degrees from the white school.

Moon Asked To Take Work At Arkansas U.

F. D. Moon, principal of Douglass high school, Oklahoma City, was given definite information that the state of Arkansas is in dead earnest last week when he received a letter suggesting that he do his summer work at Fayetteville, and the announcement advised there are "extensive opportunities for recreation" at the school.

According to the announcement, the first summer session will open June 7th and close July 17th, and courses are offered in agriculture, arts and sciences, business education, engineering and law . Moon, when discussing the matter, did not state when he will leave for Fayetteville.

U. Of Arkansas Law School Admits 2nd Student To Jim Crow Classes

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—Following the lead of the medical school which accepted Miss Edith Mae Irby two weeks ago as the first Negro student to be admitted to the University of Arkansas, the law school this week announced that Jack Shropshire of Little Rock had been admitted as a law student for the current term.

Dean Robert A. Leflar announced the announcement, described Shropshire, who is a graduate of Wilberforce University, as fully qualified for admission and in process of filing formal registration.

Dean Leflar stated that the same policy of providing separate and segregated instruction which was initiated last term when Silas Hunt of Texarkana was accepted, will be continued, with Shropshire receiving instructions apart from white students. Hunt, a veteran, was forced to give up his law school career because of lung hemorrhage.

Students Okey Step

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (ANP) —There was no visible sign of objection to the presence of 25-year old Silas Hunt, colored graduate student, when he was enrolled in the University of Arkansas' Law School here early last week.

Rather it seems as though Hunt is being ragarded as "just another student" by campus constituents—although Hunt will attend separate classes.

Students Don't Object

The Arkansas Traveler, student newspaper, came out with a special edition carrying comments from a large number of students on the admission of colored students to the institution.

All but two agreed with the trustees' decision to admit all qualified graduate students.

Several, quoted by name, said they had no objection to Hunt's enrollment as long as he is a "sincere" student and is not entering the student body as a test case.

Hunt's Qualification High

Hunt, a former student at Arkansas A.M. and N., Pine Bluff, was president of the student body, editor of the Arkansawyer, monthly student publication, and held grades largely in the "A' bracket with a few "B's."

An ex-GI, with 23 months service in the European Theater as a combat infantryman, he was graduated from A.M. and N. after his discharge from the Army.

Negro Medical Student Admitted To Arkansas U.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 24 (UP).—The University of Arkansas announced today that Edith Mae Irby, twenty, of Hot Springs, Ark., placed twenty-ninth among ninety-one applicants taking a professional aptitude test sponsored by the Association of American Medical Colleges.

"She will be a part of her class, just like any other member," Dr. Chenault said. "It is physically impossible in a medical education program to offer any measure of segregation, especially in the preclinical years. This situation presents quite a problem, but the faculty group completely approved her entrance."

ARKANSAS FALLS IN LINE

The forthright action of the University of Arkansas in admitting Miss Edith M. Irby to its medical school, without qualification, marks another turning point in the educational history of the South.

Miss Irby ranked 28th among 90 students in an aptitude test sponsored by the Association of American Medical Colleges, so that there is no question about her qualifications.

Said Dr. H. Clay Chenault, university vice president, in charge of medical education and hospitals: "She will be a part of her class, just like any other member."

Meanwhile, the University of Oklahoma, faced with the "problem" of admitting colored students to its graduate school or of establishing another graduate school of equal rank, has until September 24 to make up its mind.

Oklahoma and other Southern States, which eventually will be called upon to open their doors, might well emulate the example of Arkansas and Delaware, which were the first to fall in line with the U.S. Supreme Court ruling providing that the States provide, at one and the same time within their boundaries, equal training for all students.

Oklahoma has tried to temporize. It has tried to evade the Supreme Court's ruling. But time is catching up with the educational procrastinators and is calling for a showdown.

As we have pointed out so often before, the end of segregation in education, particularly upon the graduate level, is at hand. The sooner all the Southern States recognize this fact, the better off they will be. They can't evade their responsibility any longer.

Segregated Ark. U. Student Keeps Pace With Law Class

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Shut off in a basement room as though he is suffering from some contagious disease, Silas Hunt, 24-year-old veteran, who is the first colored law student to have been admitted to the University of Arkansas here, uncomplainingly awaits his instructors in agency, real property and criminal law, at appointed hours in a dingy office, and is treated just as a one-man class.

He studies at the private home where he lives with one of the 200 colored families in the city, and although he has a student union card and an activities card entitling him to attend extra-curricular activities, he has never entered the student center nor attended any school activities. "Right now I've got to think about passing my courses," he said.

Hunt, a platoon leader of combat engineers in Europe during World War II, is keeping pace with the 30 white, first-year law students at the school, but admits it is sometimes difficult not being able to compare notes with them or benefit by discussions.

Ark. Daily Praises, Governor Raps End of University Bars

LITTLE ROCK (ANP)—The decision of the University of Arkansas to accept Miss Edith M. Irby, 20, as the first colored student in its Medical College, was heralded as a "reasonable and realistic policy" by the Arkansas Gazette, local white daily.

Admitting that the State is faced with grave problems in meeting its obligations to provide "adequate educational facilities for colored students," the newspaper said a contributing factor in the decision was, that the trustees "had no guarantee the separate policy would stand up long under current court interpretations."

Gov. Ben Laney, however, denounced the decision when he learned about it while on a good-will tour on the West Coast. He complained that the board of trustees did not consult him, and "pushed aside white boys" who could not get in for lack of room.

EDITH MAE IRBY, first Negro to be admitted to the University of Arkansas Medical school, will begin studies there this month. Miss Irby placed 28th on the list of 90 students accepted to pursue a course in medicine. She graduated magna cum laude from Knoxville College, Knoxville, Tenn., in 1948, and spent a portion of this summer working on a masters degree at Northwestern university in clinical psychology.

Ark. Law School Removes Railing Around Race Student

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—(ANP)—A railing used to separate Jack Schropshire, Negro student from Little Rock, from white classmates in the University of Arkansas law school has been removed, according to Dr. Robert A. Leflar, dean, here last week. But though the barrier has been taken away, the segregation policy of the school has not been changed.

Schropshire, a war veteran and reserve officer, was one of two Negroes who entered the school last fall. Both attended classes, separate from white students. Recently 125 first-year students had to be placed in a small classroom which ordinarily seats 60. This meant that 27 had to be placed in the same section with Schropshire.

According to Dean Leflar, the railing had to be taken down "for public relations reason" and because it was an obstruction in the crowded classroom. He said, however, that "the segregated area is unchanged due to the physical arrangement of the room. Schropshire's seat is an off-set in the classroom, and there is no longer any visible attempt at segregation, except that his seat is hidden from view of some of the students."

Before the 125 students entered the school, Schropshire and his instructors were using a second room alone.

Open Door

Last week, Edith Mae Irby, 21, enrolled in the University of Arkansas' medical school, the first Negro ever to be admitted to a white Southern medical school. Dr. H. Clay Chenault, the university's vice president, promised: "She will be a part of her class, just like any other member."

Arkansas Medical School Studies Mitchell Entry

FAYETTVILLE, Ark., Feb. 9—(NNPA). — The University of Arkansas medical school here has pending the application of a colored student, the school's head disclosed last Thursday.

Dr. Henry C. Chenault, university vice president in charge of medical education and hospitalization, identified the applicant as William J. Mitchell, 27-year-old war veteran, of Menifee, Arkansas. If accepted, he would enter the medical school next fall.

Mr. Mitchell is a former student at Howard university and Catholic university in Washington, D. C.

Silas Hunt, 24, of Texarkana was formally enrolled last Tuesday as the first colored student in the university's law school.

Dean Robert A. Leflar, of the law school, said arrangements were being made to provide separate classes and study facilities for Hunt. He was expectetd to begin classes this week in the law course for which he qualified in earlier studies at Arkansas Agricultural, Mechanical and Normal School, the state's colored land grant college.

Wiley Branton, of Pine Bluff, who came here with Hunt to enroll in the college of business administration, had his application in effect repected by the university Monday, February 2nd.

Arkansas' First Negro Student Begins Classes

LITTLE ROCK, ARK. —(AP)— The first Negro student ever accepted by the University of Arkansas medical school was among a class of 91 freshmen which began a week-long orientation program at the school here Monday.

The Negro is a 20-year-old girl, Edith Mae Irby, of Hot Springs.

Her presence in the class attracted no obvious attention. She talked with white students sitting near her before the ceremonies began.

Later the girl told a newsman she was conscious of no resentment toward her on the part of the white students. She added the atmosphere had been "very pleasant."

At the time she was accepted as a student, medical school authorities said there would be no classroom or laboratory segregation.

The Irby girl said she had wanted to become a doctor since she was a child. She said she could recall no specific instance which led her to that decision. She hopes to specialize in pediatrics after she completes her medical training.

The Negro student, who ranked 18th in tests on which medical school acceptance is based, received her pre-medical education in Knoxville College, Knoxville, Tenn.

Arkansas Law School Admits Second Negro

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. -(ANP)- A second Negro, Jack Schropshire of Little Rock, has been enrolled in the University of Arkansas law school, it was announced last week by Dean Robert A. Leflar.

Schropshire is a first year student. He will attend separate classes from those of the white students.

Last year the school enrolled its first colored student, Silas Hunt of Texarkana. He dropped out because of illness.

Silas Hunt Maybe Another Paul Lawrence Dunbar

LITTLE ROCK, ARK. —(SNS)—

By E. M. DOUCRIEF

I predict that within six weeks Silas Hunt, a young Negro of Texarkana who entered the University of Arkansas as a law student will be attending classes along with other intelligent students. When one has something outstanding to offer America he is highly received by his own race and other races too. I am sure the well thinking students at the University of Arkansas will know no color line within a short time as far as Silas Hunt is concerned.

Negroes can stay in their own race and associate with people of the lightest skin, since the blood of all races is so intermingled real segregation is impossible. We have the most outstanding colors in this supposed to be Negro race. These beautiful colors range from Black, Black to the so said White, White. In asmuch as black, black cannot be told from black, black, white, white cannot be told from white, white.

Of course it didn't happen below the Mason and Dixon Line but it happened. Paul Lawrence Dunbar was the only Negro in his class at Central High School, Dayton, O., and by reason of his modest and magnetic personality he became popular with his schoolmates and took part in the leading activities of the school. During his Senior year he was president of a Society Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pettis, reside in Malvern, Ark.

Officer Williams is a former U. S. Air Corps serviceman. He is also an athlete, having played with the Purity All Star team. He has received several good offers to play professional baseball in the American league. Son of Mr. and Mrs. John Williams, Sr., Officer Williams is a native of Jonesboro, Ark., and has lived all of his life in this state. During his Army career he graduated from the Army Administration School, Atlanta, Ga. and was assigned to the Military Detachment at Deming, New Mexico after serving three years. He is married to Miss Jamesina Smith of Jonesboro and they have one son, Bobbye Joe 9.

"We have observed with general satisfaction the service rendered by the colored officers in Little Rock," declared Augustus G. Shields publisher of the Arkansas World, "and know that the young officers in Hot Springs will also live up to the requirement of their superiors and the expectation of their race."

Colored Medical Student Files Application At U. of Arkansas

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (ANP) — The University of Arkansas Medical School here has pending the application of a colored student, the school's head disclosed last Thursday.

Dr. Henry C. Chenault, university vice president in charge of medical education and hospitalization, identified the applicant as William J. Mitchell, 27-year old war veteran, of Menifee, Arkansas. If accepted, he would enter the medical school next fall.

Mr. Mitchell is a former student at Howard University and Catholic University in Washington, D. C.

Silas Hunt, 24, of Texarkana, was formally enrolled last Tuesday as the first colored student in the university's law school.

Wiley Branton, of Pine Bluff, who came here with Hunt to enroll in the college of business administration, had his application rejected by the university Monday, Feb. 2.

Branton, describing Hunt's enrollment, said, "I was present when the board of trustees decide to accept him and a number of law students came up and shook hands with him. I believe he will be accepted by the other students on a fair basis and will do well.

NO VISIBLE OBJECTION

Like thirty white students enrolled from the spring semester, Hunt will take courses in agency and real property law, but will attend separate classes. There was no visible objection to the Negro's presence on the campus when he enrolled last week, rather, it seems that Hunt is being regarded as "just another student."

ENDORSED EDITORIALLY

The university newspaper, the Arkansas Traveler, published an extra edition carrying an editorial which endorsed the university's decision to admit qualified colored persons as graduate students.

Dean Robert Leflar said he believed the university's action in giving colored graduate students access to regular facilities while maintaining racial segregation would satisfy the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court holding that a state must afford colored students equal educational opportunities or admit them to the white university as soon as it does white applicants.

Hunt, a former student at Arkansas A.M. and N., Pine Bluff, was president of the student body, editor of the Arkansawyer, monthly student publication, and held grades largely in the "A" bracket with a few "B's." An ex-GI, with 23 months service in the European theatre as a combat infantryman, he graduated from A. M. and N. following his discharge.

Ark. Law School Removes Railing Around Race Student

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—(ANP)— A railing used to separate Jack Schropshire, Negro student from Little Rock, from white classmates in the University of Arkansas Law school has been removed, according to Dr. Robert A. Leflar, dean, here last week. But though the barrier has been taken away, the segregation policy of the school has not been changed.

Schropshire, a war veteran and reserve officer, was one of two Negroes who entered the school last fall. Both attended classes, separate from white students. Recently 125 first-year students had to be placed in a small classroom which ordinarily seats 60. This meant that 27 had to be placed in the same section with Schropshire.

According to Dean Leflar, the railing had to be taken down "for public relations reason" and because it was an obstruction in the crowded classroom. He said, however, that "the segregated area is unchanged" despite the removal of the rail. Schropshire's seat is an off-set in the classroom, and there is no longer any visible attempt at segregation, except that his seat is hidden from view of some of the students."

Before the 125 students entered the school, Schropshire and his instructors were using a second room alone.

The Courier Salutes

Pioneers in every field of human endeavor have their problems. And so will Miss Edith Mae Irby of Hot Springs, Ark., who was recently admitted to the University of Arkansas Medical School as the first of her race on a non-segregated basis.

The attractive 20-year-old student passed the first milestone when she qualified by placing twenty-eighth among a large field in the aptitude test for entrance in the University.

Miss Irby also appears quite aware of the tremendous responsibility which faces her as a pioneer in the U. of Arkansas Medical School. She put it this way:

"I realize that I have a big responsibility but I am happy to say that a number of white people have written me good luck. I have confidence that a vast majority of the white people in the South, as elsewhere, believe in justice and fair play."

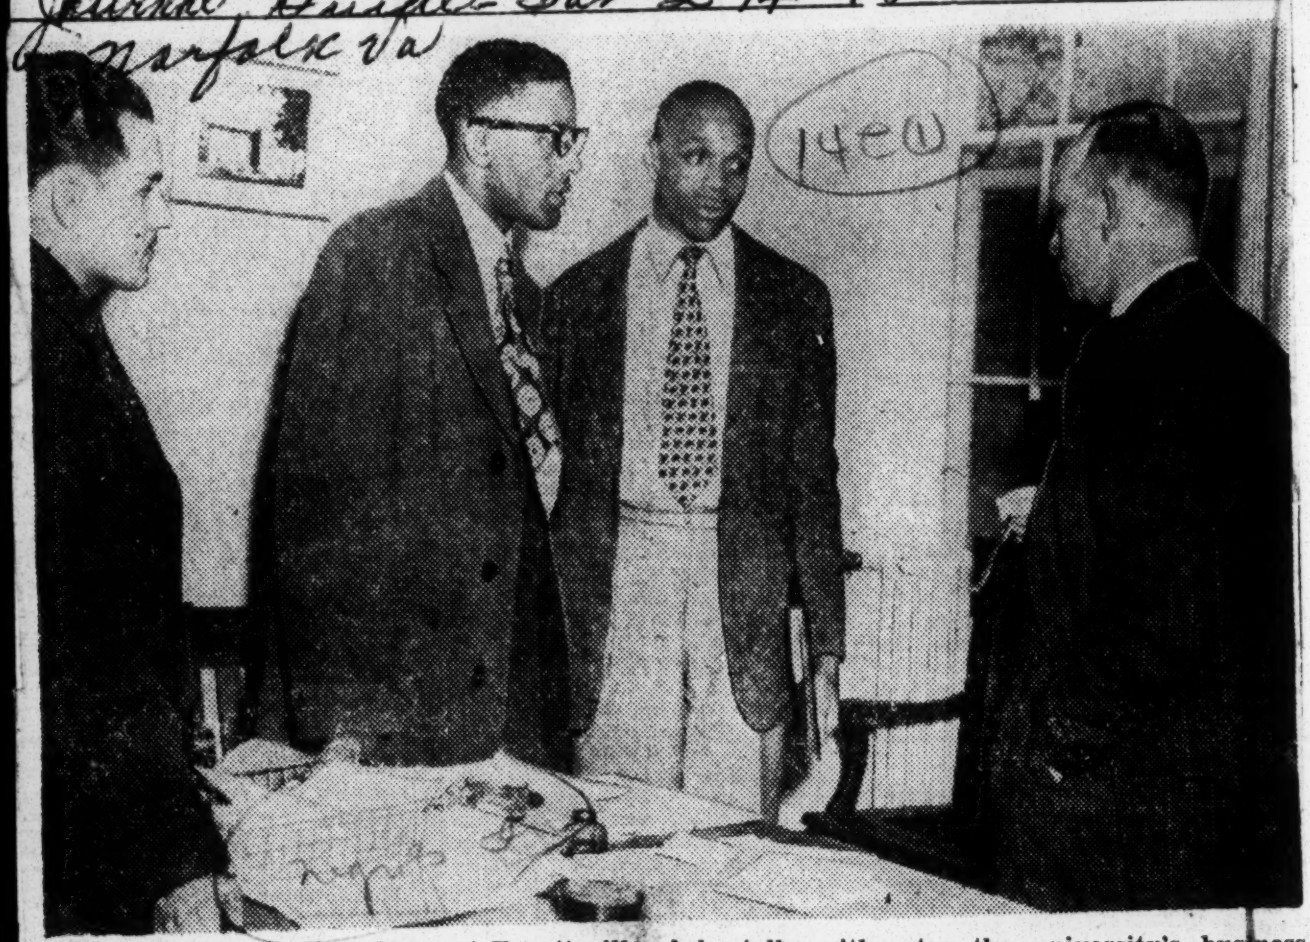
For her confidence in America, and her determination to make good in a pioneering situation, The Courier this week proudly salutes Miss Edith Mae Irby from the West's famous Spa.

MISS EDITH MAE IRBY

"I hope to make a record that will reflect to the honor of my race and that will obviously show that we only want to be accorded the rights and privileges by human beings and good American citizens.

First Colored Student Enters University of Arkansas

Journal Guide - Sat 2-14-48
Norfolk Va



Silas Hunt, of Texarkana, Ark., second from right, who, because of a Supreme Court ruling, is the first Negro student ever to be admitted to the University of Arkansas law school at Fayetteville, Ark., talks with Robert Laflar, dean of the law school, regarding enrollment.

Standing next to Hunt is his lawyer, Harold Flowers. Wiley Branton, extreme left, tried to enter the university's business administration school but was rejected. Laflar said that separate classroom facilities will be established in the law building for Hunt.

University of Arkansas Is First

(Reprinted From The September CRISIS)

The University of Arkansas became the first institution in the p South states to admit Negro students to regular classes in its luate schools when on August 24 it announced that beginning in ember it would have in its freshman medical class Miss Edith Mae of Hot Springs. According to Dr. H. Clay Chenault, the univervice president in charge of medical education and hospitals, Miss will be a part of her class, just like any other member—without ation."

was announced at the same time that Miss Irby, 20, and a graduate of Knoxville college in Tennessee, was 28th in an aptitude test given to determine the 90 students who would make up the freshman class.

And so it is Arkansas—and not "liberal" North Carolina, or "aristocratic" Virginia, or "individualistic" Texas—that is first to step forward and admit Negro students to its tax-supported colleges for professional and graduate training. It is Arkansas which admits that the system of exclusion and denial is unfair to both Negroes and southern communities and acts to correct the inequality. It is Arkansas (unlike stubborn Oklahoma) which recognizes the validity of the U. S. Supreme Court's opinions in recent cases and acts to uphold the Constitution. The entire state officialdom rates a salute on this forward move because it could not have been made without substantial agreement of everyone concerned from the governor on down through the courts, the legislators, board of regents ,and faculty.

Arkansas has pointed the way for the other states. Edith Irby has shown what they can expect in the way of applicants. Give the Negroes the same tests, rate them fairly as others are rated, and take the ones that can make the grade. The Negro applicant asks no special favors; he asks only a chance to compete on equal terms.

Thirteen years ago Donald Gaines Murray was admitted to the law school of the University of Maryland as a result of a more or less friendly law suit handled by the NAACP. Nothing has happened in Maryland except that Negroes are now a common and unnoticed sight in the law school where some of them have made brilliant records.

About ten years ago the University of West Virginia admitted Negroes, without publicity, to its graduate schools and nothing has happened. The University of Delaware announced last winter that it would henceforth admit Negro students to its graduate schools without segregation. In none of these instances has there been the slightest friction.

The Arkansas action means that in ten years Negro students will be enrolled in most, if not all, the graduate and professional schools of state institutions in the Deep South. If Texas would live up to its reputation for independence and cease sheepishly following the traditions of smaller and weaker men, it would give a cowboy whoop this week and announce the admission of Negro graduate students. White students are ready for it, but only the "old folks" in Arkansas have caught step with the times.

Arkansas State College Marked by Broad Growth

The Courier Sat. 8-7-48

Pittsburgh Pa.

By JOHN HOWARD
(Special to The Courier)

PINE BLUFF, Ark.—Seventy-five-year-old Arkansas State College has a record of unique service to the people of the South and the Nation. Nothing more than a high school in 1873, the institution has grown from a small frame building with seven students to an all-time high enrollment of more than 1,800 students, 112-member faculty and a plant of more than seventy-four buildings.

Within the past few years large sums of money have been spent for plant renovation and new equipment.

BROAD EXPANSION

Outstanding in the recent program was the construction of twenty-five quonsets for veterans and their families, five barracks for married and single teachers and veterans, a cannery, a farm shop, dining hall, twenty-one teacher's cottages, infirmary, high school building, music studio, science building, NYA building, and several additional buildings on the 300-acre farm which is two miles from the campus.

The college library is at present providing a large addition of library books, and an expansion of library service. Hundreds of new books come into the library daily, and it is most likely that the required number for North Central Rating will be reached by November of this year.

The curriculum of the college is made up of five instructional divisions: agriculture, arts and sciences, education, home economics and mechanical arts. All of these divisions offer courses leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts or Bachelor of Science.

Pitts-7-48

MANY OPPORTUNITIES

Cultural opportunities are stressed at the A. M. and N. College and the lyceum committee arranges for monthly appearances of outstanding actors, lecturers, dancers, writers and thinkers.

The music department broadcasts weekly over Radio Station KARK at Little Rock.

Notable among the new faculty members for the coming year will be John McLinn Ross, playwright, actor and lecturer. Mr. Ross will offer to the public a series of outstanding plays, including his "Wanga Doll."

Additions have been made to the athletic program. The college football team faces some of the strongest teams in the Nation and despite their record for 1947, the college has kept a winning team over the years. A long list of "greats" have gone down in history in Southwest sports.

As the college enters its seventy-fifth year of service, the task of building the institution into a greater medium of service is left to the present president, Lawrence A. Davis, 34, a native of Arkansas, and an alumnus of the institution.

Benedict College

78TH ANNIVERSARY

Benedict College Observes Founder's Day Tomorrow

By JOSEPH BROWN

Seventy-Eight years ago tomorrow, Benedict college here was founded by a liberal northern family who wanted to contribute something to the education of southern Negroes.

Tomorrow, Negro leaders and educators fro mall over the country will gather in Antisdel chapel at Benedict to show their appreciation by contributing to Benedict's $300,000 rehabilitation and expansion fund-raising campaign.

The chapel, named in honor of Dr. C. E. B. Antisdel and his family, was built in 1932 under the administration of the Rev. J. J. Starks, first Negro president of the private institution. Dr. Antisdel was the seventh president, he preceded the late Dr. Starks. The Benedict football field, located behind the college campus is also named in honor of Dr. Antisdel.

Goals Are Realized

In 1870, when Benedict had only one teacher, a housekeeper, a few students and one classroom, hopes ran high as to Benedict's possibilities. Today, that possibility is realized. Benedict was the first private Negro college in South Carolina to earn an "A" rating fro mthe Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and approved by the State Board of Education and by the American Medical association.

A former Benedict student, Attorney E. Washington Rhodes of Philadelphia, Pa., and editor of a Philadelphia paper will be guest speaker.

The public is invited to attend the founders' day program at Benedict tomorrow. Churches and Alumni groups from all over the country will make their contributions to the college tomorrow. The college choir, under the direction of S. B. Turner, with 40 voices, has been making tours to different Baptist churches in South Carolina in the interest of founders' day. The choir sings at Laurens tonight.

Founders' Day Address

In addition to alumni groups, students and friends will also make their contributions. At 5:15 p. m. tomorrow, a Founders' day address and special music will be rendered over station WKIX.

With the increasing social and educational changes there has been a corresponding expansion of the objectives of the college to meet the rapidly changing educational and social conditions, until today it is the belief of Benedict college that:

The prime purpose of education is to promote the fullest personal and social development of the individual.

Benedict has made remarkable progress since its organization in 1870. Today the college has fifty-one members on its college faculty.

The program for tomorrow includes:

Prelude.

Doxology.

Scripture and Prayer.

The audience will sing "Faith Of Our Fathers" and Lorene Reubens will give a historical sketch of the college. The Benedict college choir will sing "Roll Chariot" arranged. E. Washington Rhodes will give his address. The choir will sing the Hallelujah Chorus from "The Messiah" by Handel.

Following will be Benedict's Alma Mater which was composed by a former Benedict student, Anna Douglas. The Benediction follows and the postlude.

Benedict College's Expansion Campaign

Benedict College, located in Columbia and of the Baptist denomination, was founded in 1870 and most of its buildings were erected around ten years later or before the turn of the century.

For many years, Benedict was the greatest influence for education among South Carolina Negroes, contributing in this field while some of the other colleges now operating in the state were planning to enter the field.

Benedict's graduates dot the country, and are holding their own against competition. In all these years, little attention was given to enlarging buildings erected to cope with educational requirements 70 years ago. They merely stood, getting small attentions now and then.

The facilities of 70 years ago cannot cope with demands of today. Enrollments have grown at Benedict, as at other institutions. There have been improvements and changes in the styles and types of buildings adjudged proper for college training. it is no puzzle then why this institution—and what may be considered belatedly—strives now to remodel some of its buildings and put them in best possible shape to conform in actuality to the college's "A" rating.

The work will cost $3000,000 much less than is needed for a brand new plant. Benedict has one-half of this amount on hand, and is urging citizens to subscribe the other half.

South Carolina Negro adults number 383,000, and were 300,000 of them to contribute fifty-cents each, the amount would be realized. Were more to give the fifty-cents, the goal would be topped.

Benedict has been a life saver for Negroes, doing its share along with the other privately operated colleges. It has asked for little, in fact, too little. It wants now only to serve better the interests of the Negroes and whites in the state.

We can think of no better good deed to do at Christmas time this year than to give a little to this college. If it grows, South Carolina benefits. If it falters, so does South Carolina.

Conn. Students Attending More Business Schools

HARTFORD — (NNPA) — The number of colored students attending Connecticut business schools this year is greater than that which attended such schools last year, but the number in colleges and vocational schools has decreased, the Inter-Racial Commission of Connecticut reported ast Thursday.

The Commission said that roughly eleven white students were found in schools of higher education for each 1,000 white persons in the state last year and that this year ratio increased to fifteen in every 1,000. Colored students represented only three per thousand last year, and this year actual enrollment of colored decreased one per cent.

In 1946-47 colored students represented 1.8 per cent of the enrollment in vocational schools, the commission said, while this year they make up 1.9 percent, about equal to the percentage of colored people in the State, according to the 1940 Census, but it is believed that a new census would show a greater percentage of colored people in the population.

Colored stenographers, typists and secretaries employed in Connecticut increased from sixteen in 1940 to at least seventy-one in 1946 and "many more" at present, the report said. Among employers of them are G. Fox and Company, local department store; Pitney Bowes Company, Stamford manufacturer; Winchester Repeating Arms Company, New Haven, and Travelers Insurance and Aetna Life Insurance companies, of Hartford.

Study Continues In Concentration Of Business Ed.

Meeting at the Butler Street YMCA Monday, a committee of business consultants and representatives of Georgia's three state colleges rolled up their sleeves for an extensive examination and classification of current business training offered at the respective institutions.

The announced purpose of the conference—the second in a series—was to make a thorough analysation of business training from several viewpoints to determine an effective tri-way concentration of training among the three institutions.

Those in attendance at the conference included: President James A. Colson, of Georgia State College; Mrs. Orene Hall, Business Department head, Albany State college; Mrs. O. P. Williams, Business Department head, Fort Valley State college; Robert C. Long, Business Department head, Georgia State college; J. B. Blayton, of the Department of Business Administration, Atlanta Univ.; R. R. Reed, Executive Sect'y of the Georgia Negro Chamber of Commerce, and Dean Blanchet, of Fort Valley State college.

Upon the completion of the survey, a report will be submitted to the three state college presidents for recommendation to the Board of Regents.

The committee has established three areas of emphasis: (1) Business Administration (2) Technical training (3) Teacher - training. Typewriting and shorthand was considered as supplemental to each of the three areas.

STUDY EMPHASIS

The committee will focus its study on the following:

(1) Course offerings in the field at present and compare same with those of leading colleges of the country.

(2) Personnel now engaged and make similar comparisons.

(3) Physical plant and facilities and make similar comparisons.

(4) Needs in Georgia.

Business School Guided by Woman

DETROIT, Mich.—The foresight and perseverance of Mrs. Lottie Grooms, native of Belleville, Ill., was responsible for the creation of the Detroit Institute of Commerce in 1941. The institute met the need for better prepared young people to serve in the increasing number of business establishments owned and operated by Negroes.

The school is located in the heart of downtown Detroit and is licensed by the Michigan State Board of Education. It is a member of the National Council of Business Schools, the National Business Teachers Association, the Michigan Business Education Association, the Detroit Teachers Commercial Club and the Detroit Guidance Association.

A full-time faculty of six and three part-time instructors handle the class work of 275 students enrolled.

Gaston Business School Trains Future Leaders

By DAVID W. KELLUM

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(Special) —"Knowledge is power and power is success." That inscription hangs over the entrance of the Booker T. Washington Business College at Fifth Avenue and 16th Street, in the heart of Birmingham's Bronzeville.

The school, which is rapidly taking its place among the finest business institutions in the nation is a part of the Smith and Gaston Interest.

Headed by Mrs. A. G. Gaston, the Booker T. Washington Business College grew out of its president and founder's desire to see Negroes of Alabama given a chance to prove their worth in a business way.

"Since its beginning, scores of young men and women have gone into the professional world to do credit to the school and themselves," declared Mrs. Gaston as she talked of the progress the institution had made. Continuing she pointed out that during the war Booker T. Washington college graduates had jobs awaiting them in New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit and the nation's capital.

Competence, Conscientiousness and a ove for the work are the attributes of the faculty making up the Booker T. Washington Business College. The high standards of operation maintained by the College, make it necessary to employ teachers who have degrees from the best colleges. Graduates of the Booker T. Washington Business College are holding key positions all over the United States. During the war, the Government sent representatives down to examine the graduates, after seeing the kind of training they were receiving the Directress was asked to encourage the whole class to accept government jobs.

Faculty leaders include A. G. Gaston, president; Mrs. A. G. Gaston, directress; Miss O. V. Vare, assistant directress and Miss Reola Moore, secretary to the directress.

BOOKER T. WASHINGTON BUSINESS COLLEGE ADDS YEAR

The Booker T. Washington Business College now offers three years of business training to men and women seeking a business education. The third year has been pending for quite sometime waiting the approval of the authorities. After a throcgh investigation as to the preparedness of the faculty and school equipment permission was finally granted Mrs. A. G. Gaston Directress says. "Work will begin immediately toward a four year course."

The faculty and graduating class take this opportunity to invite you to the Commencement exercises beginning Sunday, May 23rd with baccalaureate services at the 16th Street Baptist Church, Rev. Luke Beard, delivering the sermon. 24th and 26th Final examinations, 27th at 11:00 A. M. Class Day in the Smith Memorial Chapel, 28th Commencement exercises 8:00 a. m., Dr. Henry Edmonds delivering the address at the 16th Street Baptist Church.

Business School Ban On Veterans Prompts Action

Assembly Bill 512 Enables Court Fight Against Offenders

NEWARK, N. J. —(NNPA)— The State Council against discrimination last Wednesday adopted a resolution expressing "deep concern and regret" that Assembly Bill 512 was not passed during the Summer session of the Legislature.

The action came after the council heard Joseph L. Bustard, assistant commissioner of education, report that some private business schools in Northern New Jersey have refused to admit qualified colored applicants.

REFUSE TWO VETS

Among the complaints reviewed by the council were two involving colored war veterans. The two veterans, according to Bustard, were refused admission to private business schools even though they were eligible under the GI bill and the schools in question were on the approved list for GI training.

During a discussion of the complaints, Herbert H. Tate asserted that Assembly Bill 512 would have helped to eliminate such discriminations. He noted that at present private business schools are immune from official action since they do not come under jurisdiction of the commissioner, the State Board of Education or the Civil Rights Law.

INTRODUCES RESOLUTION

The resolution was introduced by Miss J. Margaret Warner and seconded by Harry B. Bell, council vice chairman.

The council discussed tentative plans to hold a workshop session for members of the regional councils. Robert C. Clothier, council chairman and president of Rutgers University, invited the council to hold the workshop at the university in New Brunswick on December 11.

Change of Heads

Gammon Opens 64th Yr. With New Prexy And Strong Staff

Dr. Richardson Greets Students And Faculty

By V. W. HODGES

ATLANTA, GEORGIA— (SNS)— A new and revitalized program ushered in the sixty-fourth year of operation at Gammon Theological Seminary Wednesday morning, when a new president, a greatly strengthened faculty and a large student enrollment were welcomed to the campus.

Dr. Harry V. Richardson, the new Gammon president, addressed the faculty and students at the Wednesday's opening and called upon the prospective ministers to prepare themselves to lead useful lives in these troubled times. "The modern minister must be a spiritual engineer, technically trained for the godly reconstruction of society," declared Dr. Richardson at the first chapel assembly.

"You have come to the ministry at a time when the world sorely needs the service which the minister alone can render," Dr. Richardson continued. "This gives the ministry a practical purpose which is the ultimate test of its social worth," he said. Dr. Richardson called the students to a new sense of the dignity and difficulties in the ministerial profession. "Engineering in any area is difficult," the speaker declared. "It is especially difficult in the human sphere. And preparation for spiritual engineering will take all the study and devotion of which we are capable," he concluded.

The new president was for 15 years Chaplain at Tuskegee Institute, where he founded a statewide interracial ministers alliance, later directed the Southwide program for training of rural ministers, under the sponsorship of the Phelps-Stokes Fund of New York City and the Home Missions Council of North America.

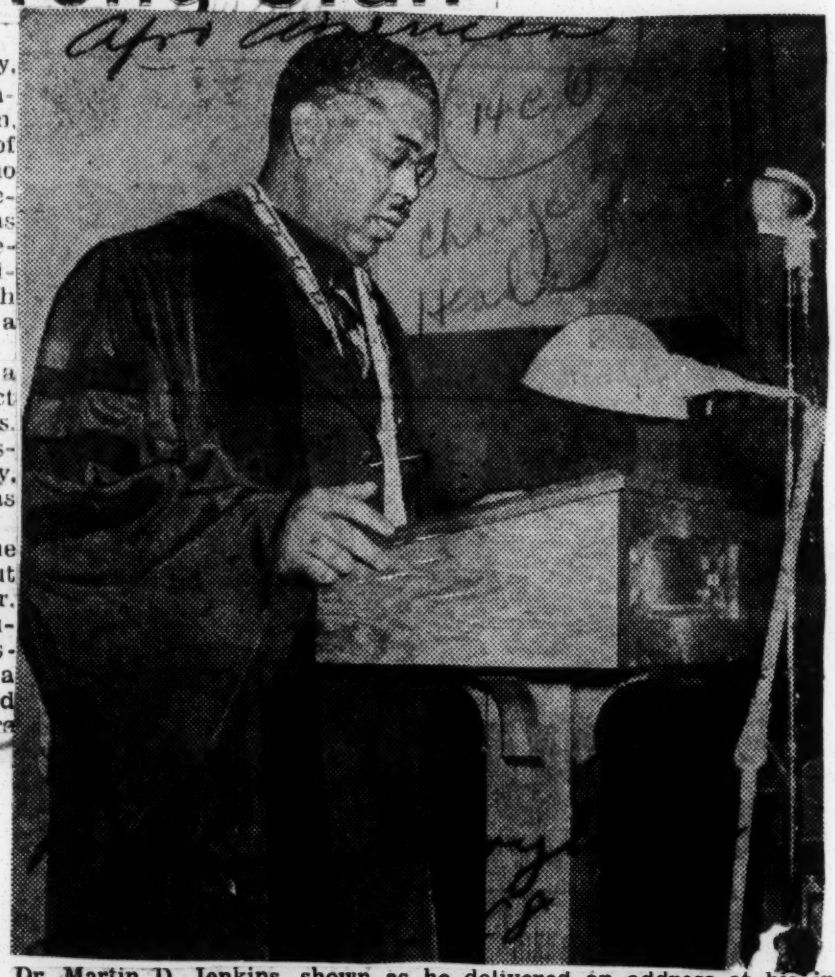
STRONG FACULTY

Dr. Richardson earned his Ph. D. degree from Drew University of Madison, N. J., and earned earlier degrees from Western Reserve and Harvard Universities. His latest book, DARK GLORY, has been widely read and highly praised by critics.

Other additions to the faculty, announced at Wednesday's opening, include: Dr. Paul T. Fuhrmann, a leading scholar in the field of church history and theology, who is author of several books on religious subjects. Dr. Fuhrmann has studied abroad, holds a Ph. D. degree from Drew University, Madison, New Jersey, and has a rich background of experience both as a teacher and a pastor.

Dr. Charles B. Copher, also a new faculty member, will conduct classes in Old Testament studies. He holds a Ph. D. degree from Boston University School of Theology, an has had extensive experience as a pastor.

Extensive renovations to the Men's dormitory were carried out during the Summer months. Dr. James S. Thomas, director of Student Activities, presided at Wednesday's opening and announced a new program of activities designed to improve student life and welfare on the campus.



Dr. Martin D. Jenkins, shown as he delivered an address at his inauguration, Friday, as the seventh president of Morgan State College, Baltimore. Dr. Jenkins made it clear that he personally was opposed to segregated schools. The inauguration ceremonies were held in the auditorium of Frederick Douglass High School, because Morgan lacks auditorium facilities.

O. R. Reuben Prexy Of Morris College

SUMPTER, S. C.—The election of Rev. O. R. Reuben to the presidency of Morris College, Negro Baptist College located in Sumter, S. C., has been announced by the Trustee Board of the college.

Rev. Reuben is a graduate of Benedict College where he earned the A. B. and B. D. degrees, and of Oberlin Graduate School of Theology where he received the B. D. and S. T. M. degrees.

Rev. Reuben is the pastor of the Happy Home Baptist church of Allendale, S. C. and the Dunn's Creek Baptist church of Donalds, S. C. Prior to his election as president, he was Professor of Religion and history at Morris College.

Rev. Reuben is married to the former Miss Anna Daniels of Georgetown, S. C., and has one daughter, Wilhelmina, age eighteen months.

Although only thirty years old, Rev. Reuben is a man of proven ability. He is a young man of exceptional personality and character; is well qualified to perform the duties of the office to which he has been elected.

Gammon President To Speak At A. U.

ATLANTA, Ga. — Dr. Harry V. Richardson, newly elected president of Gammon Theological Seminary, will be the speaker at the Atlanta summer school convocation at 5 p. m. on Thursday, Aug. 12, in Sisters Chapel, Spelman College, President Rufus E. Clement announced this week.

The summer school's nine-week session will come to a close on Saturday, Aug. 14. Dr. Richardson was the chaplain at Tuskegee Institute for 15 years.

La. Pastor to Head Sam Huston College

AUSTIN, Tex.—Appointment of Dr. Robert F. Harrington, 34, pastor of Monumental Methodist Church, New Orleans, to succeed the late Dr. Karl E. Downs as president of Samuel Huston College on Nov. 17, has been announced by the Board of Trustees.

The president-elect received his B. S. degree at Claflin College. His B. D. degree at Gammon Theological Seminary, and the MST degree at Boston University where he was the only member of the seminary singers who was not white.

He was a chaplain in the last war serving in India and Burma; youth work director and president, Conference Board of Education in Savannah, Ga.; religious director at Wiley College; and has taken studies toward his doctorate.

Dr. Trigg's Formal Inauguration In Jan.

RALEIGH, N. C. — Dr. Harold L. Trigg will be formally inaugurated as the sixth head of St. Augustine College on Jan. 14, in connection with the observance of the 82nd anniversary of the college. Dr. Trigg is St. Augustine's first Negro president.

The 82nd academic year of the college was formally inaugurated Sept. 23 with a special service and convocation in the college chapel. The ante-communion service was read by the Rev. Lloyd M. Alexander, chaplain.

The Rev. James K. Satterwhite, archdeacon of the Diocese of Florida, read the epistle, and the Rev. Robert J. Johnson, D.D., rector of St. Mark's Church, Wilson, N. C., read the gospel. Both Dr. Johnson and Archdeacon Satterwhite are of the class of 1906, and the former is a member of the board of trustees of the college.

The Rt. Rev. Edwin A. Penick, D.D., president of the college board of trustees and bishop of North Carolina, was presented by Dr. Harold L. Trigg, president of the college. In his address to the staff and students Bishop Penick voiced personal and official welcome to all, "old and new."

Among the guests attending the service and presented by President Trigg were: The Rev. J. McDowell Dick, rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Raleigh, and the Rev. Clarence Haden, rector of St. Philip's Church, Durham, both members of the board of trustees; and the Rev. I. Harding Hughes, chaplain of St. Mary's School and Junior College. Prof. Theodore C. Mayo, organist, directed the choir.

New members of the staff include: Dr. R. H. Loeppert, F. R. West, Roy D. Moore, Mrs. Roy D. Moore, John L. Jones, Miss Cleopatra Jones Miss Edithe Pierce, Miss T. Lorraine Cumbo, and Mrs. Josephine H. Briscoe. Of the nine new members four represent net additions over last year's faculty.

Will Serve Until New Head Chosen

NEW YORK — Alonzo G. Moron, general business manager of Hampton Institute and chairman of the school's interim administrative committee, was named acting president by the board of trustees meeting here Friday.

Moron, a native of the Virgin Islands and a graduate of Hampton, will serve until the board makes a decision as to the successor to Ralph Bridgemen who resigned last year.

Moron's appointment, it is understood, will not remove him from consideration by the trustees as possible permanent president. Others who have been interviewed for the post that carries considerable prestige in educational circles are Dr. Benjamin Mays, president of Morehouse college in Atlanta and Dr. Robert Weaver, professor at New York university.

At the same meeting, the trustees re-elected Saul Perdue, principal of Carver Vocational High School in Baltimore as alumni representative on the board of trustees, and nominated Robert Devecchi for board membership.

Moron will continue as business manager in addition to his new duties.

Moron is former commissioner of public welfare for the Virgin Islands and former manager of two housing projects in Atlanta.

After finishing Hampton's division of trades in 1927, he earned a PH.D. cum laude from Brown university and an M.A. from University of Pittsburgh. Last year he received an LL.B. from Harvard university law school. He is also holder of a Phi Beta Kappa key.

to Head Institute

HAMPTON, Va. — Alonza G. Moron, a graduate of the school, and a native of the Virgin Islands, has been elected acting president of Hampton Institute, Dr. Channing H. Tobias, chairman of the board of trustees, announced Saturday.

He succeeds Dr. Ralph P. Bridgman who served four years and resigned last January after a series of unrest in which students and faculty members participated.

Dr. Tobias said the committee appointed by the board to nominate a new president, made up of five trustees and two faculty members, is still at work.

Mr. Moron becomes the second person who is not white to serve as acting president at the historic institution. Dr. R. O'Hara Lanier, president of Texas State University, was the first, succeeding Dr. Malcolm MacLean who headed the school during the war.

Academic Career

He graduated from the Hampton Trade School in 1927, holds the Ph. B. degree, cum laude, from Brown University where he majored in sociology and economics and was admitted to Phi Beta Kappa honorary scholastic fraternity, and received his LL. B., degree last year from Harvard University Law School.

Mr. Moron was appointed business manager in Feb., 1947, and has been serving as chairman of the interim administrative committee since last February. He will continue as business manager in addition to his duties as acting president.

Social Housing Expert

He was formerly a social worker with the Baltimore Emergency Relief Commission, part-time instructor at Atlanta University School of Social Work, and manager of two Federal housing projects in Atlanta.

He is a graduate of the first Housing Management training institute, and was formerly commissioner of public welfare in the Virgin Islands.

The trustees re-elected Saul Perdue, principal of Carver Vocational High School, Baltimore, as alumni representative on the board, and nominated Robert Devecchi of NYC for membership.

Had Been Acting Head Since Jan.

MARSHALL, Tex. — Wiley college was given a president by action of the Board of Trustees in a special call meeting at Navasota, October 19, when they unanimously elected Acting President J. S. Scott to the position of President. Dr. Scott served in the capacity of Acting President since June 1. Previously he was special assistant, having filled this position since January 18, 1948.

Given Ovation

The faculty, student body, members of the local committee of the Trustees, alumni, and the public gave Dr. Scott an ovation at the Tuesday chapel exercise upon his return from the Trustee meeting representatives of these various groups was held and in accepting the welcome Dr. Scott said among other things: "I would be less than human not to be affected by the words and spirit of this occasion. I accept this welcome in a spirit of joy and humility. I did not seek the presidency at Wiley. I wanted the board to select the best person possible in their judgement."

"What Is Wiley?"

He stated, in answer to his own question, "What is Wiley?" "that it is not the buildings and grounds, not the faculty, but the spirit." Closing his remarks with the poem "You Gotta Have a Glory."

Among those who took part in this program were Dean H. F. Colefan representing the faculty, Rev. G. L. Loud the local trustees, Herbert Hilburn for the students, Dr. O. J. Moore of the alumni. Mrs. H. W. Smith played the organ while the audience sang "O For a Thousand Tongues To Sing." J. Otis Erwin, college pastor gave the invocation; Miss Ada Bolden and Mr. Earl La Rue played a piano duett; Miss Evelyn Rogan sang "Hold Thou My Hand" and the program was closed by the singing of the Alma Mater with the audience standing. Wiley is enjoying one of the best years in its history with an over-all enrollment of 1,152.

Lane's President

PROF. JAMES HERBERT WHITE, capable principal of the Whiteville High School at Whiteville, Tenn., was elected president of famed Lane College at Jackson, Tenn., last week following the resignation of President Yarbrough. Prof. White is a graduate of A. and I. State College and received his master of arts degree at Columbia University in New York. He had done an outstanding job of teaching and school building at Whiteville, which merited his election to the presidency of Lane, a leading college of the CME Church.

Nashville citizens were generally elated over Prof. White's election it is learned. A few years ago he barely missed being chosen president of Alcorn College, the leading Land Grant College of Mississippi. He graduated at A. and I. in 1932.

Prairie View Inducts Evans

PRAIRIE VIEW, Texas—(Special)—"The recent election which returned President Truman to the White House for another four years testifies to the forward march of American Democracy," Dr. Frederick D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute told nearly 2,000 educators at the Inaugural of Dr. Edward B. Evans as first president of Prairie View Agricultural and Mechanical College here Friday, December 3.

Dr. Patterson, a graduate of Prairie View College and a close friend of Dr. Evans, made the principal address at the inauguration. During his school years here, he had been a student under Dr. Evans.

The inaugural was attended by representatives of 48 colleges and universities in the United States and by 17 presidents of American colleges, as well as civic and business leaders. The long procession of cap and gowned educators moved from the library to the gymnasium when the inaugural was held.

President Evans was installed by Gibb Gilchrist, chancellor of the Texas A. and M. College setup of which Prairie View is one of the four colleges. The other three are white.

Chancellor Gilchrist made it known that Dr. Evans, because of his 27 years of untiring and unselfish services at Prairie View, was the only man considered to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Dr. W. R. Banks in 1946.

President Evans in his acceptance speech promised an efficient administration and called attention to the college's service and place in both the Texas educational system and that of the South. He said that almost 70 percent of the Negro teachers in the Lone Star State were Prairie View graduates.

On the rostrum were 14 including the new president, the speakers, three members of the Board, Frank 'Fay' Young of the Chicago Defender, President Harmon Lowman, Sam Houston State Teachers College, who represented Governor Beauford Jester of Texas. The United States Army was represented by General Thomas T. Handy, commander of the Fourth Army at San Antonio.

Dr. J. S. Scott Is President Of Wiley

MARSHALL, Tex. — Dr. J. S. Scott, who has been acting president of Wiley College here since June 1, was elevated to the presidency of that institution on Oct. 19 by the board of trustees in a special call meeting at Navasota.

The new president was given an enthusiastic ovation by students, faculty, alumni, and trustees at chapel exercises last Tuesday upon his return from the trustees' meeting and the Texas Annual Conference.

Following are the two letters written to Judge Morris A. Soper, Morgan trustee head, by Dr. Wesley, one accepting the Morgan presidency and the other rejecting it.

Dr. R. F. Harrington Elected President Of Samuel Huston

AUSTIN, Tex. — Dr. R. F. Harrington, pastor of the Mount Zion Methodist church, New Orleans, La., will succeed Dr. Karl E. Downs as president of Samuel Huston college. The 34-year-old president-elect was born in Clover, S. C. He was graduated from the public schools of Florence, S. C., and received his bachelor's degree from Claflin college in 1933. While in college in 1933 he figured prominently in extra-curricular activities as president of the student body and was initiated into the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity. He was graduated from Samuel Huston college in 1936 with a major in sociology and was valedictorian of his class. In 1933 he received the Bachelor of Divinity degree from Gammon Theological Seminary, after which he served in a special religious capacity with the CCC for three years. In 1937 the degree of president-elect was conferred upon him at Boston university, where he earned his master of Sacred Theology degree. He was ordained in the Methodist ministry in 1939 and has served as pastor of churches in Texas and Louisiana.

Wesley President-Elect Of Morgan for 9 Months

Head of Ohio Institution Explains Reason He Must See Fight Through at Wilberforce

In electing Dr. Martin D. Jenkins as president of Morgan State College, Thursday night, the institution's board of trustees released Dr. Charles H. Wesley from his contract and wished him success in his Wilberforce enterprise.

Dr. Wesley, who accepted the post of president on June 16, 1947, was released as president-elect for nine and a half months. He asked to be relieved from his contract on March 24 in order to remain at the Ohio school, where he has been since 1942.

His acceptance and rejection of the Morgan post was not the first for Dr. Wesley. He had done the same thing in connection with Wilberforce University in 1932. Elected president of that institution to succeed Gilbert H. Jones, who resigned on June 7, 1932, he resigned July 4, having held the position only a few days. At that time, he said he felt that he could do more in his field of historical scholarship and because he feared that a church-State split was imminent.

Director Refused

College

Dr. Alphonso Elder, head of the department of graduate education, has been named president of the North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham. He succeeds the late Dr. James Edward Shepard.

Dr. Elder was dean of the college and teacher of mathematics from 1924 through 1943. He was director of the graduate school of education at Atlanta University from 1943 to 1947.

Dr. Elder did undergraduate work at Atlanta University and received the master's and doctoral degrees from Columbia. He has done additional study at the University of Chicago and the University of Cambridge, in England.

Mrs. Bethune no longer college head

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Predicting the early extinction of the private Negro college because of competition from state institutions, Richard Vernon Moore, former agent for Negro high schools in the Florida State Office of Education, last Thursday became third president of Bethune-Cookman college, succeeding Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, founder and president emeritus.

Los Angeles, Calif

Twenty-five years from today only a few private colleges for Negroes will be in existence, President Moore warned. "They will not be able to compete with the heavily tax-supported State and Land-Grant colleges. The private colleges that will survive will depend upon the basis of support which they can establish for themselves within the next decade."

Sat 7-17-48

Apprised of this view the day before, the college's board of directors had approved a campaign to raise the endowment fund to $1,000,000, slightly less than 50 percent of its present amount.

Continuing his address, President Moore observed that education will be cheaper. Also its duty has changed, he said. In the 18th Century, it was knowledge; in the 19th century, scholarship and invention. "Citizenship is the keynote of the new era in which civic emphasis shall shift from human rights and privileges to human duties," the educator said.

Dr. Holmes Quits Morgan

Baltimore Md.

The Afro American

BALTIMORE

The door opened and a silver-haired man walked in. He said:

"I'd like to see the president of Morgan State College."

It was Dr. D. O. W. Holmes on his first official day of retirement, Thursday, paying a visit to the executive offices of Dr. Martin D. Jenkins, new Morgan president.

Another door opened and Dr. Jenkins came from the inner office following college officials, Dean George Grant, Registrar Edward Wilson and Business Manager James Carter.

Sat 7-10-48

Warm Greetings Exchanged

"Say, what does a person have to do to see the president around here?" Dr. Holmes laughingly asked, as the man who has retired after 11 years of service and the younger man, fresh from successes as an educational survey specialist and professor, shook hands warmly.

Dr. Jenkins, with his wife and 15-year-old daughter, Marlene, arrived on the campus from Washington early Thursday morning.

They reside in Truth House, the new dormitory for women. Dr. and Mrs. Jenkins have a small suite of two rooms and bath on the first floor, and Marlene is across the hall in one of the regular dormitory rooms.

House to Be Remodeled

Meanwhile, Dr. Holmes announced that within the next week or 10 days, he will move into an apartment at 2029 Druid Hill Ave.

The red-trimmed gray cottage overlooking Hillen Rd., where Dr. Holmes sat in his study and mapped the plans which have increased Morgan's budget to over three million dollars, will be remodeled.

Now a six-room building, the cottage, in order to accommodate the new president's larger family, will undergo the following renovations:

Sat 7-10-48

The front porch, living room and hallway will be made into a new living room; the kitchen will be enlarged and a unit kitchen installed; the dining room will also be enlarged; and a wing will be added for the president's study.

Two bedrooms on the second floor are to be extended over the porch and a new screened porch erected front and side. These operations will cost some $10,000, and contractors are hoping to complete them by September.

Dr. Holmes "Going Fishing"

Dr. Jenkins and his family will continue to live in Truth House during the summer. A vacation trip to Quebec, Montreal, is in their plans.

And Dr. Holmes? Well, he said he might before the Thursday that the clock until he had watched the midnight.

Then when he dozed off and awoke about an hour later, he realized that he was now "president emeritus," and rejoiced in the fact that he had fulfilled his ambition to live long enough to retire.

As for his future plans—Dr. Holmes is going fishing.

Dr. Holmes Decides to Remain at Ohio Post

(Special to The Courier)

BALTIMORE, Md. — The Board of Trustees of this Methodist-controlled college at Wilberforce, Ohio, has withdrawn his acceptance of the presidency of Morgan State College. Trustees of Morgan are now seeking a man to fill the post held by Dr. Dwight O. Holmes who retires in June.

Dr. Wesley accepted the post after it had been offered to him by Morgan College trustees in June, 1947, shortly after his abrupt dismissal as president of Wilberforce University. This preceded a split which developed into the operation of two separate institutions at Wilberforce.

WILBERFORCE, Ohio — Reliable sources said here this week that 87-year-old Bishop Reverdy C. Ransom, senior Bishop of the AME Church, will step down as chairman of the board of trustees of Wilberforce University in May.

When trustees of the AME-supported Wilberforce University dismissed Dr. Wesley in June, 1947, the State of Ohio gave its support to that part of the university's facilities which were placed there by the State, and placed Dr. Wesley in the presidency of what became known as the College of Education and Industrial Arts at Wilberforce, Ohio.

ACCEPTED LAST YEAR

In his acceptance letter last year, Dr. Wesley told Federal Judge Morris A. Soper, chairman of the Morgan College board of trustees, that he would "devote the best of my efforts to the continued advancements of the college and to the building of the future upon the excellent foundations laid through the leadership of President Holmes."

It could not be ascertained from the trustees of Morgan what reason was given by Dr. Wesley for his final decision to withdraw himself from the presidency of the local institution. It was believed, however, that the subsequent support given to his administration at the State-supported school at Wilberforce, played an important part in that decision.

WESLEY NOT AVAILABLE

Dr. Wesley could not be reached for a statement, but it was learned in newspaper dispatches from Columbus, Ohio, that he had been elected to membership on the executive board of the Ohio College Association, which had also granted accreditation to the State-supported school upon recommendations of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Clark's Two Million Dollar Campaign

The executive committee of Clark College Board of Trustees has approved plans to launch a long-range campaign for building-expansion and for the substantial increase of her endowment holdings. Dr. James P. Brawley, the president, in making public the announcement, explained that the phenomenal growth of the college during the past seven years, during which time the enrolment has increased from 419 college students in 1941 to 846 at the present, "makes it imperative to expand the facilities of the college."

Atlanta Daily World

The first unit of the campaign, the president stated, calls for the raising of $600,000 within the next 12 months. "The urgency of completing this first unit," Dr. Brawley points out, "centers upon completion of the dormitory now under construction by September, 1949."

Jun. 11-28-48

What a splendid challenge this laudable undertaking presents to the graduates, students and faculty of the college! What a challenge it offers to the pride and loyalty of Atlantans, black and white! What a challenge it should be to Methodists of Georgia in particular and of the Nation in general! And what a challenge it is to friends of the college everywhere!

Here is an institution in the forefront of American liberal arts colleges, having as its service motto: "To develop men and women who will be polished and refined in manners, keen and critical in intellect, sensitive and appreciative in nature, Christian in character, broad in interests, efficient in work, and useful to society."

Jun. 11-28-48

Here is an institution unwilling to resort to the false expedient of a Regional College scheme in order to secure funds at the greater expense of the race. To the contrary, Clark College today, true to the ideals of her founding fathers nearly 80 years ago, holds steadfast in the belief that its high mission is to serve present-day Negro youth as it ministered to the newly emancipated slaves in 1869.

YALE HEAD DENIES ADMISSIONS BIAS

But Insists, After Attack by Labor Group, University Must Rule Selections

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 18—In a letter to The Yale Daily News today Dr. Charles Seymour, president of Yale University stated that " in all Yale history, so far as I can discover, no applicant has been denied admission on the grounds of race or color."

"The same is true," he went on, "as regards creed since 1823, when the required adherence to the Saybrook platform was discontinued."

The letter was in response to requests by members of the student body and the faculty for amplification of his address at alumni day ceremonies Feb. 23.

The elaboration is concerned specifically with Dr. Seymour's reference to Yale's "tradition of wise tolerance" in admission policies, "which we shall maintain."

In a letter made public March 11, while Dr. Seymour was visiting Southern and Western alumni groups, the New Haven Central Labor Council, through its president, Vincent J. McGovern, criticized the Yale head for his expressed opposition to proposed state legislation prohibiting racial and reliigious discrimination by colleges in the admission of students.

Labor Council's Challenge

The labor council took issue with Dr. Seymour's statement that, although Yale would continue to pursue liberal practices on admissions, "we must be completely free to select those we regard as best fitted to the privilege of a Yale education."

It also objected to his statement in the Alumni Day address that anti-discrimination legislation would constitute "interference in college affairs."

In his letter to the college paper today, Dr. Seymour stated that through the years "there has come to the Yale campus a vast variety of creeds, colors and nationalities."

"Yale has always emphasized democracy as an essential aspect of student life," he proceeded, "and for many years has followed a consistent policy of encouraging applications from the public high schools."

Declaring that when students lack financial resources "we do our best to help them meet their educational expenses," he added that the student body of the university "represents all degrees of economic status, poor and rich, and no one is excluded by reason of creed, or color, o rnational background."

He asserted that Yale's standards of admission were positive, not negative, and because many more students applied than could be admitted "we are compelled to make selection."

Lists Points of Selection

"That selection," he said, "is based upon the intellectual capacity of the candidate, his integrity of character, his personality and his promise of future leadership. Successful candidates are admitted, without prejudice, on the basis of such qualities.

"In the selection of our students we depend upon the unprejudiced wisdom and experience of the members of the boards of admission. There is no process in academic administration more difficult than the decision as to which of the many applicants should be accepted. That decision involves not merely examination marks but qualities of character and personality for which it is impossible to find a mathematical coefficient.

"No untrained external agency can bring any assistance. The intrusion of such an agency would merely add confusion to a task that is already complex.

"I have stated many times that Yale exists for the training of youth in the national service and that our obligation to the public is unquestionable. We must fulfill it. The administration of that training must be characterized by constant elimination of prejudice in any field. In this regard I stand on my personal record."

Chester Pierce (right foreground) of Glen Cove, L.I., N.Y., broke one tradition last Fall when he played with the Harvard football eleven against the team of the white University of Virginia in Charlottesville. He changed another custom this month when as second class marshal he led his class in the commencement procession at Harvard, where all class marshals previously had been white.

Figures Tell the Story

IN OUR COLLEGES, 1945-1947

	Fall Registration	Veterans Enrolled	Graduates (B.A. and B.S.)
1945	34,856	1,310	4,596
1947	56,984	34,068	7,676

Note that these figures, based on Dr. Mariin D. Jenkins' yearly survey in the Journal of Education, do not include students in white institutions. They also do not take into account persons who received advanced degrees or people attending summer school or taking extension courses.

If these were added the total enrollments would be about 65,000 for 1945-46, 75,000 for 1946-47, and close to 100,000 for 1947-48.

Accounting At Daniel Payne Sought

MOBILE, Ala. — Auxiliary trustees of Daniel Payne College on February 23 demanded that Bishop D. Ward Nichols, president of the Board of Trustees and the Revs. J. S. Thompkins and G. R. Polk, treasurers, make an accounting of monies raised during the past eight years of Bishop Nichols' administration.

The petitioners are the Revs. J. D. Carter and D. Addison and E. M. Shorter.

Under Alabama laws Bishop Nichols and the two treasurers had six days to produce the records, but the petitions gave the school officials ten days. This period expires today (Thursday, March 4).

It is alleged that one of the petitioners was threatened and put under duress to sign a release.

A writ of mandamus to force Bishop Nichols to turn over books, records, papers and receipts dealing with the financial transactions of Daniel Payne College will be sought if there is no compliance with the original demand, according to the Rev. J. S. Brooks, editor of AME Church Quarterly Review. The petitions are demanding that a registered public accountant make an audit for the school at this time. It is believed that more than a half million dollars has been raised from all sources for the school during the past eight years.

This legal action by members of the AME Church in Alabama has caused a sensation in local and national circles.

Rev. R. K. Young New Payne College Head

BIRMINGHAM (ANP) — The Rev. R. K. Young of Jackson, Miss., has been elected president of Daniel Payne College to succeed the Rev. T. H. Harper, Bishop S. L. Greene announced last week.

The election was held by the presiding elders and ministers of the Ninth Episcopal District of the AME Church. Other officers elected were A. G. Gaston, treasurer, and the Rev. J. C. Jarrett, re-elected secretary.

The Board of Trustees of the college will meet Aug. 4-5 at which time the elections are expected to be ratified.

This institution is perpetuated by funds raised through the churches of this state, and the attendance is made up largely of our boys and girls. Situated as it is on a hill that over looks the popular Negro residential section of Woodlawn, the spacious graunds attract students and offer plenty room for athletic endeavors.

As a layman of the A.M.E. Church and a resident of Birmingham, I feel that we are falling short of our obligations to Daniel Payne College. In that we under estimate the needs necessary for the school to carry on sufficiently. The trend of education demands that an institution set up for the training of youth must be able to cope with changes brought about by inventions, discoveries and improvements. To do this, the School must have thoroughly prepared teachers, well equipped laboratories, a complete library and well lighted and spacious class rooms. These necessities cannot be met by well wishes but through strict adherence to a well laid plan for this purpose. Young men and women must be encouraged to further education at Daniel Payne College upon graduation from High School, and we must see to it that the school is attractive.

There are approximately 50,000 A.M.E. Laymen in Alabama, and by virtue of this fact, we have pledged ourselves to support this Institution. President Young and his fine staff of teachers are in the midst of a revised educational program that will soon make Daniel Payne College the Pride of Alabama. It is up to us to see to it that this dream becomes a reality.

VOTE TO ADMIT NEGROES TO CATHOLIC SCHOOLS

14e(1) Memphis World Memphis, Tenn.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—The Baltimore-Washington region National Federation of Catholic College Students has voted unanimously for admittance of Negro students, the federation announced last Tuesday. Tues.

A unanimous vote of 125 students representing eleven member colges--six of them in Washington--was taken recently during the annual congress of the federation.

Congress action also included election of John Bannon of Catholic University as president and formation of plans for a regional inter-racial commission.

The federation emphasized "that this was an outpouring of representative student opinion and does not necessarily mean a statement of policy by the administration of the schools represented."

It added that all the schools represented at the voting enroll qualified colored students with one exception--Notre Dame of Maryland.

The schools represented in the regional balloting here:

Catholic University, Georgetown University, Trinity, Dumbarton of the Holy Cross, Georgetown Visitation and Immaculata, all of Washington; Loyola of Baltimore; Mt. St. Agnes, Notre Dame of Maryland, Mt. St. Mary's and Saint Joseph's of Emmitsburg

Univ. of Delaware Accepts Applicant

To Admit All Graduate, Professional Students

NEWARK, Del.—The application of one student already has been accepted and he will be admitted to the University of Delaware when and if he registers, President William S. Carlson told the AFRO Monday.

The youth, whose name was not disclosed, is one of two who applied to the school recently, declared Dr. Carlson, who has been president of the institution just a year and a half. The other, he said, applied for a course which is offered at the Delaware State College and was referred to that institution.

The lowering of the bar, though only partial, was "the first such action taken by a Southern university." It was the direct result of the Supreme Court's decision in the Sipuel case.

The effect of the new ruling, Dr. Carlson said, will be to open the way for colored students to gain graduate degrees in all of the professional fields for which the State provides training within the boundries of the State.

Court's Decision "Binding"

Heretofore, minority group students were limited to attendance at Delaware State College in Dover, which offered no graduate courses nor courses in engineering, although scholarships were available for study on the graduate level in out-of-State institutions.

The University of Delaware's action in opening its doors to all students was inaugurated by the trustees, who felt that the Supreme Court's action had a "binding effect" on the State, Dr. Carlson said.

He pointed out that the State's General Assembly had provided "that separate schools be maintained for colored and white residents on the elementary, secondary and college levels, thereby establishing a public policy that should not be departed from . . . unless by paramount authority."

The Supreme Court's decision showed that such a ruling violated the 14th Amendment to the Constitution, the trustees decided, according to Dr. Carlson. In the light of such authority, therefore, they acted.

The trustees' ruling will not serve to displace Delaware State College, it was revealed, inasmuch as the University of Delaware is only "willing to enroll colored students in any course of study not provided at the college."

The university has 2,000 students; while Delaware State College has only 400.

2nd Student Accepted at Del. Univ.

WILMINGTON, Del.—Although the application of Benjamin Whitten has been accepted by the University of Delaware at Newark under the new policy announced last week by the board of trustees, he will not be the first colored student to attend the institution.

Unwittingly, the school registered John H. Taylor, 1229 Tatnall St., a teacher at Howard High School, last September, and he attended classes for a day before the "mistake" was rectified.

The board announced Saturday that colored students would be accepted at the University for courses not obtainable at Delaware State College, Dover.

NAACP Sparks Decision

The only requirements are that applicants meet the established educational qualifications for admission and be bonifide residents of the State.

The civic group, led by Mrs. Jean Jamison, president of the Wilmington branch, discussed integration of colored students in the light of the Supreme Court's ruling.

Whitten Attending Penn.

Dr. Carlson told the AFRO on Monday that Whitten's application had been accepted, but he had been informed Whitten had changed his mind about enrolling.

Whitten, who lives at 1011 Poplar St., said, however, that he had made no change in his plans to study mechanical engineering at the university, although he probably would not enter this semester.

He said he had not been officially notified of his acceptance.

He will complete his work there for a master's degree, which he expects to receive in June, before enrolling at the University of Delaware, Whitten told the AFRO.

At present, Whitten, 24. a veteran, is doing graduate work in industrial education at Pennsylvania State College.

Matriculation Cut Short

Taylor, chemistry and physics teacher at Howard High, signed up for an extension course in organic qualitative analysis and attended classes on the campus for one day.

He said he got along very well with both students and professors and no eyebrows were raised. In fact, Taylor said, he and some of the students planned to double up on their cars in a share-a-ride system.

The next day, however, he received a letter from the registrar informing him that his application "could not be accepted" because of the law.

Despite some question about such a law, Dr. Carlson stated that mixed schools are prohibited in the State under the Revised Code of Delaware, dated 1935, paragraph 2631, section 9.

Mr. Taylor, a graduate of Lincoln and the University of Pennsylvania, said he would not apply for enrollment this semester because the course he is interested in will not be offered.

Ruling Sets Precedent

Although only partial, lowering of the bar was the first such action taken by 17 Southern State universities.

Delaware To Enroll Negroes

(From The Pittsburgh Courier Press Service)

WASHINGTON — Segregated education in eight Southern and borderline States reeled crazily this week . . . and the effect of demolition bombs dropped by Negroes seeking to erase racial discrimination within their borders brought repercussion after repercussion. Their area covers 595,507 square miles of America and affects more than 20,511,000 citizens.

Delaware, self-admittedly a Southern State, opened wide the doors of her hitherto "white" University of Delaware at Newark without reservations, last week, and prepared to accept, fully and without segregation, Negro students seeking courses not offered at Delaware State Teachers College, a Negro school at Dover. The act was entirely voluntary.

The University of Arkansas at Fayetteville, Ark., was the scene of a surprise action, when its president, Dr. Lewis W. Jones, announced that the institution would accept qualified Negroes under "a special arrangement" in a separate classroom in the law school building, but only for that study, and not for undergraduate work.

A 22-year-old Howard University Law School student, Clifford Davis of Little Rock, Ark., at whom the overture was unquestionably aimed, promptly consulted NAACP lawyers in Washington, who just as promptly condemned the offer as being one which continues racial segregation pure and simple, and therefore was totally objectionable.

Davis delayed his final decision, bills are aimed at civil rights' advantages in occupations.

Alabama, one of the strongholds of racial bias in the Deep South, will also come under fire in the blistering all-out attack on educational segregation.

A State-wide mass meeting held in that State by Negro leaders agreed to sponsor efforts to secure the admission of Negroes into the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa, and Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn. These leaders expressed vigorous opposition to proposed regional colleges in the South

Further South, at Jackson, Miss., the Mississippi State Senate unanimously approved the voluntary action of Arkansas in opening the doors to "equal" education for Negroes while "maintaining the pattern of racial segregation." A resolution was adopted to that effect by the Senate of the State which ranks at the bottom of the national list in both salary for Negro teachers and education for Negro pupils. A backfire is expected.

In the borderline State of Missouri, once before battered by a Supreme Court ruling in the famed Gaines case, a white Baptist institution, William Jewell College at Liberty, unceremoniously rejected the entrance application of a 29-year-old Negro pastor, the Rev. William L. Blake, because he was a Negro. Commenting on the rejection, the college president, Dr. Walter P. Binns, said he saw "no need" to change the institution's racial policy.

Father West, officials of the University of Oklahoma faced the dilemma of what to do about six new applications from Negroes seeking graduate studies, and the freak twist of a white man's application for entrance into the State's makeshift law school, set up for Negroes as a result of the Supreme Court's decision in the Ada Fisher case.

They promised to raise funds to furnish board and room at the school for at least a year.

As Delaware and Arkansas made total and partial concessions, the current powder kegs in the volcanic situation, Oklahoma and Texas, awaited further court action to determine what was to happen to them.

The U. S. Supreme Court was scheduled to rule further on Oklahoma this week, and the Third Circuit Court of Civil Appeals is expected to hand down its decision in the Heman Marion Sweatt case within thirty days.

Kentucky and Alabama loom as the next battlegrounds in the legal battles against segregated education being fought by a brilliant battery of legal strategists of the NAACP.

A Louisville, Ky., girl appeared on the horizon as the key figure in an effort to crash the color lines at the University of Kentucky Law School, planning to apply for admission at the beginning of the spring quarter on March 29 under NAACP sponsorship.

Meanwhile, it was announced in Louisville that Charles W. Anderson, former member of the Kentucky Legislature, was preparing three bills against segregation, to be submitted by his successor, Dennis Henderson. The first of these bills would provide entrance for Negroes into graduate and professional schools in the State without regard to race. The other two but indicated his intention of following the NAACP's advices.

The Arkansas act did, however, bring a withholding of action by Wiley A. Branton, a young Pine Bluff, Ark., ex-GI and businessman, who had planned to apply for admission to the School of Business Administration of the University of Arkansas, and sue the State if rejected. The outcome of the Davis case will determine Branton's future course.

Meanwhile, another Arkansas Negro, Silas Hunt, was reported to be planning to seek entry into the University of Arkansas. Branton had received encouragement from several white students at the University of Arkansas, who wrote him to come to the university and "bring others with you if you can."

Delaware Terms Itself First In South To Let Negroes Into Its University

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

Way Is Paved To Doctorates

Sun. 2-1-48

Newark, Del., Jan. 31 (AP)—The University of Delaware today lifted its ban on admission of Negroes. President William S. Carlson said it was "the first such action taken by a Southern University."

(The University of Arkansas yesterday announced it would admit qualified Negroes to its graduate schools. The Negroes will be taught by regular faculty members but in classrooms apart from those of white students.)

Dr. Carlson explained that any Negro resident of the state may enroll at the university for any course of study which is not provided by Delaware State College for Negroes.

Stems from Court Ruling.

Thus, said Dr. Carlson, Negroes will be eligible for doctorate degrees which Delaware offers in chemistry and chemical engineering.

Dr. Carlson said the university's board of trustees acted after the U. S. Supreme Court ordered University of Oklahoma to admit a Negro student to its law school.

He added that Delaware's action was inaugurated by the trustees although the trustees felt the Supreme Court's action had "a binding effect" on Delaware.

The Delaware General Assembly, Dr. Carlson said, had provided "that separate schools be maintained for Negro and white residents on elementary, secondary, and college levels, thereby establishing a public policy that should not be departed from . . . unless by paramount authority."

Mississippi Considers Out-of-State Scholarships

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

Jackson, Miss., Jan. 31 (AP)—Mississippi is planning a possible scholarship system to give graduate training outside the state to Mississippi Negroes.

E. R. Jobe, executive secretary of the board of trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning, said today: Louisville, Ky.

"The board has decided to ask the Legislature to provide a system of scholarships which will be available to qualified Negro students who are desirous of obtaining graduate and professional education in institutions of higher learning outside the state."

Jobe added that the board has approved "only the principle," and that his office is working on details of the plan. Sun 2-1-48

Oklahoma Bars Whites From Negro College

Oklahoma City, Jan. 31 (AP)—Oklahoma decided today a white man cannot attend a school set up for Negroes, but still left unanswered the more serious racial-segregation problem, "Can Negroes attend schools for whites?"

Dean Jerome E. Hemry of the newly created Law School for Negroes at the State Capitol here rejected the enrollment application of Walter M. Harris, 57, Oklahoma newspaperman and ex-Army officer. Sun. 2-1-48

Hemry indicated Harrison's application, which was made yesterday, could not be accepted because of Oklahoma's constitutional provision of separate schools for whites and Negroes. No other applications have been received for the school, which was set up to comply with a United States Supreme Court decision ordering Oklahoma to grant equal and immediate educational opportunities to Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher, 23-year-old Negro.

Mrs. Fisher refused to enroll and has taken her fight back to the Supreme Court, which Monday is expected to consider her latest petition requesting that University of Oklahoma be forced to admit her to its Law School.

Meanwhile, at Norman, site of the University of Oklahoma, Irish students lampooned earlier segregation demonstrations on the campus by claiming the Irish were being discriminated against.

State Board Dodges Test On Negroes

'Minorities' Government Is Flayed By Starnes; South's Foes Rapped

By G. C. LONG

The State Board of Education agreed with State Education Superintendent Austin R. Meadows at its meeting Tuesday morning that the Boards of Trustees of the three big Alabama institutions should meet with the State Board before any decision is made on higher education, particularly for Negroes, in Alabama.

No date was set for the meeting but State Board members agreed that the trustees of Alabama College, Alabama Polytechnic Institute and the University of Alabama should have a joint session to discuss the problem.

In the meantime, the board had authorized Dr. Meadows to continue his study of higher education in the State, particularly with references to Negroes.

Although the action was not official, the board agreed that regional education to offer courses to Negroes not now available to them in undergraduate work would not meet the conditions set down by the United States Supreme Court.

Avoids Negro's Application

During the meeting yesterday the State Board shied away from discussing a Negro's application to enter Auburn.

William Bell, a Montgomery Negro in his sophomore year at the State Teachers College here, last Friday disclosed that he had applied for enrollment in the API school of architecture.

The subject was brought up by H. L. Upshaw, Eufaula, but was passed over for a general discussion on higher education for Negroes.

Former Congressman Joe Starnes, Guntersville, declared that he was glad Governor Folsom, who is chairman of the board, had signed the regional education compact with other Southern governors at Wakulla Springs, Fla., recently.

Starnes added that he thought regional tducation was a "wonderful opportunity" for the states not able to provide all types with their individual limited resources.

He said that if regional education was not adopted for both white and Negro students, then there would be only two other alternatives for Alabama and the other Southern states—expensive duplication of educational plants or "let the Supreme Court enforce its decision."

Folsom Wants 'Guidance'

Gov. Folsom, speaking of the compact signed in Florida, said that he did not know whether it was a good thing, that he would have to be guided in his recommendations to the State legislature by the opinions of the board members and educators.

The governor also said he had gathered the impression that it was the consensus of the Southern governors that regional education would not answer the conditions set up by the Supreme Court.

Starnes, discussing the immediate need for higher education facilities for Negroes, said the whole thing had come to a head now because of the action of the Democratic and Republican parties in "bidding for minority votes."

"The two parties are so closely balanced in certain sections that the seeking of minority votes is a political expediency," Starnes continued. "It is practical politics, and we have lost our power because of that."

Continuing, he declared:

"Our government has degenerated from a genuine democracy into one of government by minortites for minorities."

Dean Ralph Adams of the University, appearing at the board's request, asserted:

"Those who are pushing this thing (Negro applications to enter white Southern colleges) are far more interested in breaking down segregation than in education."

Auburn Poll Nixes Entry Of Negroes To White Colleges

AUBURN, Ala. — (SNS) — In a poll conducted among approximately five per cent of the students of Alabama Polytechnic institute, about 59 per cent were said to have been opposed to admitting qualified Negroes to attend white schools.

The poll was conducted by the school's newspaper, the Auburn Plainsman.

Overall results obtained from the poll showed: 58.91 per cent opposed admittance of Negroes. 30.46

Negroes Go Ahead With Suit To Gain Entry To A.P.I., U. Of A.

Atty. Arthur Shores said today that the Supreme Court ruling that a Negro woman must be admitted as a law student at the all-white University of Oklahoma would not affect the filing of identical suits in Alabama.

Shores explained the suits would be filed in federal court against the University of Alabama and Alabama Polytechnic Institute. He explained that at present the intended students were going through the process of filing transcripts and making applications. These suits were first called for by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People at a meeting in Montgomery this Fall.

The Supreme Court held yesterday that Negroes are entitled not only to receive in state institutions any sort of educational training that whites can get in such schools, but also to get it as quickly as any other group.

Strict application of the order would give the State of Oklahoma just three days to admit a Negro woman, Ada Lois Sipuel, to the law school, or set up separate and equal facilities for her.

In Alabama the Legislature makes appropriations to help Negroes, or members of any race, to go to other states to obtain courses not taught in Alabama schools. The legislative fund pays the difference between the amount which a student would pay in Alabama and the out-of-state school. Negro students may obtain grants to pay for studying the subjects of law, medicine and dentistry not offered in Alabama Negro schools.

Poll Of A. P. I. Students Favors Segregation

AUBURN, Ala., Feb. 25—About 59 per cent of the students who participated in a poll at Alabama Polytechnic Institute said they did not approve of permitting "educationally qualified" Negroes to attend white schools.

The poll, conducted by the student newspaper, The Auburn Plainsman, included about 5 per cent of Auburn's students.

Results, announced last night, showed that 58.91 per cent opposed the entry of Negroes, 30.46 were in favor and 10.63 said they were neutral. The poll further revealed that advanced students were more favorable to allowing Negroes to attend the land-grant college. Graduate students voted 60.8 per cent for admission while freshmen voted 67.8 against.

William Bell, a Montgomery, Ala., Negro, has applied for admission to Auburn's school of architecture. Registrar Charles W. Edwards, said earlier that Bell's application was being handled in the same manner as one from a white student.

Harvard Student To Test Alabama U. School Policy

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — Emmett L. Henderson, a candidate for Ph. D. in History at Harvard University a graduate of Atlanta University, M. A., and Tuskegee Institute, B. S., made application to the University of Alabama Law School, in October, 1945. By May, 1946 all transcripts, regular application blanks and supporting credentials had been submitted. After examining the transcripts, Ralph Adams then director of admissions became strangely silent.

According to the University of Alabama catalogue for that year, Henderson had more than the qualifications necessary to enter the law school. On his application he cited chapter and verse of the University of Alabama catalogue and forwarded all supporting materials. Recently University officials sent him some blanks "to fill out." Henderson, who had filled out similar forms more than two years ago resubmitted these blanks as duplicates of the originals under protest. His case will be built on the basis of credentials and application as submitted in October, 1945 and May, 1946.

His record at three colleges, Tuskegee, Atlanta and Harvard has been excellent. He holds two degrees and at Tuskegee on the quarter system he made more than thirty A's in one normal school year; at Atlanta University, the M. A. was taken with an A record.

The State of Alabama provides no professional training whatsoever for Negroes within its territorial limits. It is this exclusion that Henderson is prepared to test.

Henderson has completed all the work for the Ph. D except the dissertation. He is busy on that.

Birmingham Chapter Striking at Polytechnic And State University

"CAN'T DODGE IT ANY LONGER," BOARD CHAIRMAN ADMITS

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (ANP) — The state of Alabama has started to act on how it will provide professional education for Negroes after the recent supreme court decision in the Sipuel case. In that case the high court ruled that the state of Oklahoma would have to admit Miss Ada Lois Sipuel to its law school. The school had previously refused her because she was a Negro.

In Alabama the state board of education has been ordered to study the possibility of complying with this decision. Board Chairman Joe Starnes said, "We can't dodge it any longer. We must raise the level of our educational and economic opportunities for Negroes."

Possible plans already suggested include: setting up of medical and law schools at Alabama State Teachers college, State Supt. A. R. Meadows, and a medical school at Tuskegee Institute, ex-Governor Chauncey Sparks. Gov. James E. Folsom has said nothing on proposals for regional Negro universities.

In Birmingham, however, the Alabama Conference of NAACP branches plans to continue four cases against the University of Alabama and one against Alabama Polytechnic institute for entrance into professional schools, according to E. D. Nixon, president, and Arthur D. Schores of the national legal staff of the N. A. A. C. P.

Bama Students Favor Rights On State Level

UNIVERSITY, Ala., Aug. 18— Student opinion at the University of Alabama is strongly opposed to President Truman's "civil rights" program, the Boswell amendment, and admission of Negro students to the university at this time.

These facts were disclosed in a survey of student opinion conducted by Claude Dahmer, Jr., graduate student in psychology from Mobile, during the Spring quarter this year.

Eighty per cent of the students from Alabama knew of the Boswell amendment, which provides that voting eligibility be determined by ability to "understand and explain" the federal constitution. Of this number, over half disapproved of the amendment's requirement.

Alabama residents approved of the abolition of the poll tax through state legislation by a "vote" of 54 per cent of the persons polled. The same percentage, however, disapproved of a federal anti-poll tax law.

Based on a sample of 835 individuals the survey also disclosed:

Sixty-eight per cent favored an anti-lynching measure; 76 per cent opposed legislation abolishing segregation on interstate buses and trains; only one-third favored admission of Negroes to the university in order to receive federal assistance, and approximately the same number approved admission of Negroes to the medical college, law and graduate schools.

FIFTY PER CENT of the students queried in the survey declared they would not favor admission of Negroes to the university under any conditions at the present time.

In response to the question, "In a community in which the Negroes outnumber the whites, under what circumstances is the lynching of a Negro justifiable?", 84 per cent replied "never."

These results can be compared to results obtained in a survey made in the early 1930s at another Southern college when only 31 per cent of the students surveyed believed lynching was never justifiable, Dahmer pointed out.

Figures on this question revealed that in northern universities at that time only 56 to 75 per cent of the students polled felt that such an act was never permissible.

Enrollment Of Negro At Auburn Is Matter For Board, Says Folsom

A Negro's application to enroll at Auburn is a matter for the board of trustees to consider, says Gov. Folsom.

He told reporters Wednesday he would call a board meeting soon to discuss selection of a new Auburn president and that the racial question would be brought up at the same time.

A Montgomery Negro, William Bell, said last week he had applied for admission to the all-white institution as a student in the school of architecture. No action on the application has been announced.

Gov. Folsom also told newsmen that:

He plans "five or six" or perhaps more stump speeches in behalf of his avowed candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomintation.

He will appear on the CBS "Peoples Platform" radio program Sunday along with Editor Ralph McGill of the Atlanta Constitution.

Folsom said he would take to the stump again before the May 4 primary, speaking at "strategic" places throughout the state. He is running for delegate to the Democratic National Convention in hope of becoming a favorite son candidate for president.

He said he would continue his criticism of U. S. foreign policy, of the Truman administration and of federal "interference" in states rights.

Auburn Poll To Gage Opinions Of Students On Negro Application

AUBURN, ALA., Feb. 20.—A scientific poll, designed to give an accurate cross-section of student opinion on the application of a Negro war veteran to enter the school of architecture at Alabama Polytechnic Institute, will be conducted here within the next two weeks.

The Negro, William Bell, 27-year-old veteran of five campaigns of World War II, has applied for admission in September. The registrar has until the latter part of June to decide upon the application. Bell is at present enrolled in Alabama State Teachers College, Montgomery.

The Plainsman, college weekly edited by Jimmy Coleman, Hayneville, and the Squires, sophomore honor service organization, headed by Jim Haygood, Montgomery, are sponsoring the poll.

In commenting on the issue this week, The Plainsman carried an editorial stating:

"The application of a Negro veteran for entrance into the School of Architecture here poses an important question before every student. Nearly all of you have formulated an opinion on the matter, either pro or con. But have you considered both sides? Have you thought it over carefully, without prejudice and with the principles of freedom and justice in mind?

"The Plainsman and Squires organization as the voices of the student body are conducting a scientific poll of student opinion on the subject, and results will be published in an early edition."

State Education Board Dodges Negro's Application To A. P. I.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. Feb. 18—(AP)—The State Board of Education yesterday steered clear of discussing a Negro's application to enter Alabama Polytechnic Institute (Auburn).

Negro education in genteral was on the agenda, but board members shied from talking about William Bell's application to enter Auburn's school of architecture. Bell is a sophomore at State Teachers College for Negroes here.

Bell's action was mentioned by member H. L. Upshaw, of Eufaula, but State School Supt. A. R. Meadows quickly answered that he was still studying Negro education facilities as directed by the board last month. Meadows said he was not yet prepared to make any recommendations.

The subject was not raised again.

Dr. Meadows previously urged cooperation with other Southern states in setting up regional schools for specialized training. He explained most Southern states were not financially able to provide separate facilities for whites and Negroes.

THE REGIONAL PLAN was approved by Southern governors at their recent conference at Wakulla Springs, Fla.

Former Congr. Joe Starnes, of Guntersville, another board member, agreed the regional school plan would be beneficial to both races, and said several states could make available "better facilities than any one state could possibly hope to."

Starnes also criticized Supreme Court decisions ordering equal educational facilities for white and Negro races terming them "political" and "a big lot minority support."

"Our government," he said "has degenerated into a government by minorities, for minorities and of minorities."

He deplored what he called "constant political agitation" and "trouble-making" from outside the South and said such efforts are not genuine attempts to raise the Negro's education standards.

GOV. JAMES E. FOLSOM, ex-official president of the board, also discussed the proposed regional educational setup but said he doesn't know whether it is a good thing. He told board members he wanted their reaction to guide him in making recommendations to the Legislature.

HAVE THEY FORGOTTEN?

Editor, The Advertiser:

The Northern so-called Democrats, following the lead of Alexander Hamilton, are demanding more and more and still more centralization and autocratic power in the White House, to be achieved by personal "appointments," and entirely regardless of states rights. They seem to think that the South will vote blindly for anyone they name, and on any platform they adopt.

Have they forgotten 1928? Four Southern states voted against Al Smith, including Texas and Virginia, and in Alabama did not the count stand, Smith, 127,000, and Hoover, 120,000?

The Northern so-called Democrats, enthroned in the largely-foreign cities, and backed by the notorious Tammany Hall, the Hague machine in New Jersey, the similar machine in Chicago, and the Pendergast machine in St. Louis, evidently feel that the South's vote is already in the bag, no matter what they do.

For the South, believing in states rights and the teachings of Thomas Jefferson, the situation steadily grows worse. Hasn't the South the constitutional and liberty-loving right to vote for men of its own selection, like Harry Byrd, of Virginia, for instance?

Alabama already is expending annually thousands of dollars to pay the expenses of some Alabama Negroes in Northern colleges. Yet now, and entirely regardless of the rights or wishes of the white students, men and women of the patrons and the faculties—and with belligerent threats of possibly soon hundreds of lawsuits, engineered by South-hating outsiders — it stridently is being demanded that Negroes be admitted into the Auburn and Tuscaloosa colleges. Would that aid [illegible] relations between the two races?

Negro Veteran Awaits Action On Application To Enter A. P. I.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 14—(AP)—William Bell, 27-year-old Negro war veteran, of Montgomery, Saturday awaited word from his application to enroll at Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

The former Army master sergeant served 49 months overseas in World War II.

He said Friday he had applied for admission to the A. P. I. School of Architecture.

Meanwhile, at Auburn, Acting President Ralph B. Draughon said Bell's application would be considered along with all others and he did not know what action would be taken.

Bell, a sophomore at the State Teachers College for Negroes at Montgomery, said he wrote Auburn about two weeks ago that he was interested in enrolling there.

"They sent me an application blank and I filled it out and returned it," he stated. Later he said he received a letter from Registrar Charles W. Edwards acknowledging receipt of the application.

J. T. BROOKS, registrar at the eachers college here, said he sent Bell's credits to Auburn several days ago. Bell, he reported, is attending school under the GI bill of rights.

The Montgomery Negro student's move to enroll at Auburn followed by some four months an announcement by the Alabama branch of the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People that such a step would be taken.

N. A. A. C. P. officials said court suits will be filed, if necessary, to get Negroes admitted to the state's land-grant colleges, Auburn and the University of Alabama.

Bell said he is a member of the N. A. A. C. P. and would go into court if such is required to gain admission at Auburn.

If this course is pursued, they indicated, such cases would be appealed as high as the U. S. Supreme Court to seek a favorable decision.

API Silent On Admission Of Negro

AUBURN, Ala., Feb. 14—(AP)—Dr. Ralph B. Draughon, Acting President, said Saturday he had no comment to make on the application of a 27-year-old Negro student for admission at Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

The matter is being investigated, he said, and no action will be taken until the investigation has been completed.

The Negro, William Bell, an ex master sergeant and veteran of seven years in the Army, is a sophomore at the State Teachers College for Negroes at Montgomery, his home. He is seeking to enter the Auburn School of Architecture.

API Registrar Charles Edwards said no disposition has been made of Bell's application but it was being handled the same as one from a white student.

Negro Vet, 'Upset,' Drops Auburn Bid

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April [illegible] —(AP)—A Negro war veteran said today he has withdrawn his application to enter all-white Alabama Polytechnic Institute (Auburn) because "I was upset over all the talk around town about it."

The Negro is William Bell, 27-year-old former Army master sergeant and student at the State Teachers College for Negroes in Montgomery.

He said that "during the frenzy" he wrote a letter to Auburn canceling his application and that, although he was sorry afterward, he has taken no further steps to get admission to the all-white school.

Student Tests Ala. Law School Barrier

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—Emmett L. Henderson, a candidate for the Ph. D. in history at Harvard University, a graduate of Atlanta Un evrsity, M. A., and Tuskegee Institute, B. S., made application to t University of Alabama Law School in October. 1945.

By May, 1946, all transcripts, regular application blanks and supporting credentials had been submitted. After examining the transcripts, Ralph Adam, then director of admissions, became strangely silent. Sat.

QUALIFICATIONS

According to the University of Alabama catalogue for that year, Henderson had more than the qualifications necessary to enter the law school. 7-10-48

Recently university officials sent him some blanks "to fill out." Henderson, who had filled out similar forms more than two years ago resubmitted these blanks as duplicates of the originals under protest. His case will be built on the basis of credentials and application as submitted in October, 1945, and May, 1946.

The State of Alabama provides no professional training whatsoever for Negroes within its territorial limits. It is this exclusion hat Henderson is prepared to test.

sity requested Mr. Henderson to fill-out the application blanks again. He submitted duplicates of the originals submitted two years ago under protest for he felt that the university was giving him the run-around.

Supported by civic groups and individuals, Henderson holds the B.S. degree from Tuskegee where he made thirty A's in a quarter system year, the M.A. degree from Atlanta University with an A rating, and is writing his thesis as a prospective candidate for the Ph.D. degree at Harvard University. 7-10-48

TUSKEGEE, Ala. —Emmet L. Henderson, prospective candidate for the Ph.D. degree at Harvard University, was readying his case here for court action in seeking admission to the law school of the University of Alabama. (HEW)

Mr. Henderson will base his suit on the Supreme Court ruling that State educational institutions must admit Negroes for professional training or provide equal and separate schools.

APPLIED OCTOBER, 1945

Application to the law school of the university was made in October, 1945 and by May, 1946 all necessary credentials had been submitted according to the university catalogue for that year. It is reported that the transcripts were examined by Ralph Adams, then director of admissions, but no action was taken.

Negro Applies For Admission To API Branch

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

He Plans Court Action If His Bid Rejected; Legal Status Querfed

Sat. 2-14-48

A Negro war veteran said Friday he had applied for admission to Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn.

He is William Bell, 27-year-old former Army master sergeant and sophomore at the State Teachers College for Negroes in Montgomery.

Bell said he wrote Auburn about two weeks ago that he was interested in enrolling in the School of Architecture at the all-white institution.

Auburn is a land-grand school and operates on state and federal funds.

Bell said he spent seven years in the Army and served 49 months overseas in Africa, Sicily, Italy, Corsica, Alaska and the Aleutians. He was in an aviation engineering outfit, he said.

His application to enroll at Auburn came four months after the Alabama branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People voted to file court suits if necessary to get Negroes admitted to API and the University of Alabama.

Court Action

Bell said today he is a member of the NAACP and that he would go into court if necessary to gain admission to the white school.

"They sent me an application blank and I filled it out and returned it," he added. Later, he ntinued, he received a letter om Auburn Registrar Charles W. Edwards acknowledging receipt of the application.

However, the Negro said, he has not heard whether the application has been accepted or rejected. The Advertiser

Bell, a resident of Montgomery, is the husband of a school teacher, Mary, who teaches in a Negro school in Conecuh County, near Evergreen. His mother, also is a teacher, employed at the Hale Elementary School in Montgomery. Montgomery, Ala.

His father, he said, is a carpenter and minister who preaches at Congregational Churches on Sundays. He has no church of his own, the son said. Sat. 2-14-48

The registrar at the Teachers College here, J. T. Brooks, said he had sent Bell's credits to Auburn several days ago. He said the Negro is attending school under the GI Bill.

Status Questioned

Auburn's acting president, Ralph Draughon, was unavailable for comment, but Registrar Charles Edwards said Bell's application had been received. Edwards said he had not yet received the Negro's credits, and that no action had been taken on the application.

This, however, is the same manner in which applications are handled for white students, the registrar added. Bell applied for admission at the Fall quarter beginning in September, Edwards said. The Advertiser

No applications for architecture will be finally approvad until around July 1," the registrar said. "They will be reviewed by the dean of the School of Architecture, who selects those to be admitted. Montgomery, Ala.

"I think Bell is entitled to education in architecture, but we have a dual system of education in Alabama and don't know whether we can legally admit him." Sat. 2-14-48

WHITES FOR NEGRO SCHOOLS?

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser 3-4-48

I'm a firm believer in better education for Negroes, also in lifting them from their squalid environment in the South, but do Southern white people ever put up a squabble about being enlisted in a Negro school? No, and they never will. Montgomery, Ala.

Why should Negro William Bell be admitted to Auburn in an architectural capacity when Tuskegee offers just as good? Even Truman's stand doesn't accept the Negro on an equality basis. He is black, nothing to be ashamed of, in an adopted country of white people. Thurs. 3-4-48

Auburn's Problem—And

An Alabama Negro has applied for enrollment as a student of architecture at Alabama Polytechnic Institute. And thereby a problem which has been largely theoretical becomes concrete. The question for Alabama is brought out of the future and planked down right in the middle of today.

The Negro is a veteran. Behind him lie 49 months of service in the armed forces. As a GI, federal assistance for education is available to him. He is presently a sophomore at the Alabama State Teachers College for Negroes at Montgomery. Presumably, therefore, he is of college caliber. But he wants to study architecture, and the only school of architecture in Alabama is at Auburn. Thurs. 2-17-48

Therein comes the problem. The Alabama Constitution declares clearly that separate schools shall be maintained for the white and Negro races. The men who framed that constitution back in 1901 thought segregation of such importance, or so fundamental, that they placed the provision for it in the first section of the constitution dealing with education. They were sure that such was the will of the people. Segregation was then, and still is, the custom of the state.

But segregation is not the only point at issue. There is the matter of justice. The federal constitution, which takes precedence over state constitutions in any differences, says, in effect, that in matters of education there shall be no discrimination because of race or color. The Supreme Court has ruled that in states where segregation is practiced equal educational opportunities shall be provided both races. Most Alabamians accept that ruling as just. The News

William Bell, former master sergeant, Alabamian by birth, wants to study architecture at Auburn. The state law says he cannot. But the federal law, as interpreted by the U. S. Supreme Court, says in effect that the state of Alabama must provide equal training for white and Negro architectural students. Either Alabama must admit Bell to Auburn or provide in some other way for his education as an architect. There is no getting around the facts of the case.

Birmingham, Ala.

The primary problem rests with the authorities of Auburn. But the responsibility for reaching a permanent solution rests with all Alabamians. They must somehow square their attitudes toward segregation in education with the demands of justice. They must find a solution which will be supported by the majority of our people. Thurs. 2-17-48

In Arkansas

Negroes May Enroll At White University Under "Special Arrangements"

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., — (NNPA). — Qualified colored students applying for graduate work will be admitted under "special arrangements," the University of Arkansas announced last Friday.

Clifford Davis, of Little Rock, now a student at Howard University Washington, D. C., the student whose application led to the announcement, apparently is not interested in enrolling under any "special arrangements."

Announcement that Mr. Davis would be admitted was made by Dr. Lewis W. Jones, university president, who is a member of President Truman's Commission on Higher Education and one of four members who dissented from the commission's recommendation that race segregation in education and state laws requiring such segregation be abolished.

Another university official explained that "special arrangement" meant Mr. Davis would attend a seperate classroom in the law school building, but would receive regular instruction from faculty members.

In Washington, the 21-year old Mr. Davis said he had received no official notification of his acceptance by the University of Arkansas, but indicated he would not be interested in studying there in "facilities apart from those provided for whites."

Mr. Davis filed an application at the University of Arkansas some time ago.

Herbert L. Thomas, chairman of the Arkansas University board, said he felt "any qualified Negro applying for graduate work will be accepted," but that colored students seeking undergraduate study should "be rejected."

Two colored students in Arkansas have said they may seek to enroll as undergraduate students. The new semester opened Monday, February 2.

Student Blames Ark. Politicians for Inequality

TEXARKANA, Ark. (ANP)—Silas Hunt, colored student in the University of Arkansas, blamed State politicians for the inequality of educational opportunities between colored and white students. He said there would be no trouble, "if it were not for some politicians who deny me the right to an equal education."

He named Gov. Ben Laney as one of the "politicians who make things hard." He said he has been "accepted" as part of the university student body, and he would accept the present separate educational facilities. He declared "colored people must get off their knees to achieve racial equality.

White School Sets Up Unit For Negroes

PINE BLUFF, Ark.—(ANP)—At the request of the trustee board of Arkansas A. M. and N. College, the University of Arkansas launched the first courses in graduate work leading to Master's degrees for Negro students in the State here Wednesday.

The classes, held in Merrill High School with the permission of the Pine Bluff School Board, has 100 students enrolled, among which are approximately forty Negro schoolmen.

According to Ed McCuistion, head of the State department's Negro education division, the summer classes will probably be conducted by the university for four or five years, or until A. M. and N. College can set up an approved foundation for graduate instruction.

Dr. Lawrence Davis, president of A. M. and N. College disclosed that classes would not be offered this fall, but would be resumed next summer.

A Faint Hope In the Distance

The California Eagle
Los Angeles, Calif.
Thurs. 7-1-48

Occasionally a faint streak of light gleams through the closed shutters of some fellow Americans' minds—minds closed by the hatred of one racial group towards another. 14E (1)

An example of this came to the attention of The California EAGLE this week.

For a long time it has been a policy of the University of Southern California not to admit Negro students to its medical school. Such a policy brought but little protest from Negroes, who have grown weary and in some instances docile in the fight to be accepted as first class American citizens.

What happened this week, however, is a ripple on the wave of hope that makes Negro medical students feel that their patience is about to be rewarded.

"The University of Southern California Medical School selects its students upon the basis of scholarship, aptitude, and personality, without any condition of race, creed, or color. The purpose in selection is to obtain the men best suited to a career of medicine in terms of their ability and upon no other basis, aside from their scholarship, personality, character, and aptitude."

The California Eagle

This statement is purported to have been issued this week by those in authority to make it, and is a free expression of the sentiment now existing in the Medical School of U.S.C.

Los Angeles, Calif.

Certainly any leadership that will destroy the un-American practices of discrimination in education in American life, might be expected to come from our institutions of higher education such as the University of Southern California.

And the gleam in the once closed shutters is broadening, and so are our hopes for a better world in which there will be no racial boundaries, color or class distinction, racial or religious prejudices. Thurs. 7-1-48

No Sudden Solution For Race Problem

The Memphis Commercial Appeal

THE REFUSAL of Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher to accept Oklahoma's compromise in the controversy over admittance to law school, will complicate matters and in the end probably will retard whatever honest effort Oklahoma and other southern states are making to provide graduate and professional education for Negroes.

With the charge that the American educational system has not done all that it should to provide opportunity for Negroes, there is no quarrel, for the facts are devastating. Yet there are some other aspects to the issue, and realistic people of both races must face these realities.

Assuming that the Supreme Court of the United States should be able to enforce its edict and open the doors of southern colleges and universities to Negroes, little of the problem would be solved, for there are ways by which students, unsympathetic with the court's line of thinking, could and probably would make life miserable for any Negro students so admitted to those campuses.

It is a matter of record that in Northern and Eastern universities, there have been and still are drawn sharp lines of social distinction between white and colored people in campus activities.

THIS YOUNG woman, in whose behalf the Supreme Court has ruled, may have won a moral victory, but there is reason to believe that she might lead an unhappy existence if she were put on the campus by court order. It could be a pyrrhic victory.

Governors of southern states, led by Jim McCord of Tennessee, are working on a proposal to establish regional schools for Negroes on the graduate and professional levels, to afford them opportunity to which they are entitled as Americans.

This proposal was being discussed, and plans were being made, months before the Supreme Court ruled in the Oklahoma case. There is no reason to believe that Governor McCord and the other governors were insincere, or that they were trying to evade any responsibility. On the contrary, they were trying to implement a growing conviction, among serious thinking people in the South, that professional education must be made available for Negroes. If opponents of this plan argue that this is not enough, let them be reminded that half a loaf is better than none, and that every journey, even toward social gains, begins with a single step.

The South is ready to make a significant compromise on this issue. After all, such a proposal as regional schools of the sort proposed for Negroes would have been hooted down a quarter of a century ago.

SOLUTION of the race problem must proceed along evolutionary lines. It cannot be suden and drastic. Tuman society just does not change traumaticaly.

If Negro leaders in the South are wise, they will welcome an opportunity to get professional and graduate training for their young people, at state expense and on a regional basis.

But all of us should be aware that the Supreme Court, should it try to enforce its edict, might sabotage what sentiment there is for more equitable opportunities for Negro youth.

This is a time for compromise. Southern leaders have offered to make a forward move. For the sake of both harmony and progress, the other side should be willing to compromise.

Hasty action and bullheadedness on either side will serve only to nullify whatever progress has been made in race relations in the last 25 years.

Mutual compromise is the only possible solution.

Expect OK on Bill To Bar College Bias

By Associated Press

ALBANY

High-ranking officials of Gov. Dewey's administration predicted last night that a bill outlawing racial and religious discrimination in colleges and universities in the State would be passed by the Legislature at the current session.

The bill is being drafted by counsel for the Temporary Commission on the Need for a State University.

It would prohibit institutions of higher learning, both public and private, from refusing admittance to an applicant, or in other ways discriminating against him scholastically because of race, creed, color or national origin.

The Catholic Welfare League, which speaks for the Church's bishops of the State on legislative matters, will not take a position on the contemplated legislation until after th bill is introduced and studied, Charles Tobin, counsel, said.

The Church last year opposed in its original form the Austin-Mahoney bill to outlaw racial and religious discrimination in colleges and universities. The bill died in committee.

STOP SEGREGATION IN SOUTH'S COLLEGES, EDUCATOR URGES

Dallas, Tex. (Special)—Race segregation in Southern colleges and schools "can be eliminated with profit and without serious, if any, untoward consequences," according to Dean Charles H. Thompson of Howard University, Washington, D. C. Moreover, he insists that "the South cannot afford to take the intransigent attitude toward the question which it has been wont to take in the past."

Dean Thompson discusses this civil rights issue, which is now before the courts of Texas and Oklahoma, in an article appearing in the spring number of Southwest Review, well-known literary quarterly published by SMU's University Press in Dallas. He contends that there can be no such thing as "separate but equal" training for Negroes in law or in any other area of education.

In discussing the Sweatt case at the University of Texas, Dean Thompson argues that "Texas is faced with the dilemma of continuing the pretext of providing for Negroes equal educational opportunity in separate schools when it is clear to any important observer that such equality is not possible, or of beginning immediately a program of eliminating racial segregation in education and thereby meeting the issue in the only way in which it can be resolved legally and morally.

"The facts indicate that Texas can eliminate segregation immediately in her graduate and professional schools without untoward incident, if the leaders of Texas so decree and are willing to stand by their decision. And the program of elimination can be continued, with the college next, high school next, and so on, until segregation is wiped out entirely.

On the other hand Dean Thompson expresses his belief that "the alternative to such a program is the continuation of the hypocrisy and chicanery which are the pillars of the present system. But even more important is the fact that in the past ten years we have developed a national climate of public opinion which is going to make it more and more difficult for Texas or any other state to evade or ignore with impunity the civil rights of any segment of its population.

"The United States is in a death struggle for the moral leadership of the world. Texas can aid materially in this fight by showing the world that we are able and willing to protect those rights which democracy guarantees and on the basis of which we proclaim its superiority to other ways of life."

Negro-College Plan Is Hailed By Georgian

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 28 (AP)—The proposal to establish regional colleges for Negroes was termed "rich in potentialities for the progress of the South in higher education." Supreme Court decision relative to the provision of higher educational facilities for Negro students

Dr. Raymond R. Paty, chancellor of the university system of Georgia, said the plan should be envisioned as "a wider use of our limited resources." in the South," said Dr. Paty in a

The idea was advanced at a Founders Day address at the recent conference of Southern Governors. University of Kentucky.

Better Use of Resources.

"Those of us who have the privilege of working out this program envision its objectives in the near future a wiser use of our limited resources. "The establishment of regional schools can bring about within terms of meeting a limited resources.

"The end result will be to establish a program of higher education relative to Negro students of professional and technical schools which no Southern state singly is able to provide," he continued. 2-24-48

"The successful carrying forward of this plan will give to white and Negro students alike certain advantages in fields of specialized training which the individual States cannot afford. It is a plan rich in potentialities for the progress of the South in higher education."

Other Problems Unfinished.

Dr. Paty said there are other unfinished problems. Among these, he said, are recruitment to the teaching profession of better qualified persons and a broadened program of research through industry, educational institutions and the Federal Government.

"The security and prosperity of our country depend upon the rapid extension of knowledge in scientific fields and in the fields of social sciences and the humanities," he added. 2-24-48

He recalled the history of the University of Kentucky and reviewed some of its achievements.

The school was founded February 22, 1865.

Dixie Wins Round In Bout; Hearings Set On Poll Tax Bill

WASHINGTON, March 10.—(AP)—Dixie won a skirmish in the civil rights fight Wednesday when the Senate rules committee agreed to hold public hearings on anti-poll tax legislation.

Previously, a three-man subcommittee had approved the bill without hearings. It said the facts were so well known there was no reason to argue.

Senator Stennis (D), Mississippi, protested at a closed-door session of the committee Wednesday and Chairman Brooks (R), Illinois, said the committee would conduct a four-day hearing.

Brooks said the full committee, composed of eight Republicans and five Democrats, will hold the hearings here, probably starting a week from next Monday. Birmingham Ala.

Southern governors and senators backed Stennis in his protest. He said the hearings should be held in the seven Southern states which have poll taxes—Texas, Virginia, Mississippi, Arkansas, South Carolina, Alabama and Tennessee. 3-10-48

The poll tax measure is one of President Truman's key points in his civil rights program which caused a split in party ranks.

The legislation would remove any requirement that a poll tax must be paid in order to vote for federal officials. These include the President, vice-president and congressmen.

The House passed the bill last year. If the committee approves—and its approval seems certain—the legislation goes to the Senate for a vote. A filibuster by Southerners has been promised.

On another measure, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People sent a telegram to Senator Wiley (R), Wisconsin, chairman of the Senate judiciary subcommittee, protesting the brevity of hearings set for Friday on the regional college proposal. Wed. 3-10-48

Leslie S. Perry, legislative counsel for the association, said the limited hearings would "entrench educational discrimination and segregation in the South by congressional fiat."

A House judiciary subcommittee approved March 5 a bill to permit 15 Southern states to create a joint system of regional schools, pooling their resources to finance larger institutions than they are able to maintain individually.

Better schools were promised for Negroes, also.

The full committee hearings is set for Friday. A similar bill faces the Senate.

The states involved are Alabama, Arkansas, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Maryland, Mississippi, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky, Louisiana and Oklahoma.

"SEPARATE-EQUAL" SCHOOL HOAX SCORED BY N. Y. TIMES EDITOR

The Black Dispatch 1-31-48

Says Obsolete Equipment Dumped On Nine Million Negroes in 18 States

Oklahoma City, Okla.

FEBRUARY NEGRO DIGEST FEATURE

CHICAGO.—(ANP)—Citing the instance of a southern public school for Negroes set up by a disinterested white board of education in a chicken coop, New York Times education editor Benjamine Fine declares in February Negro Digest that school facilities for Negroes in most dual states is a disgrace to U. S. democracy.

"Frequently in dual states," Fine says, "the Negro child does not have an equal opportunity with whites. His teachers are far less competent, receive substantially lower salaries. The equipment and supplies are meager and obsolete, the school plants are inadequate. And no matter how bad it is in cities, the setup for Negroes in rural areas is far worse.

"Very often," the Negro Digest article continues, "The Negro student cannot go farther than the seventh grade. And out of 9,000,000 Negroes in 18 states there are only 30,000 colored candidates for graduation each year."

North Carolina is pointed out by Fine as an exception to the general practice by southern states of relegating Negro education to a degenerate back seat, and has gone far toward eliminating discriminatory distribution of funds. Most other states in the South allow far more for whites than for colored. In Mississippi 606.6 per cent is spent on each white student than on Negro. Sat. 1-31-48

In many instances, Fine asserts, Negroes are given condemned buildings for school houses. Rain pours through the roofs or swoops into the doors, heat is bad or nonexistant, there are no lights, and in some even block boards, desks and school books are not provided.

Student Withdraws Application To Ala. Polytechnic

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va.

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(ANP)—Outside pressure and threats forced William Bell, Negro war veteran of 49 months of overseas service and seven years in the Army, to withdraw his application to Alabama Polytechnic Institute last week. Sat. 5-8-48

"I was upset over all the talk around town about it," the 27 year old ex-master sergeant said.

Although he was not exactly threatened some people said some very unkind things to him, he said. Reaction from all over the state caused him to have a nervous attack, he added.

Bell is now a sophomore at State Teachers college for Negroes here. He was the first Negro student to ever try to enter Auburn.

Eleven Southern States Oppose Segregation

We said sometime ago if any influence entered upon the scene in Oklahoma to halt attempts of Negroes to receive graduate training at the University of Oklahoma next semester, that line of reasoning would flow from some other source than the teaching profession. In support of this view along comes the Southern Patriot official organ of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, in its November issue, with a survey made in eleven Dixie states in which seven of the faculties of state universities (white) voted in favor of elimination of racial bars in graduate and professional schools.

It is interesting to note that while North Carolina led (88%) in favor of integration, Oklahoma followed a close second with 83% of the faculty supporting plan "A" which was a proposal that Negroes be enrolled in white graduate schools without segregation.

Only three of the southern states, Georgia, Mississippi and South Carolina, supported the establishment of regional schools for Negroes, as proposed by the Southern Governors Conference. At the University of Alabama the faculty was evenly divided between the two plans. None of the states surveyed seemed to be impressed with the idea of a separate law school as proposed by Oklahoma, or admission on a segregated basis as has developed at Norman in the case of G. W. McLaurin. The survey positively indicates Southerners are beginning to clear their vision as to responsibility and duty in the matter of an educational system, and will not hereafter permit their thinking to be clouded by false propaganda.

The arguments used most frequently in support of Plan A (no segregation) were: opposition to segregation, used 43 times; most democratic, used 34 times; most ethical and just, 34 times; most economical, 31 times; most practical and reasonable, 17 times; best solution of race problem, 10 times; and better educational facilities, 9 times.

Arguments used most often to support Plan D (segregated regional schools) were: better educational facilities, used 12 times! segregation is desirable, used 10 times; Negroes would be happier, 8 times; most practical, 6 times; and most economical, 6 times.

Justification for the demand of Negroes for graduate training is exposed in tragic figures which disclosed that in the 17 states where Negroes are denied this vital type of training, there is one white doctor for every 843 of the population, while only one Negro doctor for every 4,409 of the Negro population. Is there any wonder that the life expectance of white people averages almost ten years longer than that of the blacks, and that still births among Negro women are almost double that of white mothers?

In the realm of dentistry there is a more appalling gap than in the field of medicine. Census reports show that in the same 17 states there is one white dentist for every 2,795 of the white population, while among the blacks there is only one Negro dentist for eevry 12,101 of the population. Why would anyone wilfully turn his face away from the facts and argue for two school ssytems when one has proved wholly inadequate. There are not enough dentists for white people under the present system, ignoring completely the unconscienable and ruthless disregard of the blacks.

Of course in law and the other some seventy-odd graduate fields offered at the University of Oklahoma and in other southern states, the chasm between the two races is monstrous and vicious. Mississippi, with a million Negroes has only three Negro lawyers, and one of these, S. R. Redmond, died during the current year.

We are delighted to note that many of those who are opposed to segregation have taken their stand on the ground that the plan is economically unsound. The terrific waste of public funds in attempting to maintain two systems of education in the South should impress every over-burdened taxpayer below the Mason and Dixon line as to its unwisdom and inconsistency. Segregation compounds a felony. We wrong the Negro taxpayer by denial of a constitutional guarantee, and we wrong the white taxpayer by loading him down with over-burdening taxation to perpetuate this wrong.

The Other Foot

Last week we castigated those Southern educators who are fighting to prevent the granting of equal educational opportunities to Negro youth. This week another case of racial discrimination in education has come to our attention. This one is in the North, in our own backyard, as a matter of fact.

It seems that the dean of women at Northwestern University was fired last summer because of her "liberal views" regarding Jews and Negroes. The former dean, Mrs. Ruth McCarn, told the daughter of the president of the University of Chicago all about it and the young lady, Mary F. Hutchins, wrote a story of her interview which was published in the Daily Northwestern.

Mrs. McCarn was quoted as saying: "It was in 1941 that President Snyder told me I was too much interested in Jews and Negroes and, as I recall the words, that I should 'focus' my 'attention on more important matters.'"

The former dean went on: "About a year later, when a meeting was held by some students to consider the organization of a co-operative house, two Negro girls attended. Although I had no connection with the meeting, Dr. Snyder assumed I had and was indignant about it."

According to the story the Northwestern university head gave Mrs. McCarn a warning of things to come. "With considerable force," Mrs. McCarn related, "he told me that a cooperative house was not an interracial house and that if I 'tried to get Negroes slipped in thru the back door' he would hold me personally responsible."

This little bombshell in the academic circles of Chicago will have some interesting repercussions. For years rumors have persisted to the effect that students of color were unwelcome at Northwestern. However, that may be, the latest story from out Evanston way certainly seems to support the validity of these allegations.

Aubrey Williams Says South Making Room For Negro Citizenship

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 24—(AP)—The Southern Conference Education Fund, Inc., which recently polled professors of 11 Southern universities on the segregation question, is educational, not political, its president, Aubrey Williams said yesterday.

Williams, former NYA administrator, said the poll showed a majority of the professors replying favor removal of racial barriers in graduate and professional schools.

The S. C. E. F. is a group of individuals interested in wiping out inequalities wherever they exist, he said.

THE PERSONS associated with it have signed a declaration of civil rights which says in part:

"We still believe all men are created equal and are endowed as men with certain inalienable rights which each must respect and guard.

"We take these rights to include equality before the law and freedom from any discrimination bolstered by law; unrestricted access to all institutions supported by taxes for the public welfare, schools and hospitals not excepted; equal opportunity to obtain training and gain employment; the right to unsegregated transportation, housing and assembly."

THE S. C. E. F. has 20 directors, all Southerners except four from Washington, D. C., and one from Chicago. Williams who is publisher the S. C. E. F. is working for "educational enlightenment in the South" for both whites and Negroes.

Williams said he sent out 500 queries asking Southerners if they cared to join such a group. He got 200 affirmative replies, he said.

The university professors polled gave their private opinions, Williams said. They were not asked to speak officially for their school.

He said that 69 per cent of those who replied voted for admitting Negroes to graduate schools without segregation whenever the desired courses are not offered by a state supported school for Negroes.

WILLIAMS RECEIVED 371 replies from university professors. He said 255 favored non-segregated graduate and professional schools, and 105, or 28 per cent, favored segregated regional schools. The other 3 per cent, or 11 professors, favored compromised plans.

"The commonly held attitudes toward Negroes are breaking down," Williams said. There is strong and unmistakable evidence of a growing support in the South for making the Negro a part of the citizenship of the nation."

Teachers Hear Report on Study Of College Bias

Conference Here Is Told State's Inquiry Revealed Serious Discrimination

Speaking on the recent study on higher education made by the State of New York, Algo D. Henderson, Associate Commissioner of Higher Education for the state, stressed yesterday the "serious discrimination" against minority groups seeknig admission to college that was revealed by that report.

He spoke to representatives of more than 100 colleges at the opening session at a two-day, regional conference sponsored by the department of higher education of the National Educational Association, at the Hotel Uew Yorker.

He cited figures of thirty high schools polled in the report. Of Jewish students in the top quarter of their classes who applied for cllege, 59 per cent were not accepted by the college of their first choice, he said, while the rejection figures for non-Jewish students in the same group was 19 per cent. Another study in the report showed that more Negroes from New York are able to gain admission to colleges outside of the state than are able to get a college education in their home state.

The greatest difficulty in both minority groups, he continued, is presented to those seeking admission in medical schools. Since limited facilities mean that even without discrimination the applicant has but one chance in three of admission, the member of the minority group is left with very slim chances.

The conference was opened by an address by Dr. Robert C. Clothier, president of Rutgers University, who stressed the importance of education in democracy. America cannot rely on "mouthings of a few time-worn expressions of patriotism"—it must have a purposeful, dynamic understanding of the world's changing techniques and technologies, he said.

The conference split into panel discussion groups yesterday afternoon. The discussions are to be continued this morning.

Chicago U. Drops Unfair Queries

22% of Colleges Pose Similar Questions

CHICAGO (ANP)— In an effort to make its non-discriminatory admittance policy more of a reality, the University of Chicago announced last week that it had dropped the picture and discriminatory questions from its application blanks.

Dean of Students, Robert M. Strozier, said that the results of a recent survey by the Chicago Council against Racial and Religious Discrimination, the Women's Council for Fair Educational Practices, and the student paper caused the changes.

22% Has Such Queries

This report revealed that 22% of the higher educational institutions asked five or more discriminatory questions in their application blanks. The student newspaper, the Chicago Maroon, brought it to the attention of the dean about three weeks ago that the U. of C., was listed in this group.

Pictures on application blanks have been eliminated immediately. Questions that could lead to discrimination will be eliminated by the summer of 1949, Dean Strozier said. These questions include those on race, languages spoken in home, mother's maiden name, parents' birthplace and etc.

Two Dixie Schools Drop Bias

NEWARK, Del.—Jim Crow university education is a waste of money Delaware and Arkansas tax payers will not be forced to bear. Both state universities announced last week that they will admit Negroes to graduate courses.

The precedent shattering steps were taken despite plans for a regional segregated university of the South with Meharry medical college as its nucleus.

Index to the amount to be saved was provided by Missouri which has operated separate law schools for nine years. Tax payers pay $579 extra dollars a year for each student in the Jim Crow law school at Lincoln university.

Said President William S. Carlson of Delaware state: Delaware is "the first among 17 southern universities to lower voluntarily" admission to Negroes. At the same time, however, President Lewis F. Jones of Arkansas state announced that a Negro rejected by the law school a year ago will be admitted if he re-applies.

Both announcements admittedly were results of the Supreme court's equal education mandate in the Ada Sipuel Fisher case.

However sweeping, the announcements did not entirely end segregation in higher education. Delaware plans to admit Negroes to courses not offered at the college for Negroes at Dover. Arkansas will do the same, but instruction within the university will be separate.

Oklahoma, still resisting the high court ruling, is moving toward a special legislative session. Rep. Harold Carey, chief plumper for the session, feels that $3,000,000 for Jim Crow Langston university will satisfy most Negroes.

Meanwhile, at Norman, Okla., Mrs. Fisher, the young woman responsible for the stirring developments, waited for action on her second petition to the Supreme court.

The court is asked to force the University of Oklahoma to admit her on grounds that the new law school at Oklahoma City, with three faculty members is not equal to Oklahoma U. law school.

Except for its serious implications, the Oklahoma situation has taken on a comic air. Six more Negroes have been denied admission to graduate courses at Oklahoma U. The registrar at the Jim Crow school met his first applicant last week--and promptly rejected him. He was white.

The Delaware announcement did not reveal whether or not any Negro students had applied for admission.

"High Cost Of Segregation I

A DISTINGUISHED university president, himself a Protestant churchman of high rank, said not so long ago that the Protestant church had been "outflanked (1) by the Catholics and (2) by the Communists." He was referring, regretfully, to the sorry position the Protestant church is taking in matters of human relations, which in their very nature called for Christian action.

In this connection the Protestants have a great deal to defend and to disturb their conscience. It seems to us that the Protestants, and in many instances the Catholics, should be greatly embarrassed because both domestic and world events are shaking them loose from their presumptive foundations. This is true because of the crass race prejudice displayed by many high church officials and many laymen whose voices influence church policies and program.

This is all the more noticeable in these times when colored peoples throughout the world, who have been exploited both in the name of Christianity and in the interest of "white supremacy," the white Protestants would rather see civilization wiped out than to put into practice more of the tenets of Christianity. They are welded to their idols of racial segregation, discrimination and other sins as they were a century ago, when they justified and supported human slavery, and in America split their churches wide open on account of its abolition—not by any efforts of their own as churches, but by a civil war. There were, of course, exceptions, as there are now, but the exceptions were not the rule.

On November 22, 1947, the JOURNAL AND GUIDE carried an editorial on the "High Cost of Segregation in Higher Education," in which we reviewed the per capita cost of educating clergymen for the colored part of the Protestant Episcopal Church in its so-called divinity school, maintained exclusively for this purpose. We noted that there was no freshmen class now at this school, that the total enrollment was eight, and that there were five full time professors whose salaries we inadvertently overstated on the basis of what we had every reason to believe was accurate information. We also stated that the church was preparing to spend $192,000 on this school, which we thought was uneconomical, and suggested that less money than is now required to operate this non-accredited school for the training of church leadership be given to men aspiring to the priesthood in the form of scholarships in Episcopal divinity schools in Philadelphia and New York.

The dean of Bishop Payne Divinity School had a letter in the December 25th issue of The Witness, church paper published in Chicago, which reprinted our editorial, in which he called attention to "three misstatements" in our article, bearing on (1) per capita cost, which he says is not as high as it is at Philadelphia Divinity, General in New York, or at Cambridge; (2) that the highest paid professor at Payne gets $4,000 a year, and "no living accommodations" are provided for any of them; (3) the total enrollment (including two special students and three women) is 13 instead of eight!

We stand corrected, but we don't see how the corrections alter the picture in sufficient degree for the good dean to have bothered about making them. The per capita cost at Bishop Payne, under existing conditions, would be scandalous indeed if it were as high as it is at the three seminaries named by Dean BRYAN. If the highest paid instructor in a faculty of five receives $4,000 a year and "no accommodations for living," the per capita cost at Payne is still too high.

We missed noting the two special students and the three women enrolled in the upper classes. As a matter of fact we were talking about the education of clergymen. If the two special students cannot be enrolled in the regular categories they are getting something at Payne which we did not know the school offered. The dean's corrections were courteous and in the best of form. We are grateful for them.

Other Papers Say:

SEGREGATION IN UNIVERSITIES

(From The Chicago Tribune)

The question whether Oklahoma may exclude Negroes from the law school of the state university is headed for the Supreme court again.

On January 14, 1946, more than 2½ years ago, Miss Ada Sipuel, now Mrs. Fisher, applied for admission to the University of Oklahoma law school. She was excluded solely on the ground of her color. She asked the District court of Cleveland county to issue a writ of mandamus, requiring the board of regents of the university to enroll her. The court refused to do so and was sustained by the state Supreme court.

The United States Supreme court took a different view. On January 12 of this year the court said:

"The petitioner is entitled to secure legal education afforded by a state institution. To this time, it has been denied her, altho during the same period many white applicants have been afforded legal education by the state. The state must provide it for her in conformity with the equal protection clause of the 14th amendment and provide it as soon as it does for applicants of any other group."

The case was sent back to the Supreme court of Oklahoma "for proopinion." Thereupon Oklahoma established a law school for Negroes in Oklahoma City, but it has had no students. Mrs. Fisher and others took the position that the facilities did not match those in the state's law school for white students. She renewed her request for mandamus. It has just been denied in the lower court on the ground that the state has done all for her that can be required of it.

Whether the Supreme court of the United States will agree remains to be seen. For our part, we can think of no good reason for segregation in institutions of higher learning. Outside our southern states, there is not a single first class university in the world which excludes students because of the color of their skin. We cannot believe that the standards of the University of Oklahoma would be degraded by following the practices of Harvard and the Sorbonne.

Moreover, we find little evidence to justify the fear that unpleasant incidents would result from the admission of Negroes to the southern state universities. We haven't read of any ill feeling in the American Olympic team as a result of the presence of Negroes, and in view of their achievements at London any protests along this line would be ludicrous. Negro students have played with northern teams against southern boys on southern gridirons without incident. The young people who have enough intelligence to get into a university, are about as generous and about as self-controlled as young people anywhere else. The presence of a few Negroes in a classroom wouldn't blight the lives of the white students at Oklahoma any more than at Nebraska and Vassar.

We don't know whether the Supreme court will tell. Oklahoma that the 14th amendment requires that Mrs. Fisher be admitted to the law school; but whatever the court decides, we think it a great pity that the people of Oklahoma haven't the sense and the goodness of heart to remove a discrimination that degrades the university, confers no benefits on its white students, and arouses deep and justified resentment in the hearts of their Negro fellow citizens. The question raised by Mrs. Fisher isn't only a legal one.

Segregation Isn't the Issue

Atlanta Constitution

Numerous Federal Court decisions in recent months have shown conclusively that the South cannot continue to deny equal opportunity for education to Negroes.

While some Southerners have feared the eventual impact of these decisions would mean Negroes must be admitted to all schools on a nonsegregated basis, The Constitution has held equal educational facilities to be the only way by which our traditional social pattern can be preserved. Wed-11-24-48

The decision of a three-judge Federal Court in Oklahoma City Monday appears to support our contention. The Court denied the plea of G. W. McLaurin, a Negro, that he be allowed to attend classes on a nonsegregated basis. McLaurin sometime ago won the right to attend the University of Oklahoma, but school authorities ordered him to sit in an adjoining room which permits him to see and hear the professors.

The Court ruled McLaurin is receiving equal educational opportunities with those of white students, adding that it is "within the power of the State to recognize racial distinctions between its citizens and to classify them."

In other words, segregation within the State is no issue insofar as the Federal Courts are concerned. Had Oklahoma possessed equal educational facilities in a Negro school, the Court's ruling suggests there would have been no basis for its previous order permitting McLaurin to attend the University.

The Court could hardly have been clearer on this point. Segregation of the Negro student "based upon racial distinctions and recognized and enforced by the regulations of the University of Oklahoma, rests upon a reasonable basis, having its foundation in the public policy of the State, and does not, therefore, operate to deprive the plaintiff of equal protection," it declared. Wed-11-24-48

The decision will be a blow to those die-hards like Walter White of the NAACP. It will be, too, a challenge to the South which should busy itself to provide equality of educational opportunity for Negroes in the assurance that if this is done there is little likelihood our long-standing social fabric will be upset.

Wayne Students Rap Dormitory Jim Crow

DETROIT — (ANP) — Student members of the Student League for Industrial Democracy at Wayne University hit the administration for Webster hall for promoting racial segregation in that dormitory. Defender

The students last week issued a leaflet, "The Facts on Jim Crow at Webster Hall," telling how Negroes are crowded together at one end of the dormitory. This leaflet is asking the student body to write to the administration in protest of this situation. Sat-11-27-48

Higher Education for Negroes

The Courier-Journal Sat. 1-31-48

For several years we have known that sooner or later we must provide technical and graduate education for Negroes in full compliance with the Constitution of the United States. It is safe to say that this legal obligation of like technical and graduate offerings for the two races will not be met in Kentucky with a separate university for the Negroes. There are reasons for this assurance, including the following: (1) It would not be easy to do. The facilities must be essentially the same for the two races. This includes buildings, laboratories, libraries, equipment, and upkeep. Lecture courses, seminars, books, and special services, graduate or undergraduate, offered for one would be required for the other. And it could not be done in a day or a year. (2) It would take a pile of money. (3) It would weaken our education program. We want to build up our university. We do not want to divide its possible resources to build or to operate a duplicate of it for a mere 2 or 3 per cent of the enrollment, whatever their color. (4) A Negro twin for our university is not needed. If we had it, it wouldn't work. If it were kept alive artificially for ten years, it would hardly have three students in metallurgical engineering, or three in civil engineering, or three in chemical engineering. (5) Negro universities have not been built by other States. Two-thirds of the States have already met their obligation completely. Ohio has more Negroes than Kentucky, but no Negro university. Illinois has more Negroes in one of its cities (Chicago) than live in this State, but it has no separate university. The same goes for Michigan. The other third of the States, those to the South, seem to be waiting for us to act.

Negroes Present More Problems In Oklahoma

The Times Birmingham, Ala.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 30—(AP)—The State of Oklahoma, fighting hard to uphold its 40-year policy of segregated education for Negroes, today was like a man patching a levee at flood time.

New problems kept breaking out all over. Fri. 1-30-48

Regents for the all-white University of Oklahoma at Norman tossed the question of six Negroes' request for admittance to university graduate courses back to the state attorney general — for a "yes or no" answer.

Yesterday Atty. Gen. Mac Q. Williamson put it that the regents "were justified in declining."

State Regent John Rogers, member of a higher board, called for changes in Oklahoma laws to open the university's graduate schools to Negroes. He said separate schools are not economically feasible.

Students at the state's Negro university at Langston today planned a demonstration today against segregation. At Norman, where a similar rally was held yesterday, other students called for an anti-admittance demonstration as a test of strength. The Times

Meanwhile the special three-man faculty Negro law school set up for Ada Sipuel Fisher remained empty.

It was the state's solution to federal and state Supreme Court rulings ordering "equal facilities" for her.

But Ada Fisher continued to boycott it as "Jim Crow" and her attorneys in Washington have asked the Supreme Court to compel the state to admit her to the University of Oklahoma. Birmingham, Ala.

In Oklahoma City, the Negro community heard rumors that the high court may hold a special session on the case in advance of its regular Monday meeting. Fri. 1-30-48

Texas Appeal Court Has Segregation Case

The Times Birmingham, Ala.

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 30—(AP)—The question of whether Texas can constitutionally segregate Negro and white students in its public schools came before the Third Court of Civil Appeals yesterday. Fri.

On appeal and set for oral arguments was Heman Marion Sweatt's legal battle to force University of Texas officials to admit him as a law school student. 1-30-48

The fight started nearly two years ago, after the Houston Negro mail carrier had been denied admission to the University Law School. He was informed that he qualified as a student in every respect, except that he was a Negro.

Sweatt originally brought suit for a mandamus compelling his admission in a Travis County district court. It denied his plea, and he appealed to the Third Court of Civil Appeals. This case was sent back to district court after the Legislature established the Texas State University for Negroes at Houston, with a law branch at Austin. Fri. 1-30-48

Following the new trial in district court, at which he was refused the writ compelling the University of Texas to admit him, Sweatt again appealed to the intermediate court. He said he would carry his fight to the United States Supreme Court if necessary.

The Rockefeller Method of Keeping Jimcrow Education

By Abner W. Berry Thurs. 2-19-48

IT MIGHT PLEASE Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher to know that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., the oil king, and a few other members of America's big monopoly families are heavy laborers in the cause of Negro education. It is true that Mrs. Fisher has been denied a law school education in Oklahoma equal to that of white citizens. It is also true that the United States Supreme Court has refused to back up its own ruling with a mandamus requiring that Oklahoma University admit her to its law school. Admittedly such a step is the only way she could get a law school education on the basis of equality.

The Supreme Court's evasion of its own ruling has left Mrs. Fisher the choice of accepting the miserable Jimcrow, one-woman "law school," or fighting the Jimcrow set-up together with those who wish to see Negro educational equality. Daily Worker

BUT AS I said she might draw some comfort from the fact that a group of Wall St. men of wealth are bending every effort to improve Negro education. Mr. Rockefeller told some members of the United Negro College Fund in New York City recently that he had a "profound" belief in Negro education.

"I feel free," the oil king told his comfortable guests seated in the plushy Waldorf Astoria, "to invite my friends to join in this work because they can find for themselves a constructive task without getting into controversy."

What Rockefeller really meant was that he was glad to invite his friends to work for Jimcrow education. New York, N.Y.

Mrs. Fisher's attempt to enter Oklahoma University is undoubtedly controversial to Mr. Rockefeller. Thurs. 2-19-48

For such non-controversial work for "Negro education" Frank M. Totten, an official of the Chase National Bank (a Rockefeller institution) was given an award. Another award was given William E. Cotter of Union Carbide and Carbon Corporation. But there was not a word about the fight of Negro students to equal rights to an education now going on.

A DISTURBING fact about the whole affair was the presence of 32 Negro educators whose schools benefit from the United Negro College Fund. These educators have as much to gain from the fight of the students for education as the students themselves. The plight of the educators grows out of the same Jimcrow exclusion policy which affects the students. For if the Southern states assumed their constitutional duties toward Negro citizens the lot of Negro student and professor, alike, would be immeasurably improved.

How long will it take the Negro College Fund to get Mrs. Fisher a law school? Exactly 30 years! Figure it out for yourself. The fund collects (begs is a better term) less than $2,000,000 annually to be divided among 32 schools. It has been estimated that a good law school, equal to that at Oklahoma University, costs around $2,000,000.

By working real hard, with the aid of future generations, and saving every penny collected, Mrs. Fisher could have a law school built for her by the time she reached her 60th birthday. (She is now 23.) Thurs 2-19-48

THAT'S THE non-controversial way. That's the way that means nothing to Negroes in this age and still less to education. The insurgent Claghorns just love that sort of program for Negro education. And while the Rockefellers and Cotters and Aldriches and Tottens, in the North, spread the soothing syrup of non-controversialism, the Bourbons are busy digging the grave of popular education in the South. New York, N.Y.

Already Representative Brooks Hays, an Arkansas career politician, has introduced a bill in the House that will permit the former slave states to unite in a special sort of union to lower the educational standards. The bill would allow the southern states to operate jointly regional schools at the graduate level. Such a plan, if successful, would allow them to have their white supremacy and maintain the myth of "equal but separate" education, all at the expense of white and Negro education. Daily Worker 2-19-48 effect by southern institutions since the historic Supreme Court decision ordering equal state educational facilities for all races. The first is to continue Jim Crow, as has been practiced by the University of Oklahoma, in setting up a separate law school.

These Bourbons have never been ones to avoid the contro-

The second is to eliminate segregation in courses not already offered in Jim Crow schools, as is practiced at the University of Delaware. Sat. 2-21-48

Experts Favor No School Bias

Pittsburgh Courier

NEW ORLEANS—A full seven-ty-one per cent of dixie social scientists feel racial segregation should be eliminated immediately in professional and graduate schools, according to Aubrey Williams, an officer of the Southern

University of Arkansas, is to admit Negroes to graduate schools, but on a segregated basis, and the fourth is the southern governors' proposal for separate regional schools.

The question posed to the social scientists, as experts in their field, was on which of the four plans they favored.

Seventy-one per cent of those questioned favored the plan eliminating segregation Four per cent found none of the plans acceptable and the other 25 per cent favored the regional Jim Crow proposal.

Senator Wayne Morse Opens War on Jim Crow

Courier Pittsburgh Pa.

Last Thursday, in the United States Senate, a resolution which would have set a pattern to perpetuate Dixie's jim-crow pattern of educational segregation, was defeated by a close margin. The document was called Senate Joint Resolution 191. 5-22-48

Leading the battle against the biased educational compact, which would have turned Meharry Medical College over to the domination of a bloc of chief executives of Southern States, was the courageous and outspoken Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oregon).

Earlier in the week, Senator Morse expressed his determination to kill the resolution by "talking it death" to keep it from passing. The Senator from Oregon talked for hours on the pact, explaining to the Senate that the masses of Negroes in America opposed the regional school plan. Sat. 5-22-48

By forcing the resolution back into the committee, Senator Morse and his Republican associates virtually sounded the death knell for the resolution insofar as the present Congress is concerned. By their victory, the Senate's GOP leadership can also "bury" the resolution in the committee for the rest of the Eightieth Congress' session.

For his fearless and aggressive fight in the face of stiff opposition, The Courier this week proudly salutes Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon.

Kansas Loses, Illinois Wins In Student War On Cafe Jim Crow

Defender Chicago Ill. Sat. 11-13-1948

Restaurant Jim Crow swept two midwest college towns recently, Kansas forgot its anti-slavery tradition and forced the end of a student strike against cafe bigotry at Lawrence, seat of the State university.

Illinois came off better with its state university student publication forcing the New China restaurant at Galesburg to disavow its previous policy barring Negroes.

At the University of Kansas, 30 members of the Lawrence chapter of the Congress of Racial Equality including 10 Negroes, were forcibly carried from Brick's cafe, where they had conducted a three-hour anti-discrimination sit-down strike by a group of non-sympathetic fellow students. There was no actual violence, women strikers were unmolested, and police who watched the affair did not interfere.

Robert Stewart, 21, of Manhattan, Kas., senior in the school of business administration and chairman of the Committee on Racial Equality, one of the strikers who were refused service in the cafe, said the group was practicing "non-violence and direct action to achieve equality." 4-24-48

At Galesburg, direct action took another form. The school paper, Illini, presented a student charge that the New China cafe had refused to serve him and that an employee had pointed to a sign reading "We Cater to White Trade Only." The paper also published a picture of the sign, a section of the Illinois Civil Rights Code which outlaws discrimination, and the publication's refusal to accept advertising from the cafe until it changed its race policy. Sat.

Joe Wong, one of the restaurant's proprietors answered immediately and removed the offending sign. Wong said that both he and his partner, Bill Wong, had served in the army overseas and would serve again to protect the 'liberties of our buddies, regardless of color" and that discrimination was not a policy of the restaurant. He added that in addition to wishing to maintain the goodwill of the students, the partners were also "pleased to affiliate with you in any action to hold the trust of tolerance secure in our country." 5-24-48

JC in Education Condemned by Texas University Student

The Afro Sat 11-13-48 Baltimore Md.

NEW YORK — (ANP)—Educational segregation was condemned by a young Southerner at the second session of the Herald-Tribune forum at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel last week when Jack Summerfield, Negro graduate student at the University of Texas, declared that "educational segregation can be eliminated in Texas without serious consequencies."

He said the segregated system "is degrading and obstructs the progress of civil rights." He cited the successful experience at State Universities in Maryland and West Virginia in refuting opinions that "disaster" would result if educational segregation was lifted.

Mr. Summerfield said that, "on the whole, students at Texas University are ready for admission of colored people." Mrs. Ada Sipuel Fisher preceded Mr. Summerfield and told of her unsuccessful efforts to enter Oklahoma University's Law School.

Dixie Seeks Total School Segregation

Pittsburg Courier

Pittsburg Pa.

DETROIT—Plans for an extensive segregated school system, financed by Southern States, were outlined here by Governor Millard F. Caldwell of Florida at the ninth biennial general assembly of the State Council of Governments.

The plan was originally offered earlier in the week at a panel of the fifty-third meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools in Memphis.

NO FEDERAL AID

Governor Caldwell asserted that as a means of obviating Federal aid, which might make non-segregation mandatory, the States interested in building the schools would share the expenses.

"This is a more honest way," Governor Caldwell said, "to meet the interracial problem than that practiced in the North where colleges admit one Negro and then say they practice non-segregation."

RECOGNIZE NEED

Governor Caldwell said that the overall plan for the system of universities included the provision of similar institutions for Negroes "because we recognize the need of Negro physicians and nurses and Negroes in other professions."

Further aspects of regional education in the South will be discussed Dec. 12-13 when presidents and administrative officers of fifty-five colleges and universities meet

Georgia U. Students Ask End of Jimcrow

By Harry Raymond

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 17.—The fight to abolish Jimcrow in state-owned universities and colleges below the Mason-Dixon Line gained momentum here on the campus of the University of Georgia as the current issue of the student weekly, Red and Black, called for admission of Negroes to the school.

Student editor George McArthur wrote that ending of race discrimination is the only "ultimate solution" of the higher education problem of the South.

McArthur assailed "delaying tactics" and said:

"The State of Georgia simply cannot afford to support two state universities with equal facilities in each. The courts of the nation have declared that we must give the Negro equal educational opportunities with the white. There is but one solution.

"Some day the university which educated Georgia's most infamous demagogue will also educate some of the people he tried to trample into the earth—we must sincerely recognize our responsibility to provide the Negro with proper educational facilities rather than cast-off and out-dated textbooks."

ATTACK EDITORIAL

Pope Brock, chairman of the University System's Board of Regents, attacked the editorial, stating it "does not reflect the Board of Regents at this time." Chancellor Raymond R. Paty declined to comment. But a large section of the students are rallying behind editor McArthur.

"I am most proud that I am privileged to have access to a publication in the South that has the courage to speak out on a pertinent problem that will inevitably bring astute comment from the wool-hats of the Bible Belt," said Norman Westbrook, student from East Point, Ga.

Another student, Mel Harris, declared: "If the State can accept the colored citizens' tax money, it can certainly afford them every opportunity of pursuing their education."

Leon Garper, student whose home is in Athens, added this remark: "I think if a man has the ability, regardless of his race or color, he should be allowed to come to the university.'

Student Emory Nance, of Douglas, Ga., agreed: "I had just as soon sit by anyone black as anyone white, as long as they are on the same mental level."

Typical of the students opposing the editorial was Dent Willis, of Bainbridge, who claimed granting Negroes equal educational rights "would cause an awful uproar."

He was jointed by Carl Brinkley, of Faceville, "I'm agin it," was the best argument Brinkley could muster against the student paper's stand.

Negro Halted Again In Try To Enter U.K.

Judge Refuses To Grant Default Against Trustees

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 3.—Lyman T. Johnson, Louisville Negro schoolteacher, was halted again today in his attempts to gain admission to the University of Kentucky Graduate School.

Federal Judge H. Church Ford stopped him this time. Johnson twice had been denied the right to enroll by university authorities.

After the last attempt the Louisville teacher brought suit to enlist court aid in his behalf. Then he asked a default judgment against the school, contending the university failed to reply to his suit in the allotted time.

Judge Ford took a different view. He said notice of the suit had not been served on the board of trustees and upheld a motion to quash the summons.

Amended Petition Filed.

Counsel for Johnson then filed an amended petition which named the board members and Governor Earle Clements defendants. The effect will be to reopen the suit.

The university's attorneys had claimed that counsel for Johnson erred in summoning the trustees to appear.

When Johnson was denied admission, a university official cited as reasons the State Constitution and the Day Law which prohibit Negroes and whites from attending the same schools.

Johnson, in his petition, attacked these measures and also claimed they violated a section of the Federal Constitution.

4 Teachers Hired for One Student

Costly Step to Keep Separate Education

LEXINGTON, Ky. — (ANP)— The absurd lengths to which this State's educational officials are going to keep colored and white students from studying in the same classes together was illustrated here this week when the University of Kentucky added four Frankfort attorneys to its staff in order to instruct one student in law.

The student is John W. Hatch of Springfield, Ky., the only colored law student to avail himself of courses under the State's plan to give "equal college—education opportunities" through separate facilities.

Since last September, Hatch had been instructed by seven university professors on the campus of Kentucky State College for Colored Students.

"Classroom" Shifted to Capital

With the addition of the quartette of Frankfort attorneys, Hatch's classroom work is being shifted to the State capital, where there is a huge law library.

Immediately after Dr. H. L. Donovan, university president, made the announcement, Dr. R. B. Atwood, head of the State college, charged that the change "violates" the agreement to teach colored students at his school what they could not get at the university.

Calls Setup "Cumbersome"

"It must be apparent to all that the new arrangement is even more cumbersome than the former plan and works an additional hardship upon Hatch, who must adjust himself to the new teachers in the middle of the semester," he pointed out.

"Moreover," Dr. Atwood said, "the new plan violates both the letter and spirit of the agreement between the State Board of Education (governing the college) and the university board of trustees.

"Among other things, it stipulates that courses offered on the campus of the college by the university shall be taught by regular instructors who teach at the university. Obviously the new plan does not meet those requirements," he declared.

Negro Agrees to Drop $15,000 Plea In U. K. S

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 20 (AP)— Lyman T. Johnson, Louisville Negro seeking entrance to the University of Kentucky by Federal Court action, agreed today to drop a plea for $15,000 damages when the case is tried January 4.

Trial procedures were ironed out in a conference of attorneys and Judge H. Church Ford.

Johnson charged in his suit that the the university is violating the 14th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution by pursuing a race segregation policy. He asked a permanent injunction to forbid the school from refusing to admit him into the Graduate School.

White Girl Denied Admission To Colored College - Law Forbids

By Associated Negro Church

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Because of Kentucky's "Day law," Kentucky State College rejected the application of a white girl for admittance to summer school last week. Dr. R. B. Atwood, president of the college, said that the Day law provides that no school shall operate where both whites and Negroes are students.

He added that both the Kentucky Court of Appeals and the U. S. Supreme Court had upheld the law.

Seeking entrance into the Negro college was Miss Betty Marie Ellis, 23, a college graduate and a native of Indiana. She is now studying for her master's degree in religious education at the College of the Bible in Lexington. During the past six months she has been director of religious education in First Christian Church at Shelbyville.

In her application to Kentucky State she asked for enrollment in rural education, creative writing or elementary piano.

DENIED ENTRANCE

In answer to being denied entrance to the colored school Miss Ellis wrote letters of protest to Dr. Atwood, Gov. Earl Clements and Boswell B. Hodgkin, superintendent of public instruction.

She said, "Had I the financial and legal backing, I would like very much to contest the law as it stands." She added that she had "the firm opinion" that this law was not in accord with the democratic principles of the American constitution or " with the personal convictions of the forward-looking citizens of Kentucky."

Going to the same school with Negroes is no novelty to her. She was born and reared in Peru, Ind., where colored and white children attend the same public schools. At Manchester College in North Manchester, Ind., where she earned her BS, Negroes were admitted on the same basis as whites. Several colored girls lived in her dormitory.

TAUGHT SCHOOL

She said that it did not dawn upon her until her senior year in college that members of her race looked upon colored people as Negroes and not as individuals. Teaching first grade in Roswell, N. M., taught her that civil rights meant one thing to whites and another to the colored.

She said that although all races attended the same school there, the Mexicans and Negroes were intolerant of one another, and the whites were intolerant of both. She said her experience with Kentucky State has not affected her relationships and activities at her school.

One reporter asked her, "Looking back, would you have applied had you known at the time events would take the course they have?"

"Oh yes," she answered, "it's one thing to talk about racial friendliness, but it is another thing to do something about it. I think it would be fine if more and more white people demonstrated they are willing to do something. The action we see is by Negroes. It would do them, and us, too, a lot of good if some of the action came from our side."

In explaining why she sought to enter Kentucky she said that it is convenient to her work in Shelbyville and it offers her the courses she wanted. She said:

"It never occurred to me a furore would be raised. I had no idea there would be any publicity, or even any notice taken. I have gone to school with Negroes all my life. To me, taking summer course at Kentucky State would have been nothing out of the ordinary."

Kentucky Installs New System To Maintain Racial Segregation

LEXINGTON, Ky.—(ANP)—The State's arrangement for shuttling Negro students between Kentucky State College and the University of Kentucky is a subterfuge. So is the arrangement is an attempt to satisfy the same old answer, "no," here as far as the state is concerned.

In reply to his suit filed in Federal Court, the state recently announced its new system of "professor travel" to "equalize" educational facilities for Negroes and whites in Kentucky.

Under this system the state will transport professors from the university to the Negro college, for the purpose of teaching Negro students not on the campus. On the other hand Kentucky State students will be transported at state expense to the university here to take up laboratory and library and other facilities not available at their school.

When the colored students come to the white college, university authorities will not come when white students are there, to violate the state's day laws segregating the races in the schools.

In the answer filed by the attorney general's office, it was announced that Gov. Earle C. Clements had set up a $45,000 fund for racial segregation purposes—continuation of its primary purpose—continuation of education in Kentucky.

The Supreme Court has held repeatedly that a State must offer "equal facilities" to Negroes and whites in undergraduate and graduate work. The Day Law prohibits attendance of both white and Negro students at the same institution. Under the compromise, instructors from the University of Kentucky are supposed to be sent to Kentucky State College, 26 miles away, to conduct classes in courses available at the U. of K. but not previously available at K.S.C. Negro students have access to

Negroes Have Cause To Disturbed Over These Plans

THE State's arrangement for shuttling Negro students between Kentucky State College and the University of Kentucky is a subterfuge. So is the arrangement is an attempt to satisfy Supreme Court and the Kentucky Day Law prohibits attendance of both white and Negro students at the same institution. Under the compromise, instructors from the University of Kentucky are supposed to be sent to Kentucky State College, 26 miles away, to conduct classes in courses available at the U. of K. but not previously available at K.S.C. Negro students have access to the U. of K. library, also 26 miles away, at certain hours. It seems doubtful that their courses could be said to constitute "equal facilities" with those regularly given at the U. of K. Thus it may be contended that the Supreme Court requirements are not fulfilled. The DAY Law, forbidding students of the two races to attend the same institution, is not strictly obeyed, since Negro students are expected to use the U. of K. library—though they are expected to use it under somewhat trying circumstances. If the library is a part of the U. of K., which, of course, it is, they will be "attending" the same institution which white students attend.

As to the waiver, we agree fully with the 50 students who have signed a resolution stating their determination to reject it. Its apparent purpose is to eliminate Negro students now getting out-of-State education from any consideration should future Supreme Court rulings require admission of Negroes to the U. of K.

"I, the undersigned," says part of the waiver, "desiring to pursue a course of education and fully realizing that the Commonwealth of Kentucky has made ample provisions for me to obtain the prescribed course of study desired by me within the boundaries of Kentucky . . . desire to pursue my course of study outside of Kentucky . . . In consideration of such grant (the funds to pay for out-of-State education) I hereby waive any and all rights that I may have to obtain an education along the lines and in the course of study desired by me at any institutions provided by the Commonwealth of Kentucky . . ."

In the first place, the student is invited to sign a statement he has cause to disbelieve. Considering the curious commuting plan at K.S.C., the opportunity scarcely seems "ample." In the second place, it is debatable whether a student may waive his right to education in Kentucky.

Mr. FUNK has expressed the opinion that "someone is trying to create a disturbance." So someone is. And we are not surprised that Negroes are trying to disturb these two makeshifts, each of which emphasizes the inequality of their educational opportunity with that of white students.

ANYTHING the least bit mysterious is always either "cloaked in silence" or "veiled in secrecy." They are two of the journalistic "musts" that include a damaged ship's "limping" to port and snow is making a "blanket."—(Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

Educational Equality

Recently, several opinions relative to the Day Law were expressed in The Point of View, particularly on graduate study for Negroes in our State. The whole matter of race feeling and prejudice is almost entirely founded, in the minds of most persons, on falseness instead of truth, and only truth can give us a free society.

Three areas of our thinking could be briefly mentioned as examples of falseness tenaciously held to from generation to generation. First there is the common belief in the superiority of race. No authority in the field of psychology, sociology or cultural anthropology would attempt to offer any evidence of biological superiority of races. Of course, there are differences in socialization, education and cultural achievements, but who is at fault for this situation? In the second place, according to these authorities there is no evidence to show that there is a pure race any place upon the earth. In the third place, race prejudice is based upon indoctrination of the minds of our children falsely.

Thus popular belief runs contrary to all three of the demonstrable truths with respect to race and race relations. It is long past the time when we should teach the truth to our children from the home to the university with respect to these significant issues. The leadership belongs probably to the educators of Kentucky.

Personally, I would be glad to see my own alma mater, the University of Kentucky, take the lead and recommend the repeal of the Day Law and the passage of legislation which would permit qualified Negroes to enter any graduate division of any institution of the State. This would help a little and would be more economical as well. It would be more in keeping with our democratic ideal of equal educational opportunity for all. It would improve relations and keep the minds of our youth from becoming poisoned by such false doctrine as Communism. In the light of every truth, from science, social science and Christian democracy, some very definite steps should be taken.

Equal Education for Negroes

I have watched with chagrin the process by which Kentucky has elected to give equal education to its Negroes. When an out-and-out Southern State like Arkansas can admit a Negro to its medical school and a border State like Kentucky cannot see the fallacy in a poor State trying to adhere to the dual system of education, retrogression is on the upgrade.

While the liberal gentlemen of Kentucky were busily establishing a defense against Lyman Johnson's suit, they forgot that group of students who, unaware of such a program, had made contracts to enter out-of-State schools this fall. What are they to do? The University of Kentucky does not offer many of the desired courses, and it is too late for the average Negro student to secure the large sum necessary to meet the cost of tuition and fees.

White Student Queries Ky. Governor on Race

FRANKFORT, Ky.—"Governor, how would you like to be a colored man?" This question was directed at Governor Earl Clements by Miss Betty M. Ellis, 23, in a letter after Kentucky State College rejected her admittance application because of Kentucky's "Day Law" which provides that no school shall operate where both colored and white persons are students.

"You wouldn't because you would never have become governor," Miss Ellis continued. "You would never have had the chance to make the friends you wanted to eat in the restaurants that were most desirable, to live in the nicer part of town. . . No, you wouldn't like it."

Student of Religion

Miss Ellis who has been director of religious education in First Christian Church at Shelbyville, is studying for her master's degree in religious education at the College of the Bible in Lexington.

Going to the same school with colored students is no novelty to Miss Ellis. Born in Peru, Ind., she attended the public schools with colored pupils. At Manchester College in Indiana, where she earned her B.S., several colored girls lived in her dormitory.

She said that it did not dawn upon her until her senior year in college that members of her race looked upon colored people solely on the basis of color and not as individuals. Teaching first grade in Roswell, N.M., taught her that civil rights meant one thing to whites and another to others.

Intolerance Prevails

She said that although all races attended the same school there, the Mexicans and colored students were intolerant of one another, and the whites were intolerant of both. She said her experience with Kentucky State has not affected her relationships and activities at her school.

One reporter asked her, "Looking back, would you have applied had you known at the time events would take the course they have?"

"Oh, yes," she answered, "it's one thing to talk about racial friendliness, but it is another thing to do something about it. It would be fine if more white people demonstrated they are willing to do something. It would do a lot of good if some of the action came from our side."

Miss Ellis's letter to Governor Clements stated:

"I wondered whether I could 'take it' if I were a colored person. Then I decided that would be much easier than 'taking it' as a white, if being white meant accepting them as they are, living and breathing as a 'superior' being while thousands were being denied basic human rights.

"I have been thinking of foreign mission work. How could I go to Africa, India or China and tell the people there that they should be civilized and Christian like the people in the United States? I decided to fight it out with (underlined) the colored people!"

U. K. Official Calls Plan For Negroes Adequate

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 27 (AP)—Dr. Leo M. Chamberlain, vice-president of the University of Kentucky, declared today the plan to offer U. K. courses at Kentucky State College for Negroes here "seems a satisfactory solution to a most vexatious problem."

New Kentucky State College Rating Seen As Jimcro Move

By CELESTE BERNARD
NEWS Correspondent

LOUISVILLE, Ky.

The raising of Kentucky State College to the same educational standard as that of the University of Kentucky last week was rapped as a plan to set up a jimcro system of education.

At a meeting held in Frankfort, Ky., the State Board of Education voted 6-1 to give Kentucky State the new rating. The vote opposing the rating was cast by the board's lone Negro member, A. E. Meyzeek of Louisville.

Mr. Meyzeek declared that the plan was approved " . . . for the purpose of discriminating against the Negro in the field of education. The whole thing is a plot."

He added, "It is a move to protect the Day Law, as the State's Attorney General told us."

The Day Law is a statute which forces racial segregation in public schools.

FOLLOWING are the three main proposals of the plan adopted by the board:

● Negro students who want to take courses offered by the University of Kentucky, but not offered by Kentucky State College, would be taught by white instructors who would commute the 26 miles between Frankfort and Lexington.

(Editor's Note: This suggested arrangement is similar to the one in effect now between the University of North Carolina and North Carolina State College, for Negroes.)

● Negro students requiring laboratory and library facilities not offered by their own college would be transported to the university for special periods of work and research. The arrangement covers both graduate and undergraduate fields. It would be financed the first year by special grants totaling $45,000.

● THE ADOPTION of the plan came as a result of a suit in Federal Court filed by Lyman T. Johnson of Louisville, who is seeking admission to the University of Kentucky.

The state wants to defend the suit by pleading equality of education as an accomplished fact rather than a plan for the future

Teacher Seeking To Enter Ky. U To Ask Ruling

LEXINGTON, Ky., (ANP) — Lyman T. Johnson, Louisville teacher seeking entrance into the University of Kentucky through the courts, said that his attorneys will seek a default judgment.

His attorney, James A. Crumlin, said that the default judgment will be sought because the university has failed to answer within the 20 days called for by law. Records in the U. S. District court clerk's office prove that the summons was served on the school June 21.

Johnson is suing trustees and oficials of the university. He is asking that the court issue a permanent injunction to keep the school from admitting him solely "because of color."

The plaintiff has asked the court to declare the school's segregation policy "unconstitutional and violative of the 14th amendment of the United States constitution."

Damages of $15,000 are also being asked.

Twice Refused Entrance To Unit This Year

Trustees Named Defendants To Teacher's Suit

LEXINGTON, Ky.—(ANP) — A suit was filed in federal district court here early last week by Lyman T. Johnson, teacher in Louisville's Central High school, asking that the race-segregation policy of the University of Kentucky be declared "unconstitutional," that a permanent injunction be given to stop the school from refusing him the right to enroll "solely because of color," and $15,000 damages for "illegal and wrongful acts" by university officials.

Johson was twice refused admission to the school, the first time being last March 15 and the second time, June 19. His refusal, according to Dean Maurice F. Seay, university registrar, was made under the state constitution and the Day law. The former bars Negroes and whites from attending the same tax-supported schools; the latter extends that prohibitions to all schools and provides penalties for violations.

In his suit, Johnson made no mention of the Day law, but applied the U. S. code to test the constitutionality of the policy. His complaining was that he had the necessary academic qualifications but was refused admission "solely on the grounds of race and color."

URGES TRUSTEE ACTION

His first rejection, at the hands of Dean Seay, was appealed to the university trustees and Frank D Peterson, university controler and secretary of the board of trustees.

Johnson pointed out that there was no other public-supported school in Kentucky where he could take courses leading to a degree of doctor of philosophy. He contends that he adn "other Negroes similarly situated suffered an irreparable injury because of the university's arbitrary and illegal refusal."

Named as defendants in the suit are university trustees H. L. Donovan, president; Dr. Seay, and three ex-officio members of the board; Gov. Earle C. Clements, Bowell B. Hodgin, superintendent of public instruction; and Harry F. Walter, commissioner of agriculture.

Representing Jonson are Atty. Thurgood Marshall, NAACP chief counsel, New York; James A. Crumlin, president, Louisville N. A. A. C. P. chapter; Alfred M. Carroll, Louisville, and John W. Rowe.

Equality Via Airwaves

A SPECIAL INVITATION to students heretofore jimcroed went out over the airwaves a fortnight ago from the University of Louisville. Negroes, who by law are barred from the classrooms, were urged to enroll in the university's radio correspondence course.

Meanwhile, the fight to secure equal rights as bona fide students went on at Louisville. Individuals and organizations leading the campaign were undaunted by this new offer of "a college course for credit" by air. They would hold their ground.

Subterfuge creeped slowly in. The all-Negro Kentucky State College was raised "to the same standard" of the University by the state board of education, 6-1. This is viewed as a direct attempt to halt the fight for equality—by claiming the college has the same rating as the university, and therefore is equal.

Jim Crow To Be Maintained Under New Law

University Head Says System Not Subterfuge

FRANKFORT, Ky.—(ANP)—Kentucky educators came up with a new scheme last week designed to get around the U. S. Supreme court decisions that states must provide equal educational facilities for all their citizens.

Under the Kentucky plan segregation will be maintained, and professors at the University of Kentucky will act as "tutors" to Negro students who desire graduate courses or subjects not taught at the jimcrow Kentucky State College.

Colored students will use University of Kentucky laboratories a special times of the day so that they will not come in contact with the white students. Students graduating under this system will receive a joint U. K. K. S. C. degree signed by both college presidents.

REMAIN AT SCHOOL

Negro students will remain at Kentucky State while university instructors will travel to the colored campus to teach them.

The plan was announced by the state board of education and the University of Kentucky State.

Atty. Gen. A. E. Funk made the announcement after a conference with Dr. H. L. Donavan, president of the university; Gordie Young, assistant state superintendent of public instruction, and M. B. Holifield, assistant attorney general.

Discussing the plan, Funk said:

"We're trying to keep our Day law and still offer equal educational opportunities and facilities. We want to get this set up before we have to answer that suit," he said in reference to a Kentucky teacher's suit against the state for entrance into the university. The suit was filed by Lyman T. Johnson of Louisville.

"What we've done," he continued, "is to work out a plan whereby we can give all the courses of higher learning at Kentucky State which are offered at U. K. If the faculty at Kentucky State is not sufficient, U. K. will provide the instruction."

In Lexington, Dr. Donovan of Kentucky U. said, "This is not a subterfuge. It is designed to provide equal educational opportunities."

Negro College Plan Arouses Discussion Among Readers

To the Editor of The Courier-Journal:

The directors of the Kentucky Negro Education Association wish me to express their agreement with your editorial concerning the proposed plan for giving graduate work to Negroes at Kentucky State College through liaison with the University of Kentucky. A contract between the two schools, putting it into operation, has been approved by the State Board of Education over the dissenting vote of its Negro member, A. E. Meyzeek. Its sponsors claim the action will give Negroes equality of educational opportunity, yet keep the Day Law, which makes mandatory the separation of the races in educational institutions.

The K.N.E.A. does not believe the proposed plan will give equality of educational opportunity. The administration at Kentucky State College is to be commended for the excellent job it has done with the means at its disposal, but has been able barely to attain the minimum requirements as an "A" rated school offering the bachelor's degree. Do those responsible for the State's educational program sincerely believe Kentucky State College, with its woefully inadequate library and laboratory facilities and with its limited classroom space and equipment, can now give masters' and doctors' degrees, even with University of Kentucky support? Will the constant transportation of Negro students backward and forward between Frankfort and Lexington, to do laboratory work in isolation at the University of Kentucky, provide the equality of educational opportunity first class citizenship merits?

Because Negro citizens of Kentucky may not secure graduate instruction at the tax-supported University of Kentucky, the Commonwealth has for several years practiced the expedient of giving financial aid to Negro students doing graduate work at out-of-State institutions. Consequently they have attended the best schools of the country. Does the Kentucky State College-University of Kentucky tie-up mean this aid will be withdrawn, with the result that the level of graduate work made available to them by the State will be lowered? Will the out-of-State aid fund be used in financing the new project? The K.N.E.A. has accepted the idea of out-of-State aid under protest, but objects to its replacement with an inferior offering.

In Kentucky's segregated system of education, educational opportunity does not exist on any level. The great expense of our dual system is a barrier to the best intentions in that direction. Therefore, our organization is supporting the suit filed by a Negro resident of the State to test the constitutionality of the Day Law. We believe its removal is the only way to secure real equalization of educational opportunity, which is delayed by such actions as the Kentucky State College-University of Kentucky setup.

Regarding Civil Rights

Kentuckians must be very proud of themselves. They elect senators who go to political conventions and rave about the equality of man (regardless of color) and at the same time their Negroes are being compromised and railroaded into an education of left-overs.

J. W. HEIMER.

Lexington, Ky.

In our efforts to find the best way to deal with the vexed racial issue, there is now a rare opportunity for the display of intelligence, consideration and social statesmanship. If progress is to be made, there will be demanded mutual understanding on the part of both whites and Negroes—a certain give-and-take attitude, a greater or less yielding on either side. In the first place, the so-called Day Law, prohibiting the education together of whites and Negroes, should be repealed. The matter should be left to future legislatures and to the discretion of the educational authorities of the State on both higher and lower levels. There should be set a definite goal of equal educational facilities and accommodations for Negroes, something for which we must acknowledge our heavy remissness and dereliction.

At the same time, the situation would be greatly bettered if the Negroes would limit their insistence along educational lines rather than demanding that their education must necessarily be in company with that of whites, despite any obligation from a considerable portion of the latter. If complaint is made that this policy involves separation of the races, that would seem better than association forced through legal measures. Voluntary approaches are at once, and in the long run, far better than attempts at legal compulsion.

Nothing is to be gained by ignoring or disregarding the mores of a people; nor can we expect them to be changed overnight. They have to be reckoned with in human society, unseemly and far-fetched though some of them may be. This is a lesson that we have to learn from history. Force (when embodied in the law) cannot always be depended upon to mend matters; it can exacerbate feelings; it can retard healthy growths.

Understanding, patience, forbearance, mutual respect, uncoerced strivings for fair dealings, recognition that we are all brothers under the skin and all members of one great race, faith that matters can and will be bettered with time—these are the things that will set us in the right direction in dealing with this great American problem.

Lexington, Ky. HARRY BEST.

Segregation In Education

Every so often there is a case of a Negro student being prevented from entering the University of Kentucky or another tax-supported educational institution because of antiquated laws based on the psychology of the slave-owning aristocracy of the Old South. Now the situation is reversed. A white student, Miss Betty Marie Ellis, is refused admission to the Kentucky State College at Frankfort, because her skin is a few shades too white. It happened the college was convenient and offered certain work—necessary for her preparation for the career as a missionary—not available elsewhere in the State.

Here is the chief reason Kentuckians are on the average more poorly educated than their fellow Americans who live north of the Ohio River. We cling to an antiquated racist psychology which necessitates a dual educational system with consequent duplication of expense and poorer facilities. It seems that it would be cheaper and saner for us to sincerely practice the brotherhood of man, instead of just giving lip service to it on Sundays.

If there is any white superiority in America, it certainly is not in the South, where both whites and Negroes are segregated out of a chance to acquire an education equal to that available in the non-segregated areas of the nation and world.

Ky. Weighs Plan for Graduate Study

New Project Would Still Separate Races

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Kentucky officials have come up with a new plan for taking care of the educational needs of colored graduate students and yet maintaining its strick segregation pattern.

Under the project, University of Kentucky faculty members would come to Frankfort to teach any subject for which Kentucky State College lacks instructors.

For laboratory work and other needs, the colored students would be permitted at the university at times when white students are not being taught that particular work. This to be in effect only until Kentucky State is provided with the required equipment.

Kentucky's Day Law forbids colored and white persons being taught together in tax-supported schools. Attorney General A. E. Funk explained the new proposal.

Trustees Named Defendants To Teacher's Suit

LEXINGTON, Ky.—(ANP) — A suit was filed in federal district court here early last week by Lyman T. Johnson, teacher in Louisville's Central High school, asking that the race-segregation policy of the University of Kentucky be declared "unconstitutional," that a permanent injunction be given to stop the school from refusing him the right to enroll "solely because of color," and $15,000 damages for "illegal and wrongful acts" by university officials.

Johson was twice refused admission to the school, the first time being last March 15 and the second time, June 19. His refusal, according to Dean Maurice F. Seay, university registrar, was made under the state constitution and the Day law. The former bars Negroes and whites from attending the same tax-supported schools; the latter extends that prohibitions to all schools and provides penalties for violations.

In his suit, Johnson made no mention of the Day law, but applied the U. S. code to test the constitutionality of the policy. His complaining was that he had the necessary academic qualifications but was refused admission "solely on the grounds of race and color."

URGES TRUSTEE ACTION

His first rejection, at the hands of Dean Seay, was appealed to the university trustees and Frank D Peterson, university controler and secretary of the board of trustees.

Johnson pointed out that there was no other public-supported school in Kentucky where he could take courses leading to a degree of doctor of philosophy. He contends that he adn "other Negroes similarly situated suffered an irreparable injury because of the university's arbitrary and illegal refusal."

Named as defendants in the suit are university trustees H. L. Donovan, president; Dr. Seay, and three ex-officio members of the board; Gov. Earle C. Clements, Bowell B. Hodgin, superintendent of public instruction; and Harry F. Walter, commissioner of agriculture.

Representing Jonson are Atty. Thurgood Marshall, NAACP chief counsel, New York; James A. Crumlin, president, Louisville N. A. A. C. P. chapter; Alfred M. Carroll, Louisville, and John W. Rowe.

State Says Negroes Have Equal School Facilities

The Courier-Journal
14e(1)
Thur 8-26-48

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 25 (AP)—Kentucky has provided equal and adequate facilities in higher education for Negroes, the State said today in answer to a suit filed by a Louisville Negro seeking admission to the University of Kentucky.

The answer was filed by the attorney general's office in response to an amended petition of Lyman T. Johnson, who filed the suit to gain admission to the university's graduate school.

Federal Judge H. Church Ford quashed a similar petition of Johnson's August 3 on the ground that the plaintiff's suit had been served improperly. Johnson then filed the amended petition.

Denies They're State Employe

Thur. 8-26-48

In the answer filed today it was denied that three of the defendants named in the petition are officers of the State.

The answer set out that Dr. H. L. Donovan, president of the university; Dr. Louis A. Pardue, dean of the graduate school, and Mr. Maurice F. Seay, university dean and registrar, are employees of the university's board of trustees instead of officers of the State.

Several answers to Johnson's petition stressed that the State Constitution and statutes prevent attendance of white and Negro students in the same schools.

Lists Steps State Took.

Steps also were listed which the State has taken since the United States Supreme Court ruled in an Oklahoma case last March that equal educational facilities must be provided for Negroes in the state.

These steps, it was pointed out, include a contract the State Board of Education has signed with the university board of trustees to furnish the Kentucky State College for Negroes at Frankfort with all necessary libraries, laboratory facilities, and teaching personnel not available at the Negro college. The answer added that Governor Earle C. Clements has set up a $45,000 fund to pay for the program.

Education Board Elevates K.S.C. To U.K. Standard

Teacher Transportation Set As New Plan Passes, 6 to 1; Negro Member Scores Move

By ALLAN M. TROUT
The Courier-Journal Frankfort Bureau.

Frankfort, Ky., July 13.—With its Negro member objecting, the State Board of Education today elevated higher public education for Negroes to theoretical equality with the University of Kentucky.

This is the essence of the plan the board adopted by a vote of 6 to 1:

1. Negro students wanting courses offered by the University of Kentucky, but not offered here by Kentucky State College, will be taught by white instructors who will commute the 26 miles between Lexington and Frankfort.

2. Negro students requiring laboratory and library facilities not offered by their own college will be transported to the university for special periods of work or research.

3. The arrangement covers both the graduate and undergraduate fields. It will be financed the first year by special grants totaling $45,000.

The plan was called a "subterfuge" by A. E. Meyzeek, Louisville, the Negro member.

Held 'Jim Crow' System.'

"It sets up a Jim Crow system of education. It was done for the purpose of discriminating against Negroes in the field of public education. The plan is to protect the Day Law, as the attorney general so frankly told us," Meyzeek said.

The Day Law is the Kentucky statute that forces race segregation in public schools. Meyzeek's legal reference was to Assistant Attorney General M. B. Holifield, who told the board it is his opinion today's plan is legally correct and meets fully all mandates of the Supreme Court in the Oklahoma and Missouri cases.

"The Day Law," Meyzeek continued, "is the most vicious piece of hate legislation ever entered on our statute books. My people are fervently praying it will be repealed. The Day Law robs our children of the educational birthright guaranteed to them by democracy.

'Can't See Equality.'

"My people can't see equality in this plan. To transport professors from Lexington to Frankfort isn't equality, for library facilities can't be brought with them. And the plan to transport one or two Negro students to the university for private work in laboratory or library is an insult to their manhood and womanhood. They will be carefully shut off from everybody else after they get there.

"I am a graduate of Indiana University with A.B. and M.A. degrees. At Indiana, and at Illinois across the way, thousands of Negro students are on the campus daily, without ripple or incident. Are they more civilized than we are down here? A Negro student or two on the campus at the university would never be noticed," Meyzeek said.

Commended for Stand.

The Negro's statement of protest to his fellow board members was received with courteous attention, and he was commended for taking so forthright a stand. But it was consensus of the other members that the General Assembly, not the board, is responsible for ultimate fate of the Day Law.

After the meeting, Meyzeek said he spoke without personal rancor and in full appreciation of what he deems to be the sincerity of Governor Earle C. Clements in trying to correct a bad situation.

Affirmative Votes Told.

"Manhood impelled me," he said, "to enjoy my democratic freedom of speech."

The State Board of Education is the governing body of Kentucky State College. The six casting affirmative votes to Meyzeek's lone negative were Dr. C. B. Stacy, Pineville; Mrs. J. K. Grannis, Flemingsburg; Charles J. Haydon, Springfield; John M. Hunnicutt, Covington; Rumsey B. Taylor, Princeton, and Virgil Picklesimer, Whitesburg.

Dr. R. B. Atwood, president of Kentucky State College, said the plan can hardly become effective until opening of the September term.

"The summer term ends July 23," he said, "and I don't believe we could break into it at so late a date.' '

"This was not my idea," Dr. Atwood continued, "but my board has approved it, and I am going to try to make it work."

The plan presents many problems that will have to be adjusted in the light of experience, Dr. Atwood said, because no other state with segregated education has gone so far as the plan adopted today.

Here are some of the problems Dr. Atwood said would have to be met if the plan is to meet the high hopes set upon it:

1. The plant will have to be expanded at Kentucky State College. It is crowded now, and increased enrollment is bound to be an immediate result of the new plan. In this connection, Dr. Atwood has increased from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 his request to the building commission.

2. Opening the graduate field at Kentucky State College presents special difficulties. For example, the plan sets aside $20,000 to buy library books useful in graduate work, but there is no library space to accommodate them. Graduate work requires seminar rooms, and there are none. Graduate work requires more classrooms, and more are needed even for undergraduate work.

Says Plan Can Work.

"While the plan is cumbersome," Dr. Atwood said, "it can be made to work if given adequate financial support. Success of the program will be more nearly assured as adequate facilities and competent personnel are placed at Frankfort, where the students are, instead of 26 miles away."

Some details of the plan are:

1. On paper, at least, it sets up at Kentucky State College a Graduate School offering the same instruction given in the Graduate School at the university.

2. Undergraduate equality at Kentucky State College is specifically deemed to include both professional and academic courses.

3. The expressed intention of the plan is that co-operation between the two institutions is temporary, in that participation by the university will decrease as equal facilities at the college increase.

Fees Go to K.S.C.

4. Of the $45,000 extra money available for the first year, $25,000 will come from the Governor's emergency fund. Source of the other $20,000 is not specified, but presumably it would come from the building commission, inasmuch as it is for capital outlay in library expansion.

5. The university will be paid at the rate of $60 a semester hour taught at the college, plus commuting expenses of instructors.

6. Students will pay their fees to the college, notwithstanding work actually done at the university.

7. The university reserves the right to specify hours that Negro students can use the laboratory or library.

8. Certificates or diplomas earned under the plan shall be signed jointly by the presidents of both institutions, but academic credits shall be recorded at the college only.

Paid Transportation.

9. Students using facilities at the university will be transported to and from Lexington at no expense to themselves.

10. The plan is embodied in detail in a legal contract between the State Board of Education and the board of trustees of the university. The contract is postdated July 16, 1948.

The plan represents several weeks of preparation by Attorney General A. E. Funk and his staff and Dr. H. L. Donovan, president of the university, and his staff.

The urgency was supplied by the suit in Federal Court, filed by Lyman T. Johnson, Louisville Negro, for admission to the university. The State had been anxious to defend the suit by pleading equality of education as an accomplished fact, rather than as an obscure plan for the future.

Impossible Equality In Our Schools

Let me congratulate the State Board of Education for their shrewdness and ability in maneuvering this most complicated educational situation around in order to abide by this most defective Day Law. Again let me congratulate A.E. Meyzeek for his most worthy, loyal and straightforward stand against this so-called equal educational system.

I am a student at Kentucky State College and I wish to say that this system is impractical. As stated in a recent article, this system is equal theoretically, but theory isn't practice, and many obstacles will stand in the way of putting it into practice. My intention is to enroll in the new system, hoping that it will help prove its many disadvantages and the faculty plan that is established. If U. K. is going to reserve the right to specify the time in which a Negro student is to use their facilities, it will cause many inconveniences and conflicts with the schedules of this school. A student will lose two hours a day just through transportation. Students in the field of exact sciences, who have to be in and out of the laboratory continually to keep up with an experiment, will run into serious difficulties. Maybe they are going to transport the students by plane, or the student will have a television set installed in his room at K. S. C. and carry on experiments at U. K. by mechanical means.

It is quite evident that this plan is pure subterfuge in order to evade a recent stand Lyman Johnson of Louisville took against the previous setup. May there be many more who will have the courage to challenge this disgraceful system! The State of Kentucky preaches equality in conventions, but doesn't practice it at home. Wake up, Kentucky! I am personally offering each and every one a challenge to fight this situation. Let's get on the ball, Kentucky.

Johnson May Be Admitted to U. of Ky. by Default

Teacher's Suit in 20-Day Legal Limit

University Failed to Answer Louisville

LEXINGTON, Ky. (ANP) — Lyman T. Johnson, Louisville teacher seeking entrance into the University of Kentucky through the courts, said that his attorneys will seek a default judgment.

His attorney, James A. Crumlin, said that the default judgment will be sought because the university has failed to answer within 20 days called for by law.

Records in the U.S. District court clerk's office prove that the summons was served in the school on June 21.

Asks Dropping of Bars

Johnson is suing trustees and officials of the university. He is asking that the court issue a permanent injunction to prevent the school from not admitting him, solely "because of color."

The plaintiff has asked the court to declare the school's segregation policy "unconstitutional and violative of the 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution."

Damages of $15,000 are also being asked.

"Equal" Education Mapped

In the meantime, at Frankfort, Asst. Atty. Gen. M. B. Hollifield had nothing to say except that he was coming to Lexington to investigate the case.

At the same time, the State has come up with its "visiting professors and students" plan to maintain a segregated school system and provide "equal" educational facilities.

Under this visitors scheme, university professors will travel to the jim-crow Kentucky State campus to teach colored students subjects taught at the university and not there, and students will drop in on the university campus for laboratory and library work not available at the colored school.

School Plan For Negroes Is Drafted

State to Offer All U.K. Courses At Frankfort

By HUGH MORRIS

The Courier-Journal Frankfort Bureau.

Frankfort, Ky., July 6.—Kentucky State College for Negroes here will provide private instruction this fall in all courses offered by the University of Kentucky.

Attorney General A. E. Funk said today the plan awaits only final contract negotiations between the State Board of Education and the U. K. board of trustees. The State Board of Education is the governing board of the Negro college.

Funk's announcement followed a conference with Dr. H. L. Donovan, president of the University of Kentucky; Gordie Young, assistant State superintendent of public instruction, and M. B. Holifield, assistant attorney general.

Joint Diplomas Planned.

If a Negro enrolls for a course not offered by Kentucky State College, but included in U. K.'s crriculum, Funk said the plan would work like this:

1. The Negro student would be taught at K.S.C. by a U.K. instructor who would travel to Frankfort to teach his classes.

2. If laboratory work is required and no facilities are available at K.S.C., the Negro student would be transported to U.K. for laboratory study during special hours.

3. Graduating Negroes would receive a joint U.K.-K.S.C. diploma, signed by both Donovan and Dr. R. B. Atwood, president of the Negro college.

All courses offered at U.K., both graduate and undergraduate, which are not offered at K.S.C., would be made available to Negro students at K.S.C., Funk explained.

Effort to Keep Day Law.

Funk said the plan was an effort to reconcile Kentucky's Day Law with recent United States Supreme Court decisions requiring equal educational facilities for Negroes and whites. The Day Law prohibits joint schooling of whites and Negroes in Kentucky.

"We're trying to keep our Day Law and still offer equal educational opportunities and facilities," Funk explained. He said the plan is the State's answer to a suit filed in Federal District Court at Lexington by Lyman T. Johnson, Negro high-school teacher at Louisville, demanding admission to U.K. "We want to get this set up before we have to answer that suit," he added.

"What we've done is to work out a plan whereby we can give all the courses of higher learning at Kentucky State which are offered at U.K.," Funk continued. "If the faculty at Kentucky State is not sufficient, U.K. will provide the instruction."

Funk said Dr. Donovan, Dr. Atwood, and Governor Earle C. Clements were familiar with the plan and had indicated approval of it. He estimated it might cost $25,000 the first year to put it in operation. This sum would come from the Governor's emergency fund, he added.

The first step, Funk said, is for the State Board of Education to negotiate a contract with the U.K. board of trustees for instruction in courses not already offered at K.S.C.

"We have asked the State board to meet next Tuesday on the matter," he added.

Dr. Donovan, at Lexington, confirmed details of the plan as outlined by Funk. The U.K. president added:

"This is not a subterfuge. It is designed to provide equal educational opportunities."

A Roundabout Plan Strains At Equality

THE plan to offer Kentucky Negro students the same college courses that are open to white students falls into the familiar process of whipping the devil around a stump. There is the usual straining to adapt laws and customs to the facts of progress and need. There is the refusal to alter attitudes even while, in effect, they are being altered and while circumstances, at hand or lying clearly ahead, say they will have to be altered. The Day Law against racial contact in Kentucky schools is upheld, while a way is found to get around the Day Law.

Apart from its temporizing, the plan is ingenious, even though cumbersome. It will certainly expand the opportunities for education at Kentucky State College, the institution for Negroes at Frankfort. Though we can't be too sure, it may even serve as an answer to the U. S. Supreme Court's ruling that a State must give equal facilities for the schooling of both races.

Under the plan as announced by Attorney General Funk, a Negro student who wants a course not to be had at K.S.C. but available at the University of Kentucky, would be taught by an instructor from Lexington who would travel the 30 miles or so to Frankfort and back. Presumably this would be done for only one student if necessary. If laboratory work is required, and there are no facilities at K.S.C., the Negro student would be transported to Lexington for laboratory work at the University of Kentucky at special hours.

How workable this will turn out to be in the long run is a great question. It is plain that the device is to meet an emergency, created by the Supreme Court decision, or an emergency that may be foreseen in broader interpretations of the decision. In theory it apparently is to last until the curriculum and equipment at Kentucky State College are built up to give Negro students all the courses they want. But this is pure theory, as the cost—and waste—of keeping up duplicated and parallel courses in two institutions is plain to see.

The problem may break down under its own weight. That is to say, practical considerations probably will bring about more action like that by the legislature in its recent session. Then the Day Law (Section 158.020, KRS) was amended to permit instruction for Negroes in "nursing, medicine, surgery or other related courses of graduate grade, or on other professional levels," in Kentucky hospitals, if their boards agree. Here was a step taken in the light of reality.

The new arrangement between K.S.C. and the State university is not quite so clear. In at least one detail it looks away from the segregation law which says: "No colored person shall attend any college, school or institution where white persons are received as pupils or receive instruction." Common use of laboratories, even at different hours, might be seen as incompatible with this. But then, there are a lot of incompatibilities between the 40-year-old Day Law and the new interpretations of equal opportunity. "Equality of education" remains inequality.

Jim Crow To Be Maintained Under New Law

University Head Says System Not Subterfuge

FRANKFORT, Ky.—(ANP)—Kentucky educators came up with a new scheme last week designed to get around the U. S. Supreme court decisions that states must provide equal educational facilities for all their citizens.

Under the Kentucky plan segregation will be maintained, and professors at the University of Kentucky will act as "tutors" to Negro students who desire graduate courses or subjects not taught at the jimcrow Kentucky State College.

Colored students will use University of Kentucky laboratories at special times of the day so that they will not come in contact with the white students. Students graduating under this system will receive a joint U. K. K. S. C. degree signed by both college presidents.

REMAIN AT SCHOOL

Negro students will remain at Kentucky State while university instructors will travel to the colored campus to teach them.

The plan was announced by the state board of education and the University of Kentucky State.

Atty. Gen. A. E. Funk made the announcement after a conference with Dr. H. L. Donavan, president of the university; Gordie Young, assistant state superintendent of public instruction, and M. B. Holifield, assistant attorney general.

Discussing the plan, Funk said:

"We're trying to keep our Day law and still offer equal educational opportunities and facilities. We want to get this set up before we have to answer that suit," he said in reference to a Kenutucky teacher's suit against the state for entrance into the university. The suit was filed by Lyman T. Johnson of Louisville.

"What we've done," he continued, "is to work out a plan whereby we can give all the courses of higher learning at Kentucky State which are offered at U. K. If the faculty at Kentucky State is not sufficient, U. K. will provide the instruction."

In Lexington, Dr. Donovan of Kentucky U. said, "This is not a subterfuge. It is designed to provide equal educational opportunities."

Teacher Sues To Enter University Of Kentucky

By Associated Negro Press

LEXINGTON, Ky.—A suit was filed in federal district court here early last week by Lyman T. Johnson, teacher in Louisville's Central High School, asking that the race-segregation policy of the University of Kentucky be declared "unconstitutional", that a permanent injunction be given to stop the school from refusing him the right to enroll "solely because of color," and $15,000 damages for "illegal and wrongful acts" by university officials.

Johnson was twice refused admission to the school, for the first time last March 15 and the second time, June 19. His refusal, according to Dean Maurice F. Seay, university registrar, was made under the state constitution and the Day law. The former bars Negroes and whites from attending the same tax-supported schools; the latter extends that prohibition to all schools and provides penalties for violations.

IGNORES DAY LAW

In his suit, Johnson made no mention of the Day law, but applied the U. S. code to test the constitutionality of the policy. His complaint was that he had the necessary academic qualifications but was refused admission "solely on the grounds of race and color."

His first rejection, at the hands of Dean Seay, was appealed to the university trustees and Frank D. Peterson, university controller and secretary of the board of trustees.

NO OTHER SCHOOL

Johnson pointed out that there was no other public-supported school in Kentucky where he could take courses leading to a degree of doctor of philosophy. He contends that he and "other Negroes similarly situated suffered an irreparable injury because of the university's arbitrary and illegal refusal."

Named as defendants in the suit are university trustees H. L. Donovan, president; Dr. Seay and three ex-officio members of the board: Gov. Earle C. Clements, Boswell B. Hodgin, superintendent of public instruction; and Harry F. Walters, commissioner of agriculture.

Representing Johnson are Atty. Thurgood Marshall, NAACP chief counsel, New York; James A. Crumlin, president, Louisville NAACP chapter; Alfred M. Carroll, Louisville, and John W. Rowe.

Holifield Defends Negro School Plan

U. of K. Co-operates to Equalize College Opportunities, He Reports

By the Associated Press.

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 8.—Kentucky's plan to keep Negroes out of the University of Kentucky and still provide them with the college opportunities available to whites was defended today by Assistant Attorney General M. B. Holifield.

The plan sets up certain University of Kentucky courses in Kentucky State College for Negroes here. Before this year, Negroes seeking graduate and professional training not available at their college were forced to get this work in out-of-state institutions. Kentucky subsidized these students at $350 a year until this year, when the aid was raised to $500.

Fought By U. K. Staff.

Dr. R. B. Atwood, president of the Negro college, said three Negroes have availed themselves of the new set-up. One is studying law. Six or seven U. K. professors come here to instruct him. The law books he needs are brought to him from U. K., Dr. Atwood said.

Two Negroes are taking graduate work in physical education. Four teachers from U. K. are serving these students, the president said.

The State's Constitution and laws prohibit whites and Negroes attending the same schools.

In a long letter to William H. Perry, Jr., Louisville, secretary-treasurer of the Kentucky Negro Education Association, Holifield said granting out-of-state aid to Negroes amounted to "discrimination" against white students.

Service Will Continue.

Whites never have had the privilege of being subsidized by Kentucky for attending schools outside the Commonwealth, he said.

This was one of the factors that led to the $45,000 contract for setting up the equalization plan, he said. At the graduate level, Negroes and whites now have equal opportunities in Kentucky, he said, continuing:

"This administration intends to continue that type of service to Negro pupils of Kentucky until educational services and facilities at the State College for Negroes can be enlarged and colored teachers procured to give the colored pupils of Kentucky educational services and facilities equal to those that are furnished by any educational institution in the nation."

Started By Clements.

Holifield said the Court of Appeals has ruled that teachers at U. K. are not bound to the State's $5,000-a-year salary limit. This ruling also is applicable to teachers at the State College for Negroes, he said.

The Administration of Governor Earle Clements is the first to try to provide equal opportunities for Negroes and whites in college, he said.

"This Administration felt that these facilities and services should be furnished to the Negro pupils inside the state and thus build up and strengthen educational institutions that serve either the white or colored pupils of the state."

Might Lose Credits.'

Perry asked: If Negro opportunities were equal to those of whites, why does the state continue to grant out-of-state aid?

Holifield replied that otherwise Negroes who have started their work outside of Kentucky might lose credits gained there if they returned to Kentucky. Transferring graduate credits is more difficult than transferring undergraduate credits.

Out-of-state aid is continued because that is "the only way justice can be rendered these pupils."

To get out-of-state aid, Negroes this year had to sign a waiver which stated Kentucky offered them the courses they wanted. This showed they "voluntarily" wanted to go out of the state, Holifield said, "and not because we are not furnishing them equal educational services with white pupils within the boundary of our state."

White Teacher Says Proposal Not Illegal

Views On Subject Revealed In Letter Sent To Newspaper

NEW YORK—(ANP) —In a letter to the New York Times published last week, Harry Best, professor of sociology at the University of Kentucky, advocated that Negroes be admitted to the university.

His recommendation was based on the fact that his proposal did not violate the constitution and laws of the state and would not conflict with possible plans for regional schools in southern states.

He asked for the repeal of the Kentucky Day laws which do not allow Negroes and whites to attend the same schools.

In this line, Best wrote:

NO WORSE OFF

"I have taught Negroes; I have sat next to them in the classroom; I have eaten meals beside them. I know that I was no worse off in consequence; I only hope that they were not.

"This past spring at a meeting of the University of Kentucky chapter of the American Association of University Professors I proposed that it be the sense of that body that Negroes be accepted for graduate work in this institution.

"This was with the understanding that the proposal was not in conflict with the constitution or laws of the state. It was also with the understanding that it would not stand in the way of participation by the state in a joint institution of southern states for the higher education of Negroes, if that arrangement should appear to be most desirable."

VOLUNTARY BASIS

Speaking of Negro rights and the fight for equal educational opportunities, he recommended that they be given their rights, but all these things should come about on a voluntary basis. He asked Negroes not to be so belligerent in their demands.

Along the school line he asked that they accept segregation if necessary rather than go where the whites do not want them.

Voluntary action by both whites and colored should be the rule to make the United States the ideal democracy we desire, he concluded.

Kentucky College Requests Right to Admit 3 Africans

FRANKFORT, Ky. — (ANP) —Officials of Centre College at Danville has asked the State's Attorney General for a ruling on whether the Day law prohibits the institution, organized in 1819, from admitting three students in Nigeria, West Africa, who have applied for admission.

The Nigerians, two of whom want to take business courses, the other, pre-medical courses, have passed their entrance examinations to enter Cambridge University in England, but the war interrupted their plans. They decided to study in the United States after talking with Americans who were there.

The Day law makes it illegal for colored and white students to attend school together in Kentucky, but Dean Davis, who is ready to admit the Nigerians, points out that students are now enrolled from Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Cuba. He called Centre College a "cosmopolitan" school.

L. T. Johnson Is On Staff At Central

The Courier-Journal

Louisville, Ky.

The University of Kentucky will reject the application of Lyman T. Johnson, Negro teacher at Central High School here, for enrollment at the university, Dr. Maurice F. Seay, registrar, said yesterday.

Johnson said he had applied for enrollment at the summer session of U.K.

"Our policy has been pretty well defined," Dr. Seay said. "We are prohibited both by State law and the State Constitution from accepting the registration of a Negro."

If Johnson presses his application through the courts, the board of trustees will determine what course the university should follow, Dr. Seay added.

Has No Comment.

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

"Until I have been informed officially that I have been rejected, I would rather not comment," Johnson said when apprised of Dr. Seay's statement. "I wouldn't want to start something when perhaps there won't be any need of a fight." 3-25-48

James A. Crumlin, president of the Louisville branch, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which is interested in the outcome of Johnson's application, joined Johnson in refusing to discuss further steps "until we have been notified the application is rejected."

Earlier Crumlin said: "We believe the University of Kentucky will accept Mr. Johnson. We look at this as an opportunity for our State university to take this forward step without the fight that has blotted the records of other universities in the South."

Believed to Be First.

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

Johnson is believed to be the first Negro to seek admission to the university since the recent Supreme Court decision which ruled that the Oklahoma State University Law School must admit a Negro girl within three days or provide equal facilities for her.

Johnson, who lives at 2627 W. Madison, has taught history and civics at Central High School for the past 14 years. He is treasurer of the A.F.L.-Louisville Federation of Teachers. He received his A. B. degree from Virginia Union University, Richmond, Va., and took his master's degree at the University of Michigan. He wants to work toward his doctorate in history and political science at U. Negro to Appeal Ruling Barring Him From U. K.

Louisville, Ky. Sat. 3-27-48

An appeal to the board of regents of the University of Kentucky will be his next step toward seeking admission to the university, Lyman T. Johnson, 2627 W. Madison, said yesterday. 14e(1) Discr.

Johnson, a teacher at Central High School who earlier this week applied for admission to the summer school at the university, said he had received official notification that his application had been rejected. His admission was denied on the ground that admitting a Negro to the university was a violation of Kentucky laws and the State Constitution.

"I'm not taking this rejection as final," Johnson said. "Before I take further steps I'll appeal to the board of regents in the hope it will want to see fairness and justice done. I don't want to spend any money for legal action if I can help it—and I would like to save the State some money for such expenses." Sat. 3-27-48

Discrimination By Law.

The Courier-Journal 14e(1) Discr.
Louisville, Ky.

How long can men of good will endure the spectacle of a large segment of our citizenry being made the victim of a discrimination fostered by law? There comes now one Lyman Johnson who seeks to enter the University of Kentucky Graduate School. By an accident of nature, Mr. Johnson's pigment is not the same as that of those who framed our Constitution and who voted aye for the Day law. Accordingly, the facilities of an institution whose support is derived from Commonwealth funds is denied a man whose qualifications to pursue higher study are not contested. It must be noted, and this point is most important, that such funds are not exclusively derived from taxes levied only on white taxpayers. The tax laws mention no race, color, or creed. Can this peculiar form of justice be classified as the product of Kentucky logic that searches no further than the rules of pragmatism and ignores what is essentially right? For is it to be assumed that equal protection under the law is extended to those who are denied equal privilege of the law? Is this concept of justice in harmony with the basic thought expressed in the taxation-without-representative theory of Patrick Henry?

Louisville Ky

The fact that such injustices were ratified a few dark aeons of reasoning ago in Kentucky history is not sufficient reason for us to ignore those errors and realities now. The fact that a white majority can legislate such social restrictions does not impair or invalidate the principles and obligations of the moral code with which such legislation is wholly at variance. A revision must be made of our approach to this most serious and vital problem. A united nation means just that, and what better material do divisionists need than that supplied them by the law itself? Moscow papers, please do not copy!

President of Kentucky State College Cites 'Day Law' In Rejecting Lexington Application

The Courier-Journal Frankfort Bureau.

Frankfort, Ky., June 10.—The application of a white girl for admission to Kentucky State College for Negroes here has been denied, Dr. R. B. Atwood, college president, disclosed today. Fri 6 -to allow it. T-M. 6-11-48

The girl is Miss Betty Marie Ellis, 23, a student of religious education at the College of the Bible in Lexington. She also has been director of religious education in the First Christian Church at Shelbyville for the last six months.

In a letter to Dr. Atwood, Miss Ellis asked to be admitted to the Negro college for the regular six-week summer term, which begins next Monday.

Day Law Is Cited.

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

Dr. Atwood rejected her application. He explained that Kentucky's "Day Law" prohibits operation of any school where both whites and Negroes are received as pupils.

The Day Law has been upheld by the Kentucky Court of Appeals and the United States Supreme Court, Dr. Atwood said. It was modified by the 1948 Legislature to permit graduate students of both races to study nursing and medicine at Kentucky hospitals if their governing boards voted Miss Ellis asked for instruction in "rural education, creative writing or elementary piano" at the Negro college.

"I am very sorry that the answer had to be 'no,'" Miss Ellis wrote Dr. Atwood in reply.

Tells 'Firm Opinion.'

"Had I the financial and legal backing, I would like very much to contest the law as it stands," Miss Ellis declared. She said she was of "the firm opinion" that the Day Law was not in accord with democratic principles of the U. S. Constitution "nor with the personal convictions of the forward-looking citizens of Kentucky." Fri. 6-11-48

She said she would have to content herself with protesting to Governor Earle Clements, Boswell B. Hodgkin, superintendent of public instruction, and Dr. Atwood.

In "protest" letters to the Governor and Hodgkin, Miss Ellis wrote:

Tells Human Bonds.

"I believe that mankind is bound together by bonds so strong that hard as we may try, we can never break them. These bonds might be—should be—bonds of love. I am afraid that often they are not.

"When one portion of the human family is denied fellowship with another portion, tensions grow up, fears develop, wars come. Over and over again we have seen it happen—that un-Christian, undemocratic cycle. We hate it with our innermost beings, yet we foster it here in our own State of Kentucky.

"People are people, no matter what color their skin. They love alike, they hate alike, they learn alike—they are alike.

Poses Question.

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

"Governor, how would you like to be a Negro? You wouldn't, would you? You would never have become Governor. More than that, you would probably never have had the chance to feel within yourself that you were worth. You would never have had the chance to make the friends you wanted, to eat in the restaurants that were most desirable, to live in the nicer part of town. No, you wouldn't like it.

"For a time, I wondered if I could 'take it' if I were a Negro. Then, I decided that would be much easier than 'taking it' as a white, if being a white meant that I was going along with all things

Ellis left the impression she is an earnest young woman who not only is rankled by social injustice, but has the courage to try to do something about it. There was no evidence she is "a crackpot."

The interview took place at Hamilton Hall, the historic old dormitory for girls at Lexington's College of the Bible. Miss Ellis is a graduate student there, working toward the degree of master in religious education.

She is a registered Republican.

Plans Mission Work.

"My application for admission to Kentucky State was sincere. I wanted to attend and would still like to. Here are my brothers. I cannot associate. Here are my brothers who have been denied the rights of citizenship from the day of birth, and yet have remained humble and good. I have much to learn from them—and hope that I would have something to give them in return." 6-11-48

Girl Interviewed.

An hour's interview with Miss Ellis left the impression she is an earnest young woman who not only is rankled by social injustice, but has the courage to try to do something about it. There was no evidence she is "a crackpot."

The interview took place at Hamilton Hall, the historic old dormitory for girls at Lexington's College of the Bible. Miss Ellis is a graduate student there, working toward the degree of master in religious education.

She is a registered Republican.

Her church is the Disciples of Christ, and she belongs to the Wider Quaker Fellowship. This, Miss Ellis explained, is an organization of other creed members who are sympathetic with Quaker ideals.

Miss Ellis said she applied to Kentucky State College with only two thoughts in mind. First, the college is convenient to her work at Shelbyville. Second, Kentucky State had the courses she wanted.

"It never occurred to me a furor would be raised," she said. "I had no idea there would be any publicity, or even any notice taken. I have gone to school with Negroes all my life. To me, taking a summer course at Kentucky State would have been nothing out of the ordinary."

Native of Indiana.

Miss Ellis is a native of Peru, Ind., where white and Negro children attend the same public schools. She took her B.S. degree at Manchester College, North Manchester, Ind., where Negroes are admitted on the same basis as white students. Several Negro girls lived in her dormitory at Manchester, Miss Ellis said, and she knew them as friends, not as Negroes.

It was not until her senior year at college, Miss Ellis said, that her eyes were opened to the harsh fact the great majority of her race look upon the black race as Negroes, rather than as individuals.

Has Taught School.

Graduating in 1946, Miss Ellis went to Roswell, N. M., to teach the first grade in public school. And it was there, Miss Ellis said, she learned that civil rights mean one thing for the white race, and another thing for the colored races.

"In my classroom," she said, "I had a perfect demonstration of triracial relations, because out there the Mexicans and Negroes both go to school with the whites. I saw the Mexicans and Negroes intolerant of each other, and the white children intolerant of both."

Miss Ellis said her experience here in Kentucky has not interfered thus far with her associates in the dormitory, campus and classrooms.

In Favor of Action.

"Looking back," she was asked, "would you have applied had you you known at the time events would take the course they have?"

"Oh, yes," she replied quicly. "It's one thing to talk about racial friendliness, but it's another thing to do something about it. I think it would be fine if more and more white people demonstrated they are willing to do something. The action we see is by Negroes: It would do them, and us, too, a lot of good if some of the action came from our side."

Negro Appeals To Court In Fight To Enter U. of K.

Suit Asks That Color Bar Be Held Unconstitutional; $15,000 Damages Are Sought

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Ky., June 21.—Lyman T. Johnson, teacher in a Negro high school at Louisville, asked Federal District Court today to help him gain admission to the University of Kentucky Graduate School.

He filed suit asking:

1. The university's race-segregation policy be declared "unconstitutional and violative of the 14th Amendment of the Federal Constitution.

2. A permanent injunction forbidding the university from refusing him the right to enroll "solely because of color."

Asks $15,000 Damages.

3. $15,000 damages for alleged "illegal and wrongful acts" by university officials.

Johnson twice was refused admission. The first time was last March 15, the second last Saturday.

Dean Maurice F. Seay, university registrar, cited the State Constitution and the Day law in denying enrollment privileges. The former bars Negroes and whites from attending the same tax-supported school; the latter extends that prohibition to all schools and provides penalties for violations.

Johnson's suit made no mention of the Day Law. It was filed under a section of the United States Code to test the constitutionality of the policy.

The petition set forth that Johnson had the necessary academic qualifications, but was refused admission ". . . solely on the grounds of race and color. . ."

Appealed First Rejection.

Johnson appealed his first rejection to the university's board of trustees and Frank D. Peterson, university controller and secretary of the board of trustees, said the matter is under consideration. The board will meet next Friday, the day after final registration for the summer term is permitted.

The Negro teacher at Central High School said there was no other public-supported school in Kentucky where he could take courses leading to a degree of doctor of philosophy.

The suit said Johnson and "other Negroes similarly situated" suffered "an irreparable injury" because of the university's "arbitrary and illegal refusal . . ."

Defendants named were university trustees, President H. L. Donovan, Peterson, Dr. Seay, and three ex-officio members of the board, Governor Earle C. Clements, Boswell B. Hodgkin, superintendent of public instruction, and Harry F. Walters, commissioner of agriculture.

Late Dean a 'Defendant.'

The late Dr. W. D. Funkhouser, dean of the Graduate School at the time of his death, was referred to as a "defendant" several times in the body of the petition. He also had been named in the suit, but his name was inked out at the beginning and Peterson's name substituted. This indicated the suit might have been prepared some time ago.

Johnson's counsel includes James A. Crumlin, president of the Louisville chapter of the National Society for the Advancement of Colored People; Alfred M. Carroll, Louisville; Thurgood Marshall, New York, and John W. Rowe, Lexington.

Negro Will Seek U.K. Default Ruling

Johnson Counsel Says School Failed To File Reply In Allotted 20 Days

Lexington, Ky., July 14 (AP)—Counsel for Lyman T. Johnson, Louisville Negro schoolteacher who petitioned Federal Court for the right to enroll in the University of Kentucky Graduate School, said today they would seek a default judgment tomorrow.

James A. Crumlin, one of Johnson's attorneys, said he would base his request on grounds the university failed to file its answer within the 20 days allotted by law.

Records at the U. S. District Court clerk's office here showed the summons was served on attorneys for the school on June 21.

At Frankfort, Assistant Attorney General M. B. Mollifield said he planned to come to Lexington tomorrow to investigate the status of the case. He declined further comment.

Attorney General A. E. Funk, attorney for the university trustees, is in Philadelphia to attend the Democratic National Convention.

Asks $15,000 Damages.

Johnson attempted to enroll at the summer term of the university.

Dean Maurice F. Seay refused him admission, saying his action was based "upon a State constitutional provision and a State law known as the Day Law."

The Kentucky Constitution prohibits white and Negro students from attending the same tax-supported schools. The Day Law extends that prohibition to all schools in the State and sets up penalties for violators.

Johnson then filed suit against the trustees and some of the university officials.

He asked the court to declare the school's race-segregation policy "unconstitutional and violative of the 14th Amendment of the United States Constitution."

He also asked $15,000 in damages and a permanent injunction to forbid the school from refusing to admit him "solely because of color."

Calls Plan Unacceptable.

Meantime, the State has announced a plan to offer instruction in courses not available to Negroes at Kentucky State College, Frankfort.

This plan would include sending instructors from the university here to Frankfort to teach certain courses and permitting Negro students to use laboratories at the university at times when they are not in use.

Crumlin, president of the Louisville chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said this plan "is not acceptable." He said his client would carry on his court fight against the school.

Johnson has taught at Louisville Central (Negro) High School for 14 years. He is a native of Columbia, Tenn. He tried once previously to enroll in the university and was refused.

The Day Law and Education

At a recent regional meeting of the National Education Association in Cleveland, a County superintendent from the mountains of Kentucky told a story of the backwardness of some of the rural schools in her county, and then stated that the conditions were typical of other counties in the State. A few days after this revelation, the Attorney General announced that a plan had been worked out whereby the Day Law could be maintained and at the same time furnish equal opportunities in education to Negroes. No money can be found to help rural schools, but the Governor appropriates $25,000 from his fund to further the unequal opportunities in education at Kentucky State College.

It is interesting to note the part Kentuckians have played in the fight to make democracy a reality. (1) Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation. The United States is a better place to live; (2) Commissioner Chandler refused to keep the doors of organized baseball closed to Negroes; (3) Chief Justice Vinson and Associate Justice Stanley Reed supported the majority opinion in the now famous Oklahoma case; (4) Adolph Rupp, an adopted Kentuckian, reasoned that if Don Barksdale was good enough to be chosen for the Olympic basketball

Picketed Md. U. School to Run For 2 Negroes

Baltimore, June 24 (AP) — The University of Maryland plans to continue a special summer course in Baltimore for Negro teachers despite the fact that picketing has driven off most of the students.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has been picketing the sessions, being held at a Baltimore high school, on the ground the course furthers racial segregation.

Only two Negro teachers registered. But Dr. Harold Benjamin, dean of the College of Education, said the two would receive instruction. He had expected 50 to 60.

He asked that the university be given a "sporting chance for at least one year" to operate a teacher education program for Negroes.

Dr. Benjamin said the course was established with a tentative staff of 14 instructors "equal to the best at College Park.

U.S. Court to Hear Md. Art Institute Bias Case Jan. 8

BALTIMORE

Further hearing in the case challenging the right of the Maryland Institute of Art to receive city support while limiting its student body to white persons only is scheduled for the U.S. District Court on Jan. 8.

When the case was first argued in September, the plaintiffs asked that city funds be withheld from the Institute or that the school be directed to admit colored students. Judge W. Calvin Chesnut heard the case.

Since the lowering of the color annual allotment in city funds for the Art Center since money was already being given to the Institute.

The request met heavy opposition from members of the City Council who questioned the "liberality" of the sponsor and the Board of Estimates did not include the bill in the municipal budget which it sent to the Council.

Mr. Norris is being represented by Fred S. Weisgal and Harry O. Levin, with NAACP attorneys, Charles H. Houston and W. A. C. Hughes Jr., serving as consultants.

Has AFRO Support

The suit is being financed with part of the $2,000 fund given by the AFRO to the NAACP for legal action in cases in which color barriers are held against Baltimore citizens.

Denied Admission

The case was filed on behalf of Leon A. Norris, 32, war veteran and talented artist, who was denied admission to the institution. Contending that he was barred "solely because of race and color," his attorneys hold that while the school is receiving municipal support, the city is denying Mr. Norris equal protection of the law as a taxpayer.

Receives City Funds

Since 1887, the Institute has received an annual allotment from the city. In 1947, the amount was $26,000.

In return for this money, each City Councilman is allowed to appoint one pupil a year to free scholarship at the Institute.

Four colored students have attended the Institute under this arrangement, but in 1895, the school adopted a resolution to limit its student body to white only. No colored students have attended since.

During the hearing, it was brought out that the last contract between the city and the school expired in 1935, but the Institute has continued to receive its annual grant nevertheless.

The city provides no other such facilities for colored art students. Many are attending the Baltimore Art Center, operated by the Baltimore Interracial Fellowship at 21 W. Preston St., which is inferior in space and equipment to the Institute.

While Norris's case was pending, his attorney asked the Board of Estimates to approve a $5,000

Regents Hear Plea Against Segregation

Baltimore, Oct. 22 (AP).—Representatives of a dozen organizations argued before the University of Maryland board of regents today that setting up special graduate schools for Negroes does not mean equality of opportunity for an education.

They insisted that Negroes should be admitted to the university's professional schools and colleges.

"There can be no equality where there is segregation," said Franklin H. Williams, special counsel for the National Asociation for the Advancement of Colored People.

Senator Tydings set up the point. What would happen, he asked, if the university duplicated its schools brick by brick for Negro students. Would they be satisfied?

"No," said Williams. He added that Negroes still would have the legal right to enter the white schools.

The Maryland Committee on Equal Educational Opportunity was another group to argue against separate schools.

It asked the regents to declare a public policy for graduate professional training of all races, creeds and colors and implement the statement with directives to the heads of the university's divisions.

The University Law School has for several years accepted Negroes, but all the other divisions both in Baltimore and College Park have not permitted any to enroll.

Williams argued the State is denying Negro students their constitutional rights.

He said there is a further violation of the law because the university accepts land grant college funds from the Federal Government and the regulations under which these funds are dispensed specifies there shall be no discrimination.

He also said he could find no law in Maryland which requires segregation of white and Negro students.

Judge William P. Cole, president of the regents, said after the hearing the board is keenly conscious of the situation and will give it every consideration.

U. OF MD.'S QUICK SHIFT

Within less than six hours after a delegation representing the Maryland Committee for Equal Educational Opportunities had appeared before the Board of Regents of the University of Maryland last Friday, the board had issued a public statement denying that any qualified students "are now being" rejected on the basis of race, color or creed.

In making its statement, the board was careful to use the present tense and made no reference to past cases in which color was the sole basis for denial of admission. But whether or not it believed that this choice of words protected it from future applications, the board is in for a shock.

Back in 1938, as a result of the case of Donald Gaines Murray vs. the University of Maryland, colored citizens gained admission to the university's law school at Baltimore and have been attending in increasing numbers ever since.

It was naturally expected that other graduate and professional schools of the university would open their doors as a consequence, but today, ten years later, nothing of the sort has happened. Instead, it has become necessary to resort to the courts again in an effort to gain admission, and a case is now pending.

For years, the university, through double-talk and subterfuge, has managed to keep College Park lily-white, while all around it private institutions like St. John's College, American University, Catholic University and even Georgetown University have let down their bars.

Court decisions, judicial interpretations and an enlightened public opinion have been and are continuing to be instrumental in breaking down barriers which have deprived qualified colored students of educational opportunities. The fallacy of the "separate but equal" theory has been exposed time and again.

It would come with much better grace if the University of Maryland regents face up squarely to the present situation, admit their transgressions and start off with a clean slate by squaring practice with preachment. They should make a clear-cut statement that qualified colored students will be admitted to all post-graduate departments of the university, effective now.

Once that is settled, we can then begin work on smashing the remaining undergraduate barriers.

New Suit Filed Against University of Maryland

BALTIMORE

A petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the University of Maryland School of Pharmacy to accept his application without regard to race was filed Friday in City Court on behalf of Martin B. Booth, 2d, Morgan State College student.

The young man is represented by Donald G. Murray, attorney who instituted the civil action which opened the university's law school in 1935.

Co-counsel is Charles Houston, NAACP attorney of Washington.

The litigation sets forth that Mr. Booth's application for admission to the September term of the School of Pharmacy was returned last May 25 with explanation that the quota was filled.

Others Accepted Since

His attorneys charge that he was refused admission solely because of race and color, and that the school has since accepted students of no better moral or educational qualifications.

Named as defendants are Dr. H. C. (Curly) Byrd, president of the university; its board of regents, Andrew G. DuMez, dean of the pharmacist school; and Edgar F. Long, director of admissions.

It was said that Mr. Booth was told again Thursday in a personal interview with the dean that the quota was filled.

The suit contends further that this school of pharmacy is the only State institution of its kind in Maryland, the only pharmaceutical school in Maryland approved by the American Association of Colleges of Pharmacy, and that it is a member of the American Council on Pharmaceutical Education.

Now or Next Term—No Later

A four-year course there leads to the degree of bachelor of science in pharmacy. Admission of first-year students is made simply on the basis of the applicant's high school education.

This writ of mandamus asks that the court admit Mr. Booth to Douglass High School, a war veteran, for the current year or ran and a junior at Morgan College. He lives at 1936 W. Lanvale St.

The civil action is taken under the equal protection of the laws of the 14th Amendment and the civil rights statute, Vol. 8, of the U.S. Code, Sections 41 and 42

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Negroes must be admitted to the university and have got to get University of Maryland diplomas," President H. C. Byrd said here last week as he indicated that he had a plan for "controlled segregation."

Chicago Tribune

Meeting with a group of Maryland educators before a college football game, President Byrd said that he would be glad at another time to explain what he meant by "controlled segregation" for integrating Negroes into the university.

Sat-11-27-48

His veiled suggestion grew out of his admitting that he was opposed to transfer of Princess Anne Agricultural College for Negroes to the jurisdiction of Morgan State College because "It would be utterly impossible for a Negro Institution to develop work equivalent to or equal in any sense to the work of the University of Maryland".

President Byrd said "Negroes must enter the University, but it would be disastrous to have them come to College Park under present conditions". Although indicating that he saw some future change in said "conditions" he did not explain at the time to what he referred.

U. of M. Must Admit Negroes, Byrd Savs

Wash Post

INS By The Associated Press

President H. C. Byrd of the University of Maryland believes "Negroes must be admitted to the university," although he adds "it would be disastrous to have them come into College Park under present conditions."

Wash D.C.

He suggests a method which he termed "controlled segregation" for intergratin Negro and white students at the university. He did not explain what he meant by the term. At present there are no Negro students at College Park.

Byrd's statements were made yesterday during a pre-football game meeting with a group of Maryland legislators.

When one legislator asked what he meant by "cortrolled segregation," Byrd said he would be glad to go into the sujbect at some future time.

Byrd said he believes "Negro and white work should be integrated at the university," adding that "it can be done in such a way as to meet objections."

"Negroes, he said, "have got to get University of Maryland diplomas."

The university president said he opposed a proposal to transfer Princess Anne Ayricultural College for Negroes from his jurisdiction to Morgan State College for Negroes.

"It would be utterly impossible," he added, "for a Negro institution to develop work equivalent to or equal in any sense to the work of the University of Maryland."

Maryland Divided On New Princess Anne College

The Lighthouse + Informer Columbia, S. C.

PRINCESS ANNE, MD.—(ANP)—Educators and lay citizens, colored and white are separating into two violently opposite camps on the establishment of the New Princess Anne college as a state land grant college for Negroes following developments last week.

Sun. 12-19-48

On one side of the fence are the Afro-American newspapers, Baltimore's Morgan State college for Negroes and the NAACP. These groups are demanding that Princess Anne academy be turned into a first rate high school for Negroes.

The claim that the move to establish a college there is designed to keep Negroes from obtaining equal education at the University of Maryland.

On the other side are Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, and Dr. John T. Williams, former dean of Kentucky State college and newly-appointed president of the Princess Anne college.

NOT ENOUGH DONE

Dr. Williams and Dr. Byrd agree that the state has not done enough to educate Negroes even to the level of most southern states. Dr. Williams, however, said he does not wish to enter the argument between the other group and Dr. Byrd.

Sun. 12-19-48

The controversy between Negroes and Dr. Byrd flared anew recently when a grant of $3,755,000 had been made by the state to change the academy to a college in Princess Anne, the county seat of Somerset county on the Eastern Shore.

About 50,000 Negroes live in this area, considered as prejudiced as many places in the deep south. The college here will be under the control of the University of Marvland.

2 Teachers Quit in Protest on Segregation

Two Washington educators resigned summer teaching post at a Baltimore high school in protest against segregation it was announced yesterday as picket lines formed about the school.

The pickets were members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People opposing segregation of Negro teachers slated to take summer courses, under auspices of the University of Maryland, at the Baltimore school.

The two Washingtonians to resign were Dr. Madeline W. Kirkland, head of the home economics department for Washington Negro schools, and Dr. Mercer Cook, professor of romance languages at Howard University.

School "Boycotted"

Both said that they did not understand seggregation would be the policy when they accepted the summer positions. Added weight was given, Dr. Cook said, when he learned that "friends in Baltimore" were "boycotting" the school

Fourteen instructors had been assigned to the Negro classes. Registration was to have started yesterday but only one teacher braved the picket line.

The high school was selected by the University of Maryland for its first summer session for Negro teachers. Summer sessions for whites are held on the College Park campus.

A notice distributed by Mrs. Lillie M. Jackson, president of the Baltimore NAACP, read in part:

"... Maryland is required by law to provide equal educational facilities for all its citizens. Do not accept an inadequate temporary and segregated educational program."

The university's information bulletin declared: "It is likely that, as facilities become available, a full program will be provided to duplicate the program at College Park, so that colored teachers possessing a bachelor's degree may work for advanced degrees in the University of Maryland."

MARYLAND U. ENROLLEES COMPLETE SUMMER COURSE

BALTIMORE—(NNPA)—The only two elementary grad teachers who who enrolled in a separate course set up for colored teachers at Douglass high School by the University of Maryland, have completed six weeks of postgraduate work in the summer school.

The two elementary teachers, Miss Laura Tatum of Washington and Mrs. Myrtle V. Wake, of Baltimore took advanced study similar to the courses offered for white teachers at the summer session in College Park, Maryland, although a charge of race discrimination in setting up the course was made.

Milton P. Brown, executive secretary of the Baltimore branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, charged that fewer courses were offered at Douglass High than at College Park where colored teachers were barred.

The Maryland Committee for Equal Educational Opportunities, he said, will protest the discrimination before a meeting of the State board of regents of the university in Maryland next September or October.

From a comparison made between the two summer schools, George C. Grant, dean of Morgan State College, found that a total of 234 courses were offered to white teachers at College Park while only twenty-seven were available to colored teachers at Douglass High.

Teachers Balk Maryland U. Plan To Staff Negroes By Themselves

WASHINGTON—Two Washington teachers, Dr. W. Mercer Cook, professor of Romance Languages at Howard University, and Mrs. Laura Kirkpatrick, head of the Margaret Murray Washington Vocational High School refused to serve as members of the summer faculty of Maryland University when they found they were expected to teach Negro teachers in a Jim Crow facility established by the university for them in a Negro high school.

The all-Negro summer school annex which is being conducted as the first summer session for Negroes which the university has ever undertaken so far has attracted two teachers. It has been picketed from the beginning by the Baltimore Chapter of the NAACP. A mimeographed pamphlet distributed by Mrs. Lillie N. Jackson, President read:

"The State of Maryland is required by law to provide equal educational facilities for all citizens.

Dr. Harold Benjamin, dean of the College of Education at Maryland University said the Jim Crow school would continue. He asked that the university be given a "sporting chance for at least one year" to operate a teacher education program for Negroes. Dr. Benjamin said the course was established with a tentative staff of 14 instructors "equal to the best at College Park." He also disclosed that the university had expected a summer enrollment of from 50 to 60 Negro teachers. He said that the two who have been enrolled would receive instruction.

Policy of Segregation

"An important part of the university's program is to exclude colored persons from its agricultural departments.

"The president of the university, Dr. H. C. Byrd, has proposed that training of this kind for colored citizens be located at the Princess Anne College on the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

"The State of Maryland also has a law requiring segregation of the races in intra-State transportation. This law is enforced on the Eastern Shore and any colored person connected with the United Nations, FAO would endoubtedly be subject to

Would Be Backward Step

"Under the circumstances, it would be a long backward step for the United Nations to locate any of its functions at the University of Maryland."

Invited by Dr. Byrd, 35 delegates from 20 countries to the fourth annual FAO conference in Washington visited the campus Saturday and toured several county farms under auspices of the university.

School's Character Told

Dr. T. B. Symons, dean of the university's School of Agriculture, has expressed the opinion that the establishment of the FAO at the university would be beneficial to both institutions.

Its "interest in the field of agriculture, its unique position as a State university — laying emphasis on teaching, research, extension, marketing and home demonstration work in agriculture —and because of its close relation to various departments of the Federal Government."

He suggested that the State construct the necessary building and rent it to the FAO for $2,500,000 annually, later deeding the building and land to the agency; and that its workers be considered faculty members of the university.

Byrd's Sales Talk

Dr. H. C. (Curly) Byrd, president of the university, has proposed that the FAO set up permanent headquarters at the university be-

Byrd Foresees Full Afro American Integration at U. of Md.

BALTIMORE

COLLEGE PARK, Md.—Dr. H. C. (Curly) Byrd sees complete integration of colored and white students in all departments of the University of Maryland, but not for next term, or next year, or within any specific period of time.

There is no doubt about it, Dr. Byrd said today (Friday), the State is legally obligated to provide education for all students alike, so a practical plan must be worked out to meet this obligation.

"It's up to the Legislature to establish a policy," he explained. "And we at the university will live up to it, whatever that policy may be." The Legislature convenes in Annapolis on Jan. 4.

"All I did was to ask the State to provide the facilities and funds to enable it to implement what the law requires it to do," he continued.

"The University of Maryland is under obligation legally to consider on the same basis that it does for white students, all applications from colored students. There is no way for the State to shun this obligation if it wanted to, and I don't believe that it would want to."

Summing up the problem which faces the State under these circumstances, Dr. Byrd said:

"The white people feel very strongly about continuing segregation in education. Colored citizens feel equally as strong about getting the education to which they are properly entitled.

Adjustment Needed

"Our job is to make an adjustment which will satisfy both groups. But if we just throw the institution wide open, with a lot of newspaper fanfare, we will aggravate a situation wherein neither one will be satisfied."

Any proposal to maintain a "separate but equal" institution would be ridiculous and impossible, Dr. Byrd said, so the only answer is to admit colored students to the University of Maryland.

His suggestion for a practical way of doing this without aggravating racial feeling is to admit them quietly and gradually so that eventually complete integration will be the result.

Gradual Process

This integration would be more adaptable and more easily accepted if begun on a graduate level, he said, and gradually extended to the undergraduates.

With this program in action, Dr. Byrd believes that the Maryland State College agriculture school at Princess Anne as well as Morgan State College should be a part of the overall university operation in Maryland.

"The State has invested a great deal of money in those institutions," he pointed out. "It would seem advantageous to operate them all as one university, improving the standards at each as the integration system goes into effect."

Great Deal of Money Needed

This plan, as well as a long-range expansion program for the university, looking forward to increased enrollment with the gradual admission of colored students, will require a great deal of money, Dr. Byrd explained in justification of his financial request to the Legislature.

The question of dormitory facilities at College Park for colored students is less important, Dr. Byrd said, than the primary issue of working out a practical and agreeable program of integrating them into the university training program without too much attention and friction.

Having been denied entrance to the University of Maryland, two Baltimore students, charging racial discrimination, have enlisted support of the NAACP in forcing the university to admit them.

Suit Against University

A civil suit has been entered against the university on behalf of Martin Booth, who seeks training at the School of Pharmacy. Dr. Byrd said that Mr. Booth's application was considerd on the basis of qualification only, as the records will show if the case remains in court.

In another instance, Mrs. Lucille Williams was denied admission to the School of Home Economics. After reviewing the case, Dr. Byrd admitted that "she probably will qualify and I think we are going to have to do something for her."

The State's problem of meeting its obligation to colored students without creating unpleasant racial tension is great, Dr. Byrd pointed out, because "we have to deal not only with the law and common sense, but also with emotions and prejudices on both sides."

Negro Sues U. of Md. for Admittance

Baltimore, Sept. 18 (AP)—A 21-year-old Negro who contends he has been denied admittance to the University of Maryland's school of pharmacy because of his race has filed mandamus proceedings against the university to require it to admit him.

The suit was brought in Baltimore City Court yesterday by Martin B. Boone.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university, said "We haven't turned down anybody in any school on the basis of his being a Negro. Each dean in Baltimore has instructions not to reject any student because he is a Negro."

Byrd declared this policy would "apply to College Park, too, although the problem hasn't come up there as yet."

Boone said he applied for admittance in May, but was turned down on the grounds that the quota had been filled for the school year. He said he submitted another application last month, but said school officials refused to pass on that application.

Dr. Edgar Long, director of admissions, said he had "nothing to say on the matter." He said "this is the first time I have heard of it."

Dr. Byrd said he had not known of the suit, but disclosed Boone had written him some time ago.

"I replied to him that I had referred him to the dean of the school of pharmacy," he said. Academic factors alone don't determine admission, Dr. Byrd said. He explained that there were "other factors," but stressed these do not include color.

Race Hate in St. Louis

Dear Sir:

Here is the pattern of racial prejudice employed by the University of Minnesota Alumni Assn. in the city of St. Louis, recently.

Leif J. Sverdrup, as chairman of a dinner meeting, invited all University of Minnesota alumni to a dinner and get-together at the Missouri Athletic Club. Then he claimed that when final plans were being made it was found that the policy of MAC was against the admission of Negroes to any function in the club building. Two Negroes had previously accepted the invitation to attend the meeting, but were told that because of the club's policy of discriminating against their race they would not be expected to attend.

The writer suggested that the meeting place be changed to some hotel where Negroes would be accepted, but Sverdrup refused to cancel the meeting at MAC and claimed that due to shortness of time no other arrangement could be made. There were about 80 people invited and three days elapsed before the dinner was held.

Not a single alumnus had the courage to comment about the affair either by press or letter, and what Sverdrup has said places him in the category with the most rabid race-hater. His statement to the press was: "All of us must remember that, although we went to school in Minnesota, we live in Missouri."

So St. Louis carries on with a "lily white" University of Minnesota Alumni Assn. and not an association which includes all of its graduates.

MISS. STUDENTS INSULTED AT GOVERNOR'S OPEN HOUSE

JACKSON, Miss. — Twelve students and instructors from Jackson College who lined up with other guests in front of the Executive Mansion to felicitate Gov. and Mrs. Fielding L. Wright, during an inaugural open house last week, walked away when a State patrolman "steered them to the back of the mansion."

NEGRO JUNIOR COLLEGE TO BE NEAR ITTA BENA

Selection Of Site Announced By Mississippi Board

From The Commercial Appeal Jackson, Mississippi, Bureau

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 15.—Mississippi's first Legislature-authorized junior-vocational college for negroes will be established about two miles from Itta Bena in Leflore County on Highway 82.

Selection of the site, announced were Wednesday by W. B. Fontaine, secretay of the State Building Commission, was made by a committee of the Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning, heded by Dr. H. M. Ivy of Meridian. It was the choice over sites offered at Indianola and Tutwiler.

The college, for which the initial state appropriation is $300,000, will comprise about 550 acres, most of which embodied the Ralph Lembo plantation. As an inducement for locating the college near Itta Bena, the Leflore County Board of Supervisors voted $20,000 to help in its construction, and also agreed to build roads at the institution. Legislative authority must be given, however, to the county's cash offer.

Mr. Fontaine, who is also executive counsel to Governor Wright, said the building commission will negotiate the necessary papers for purchase of the lands at its Jan. 13 meeting.

Forrest Cooper of Indianola, here in interest of the site there, expressed keen disappointment in the board's selection. His group had offered 487 acres on Highway 49 for the site, of which 102 acres in 16th Section school lands were offered without cost. In addition, citizens of Indianola offered a $5000 Bonus, while county authorities agreed to build highways at the college. Price of the Indianola lands was $46,155, while the Itta Bena location will cost $50,000.

Claims Stowe Is Inferior City School

Board Ordered To Show Cause

A suit to require the admission of a Stowe Teachers college student to Harris Teachers college was filed Tuesday. The petition was filed in behalf of Marjorie V. Toliver of 28 Inge place, Carr Square Village, by her mother, Mrs. Carrie Dempsey. It charged that the plaintiff was barred from Harris because of her color and that Stowe is inferior to Harris in violation of provisions of the federal and state constitutions.

Representing the Stowe freshman in the suit are three lawyers of the St. Louis Branch of the NAACP, Attys. Robert L. Witherspoon, Henry D. Espy and S. R. Redmond. The branch is giving financial assistance in the case.

Named as respondents are the Board of Education, Superintendent of Instruction Phillip J. Hickey, Acting Principal of Harris, Charles A. Naylor, Jr., and Registrar of Harris, Hugh H. Barr.

The suit was referred to the Court of Circuit Judge William K. Koerner, who issued an order returnable Oct. 7, at which time the defendants must show cause why a writ of mandamus permitting Miss Toliver's admission to Harris should not be issued.

In her petition the plaintiff states that she filed an application to enter Harris College about August 12 for admission in September. She further stated that about August 19 she was arbitrarily and illegally denied and rejected solely on the ground that she is a Negro. She set forth that she was a June, 1947, graduate from Vashon High School with lawful qualifications for admission to Harris, the only accredited teachers' college in Missouri maintained by the residents.

Contending that inferiority of Stowe College impairs her preparations for her chosen profession of teaching, the following shortcomings of the school are cited:

(1) Harris College is a member of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, the standard accrediting agency of colleges in the region membership in said association being a guarantee and endorsement of merit and academic standing. Stowe does not meet the requirements for membership and has never been accredited by the association.

(2) That Stowe College's library is deficient, below the standard, unacredited and has not the proper number of required volumes, kinds of books, quality of books, space for books, personnel and staff to operate the library, etc.

(3) That the faculty of Harris Teachers' College is an accredited faculty with the required number of professors, assistant professors, associated professors, instructors and teachers with the required amount of academic and scholastic training; and, that better salaries are paid at Harris than at Stowe.

(4) That there are not enough professors, associate professors, instructors and teachers teaching in their major field of training to give the Stowe faculty a rating.

(5) That there are courses of instruction, equipment, facilities, activities and events conducted and maintained at Harris which are not offered at Stowe.

(6) That the Board and its appointees and employees operate Stowe on a standard and with facilities, personnel, material and equipment much lower and inferior to that maintained at Harris.

Superintendent Hickey stated that he had not seen the pleading in the case and any statement made concerning it would have to come from the Board's attorney, Emmett Carter.

Another Example of The "American Myth"

Missouri Pays High To Maintain 'Separate But Equal' Law School

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — (ANP) — It costs the state of Missouri nearly $600 per student more in the segregated law school of Lincoln University here than it does to train a white student at the University of Missouri, a recent study by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch revealed this week.

According to the survey, the state spends $807 a year to train a Lincoln law student to only $228 per Missouri student. Last year $63,370 was spent to educate 277 whites with a full time faculty of nine, and more than half that amount, $35,500, was spent for 44 Lincolnites and five faculty members.

NEW BUILDING

All this is done to maintain the "separate but equal" facilities for Negroes and whites. And the maintenance of Lincoln may cost Missouri an added $400,000 this year for a new building.

At present the St. Louis school is located in a hotel. Street noises and student traffic through the library make it very difficult for students to study. The rooms also are not classroom type.

According to the Post-Dispatch, the Lincoln law school already is serving as a kind of sectional school. Half of its students come from other states, while at Missouri only about 10 per cent of the students are not out of staters.

BOTH ACCREDITED

Both Lincoln and Missouri are accredited by the Association of American Law Schools, and both are approved by the section of legal education and admissions to the bar of the American Bar Association.

According to Dean McCleary, Missouri requires three years of pre-legal work at an accredited college although veterans are admitted with ony two years study.

Lincoln requires two years study at an accredited college with an average of 70 or higher. According to Dean Richardson, most Lincoln students are college graduates.

Negroes have never fully accepted Lincoln, the newspaper survey reported. When it was first opened as a result of the Gains case, Negroes picketed it for inadequate staff and facilities.

Colored lawyers are against the school, the Post-Dispatch said, because of the idea of segregation and because of the faculty. One lawyer said:

AMERICAN MYTH

"It is just another example of the great American myth—'equal but separate' education. The dean is a good man and the school is coming along but it does not and cannot compare with the law school at the University of Missouri.

"A law school is more than books. Its reputation and its effectiveness depend upon the presence on its faculty of men who are recognized authorities in their particular fields and whose qualifications as teachers, not necessarily as law practitioners, are high.

"These elements are lacking at Lincoln University law school and will continue lacking because the legislature will never appropriate enough money to attract that kind of men."

LIBERTY, Mo., Jan. 30—(AP)—William Jewell College yesterday denied an application of a Negro Baptist pastor for admittance.

Dr. Walter Pope Binns, president of the college, a Baptist institution, said that the application of the Rev. William L. Blake, 29-year-old pastor here, was turned down because of the school's policy on racial matters.

Negro Education Below Par Under St. Louis Jim Crow

By R. C. FISHER

ST. LOUIS — (ANP) — The educational system in St. Louis is unequal — and far below par. Stowe Teacher's College here for Negroes has not been accredited by the North Central Association, where as Harris Teachers College for whites in this city has been accredited.

The training school for nurses at Homer G. Phillips Hospital has not been recognized by the National accrediting agency; though the training school for nurses at the white City Hospital has been recognized.

Authority for this important information is Attorney Sydney R. Redmond, Republican alderman of the 18th ward of St. Louis, as former assistant City counselor and a graduate of Howard University.

STATEMENT

Here is what Mr. Redmond said: "I just received a letter from the secretary of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary schools advising me that our Stowe Teachers college is not now and never has been accredited by the North Central association. Why? The training school for white, Harris Teachers college is accredited when they come up to a certain standard and are denied accreditation until they meet the standard. If a school is not accredited, its students will not get full credit when they go to a first class school. My investigation reveals that Stowe is not accredited for the following reasons; (1) Too many of its teachers are not qualified due to the policy of the board of education in getting teachers there at low salaries; (2) The load per teacher is too high; and (3) The school does not have an adequate library nor proper and sufficient equipment.

"This deplorable condition is a reflection on every Negro. We have one school system in St. Louis. The United States Supreme court has ruled in no uncertain terms that all students are entitled to equal treatment. Harris Teachers college is superior to Stowe Teachers college. There can be no question about it. That explains why Harris is accredited and Stowe is not. The condition is unfair to every student at Stowe and to every Negro taxpayer.

"How long will we remain silent in the face of such gross discrimination by the board of education? Are we afraid to take a stand? Are we not citizens? Why do we act as people who are in chains? Why is the NAACP so inactive in the face of this and many other inequalities in the public school system? Is no one interested? The time for action is now."

Dr. Compton Explains Stand For Segregation In Schools

Dr. Arthur H. Compton, chancellor of Washington U., and member of the famous family of atomic scientists, issued a statement to justify his stand against dropping of segregation in education in a letter last week.

The educator in explaining his minority stand in the recommendation of the President's Commission on Higher Education that jim-crow schooling be discontinued, was concerned lest unwillingness to proceed with Federal support until segregation is abandoned should prevent aid to higher education for both Negroes and whites in the South so urgently needed now. We of the minority were not interested in maintaining the policy of segregation. In our dissenting statement we were concerned solely with providing "..as rapidly a spossible" an advance in educational opportunities, with particular reference to the Negroes With such an advance it is not impossible that the South would look more favorably upon elimination of segregation. But we feared that if elimination of segregation is made the condition for educational aid, such aid will not in fact become available to the parts of the Nation that need it most.

Following strong protests along this line by our minority group, the final editing of the Commission's report has fortunately eliminated the provision that Federal aid of higher education should be used as a means of forcing non-segregation on communities which do not want it. I am personally quite satisfied with the final form of the Commission's recommendation, which reads as follows:

"If, as this Commission recommends, steps are taken to make Federal funds available to equalize higher educational opportunities among the States and otherwise to supplement inadequate State financial resources, all such legislation should clearly specify that there may be no discrimination in the channeling of such funds, either as regards possible individual beneficiaries under student grants-in-aid and fellowships, or as to institutions for white students as compared to institutions for Negroes only .. The Negro institutions should by law receive their full proportionate share of all Federal and State funds destined for the support of college instruction."

I may add that I recognize also that it is very difficult if not impossible to ensure true equality of educational opportunity within a pattern of segregation. For the time being, the Southern states are, however, unwilling to accept non-segregation in education as a part of their social pattern, is indicated by the laws that regulate their education. I have accordingly had to recognize that the most effective procedure for advancing Negro educational opportunity that can now be followed is that which falls within the existing legal framework.

Yours sincerely,
Arthur H. Compton.

Petition Charges Facilities Not Adequate Otherwise

ST. LOUIS—(NNPA)— A suit to force the St. Louis Board of Education to admit a colored girl as a student at Harris Teachers College, which is maintained by the board for white students, was filed Tuesday, September 28, in Circuit Court.

The action was filed in behalf of Miss Marjorie Vanderbilt Toliver, by her mother, Mrs. Carrie Dempsey, because Miss Toliver is a minor. It names the Board of Education, Superintendent of Instruction, Philip J. Hickey, Charles A. Naylor, Jr., acting principal of Harris Teachers College, and Hugh H. Barr, registrar at the college, as defendants.

In addition to maintaining Harris Teachers College for white students, the Board of Education operates Stowe Teachers College for colored students.

In her petition, Miss Toliver, who is 20 years old, said she was not admitted to Harris because of her color, although she is a graduate of Vashon High School and has the required number of credits to enter the college. This is contrary, the petition said, to the Constitution of the United States.

She said her application for admission was sent to Harris rather than Stowe, because the library at Stowe is below standard, the faculty is neither accredited nor sufficient in numbers, and the academic standing of Stowe is inferior to that of Harris. By forcing her to attend Stowe, she said, the Board of Education will handicap her in her chosen profession.

Superintendent Hickey said Miss Toliver's application had been accepted at Stowe. Under the State Constitution, he added, the board is forced to maintain separate schools for white and colored students. The facilities at Stowe, he said, have been termed adequate to prepare students as teachers and the entire school is maintained on the same basis as Harris.

The suit was referred to the court of Circuit Judge William K. Koerner, who issued an order returnable October 7 at which time the defendants must show cause why a writ of mandamus directing Miss Toliver's admission to Harris should not be issued. Her attorneys are Alderman Sidney R. Redmond, R. L. Witherspoon and Henry D. Espy.

Washington U. To Admit Negro Students

ST. LOUIS —(NNPA)— Admission of qualified colored students to the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences of Washington University has been authorized by the board of directors, Chancellor Arthur H. Compton announced last Tuesday.

The authorization, which becomes effective immediately, brings to three the number of graduate schools in which colored students may enroll at the university. The others are those of the School of Medicine, where a colored physician recently completed a seminar course and of the George Warren Brown School of Social Work, where two colored women students are currently enrolled.

Dean Carl Tolman of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences said the action of the directors followed a recommendation made by him. He said he canvassed the graduate council, made up of heads of departments represented in the graduate school, and found unanimous approval of the idea The recommendation was made to the central administration of the university and conveyed by it to the directiors, he said.

MUST MEET STANDARDS

"Henceforth, anyone can be considered for admission to the school, irrespective of race, creed or color," he said. "Admissions have always been on an individual basis and all applicatns must meet the same standards of admissibility. Those standards will no longer include," he added.

Dean Tolman said the graduate school had been admitting for some time Chinese and Indian students. "It seemed to me completely out of place to bar students of one particular color, and I felt that graduate school especially ought to be above such considerations," he said.

The Arts and Sciences graduate school is the largest of the three admitting colored students, Present enrollment is about 600 students.

Sues To En St. Louis Nc

By HOWARD B. WOODS

ST. LOUIS — The State of Missouri witnessed the beginning of what might become another Gaines case with the filing of a suit in Circuit Court to force the St. Louis Board of Education to admit a Negro student to the lily-white Harris Teachers' College.

The action was filed in behalf of 20 year old Miss Marjorie Vanderbilt Tolliver by her mother, Mrs. Carrie Dempsey.

The suit names the Board of Education, Superintendent of Instruction, Philip J. Hickey; Charles A. Naylor, Jr., acting principal of Harris Teachers' College and Hugh H. Barr, registrar at the college as defendants.

The Board of Education operates both Harris and Stowe Teachers' colleges. The latter is for Negro students.

Barred By Color

Miss Tolliver, represented by NAACP council. Attys. Sidney R. Remond, alderman; Robert L. Witherspoon and Henry D. This, she points out, is contrary to the Constitution of the United States.

Superintendent of Instruction Philip J. Hickey said under the state Constitution, the board is forced to maintain separate school systems. He said the facilities at Stowe college, have been termed adequate to prepare students for teaching.

Circuit Judge William K. Koerner, in whose court the suit has been referred has issued an order returnable this week, for the defendants to show cause why a writ of mandamus permitting Miss Tolliver admission to Harris should not be issued.

EQUAL EDUCATIONAL FACILITIES FAVORED

(International News Service)

Jefferson City, Mo., Dec. 3.—A proposal to amend Missouri law to provide equal higher education facilities for Negroes was made by the University of Missouri board of curators.

The board recommended that the state law be amended to allow Negro students to enter "white" Missouri educational institutions if comparable facilities are not provided by Negro schools.

The recommendation was submitted to the equal rights committee of the Missouri House of Representatives at a hearing in Jefferson City. The committee will make a report to the 65th General Assembly which convenes January 5.

Dewey to Ask End of Racial Bans By Law on Admission to Colleges

By LEO EGAN

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ALBANY, Jan. 3 — Governor Dewey, in his annual message to the opening session of the 1948 Legislature next week, will recommend enactment of a law barring discrimination on racial or religious grounds in admission to colleges and professional schools, it was learned today.

The Governor's proposal, it is understood, will call for placing responsibility for enforcement of the ban in the State Department of Education, which already exercises general supervisory power over all institutions of learning within the state.

While designed to serve the same purpose as the Austin-Mahoney bills of the last two legislative sessions, the procedure favored by the Governor is understood to differ in many respects from earlier proposals.

Mr. Dewey's plan is believed to anticipate a recommendation of the Temporary Commission on a State University, headed by Owen D. Young, retired industrialist and former member of the State Board of Regents. The Young Commission has been engaged for almost two years in a study of the need for a state university and on the extent to which racial and religious discrimination affect admissions to colleges and professional schools within the state.

It is understood that the Governor will recommend leaving the drafting of the proposed law to the Young Commission, which will meet here on Jan. 12 to complete its report, findings and recommendations for legislative action. The commission, which consists of thirty members, including representatives of both branches of the Legislature, is said to have reached a tentative agreement on the form and content of the proposed law.

The tentative agreement is understood to meet the objections raised to the Austin-Mahoney bills by the State Catholic Welfare Conference. These objections were a major factor in blocking any action on the bills last year. The Mahoney bills came from the principal support for the Austin-American Jewish Congress and the State Congress of Industrial Organizations.

State Function Opposed

One of the major objections of the Catholic groups was a statement in the declaration of policy that education is a state function. It was feared that this might be an opening wedge to restrict or limit church control of parochial schools although sponsors disavowed any such intent.

Special provision will be made in the proposed law for denominational institutions. The tentative agreement, it is understood, proposed that such institutions be authorized to give preference to members of their own faith but that they be barred from discriminating in admitting students of other faiths.

By limiting the ban to admissions, the Governor and members of the Young Commission believe they will overcome objections to the Austin-Mahoney proposals raised by college and university officials. There had been considerable concern among educators lest the law interfere with their rights to select members of the faculty. It was also feared that the language of the earlier proposal was so broad that charges of discrimination could be based on the grades given students in their courses.

Three forms of sanctions against institutions that violate the ban are possible. They are: Suspension of their exemption from real estate taxes while the discrimination continues; suspension of their power to confer degrees or a resort to the equity powers of the Supreme Court to enjoin continued violation. If the last sanction is employed officials of the institutions would be subject to punishment for contempt of court if they flout the injunction.

Injunctive Power Favored

The Young Commission is understood to favor use of the injunctive power to enforce compliance. Their belief is that the mere existence of this drastic remedy would be enough to obtain full compliance. In this connection members of the commission cite the experience of the state commission against discrimination in employment. Although several thousand complaints have been filed with the anti-discrimination commission none have ever reached the hearing stage. In all instances the commission has been able to obtain compliance with the law through conferences and conciliation procedure.

In addition to its recommendation in favor of an anti-discrimination law, it is understood that the Young Commission will recommend that more public institutions of higher education be established.

Although no final decision on this score has been reached the present trend is said to favor regional junior colleges that could be expanded into full-sized degree conferring institutions later. The principal controversy within the commission is said to relate to the financing of this type of institution. Some members want a substantial share of the cost borne by the regions they serve; others want the state to pay the entire bill.

Bills Seek University, End to Bias

ALBANY

Bills to create a State university system, and outlaw racial and religious discrimination in admissions to all schools of higher education, except religious or denominational institutions, were submitted to the Legislature Friday by Gov. Dewey.

Both measures were recommended by the Young Commission, which studied the need for a State university. They were introduced under bi-partisan endorsement, indicating overwhelming endorsement.

In a special message, Dewey said that "if we are to meet the growing needs of our youth for higher education, private philanthropic effort must be supplemented still further by a greater measure of State and local government participation."

The university bill would establish four-year liberal arts, professional and graduate colleges, two medical centers and two-year community colleges.

The anti-discrimination bill would make it an "unfair educational practice, subject to penalties, to bar a student because of race, color or ntaional origin.

DEWEY APPROVES COLLEGE BIAS BAN

Race, Religious Discrimination in Admission of Students Is Made Illegal in State

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ALBANY, April 5—Describing racial and religious discrimination in the admission of students to colleges as "obnoxious and undemocratic," Gov. Thomas E. Dewey approved today a bill making such practices illegal in New York and vesting the State Education Department with power to eliminate them.

The bill, sponsored by Senator Elmer F. Quinn, Democratic leader of the Senate, and Assemblyman Lewis W. Olliffe, Brooklyn Republican, was based on a recommendation of the Commission on the Need for a State University, which Owen D. Young headed.

In approving it, Mr. Dewey said: "This bill is a further step by New York State to reduce obnoxious and undemocratic barriers based on religious belief or the accident of birth. Discrimination is already unlawful in our public schools.

"This bill adds to already existing provisions on the subject a clear and extensive prohibition against discrimination in admission because of religion, creed, color or national origin by any school of higher education. It carefully preserves, however, religious freedom and the right of religious groups to establish and control schools in furtherance of their religion.

"It is the product of two years study, debate and deliberation by the commission on a state university. The commission found that such discrimination existed in certain instances.

"As a nation, perhaps more than any other in the world, we are proud of and devoted to the education of our children. College and university education has become the goal of an ever increasing number of parents. Nothing can be more ugly or agonizing to any parent than the realization that his child is to be denied his full opportunity for learning and contribution merely because of his parentage. Such restraints are foreign to a country of growth, a country of progress, a country of moral leadership and a country born and preserved by the sacrafice of those who thought they were fighting for freedom.

"Education and particularly higher education is a quest for the truth; baseless distinctions have no place in that quest. Education controls the opportunity for professional careers; careers should depend only upon ability to serve. Education flourishes in the controversy of divergent groups, in conflicting ideas and ideals; intellectual inbreeding has always proved disastrous.

"This new law is another demonstration of the solid progress to be made upon the basis of full discussion, mutual education, persuasion and agreement."

Governor Dewey also approved today a bill setting up a medical advisory board of nine members to be appointed by him. The board will be charged with the duty of recommending physical standards for the physical examination of professional boxers and wrestlers.

Also signed was a bill providing for an exchange of land between the state, city and Federal Governments for the construction of the Battery Park underpass of the Brooklyn-Battery tunnel.

Another bill approved today provided that any member of a local school board in New York City who failed to attend three successive meetings without a good and valid excuse should vacate his office.

Bills exempting the United Nations from state and local excise and sales taxes upon the purchase of goods and services were approved also.

City College Aide Quits After Board Charges Racial Segregation to Him

William C. Davis, assistant to the president of City College and director of the school's Army Hall, resigned yesterday immediately after a special faculty board, formed last November to investigate his administration, made public its report charging him with following practices of racial segregation in the Army Hall dormitory.

Mr. Davis' resignation followed a tumultuous five years during which the Army Hall dormitory, at 139th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, became a storm center for student residents, custodians and college officials. In the last eight months Mr. Davis has been variously accused by residents, many of whom attend Columbia University and by employes, of segregating Negroes, engaging in anti-union activities and maintaining an insanitary cafeteria.

Dr. Harry N. Wright, president of the college, announced his acceptance of Mr. Davis' resignation at a special meeting of twenty-five student leaders and members of the faculty. The inquiry was ordered by Dr. Wright after the Army Hall Residents Council appealed to him to end the "segregation policy" last fall. This was followed, on Oct. 30, by a front-page streamer and editorial in the official undergraduate newspaper, The Campus, demanding an investigation of Mr. Davis' entire administration by the Commissioner of Investigations.

68 N. Y. State Colleges Still Ask Bias Questions

Of the 97 non-sectarian colleges and universities in the State of New York 68 still ask for information in their applicant's race, religion, color, ancestry or national origin, it was revealed in a survey of college application blanks made public today by the American Jewish Congress.

In announcing the survey results, Leo Pfeffer, Acting Director of the AJC Commission on Law and Social Action, pointed out that the presence of such questions on application blanks does not conclusively establish that the institution is guilty of racial or religious discrimination and, conversely, that the absence of such questions is not conclusive proof that the institution is not guilty of discrimination in admission.

Nevertheless, Pfeffer said, the President's Commission on Higher Education has reported that "it can almost be said that the request for certain information on application forms constitutes an all but prima facie case that such information is likely to be used for discriminatory purposes." In addition, the New York State Commission Against Discrimination, which administers New York's law against discrimination in employment, has ruled that questions seeking information in respect to the applicant's race, color, religion or national origin facilitates discrimination and are therefore illegal.

Discrimination by educational institutions has been made illegal by New York's Quinn-Olliffe law which took effect July 1. For that reason, Pfeffer said the American Jewish Congress will request the State Department of Education, which will administer the Quinn-Olliffe law, to rule such questions illegal.

The survey also revealed that 55 percent of the application blanks request a photograph of the applicant, 19 percent want to know the maiden name of the applicant's mother or wife, 12 percent want to know the applicant's religion and 10 percent request information as to his nationality and 9 percent as to his parents' nationality. In addition 62 percent of the institutions are interested in the applicant's birthplace and 35 percent also want to know where his parents were born.

College's Forms For Entrance Are Criticized

Jewish Congress Says Most Schools in State Could Use Them in Racial Bias

Most universities, colleges and professional schools in New York State use student application forms which can be employed for purposes of racial or religious discrimination, the Commission on Law and Social Action of the American Jewish Congress reported yesterday.

A survey prepared by Theodore Leskes, a member of the commission's staff, gave a clean bill of health to only twenty-nine of the ninety-seven non-sectarian schools and colleges in the state, and to only two of twenty-eight church-supported institutions. Among larger schools which do not ask discriminatory questions, the survey said, are New York University, Queens College, the University of Buffalo, Vassar, and most state teachers' colleges. City College, and a few others, do not use formal application forms.

Using standards developed in the employment field by the New York State Commission Against Discrimination, the Jewish Congress commission adjudged discriminatory application forms to be those requiring a photograph of the applicant, or asking questions about race, religion, church, nationality, birthplace, naturalization, color or language spoken at home. Questions about religion or church, however, were not deemed discriminatory in the case of sectarian schools.

By these standards, the commission said, some colleges of Columbia University ask four discriminatory questions (birthplace of applicant, birthplace of parents, photograph, mother's maiden name); Colgate, five (religion, birthplace, parents' birthplaces, photograph); Long Island University, five (birthplace, parents' birthplaces, citizenship, photograph and language spoken at home); Syracuse one (birthplace), and Rochester, four (birthplace, parents' birthplaces, photograph and languauge used at home).

Not a medical school was in the clear, the commission said, although most violated the standards onyl by asking questionh about birthpplace and requiring photographs. The commission pointed out that "the mere fact that a question is labeled discriminatory does not mean that the instituaitno is guilty of discriminatory admissions practices or policies," but added that such information, if required, can easily be obtained after, not before admission.

UPHOLDING HUMAN DIGNITY

City College of New York, last week forced the resignation of William C. Davis, an assistant to the president, from management of a student dormitory because Davis generally assigned colored students to rooms with other colored students.

This policy was termed "very unsound" and "contrary to all the traditions of City College."

Students made the protest that colored boys were being segregated at the Army Hall Dormitory.

Davis's excuse was that colored people apparently preferred their own company.

The college investigation showed, however, that involuntary segregation on the basis of color and religion is detrimental not only to the individuals involved, but to the college as well.

Actions such as this take courage and we cannot commend CCNY too highly for placing the dignity of the individual ahead of all other considerations.

The Knickerbocker Case

The Board of Higher Education's refusal to reopen the case of Prof. William E. Knickerbocker, the head of City College's Romance Language Department who is accused of anti-Semitism, makes one wonder what kind of academic freedom the Board believes in.

The case goes back to 1946. Two of the chief charges against Prof. Knickerbocker were that he had denied the Ward Medal for proficiency in French to one student in 1942 solely because he was Jewish, and that he had denied promotion to four members of his staff (two Jews and two non-Jews) because they protested against his anti-semitism. In addition, Prof. Knickerbocker has been accused of making nasty cracks about the Jewish people and religion inside and outside the classroom. Both a faculty committee and the general faculty at City College cleared Prof. Knickerbocker. So did a committee of the Board of Higher Education whose report, though it did not mention the Ward Medal incident, the full Board approved.

But in a ten-month investigation by a committee of the City Council, it was pretty well established that Prof. Knickerbocker was overtly anti-semitic. The cautiously worded report, adopted 16-0 by the council with two abstentions, urged Prof. Knickerbocker to retire, or, if necessary, that he be ousted. Among other things, the Council report found that "the question of a student's religion" was a factor in Professor Knickerbocker's determining whether the student should be trusted or treated like a gentleman. It also said the Ward Medal should have gone to the Jewish student and recommended that it be publicly given him. (This was done in absentia at last June's commencement. The commencement program blamed a "clerical error" for the earlier slight. The Council's report thought it significant that two professors who hitherto were "continuously recommended" for promotion before they brought complaints against Prof. Knickerbocker, were no longer deemed worthy of advancement.

In the name of academic freedom, we suppose, one has to defend a professor's right to his own prejudices and bias, however contemptible they may be. But last week's walkout by 18 students, almost an entire class, in protest against Professor Knickerbocker's attitude, and his own record would indicate that he has not kept his prejudices from warping his fitness as a teacher. It is one thing to keep one's peeves to himself, it is another thing to parade them or to inflict them as discrimination against others, especially in a college long a haven for victims of such hidden discrimination as the recently outlawed quota system.

One has to go back to the case of Dr. Francis T. Thompson for a contrast pointing up the Board's cockeyed approach to academic freedom. The Board fired Dr. Thompson for an alleged political belief (communism) that he never preached or paraded on the campus. Now the Board sustains a professor accused of un-American prejudices and biases which he not only does not disown, but which, the record indicates, he flaunts on the campus to the detriment of students and his own objectivity. Dr. Thompson subsequently won a reinstatement, but he didn't want to come back from Johns Hopkins to City College and its odd conception of academic freedom. We can see why.

CCNY Lets Students Quit Tutor

Dr. Harry N. Wright, President of City College, faced with the threat of a school-wide student sitdown, announced yesterday that members of the class of William E. Knickerbocker, professor charged with anti-Semitism, would be allowed to transfer to other instructors.

A previous ban on such transfers resulted in a 25-hour sitdown last Wednesday by 500 City College students, and the possibility of a larger demonstration this Thursday.

Wright said he was lifting the ban because of the "adverse effect of emotional tensions which have currently been generated." He denied that the decision was based on any "findings of facts" concerning the charges against the professor.

Vote on Plea to State

Students are voting today by referendum on a petition to State Commissioner of Education Francis T. Spaulding, calling for immediate ouster of Knickerbocker and William C. Davis, another instructor at the college, who has been charged with engaging in Jim Crow practices. A school-wide poll will also be taken on the proposed sitdown despite yesterday's decision by the college.

Wright also announced that he would request a meeting between members of the college's Student Council and the Board of Higher Education "for an exchange of views concerning the (Knickerbocker) situation."

200 City College Students Stage Sitdown Strike

New York, Sept. 29 (U.P.).— Students at City College of New York staged a "sit-down demonstration" today protesting the refusal of the board of education to remove a professor accused of antisemitism.

Some 200 students, about one-third coeds, sat down in front of College President Harry N. Wright's office.

Speakers denounced Prof. William Knickerbocker, head of the college's romance language department, accused of discriminating against his Jewish students.

Dean John Theobald told the "sit down" meeting a faculty committe and a committee appointed by the board of education had found Knickerbocker innocent.

Three Seek Entry To Chapel Hill

14e(1) Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C.—(ANP) — Permission to enter two graduate schools of the University of North Carolina is being south by three Negro students, it was disclosed here last week by Chancellor Robert B. House. Two applications are on file for admittance to the law school and one in the medical school. Sat. 4-17-48

However, House said that they were being specially considered since the matter "is out of the university's hands.

"We have no alternative in considering these applications except to make a report of them to the board of trustees. If any action is to be taken in the matter, it must be taken by the trustees." 4-17-48

President Frank P. Graham, who has the report, was not available for comment, but House said that the matter will be presented to the board at its next meeting, tentatively scheduled for May 17. Daily World

One of the applicants is James Walker, veteran law student at North Carolina College, Durham. He wants to transfer to the Carolina law school because the college law department is not approved by the American Bar Association. Names of the other two were not revealed. Atlanta, Ga.

Board of Trustees Meets, Refuses to Act on Applicants

The Pittsburgh Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 5-29-48

By A. M. RIVERA JR., Staff Correspondent

RALEIGH, N. C.—"The refusal of the Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina to consider the applications of five Negroes seeking admission to the professional schools, constitutes a denial," declared Herman L. Taylor, NAACP attorney, who predicted that the applicants will file suits to force the State to admit them to the University of North Carolina.

The executive committee of the UNC Trustee Board, at a meeting in Chapel Hill last week, declined to take action on the five applications, stating that the matter was beyond the authority of the executive committee, or the board of trustees, under the law.

NO STATUTE

Taylor told The Courier that inasmuch as there was no statute covering the matter, it was difficult for him to understand how the board concluded that they could not pass on the applications.

"The State is over a barrel," he said, "and the ruling of the trustees leave the courts as the only recourse for my clients and others seeking admission to graduate and professional schools which are being provided for whites and denied to Negroes."

Those who have applied for the UNC Law School are: James R. Walker, Statesville, and Harold T. Epps, Asheville. Interested in medicine are: Dewey M. Clayton, Timberlake, and James E. Thomas, Wilmington. James H. Henderson of Vance County has notified registration officials that he also plans to apply for admission to the medical school. Sat. 5-29-48

MARSHALL CONFERS

Taylor revealed that he and Atty. Thurgood Marshall, veteran of similar cases which have been won in the U. S. Supreme Court, are conferring that one or more suits will be filed soon in the Federal District Court.

He said, "I am not positive now, but it is my opinion that we will seek a declaratory judgement that North Carolina is discriminating against the Negroes in its graduate and professional schools, asking the courts to enjoin the State from continuing such discrimination."

NO VACANCIES

In all probability the first suit will be filed by James E. Thomas, chemistry instructor at Shaw University. Thomas, who was an ensign in the Navy, told this reporter that he wrote to the registrar last February and stated his desire to apply. He stated that in about a week he received a letter informing him that he did not have any vacancies in the class, which would begin in September of this year, but that if he was interested in starting in September, 1949, he could fill out an application.

Since filing his application Thomas has mailed his transcript and a recommendation from H. C. Perrin, his chemistry instructor, the receipt of which has been acknowledged by the dean of the medical school.

DEMANDS ACTION—James E. Thomas, Wilmington, N. C., instructor at Shaw University, plans to bring action through his attorney, Herman L. Taylor, to force the State of North Carolina to admit Negroes to the State's only medical school (the U. of N. C.). Thomas claims he was refused admission.

WHITBY OUSTED FROM OU PREXY'S OFFICE AFTER BARRED FEATURE WRITER REGISTERS PROTEST

"I want some racial equality myself," declared Ray Parr, Daily Oklahoman feature reporter, Wednesday afternoon when he protested the presence of Malcolm Whitby, Black Dispatch reporter, in the private office of President George L. Cross with six Negroes who sought to be admitted to graduate and doctorate schools of the university.

Whitby, who drove down with the party, was not suspected as a newspaperman when Dr. Cross admitted the group to his large private office, but Parr, who knew Whitby as a Black Dispatch roving reporter, and who had been barred along with a dozen quill pushers and photographers, registered his complaint with the secretary, seated at a desk in Dr. Cross' outer office.

The secretary relayed Parr's protest to Dr. Cross over the inter-office set, and the president immediately switched a button and replied, "There is no newspaper man here." Whitby said he immediately prepared to reveal his avocation when Dr. J. E. Fellows, Dean of Admissions, quickly responded, pointing to Whitby, "he's a Black Dispatch reporter," and exit went the reporter and a possible scoop."

As the disconsolate Whitby drifted back out the door to the outer office, the overflow of news writers, photographers and secretaries greeted him with loud laughs and Parr advised him, this was one fight he had been forced to make as a white man for racial equality. Whitby extended his hand to warmly greet the convert.

Following a near half-hour required for completion of admission blanks, the entire group of press representatives were admitted simulatneously for interviews with the six applicants.

Take Verbal Lashing

WASHINGTON

Reversing a decision of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma, the United States Supreme Court on Monday ordered the University of Oklahoma to admit Miss Ada Lois Sipuel to its law school.

Declaring that Miss Sipuel is entitled to the legal education afforded by her State, the Supreme Court in its decision stated:

"The State must provide it for her in conformity with the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment and provide it as soon as it does for applicants of any other group."

Rushed to Oklahoma

The mandate of the court was sent to the Board of Regents of the University of Oklahoma by air mail, Monday.

The text of the per curiam opinion follows:

"On Jan. 14, 1946, the petitioner, a Negro, concededly qualified to receive the professional legal education offered by the State, applied for admission to the School of Law of the University of Oklahoma, the only institution for legal education supported and maintained by the taxpayers of the State of Oklahoma.

"Petitioner's application for admission was denied solely because of her color.

"Petitioner then made application for a writ of mandamus in the district court of Cleveland County, Oklahoma. The writ of mandamus was refused and the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma affirmed judgment of the District Court.

Not Later—Now

"Petitioner is entitled to secure legal education afforded by a State institution. To this time, it has been denied her, although during the same period many white applicants have been afforded legal education by the State.

"The State must provide it for her in conformity with the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment and provide it as soon as it does for applicants of any other group.

"The judgment of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma is reversed and the case remanded to that court for proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

"The mandate shall issue forthwith.

"Reversed."

The decision, one of the speediest ever handed down, was generally expected inasmuch as attorneys for Oklahoma had taken a verbal lashing from the Justices on Thursday, when the two-day hearing closed.

Counsel for the State, Fred Hansen, assistant attorney general, and Maurice H. Merrill, dean of the Oklahoma University Law School, were embarrassed repeatedly on Thursday, closing day of the two-day hearing, by questions from all eight of the justices, who wanted to know why, during two years of litigation, Oklahoma has done nothing to afford Miss Sipuel relief.

Wants Doors Opened

Thurgood Marshall, NAACP special counsel, in the closing argument, declared that the "only opinion that will give justice to Miss Sipuel is to admit her to the Oklahoma University Law School promptly and that is the relief we seek."

Earlier he had pointed out that she had been denied entrance solely on the basis of color and that Oklahoma had made no efforts to give her a legal education.

Miss Sipuel, a graduate of Langston University, was denied the right to enter the Oklahoma University law school on Jan. 14, 1946, by the school's Board of Regents. The denial was upheld by the District Court of Cleveland County and by the Oklahoma State Supreme Court on April 29, 1947.

Gaines Case Involved

Attorneys for the defense, Mr. Marshall and Amos T. Hall of Tulsa, Okla., asked the High Court to overrule the State Supreme Court decision and to clarify the "separate but equal" doctrine which had been "whittled down" by the various State courts since the 1939 Supreme Court decision in the Gaines case.

In the Gaines case decision, handed down in December, 1938, the Supreme Court ruled that the University of Missouri could not bar a person on the ground of race and that States must provide equal educational facilities within the boundaries of the State.

Admits Constitutional Right

Hansen and Merrill declared that if Miss Sipuel had made application to the Board of Regents of Higher Education, and not to the Board of Regents of Oklahoma University as she did, she could have obtained a legal education as it would have been their duty to provide such an education.

Hansen also stated that Oklahoma was anxious to obey the Constitution and admitted that Miss Sipuel was entitled to a legal education under the 14th Amendment.

He added that she was rejected only because the public policy under the laws of Oklahoma is that colored persons can not attend schools with whites."

Separate Policies Proved

Referring to the argument that Miss Sipuel had not applied to the Board of Higher Education, Justice Rutledge asked, "To whom would students of other races apply?"

In reply, Hansen said, that they would apply to "the Board of Regents of Oklahoma University," as Miss Sipuel had done.

Had she applied to the Higher Education Board, Hansen emphasized, it would have been the duty of the regents to set up a separate school or to let her go to the university law school.

Justice Jackson then asked "How can you possibly say there is equal opportunity?" Hansen's answer, made in an almost inaudible voice, was a mere repetition of his statement of the Board of Regents' function and power to allocate funds for schools.

Contradicts Himself

Chief Justice Vinson queried Hansen on how the Board of Regents could permit Miss Sipuel to go to the university law school since the State law, according to his argument, prevents her from going there.

Hansen replied that he thought the board could manage it, adding that Oklahoma was one of 17 states with segregation laws and that no separate school had been established because there was only one applicant.

Time Element Cited

Then breaking in, Justice Jackson asked, "A law school for just one student wouldn't be equal; it wouldn't be much of a law school, would it?"

And then when Hansen admitted to the court that the State would have to open the new school promptly and said in the same breath that it might take time, Justice Douglas murmured, "She might be an old lady by that time."

Justice Franfurter inquired as to whether or not the board was empowered to furnish separate education in separate rooms.

This question finished Hansen, and he left the room under an obvious strain, leaving the remainder of the argument to Merrill.

Merrill was lashed with similar questions by the Justices as he outlined the university's position. Like Hansen, he insisted that there was no reason to establish a school for one student.

Maryland Case Cited

In rebuttal, Marshall declared that Oklahoma's segregated statut-es could not be used as a valid defense to deny a Constitutional right to Miss Sipuel, citing the University of Maryland case in which Donald Murray was admitted to the Maryland U. Law School although state segregated laws existed.

Pointing out the dismal failure of Oklahoma to provide any legal education for the petitioner, Marshall asserted that the Board of Regents of Higher Education did have "knowledge of" and "some character of notice" of Miss Sipuel's desire in spite of the fact that she did not write directly to it expressing her wishes.

He recalled that the board considered the point in a meeting, found that it did not have sufficient funds to establish a separate school and then did nothing about it. He asked the high court to take judicial notice of this fact.

Both Bound by Constitution

Marshall also pointed out that both the Board of Regents of Higher Education and the Board of Regent of Oklahoma University are bound to act under terms of the 14th Amendment.

"It is no way possible to equalize a law school with only one student, and compliance with the Constitution would be to admit Miss Sipuel promptly to the Universiety of Oklahoma law school," Marshall concluded.

Resuming his argument of Wednesday on Thursday noon, Marshall earlier had reiterated the NAACP's position in that the Gaines case did not apply.

He pointed out that Gaines had not written Lincoln University (Mo.) officials, as indicated by the defense, and that the only similar point involved was "Whether or not Oklahoma could exclude qualified colored applicants from its only state-supported law school?"

One Plus Nothing Not Equality

He also cited a previous Supreme Court ruling to the effect that scholarship aid does not meet the requirements of the 14th Amendment, and that the phrase "separate but equal" does not apply in the Sipuel case as "something must exist to show equality."

He asserted that Oklahoma courts were in error in trying to distinguish this case from the Gaines case.

Had they followed the Gaines decision there would have been no recourse but to admit Miss Sipuel to Oklahoma U. as it was apparent in the 1939 decision that Gaines had the right to enter the University of Missouri, he said.

Not Requested to Wait

He expressed the opinion that the Gaines decision did not mean that qualified applicants must wait for a school to be built, as the ruling clearly states that when no school is available the only relief is to admit the applicants to the only existing schools.

Marshall emphasized that he thought it necessary that the court's decision state whether or not the constitutional right entitles State universities to provide means of education for colored applicants the day they qualify for legal education the same as whites.

In response to a question from Justice Reed, Marshall declared that equal opportunity must exist when an applicant applies and not at some future time. Wherever color denies a person the rights there should be affirmative, clear-cut proof that equality exits.

He added that they were not asking for an overruling of the Gaines case, but for clarification.

Oklahoma Bars White Man Too

OKLAHOMA CITY—The State of

The jim-crow law school which was hastily thrown together after the United States Supreme Court ordered Oklahoma to either admit Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel-Fisher to the newly established University School of Oklahoma or provide a law school for Negroes, was opened Jan. 26. Mrs. Fisher refused to accept the improvised, segregated setup.

After Dean Jerome E. Hemry rejected Harrison's application on the ground that the petitioner was not of the Negro race, Harrison, a former managing editor of the Oklahoma City Times and a lieutenant colonel during World War II, declared that his application was made in good faith and that he would start classes im-not a Negro, the dean went into a conference with Dr. M. A. Nash of the Board of Regents for Higher Education, to give the request further consideration.

In commenting on his application, Mr. Harrison declared that State officials "are ducking in holes like a mole" on the question of segregation.

REGENT THINKS DUAL SYSTEM COST TOO MUCH

(A radio address by W. D. Mitchell, editor of the Ada Evening News, and member of the Board of Regents for Higher Education, over WKY, February 21, 1948).

"The Editor Speaks"

"What I say will be my own opinion and does not necessarily reflect opinions of any of the other eight Regents for Higher Education.

"The regents are doing all they can to afford facilities for graduate study for our Negro race, but we are faced with some difficulties that are almost insurmountable. The Supreme Court of the United States has not knocked out segregation laws, but it has said definitely that when facilities for education are offered white students at a tax supported institution—equal facilities must be offered Negroes. This state has been paying and is now paying Negro students doing graduate and professional study outside the state the difference in cost between attending the out-of-state colleges and universities and the cost of attending those within the state. This has worked fairly well in the past, but the United States Supreme Court says opportunity for out-of-state study is not enough; if wanted, it must be provided in the state for all races if provided for any.

The Oklahoma constitution prohibits white and Negro children from attending the same common schools. The statutes prohibit the two races from attending the same colleges and universities. Langston university, the only Negro state institution of higher learning, does only undergraduate work. Apparently the separate schools meet the federal requirements up to graduate level. But thus far no state facilities are available to the Negroes for graduate and professional study.

"The state must, therefore, provide facilities for the Negroes equal to all the graduate and professional work offered at the University in Norman, Oklahoma City, and the A. & M. college in a separate institution as branches of the University and or the A. & M. or we must admit them to the two white institutions.

"While the regents are now taking steps to provide the facilities on a segregated basis, we find there are three serious impediments. First: Oklahoma has a small Negro population and the Negro children drop out of school more quickly than do the white children. Attendance at Langston is below 1,000 and has seldom gone over that figure. The number of graduates has not as I recall ever exceeded 100 annually. That means that only a few each year will want graduate or professional work. Doing graduate work out of the state now are four Oklahoma Negro students in agriculture, two in business administration, one in engineering, one in law, two in medicine, two in nursing, and many of the other courses have similarly small numbers. Education courses attract many, but this is a back-log from the war and the requirement for a master's degree to teach in Negro high schools. A Negro graduate school would probably require more of the highest paid professors than there would be students.

"Second: It is almost impossible to get qualified Negroes with required degrees to man a graduate school. Only eight Negro Ph. D.'s were graduated from all the universities in the country last year. Every Negro college and university is trying to get them. There would be few if any available for an Oklahoma institution. And you must have Ph. D.'s to have an accredited graduate school.

"Third: The cost. To set up all the graduate courses, law and medicine at Langston or elsewhere would entail the spending of millions of dollars for capital outlay and more millions for operation. The cost per student would be many, many times the cost of training white men and women, and to set up some courses and not all would be ineffective so far as total segregation goes.

"These are three of the many difficulties we have encountered. Other states with segregation laws can afford complete universities, for the percentage of the population that is Negro and the number of Negroes would justify it.

"Oklahoma has by far the fewest Negroes of any state with segregation laws, only 168,000. Texas has almost a million. Georgia and Mississippi more than a million each.

"It seems to me that we must make up our minds whether we want to spend a great amount of money on a few Negroes with some question as to whether, with the small number, we can ever have effective graduate work, or admit graduate students to the white institutions. We can do nothing but abide by the segregation laws, and it may be the people of the state do not want Negroes in the white institutions regardless of cost or regardless of how few they may be.

The regional institutions the southern governors have been working on, in my opinion, would be an excellent solution of our problem, except for the fact they will not meet federal requirements. Remember the facilities must be equal and in the state if even one Negro asks for them.

"If the people feel it would be better to let the few Negro graduate and professional students attend the white schools they might get the legislature to modify the laws to that extent. If they feel segregation should be maintained on all levels, they should make up their minds they will have to pay for it, and that as a result of that expenditure the white institutions may suffer for funds. You can see it is both a social and an economic problem. The regents, however, must deal with the laws we now have, though I think we should go slow until the people through the legislature make their desire known."

Regent Cites State Law Ban Against Mixture

Says Statute "Not Declared Unconstitutional"

NORMAN, Okla. —(ANP)— University of Oklahoma and state officials are not completely defeated by the recent supreme court decision to admit Negroes to the law school next semester. According to a member of the university board of regents here last week, who did not wish his name to be used, there is a state law which prohibits Negroes and whites from attending the same schools and "the court did not, so far as I know, declare the law unconstitutional."

The case involved Miss Ada Lois Sipuel, 23, who was turned down two years ago when she applied to admission to the school. The supreme court ruled that Oklahoma must provide equal facilities for both Negro and white students.

REFUSE TO CONCEDE

However, university and state officials refused to concede that the supreme court had upset Oklahoma's segregation system. While they refused to comment for publication pending a meeting of the regents, Dr. M. A. Nash, the regents' chancellor, said, "The regents believe Oklahoma's problem is now one to be settled by the citizens through their legislature."

The state boards share the administration of the school Direct supervision is in the hands of regents, but the state group for higher education holds the purse strings. It is the concensus of opinion among the state regents that Negroes cannot be barred from the university unless the state spent millions to provide equal professional training facilities for them.

EQUAL DIVISION

Student opinion seems to be equally divided on the case, but a poll conducted by the student newspaper showed opinion predominantly against a complete breakdown of racial restrictions. University president, Dr. George L. Cross, took the position that he had no personal objections to admitting Negroes to the university.

Press comments from the Oklahoma Daily hold the belief that the school officials connot escape the decision. Meanwhile, Miss Sipuel is making plans to enroll in the school next semester.

According to Roscoe Dunjee, editor of the Black Dispatch and a NAACP leader, an Atlanta student interested in entering the university's medical school, "would probably make application also." The student was rejected for admission last year.

U.S. Negroes Decry Racism In Schools

NORMAN, Oklahoma, June 20 (R). — Three more American coloured men have raised the issue of racial segregation in schools in the Southern States by starting lawsuits against the State of Oklahoma claiming the right to enrol as students in the State university.

Their action may bring a Supreme Court decision to settle once and for all the issue of segregation in Southern schools.

Oklahoma's Answer To Supreme Court Ruling

WITHIN one week of the Supreme Court's decision ordering Oklahoma to provide law training for Mrs. ADA LOIS SIPUEL FISHER, the state had found a way, temporarily at least, to evade the real obligation placed upon it. The State Regents for Higher Education on Jan. 19 established a Negro school of law as a branch of Langston University in Oklahoma City. Negro spokesmen immediately said that there would be no acceptance of such a Jim Crow law school. Obviously, it will be equal to a standard law school in name only.

Oklahoma's state laws require separate schools. The state university to which Mrs. FISHER sought admission is located in Norman, an all-white town in which no Negroes have ever resided. Langston, a state school, is the only college-level institution for Negroes in the state. To meet the requirements of the Supreme Court's ruling, the new law school must be ready to admit and teach Mrs. FISHER by next Monday. If it is equal to the 40-year-old law school at the University of Oklahoma, it will be a miracle. The action in establishing the separate law school was directed last Saturday by the Oklahoma Supreme Court which directed the regents to act in conformity with Oklahoma's constitution and statutes requiring segregation. The issue is not settled in Oklahoma; of that all interested persons may rest assured.

New Brief On Segregated Schools Filed In U. S. Supreme Court

NEW YORK—A new attack on segregation of Negroes in separate schools was made last week by the American Civil Liberties Union in a brief filed in the United States Supreme Court, supporting the claim of a Negro girl to be admitted to the school of law of the University of Oklahoma.

The union, acting as friend of the court through its general counsel, Arthur Garfield Hays, supported by Prof. Walter Gellhorn of Columbia University Law School and Osmond K. Fraenkel of the New York bar, is intervening in the case of Ada Lois Sipuel, which is handled by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The university denied Miss Sipuel admission to the law school as a Negro, and the Oklahoma Supreme Court held that her only recourse was to "request that a separate law school for Negroes be established."

UNION'S BRIEF

The union's brief challenges the basic arguments for segregation in education. Asserting that to require a Negro to ask for a new school, possibly for a single student, puts him at an initial disadvantage as against white students, it argued that even if there were a separate school, Miss Sipuel would be denied the "educational value of contact with other students." "She is entitled," contended the union, "to a legal education equal to that of the white students who could contribute to her education as well as their own."

CHALLENGE CONSTITUTIONALITY

The union's lawyers challenged the constitutionality of any segregated education and argued that segregation was intended as a "brand" which no claim to provide equal accommodation could eliminate. "Segregation in itself serves no rational purpose other than that found in the asserted inferiority of the Negro . . . Can Oklahoma honestly say today that the official segregation of petitioner and her exclusion from the school of law of the University of Oklahoma, where only white may attend, is based any less on a notion of inferiority than would be a brand or a chain?"

Regents Claim Legislature Must Provide

Answer To Suit Admits Official Responsibility

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—(NNPA)—The State Regents for Higher Education informed the United States District Court here last week that they cannot set up a Jim Crow graduate school for colored students unless the legislature appropriates funds for that purpose.

The letter stating the position of the regents was included in a brief filed with the court by Fred Hanson, Assistant Attorney General of Oklahoma.

The regents said that when G. W. McLaurin, Langston University professor, and five other students applied for admission to the University of Oklahoma graduate school last January 2, the state board did not have funds to establish the courses at Langston, nor any other course of instruction now given at the University of Oklahoma but not given at Langston.

For that reason the regents have not established nor begun to establish the requested courses, they said.

The brief filed by Hansen admitted that the regents have a mandatory duty to provide equality of educational opportunity for colored students. Under decisions of the United States Supreme Court, Oklahoma must provide equal educational facilities or admit colored students to the University of Oklahoma for courses that are not offered at Langston.

Hanson pointed out the regents cannot receive any additioal appropriations until the legislature meets in January, unless a special session is called.

APPROPRIATION SEEN

"It mut be presumed that when the legislature, meets in January it will make such an appropriation and thereby enable the regents to carry out their said mandatory duty," he continued.

"Defendants allege that the equal protection clause of the fourteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States will not be violated if until the time the legislature will be able to make said appropriation and the regents to thereon perform their said mandatory duty, the proper authorities of the University of Oklahoma decline to admit applying qualified Negroes there to."

The question of what is a reasonable time for the state to act apparently will figure as major factor in the case.

"In our view, said time may vary in accordance with the state's ability to perform," Hanson stated in a brief filed with the court.

"In the instant case, the state cannot perform unless and until the legislature makes an adequate appropriation."

The fact that eight months will have elapsed by the time the federal court decision is given September 24, without the state making a move to provide the requested facilities, is being stressed by the plaintiffs.

The attorney general's office in a brief filed with the legislative council last Feburary upheld a ion authorities in rejecting the 'one-day notice" applications but warned that unless the state took some action to provide such facilities before opening of the term, there was a strong possibility some court would order the Negroes admitted to the University of Oklahoma.

The state regents for higher education were able to establish a separate law school at the capitol by use of an appropriation made by Governor Turner from his emergency and contingency fund.

However, to set up a complete graduate school for colored students substantially equal to that of the University of Oklahoma, would run into millions of dollars.

Even if the legislature were called into special session, there appears considerable doubt legislators would be willing to approve the vast sums necessary to set up such a school. All indications point to an intense battle for available funds inthe next session to finance services already estabilshed.

School Admission Sought by Negro

OKLAHOMA CITY—(AP)—A retired Negro professor asked for a permanent Federal Court injunction to force his admission to the University of Oklahoma.

The Negro, C. W. McLaurin, took the action after the university's regents failed to act upon a recent Federal Court ruling that McLaurin must be provided equal educational opportunities at the university's graduate school.

White Oklahoman is ashamed of his race

OKLAHOMA CITY—John Strauss, of Oklahoma City, is that oddity in this state, a white man who is ashamed of being white. So Strauss wrote to Judge Justin Hinshaw, district judge of Cleveland county, who ruled against Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel in her effort to enter the University of Oklahoma.

Strauss, who said he is for "complete political, economic, and social equality of all races," told the jurist:

"Your ruling in the case of Mrs. Fisher which, intentionally or not subverts the decision of the U.S. Supreme Court, will hold up the sorely needed improvement of relations between the races, but it cannot stop it forever." Strauss added that "the world will take a very dim view of such practitioners of democracy as you are."

Segregated Class Planned

Regents Hold Up Action Until Nov.

DENY INJUNCTION

Change in State Law Suggested by Court

NORMAN, Okla.—Bowing to an oral Federal Court decision, the Board of Regents of the University of Oklahoma has instructed the university to make classrooms and profesosrs available to G. W. McLaurin of Oklahoma City on a segregated basis.

However, the Regents decided not to act on McLaurin's application until November. McLaurin is a former professer at Langston University and has applied for admission to the graduate school of education to work toward his doctor's degree.

The State's Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson last week held that the University of Oklahoma must admit colored students or its graduate classes in education would be closed.

He added, however, that the Regents could delay action temporarily pending a formal decision by the Federal Court.

Explained to Governor

Williamson's interpretation was given to Governor Roy J. Turner and Dr. George L. Cross, president of the university. The Board of Regents held a four-hour session with Williamson and the Governor about the matter.

Because of the State's segregation law, Mr. McLaurin has twice been denied admission to the university.

The Federal Court now has declared that McLaurin is entitled to attend classes and receive a doctor's degree in education from a State school. However, the State has no colored school offering graduate courses in education.

Injunction Denied

Following the second refusal of the Regents, last week, to admit McLaurin, NAACP lawyers immediately filed, with the three-judge Federal Court, a petition for further relief seeking an order from that court compelling acceptance of Mr. McLaurin prior to October 13.

However, the court refused to issue an injunction compelling admission of McLaurin.

The court has ordered Governor Turner to make the necessary changes in the State's segregation laws to comply with its ruling.

FIGHT LOOMS OVER SECOND O. U. ENROLLEE

Efforts to enroll Mrs. Maurice Hancock Wilson in the graduate school of social science were launched Thursday afternoon when Editor Roscoe Dunjee left for the University of Oklahoma with the young woman.

Dunjee and Attorney Hall raised the question of Mrs. Wilson's admission Wednesday when they took G. W. McLaurin to the University, but Acting President Roscoe Cate said he would have to consult the attorney general before he could answer the propounded question.

Thursday morning Cate advised Editor Dunjee in a telephone conversation that Williamson's assistants said Wednesday they would not answer a hypothetical question, but that if Mrs. Wilson applied as McLaurin originally applied.

It is quite likely that if Mrs. Wilson applied for admission Thursday she would be denied the same rights as McLaurin had when he was refused admission. Mrs. Wilson had the same time when McLaurin originally applied.

Open New Attack On U. of Okla. Bias

White Students Cremate Copy of 14th Amendment, Send Ashes to President Truman

(Special to The Pittsburgh Courier)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—An eight-pronged attack to wreck Oklahoma's forty-year policy of segregated education was under way last week as justices of the U. S. Supreme Court were behind closed doors in Washington studying the assault launched on Oklahoma's defiance of that tribunal's order to grant "equal" education immediately.

Six Negro students filed a mass demand for entry into four different graduate departments of the University of Oklahoma, adding impetus to the move paced by Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel-Fisher who has rejected the makeshift law school set up by the State in three rooms at the State Capitol under the name of the Langston University School of Law.

Three men and three women comprised the group filing for admission into the "white" school, and President George L. Cross of the university found five of their transcripts in order, and requested further information on the sixth. Meanwhile, Oklahoma's Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson advised the school's Board of Regents to reject the six applications.

There was a solemn atmosphere on the campus at the "white" university, however, for last Thursday an estimated 1,000 white students staged a demonstration condemning the bias against the Negro applicants and protesting against the State's action.

In a sombra ceremony, dense with poignant drama, they cremated a copy of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, enclosed the ashes in a black box and mailed it to President Harry S. Truman at the White House.

The part of the Fourteenth Amendment ceremoniously cremated read: "No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States . . . nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

At the same moment Atty. William R. Ming, associate professor of law at the University of Chicago, arrived here and began an inspection of the so-called "equal" facilities furnished by the State when it set up the Langston University School of Law for Mrs. Fisher.

Mr. Ming, a recognized legal expert, was here in that capacity as a representative of the NAACP, as it buttressed its battle lines to force the State to open the doors of its "white" schools to all citizens alike, regardless of color. He came at the specific request of Thurgood S. Marshall, chief NAACP legal counsel.

Mr. Ming's mission was to determine the "equality" comparisons between the makeshift school and the law school at the University of Oklahoma, which he also inspected. His findings were to be used in further legal action by the NAACP should it be necessary. The scale of differences in facilities would form the basis of any further action.

The demonstration wave spread to Langston University where Negro students planned a rally against segregation. The students at the University of Oklahoma called for a second demonstration against bias.

Here in Oklahoma City, despite the statement made by Dean Jerome Hemri to The Courier last week that the Langston University School of Law, of which he had been namd dean, would "begin classes on Thursday morning, regardless of whether we have any students or not," his faculty members returned to their law practices after no one had applied for admission late Wednesday evening. Officially the school was still open.

Back in Washington, Mrs. Fisher's attorneys had told the Supreme Court that Oklahoma had, in effect, defied the Court's order in that the school set up here for Mrs. Fisher was not "equal" to that at the University of Oklahoma. The Court had ordered that equal facilities be provided for her immediately.

The six new applicants for admission are James Bond, Langston biology professor; M. A. Dillon, Langston honor student, seeking graduate work in architectural engineering; Helen Holmes, Oklahoma City, seeking entrance to the graduate school in business administration; Mauderie Hancock Wilson and Ivor Tatum, also of Oklahoma City, seeking a Ph. D. in school administration, and George McLaurin.

A great twist to the situation was developed here when a white man applied for entrance into the "Negro" school of law. He was 57-year-old Walter M. Harrison, former newspaperman and ex-Army officer. His application was at first rejected, but later he was told to await a final answer.

Seeking a way out of the current dilemma at the "white" university, its president, Dr. Cross, busied himself last week seeking information on the possible existence of "equal" facilities of education outside of Oklahoma in the fields desired by the six newest applicants.

Proposed Law Full Of Holes

(Special to The Courier)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—Behind the new move to amend the Oklahoma constitution to allow Negro students to enter "white" schools under certain conditions, keen observers sense a shrewd maneuver to continue, rather than abolish racial segregation. It may offset the effect of State court rulings and what may happen in four suits filed by Negroes.

State officials admitted last week that a legislative group was studying a bill to admit Negroes to hitherto "white" universities and colleges for studies in classwork not being given at Langston University, the only Negro State institution in Oklahoma and to which a jim crow law school was recently added after the U. S. Supreme Court ruling in the Fisher case.

EX-LANGSTONITE SUES

But last week G. W. McLaurin, former Langston faculty member, filed a suit asking an injunction to prevent State and university authorities from denying him admission to the graduate School of Education of the University of Oklahoma at Norman. His suit was the fourth of a series. Three others have just been routed to the Oklahoma State Supreme Court, following unfavorable decisions handed down by District Judge T. Justin Hinshaw.

Ruling on suits also seeking admission to the University of Oklahoma and filed by three Negro women, Judge Hinshaw denied their pleas for admission, holding that Oklahoma had complied with the U. S. Supreme Court order for "equal education facilities" when it set up the law school at Langston University.

TO STATE COURT

Attorney Amos T. Hall of Tulsa, heading the NAACP counsel in the Fisher case and the two later cases, conferred with Thurgood S. Marshall, chief of the NAACP legal staff and announced immediately that the decision would be appealed to the Oklamoha State Supreme Court.

The women were Mrs. Ada Fisher, Mrs. Mauderie Hancock-Wilson and Miss Helen Maxine Holmes. They maintained that the jim crow school was not equal to the State's law school.

WHAT CAN HAPPEN

Although granting that the proposed amending of the Oklahoma constitution would erase racial segregation to a certain extent, the observers pointed out that its only effect would be to admit Negro students to "white" schools for courses not offered at Langston.

Then, they further observe, since Oklahoma judges have already ruled that the jim crow facilities meet the requirements of the U. S. Supreme Court order, there would be no legal grounds for admitting Negroes to "white" State institutions since there would be no classwork which they could by that time obtain in the Negro institutions.

Likewise, since the case of Mrs. Fisher has already been ruled on twice previously—and with adverse decisions—there is little cause to believe that similar decisions will not be forthcoming in the later cases.

ONE BRIGHT SPOT

The only bright spot in the picture is that the "white" university at Norman has some seventy graduate courses not now offered at Langston, and that it well pose a difficult problem for the State to set up that many new courses at Langston, unless they choose the fields in which they are certain there will be no Negro applicants and set up the courses in the other fields.

But Attorney Hall annuonced that he would begin another attack on the 40-year-old Oklahoma segregation laws in the United States' District Court.

Plan Appeal On College Jim Crowism

OKLAHOMA CITY — The federal court ruled here last week that the University of Oklahoma may continue to segregate its single Negro student in the classroom.

Suit was brought to the three-man court by G. W. McLaurin, graduate student in education, to end his classroom segregation. Ever since he was admitted to the university this fall, he has had to sit alone in an alcove, although students and teachers have expressed their displeasure at the arrangement.

In delivering its decision, the the court said: "The Fourteenth Amendment does not abolish distinction based upon race or color, nor was it intended to endorse social equality between classes and races."

Counsel for McLaurin, Atty. Hall, replied that he "respectfully differs with the court" and believes "the question of social equality does not enter into the equation at all. The question is whether university officials can segregate on the basis of a state statute held to be invalid".

Hall contends the university's segregation policy was nullified last month when a special federal court order told Oklahoma university to enroll McLaurin.

But the court held that "the Constitution does not authorize us to obliterate social or racial distinctions which the state has traditionally recognized as a basis for classifications for purposes of education and other public administration."

Oklahoma Faces New Negro School Problem

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 24—(AP)—The State of Oklahoma was faced today with allowing an added Negro professor to attend its all-white University of Oklahoma, or hurriedly establishing a graduate school.

A special three-judge federal court yesterday heard G. W. McLaurin's suit against the state's college segregation laws, then emphasized Oklahoma should provide equal facilities for Negroes.

A final decision will be handed down by the court Sept. 24.

McLaurin tried unsuccessfully to gain admission to the university last January. He is seeking a doctorate in school administration.

The ranking member of the panel, Judge A. P. Murrah of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, said:

"The duty of this state is unmistakably clear and we think you ought to get about it."

Thurgood Marshall, chief attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and McLaurin's counsel, said the suit attacked the constitutionality of Oklahoma's laws against segregation in colleges.

Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson, defending the state, said Oklahoma recognized its obligations to give Negro citizens equal education but said the state needed time to establish the schools.

Oklahoma Court Order Hits White Students

OKLAHOMA CITY---Three Southern states last week ordered studies of higher education facilities for Negroes in an effort to meet what they call "problems" posed by a United States Supreme Court decision.

The states were referring to a unanimous Supreme Court ruling that the University of Oklahoma must immediately admit Ada Lois Sipuel, who was barred from its law school because she is a Negro.

At the same time, Miss Sipuel arrived here preparatory to attempting to enroll at the University at Norman. Expressing a hope she might make friends with her fellow students, she said.

"Seventy per cent of the university student body voted last year to admit me. They held a mass meeting and gave me a huge bouquet of red and white carnations. The state of Oklahoma may not know it, but I think perhaps their whole silly law of segregation is crumbling - forever and ever."

OKLAHOMA CITY--In a hurried ruling Saturday, the Oklahoma Supreme court ordered the state board of regents to provide a legal education for Ada Lois Sipuel under state segregation laws. Scores of white students may suffer under the ruling, because U.S. Supreme court ordered Miss Sipuel enrolled in law school before any new applicants are accepted at the all-white state school. Thurgood Marshall, NAACP counsel flew here Sunday to discuss the situation with Roscoe Dunjee, who financed the Sipuel case..

Humiliation Of Jim Crow Told Court By Oklahoma U. Student

NEW YORK--G. W. McLaurin, a graduate student at the University of Oklahoma who has been segregated in his classes there, testified last week before a three-man Federal court in Oklahoma that the experience was highly "humiliating."

Later the judges asked the NAACP to file a brief giving additional data on the Association's motion for further relief. At the same time, the university will also submit a brief backing up its claim that its officials have the right and power to segregate, just as they have the power to set the time of the classes, etc.

The national office of the NAACP revealed that they would point to the case of Mendez vs. Westminister School District of California, in their brief. Mendez was a Mexican child whom the school tried to bar, despite the fact that there was no California law calling for segregation. The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in California held that the child could not be segregated in the absence of any statutes.

Inasmuch as the three-man federal court in Oklahoma has already held in a first hearing that McLaurin could not be excluded, the current hearing turns on the point of powers to segregate in the absence of any state law calling for segregation.

al," McLaurin said.

McLaurin will take twelve credit hours, working toward a doctor's degree in school administration. His first class was educational sociology.

The student said he will commute to Norman from Oklahoma City "for the time being." No plans have been made for providing lunch facilities for him at the university.

McLaurin has three children, all of whom have gone into graduate training after completing bachelor degrees. They are: Phullis McLaurin, who received a master's degree from Howard University, Washington, D. C.; Dunbar, who holds a doctor's degree from the University of Illinois, and Geoffre, who holds a master's degree from Kansas University and has worked toward his doctorate at the Universities of Illinois and Colorado.

Negro Files Suit to End Okla. School Segregation

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. (AP)—G. W. McLaurin, Negro who formerly was on the faculty of Langdon Negro University in Oklahoma, attacked the state's segregation laws in Federal District Court today.

He filed suit asking an injunction to prevent state and University of Oklahoma authorities from denying him admission to the Graduate School of Education.

Only last Monday, the district court of Cleveland County—in which the all-white University of Oklahoma is located—denied petitions of three Negro women to compel the university to enroll them for graduate studies.

Amos T. Hall, Negro attorney of Tulsa, gave notice of appeal to the State Supreme Court in the case of three women—Ada Fisher, Mauderie Hancock-Wilson and Helen Maxine Holmes.

The Supreme Court of the United States last January ordered Oklahoma to provide Mrs. Fisher with immediate facilities equal to those for white students in the law courses she requested.

The state established a law school for Negroes at Oklahoma City—as a branch of Langston. Mrs. Fisher refused to enter, claiming it was not equal. No other Negroes have enrolled.

Unstandardized Prejudice

With Oklahomans expecting Tuesday a decision in the McLaurin school case, in which McLaurin seeks to take graduate work in school administration at the University of Oklahoma, it is well for us to take stock of what the South is doing in a general way respecting the equal education of Negroes.

In Oklahoma, we should remember, there is no effort whatsoever to give Negroes graduate training except through the abortive system of out-state scholarships, which forces the student to borrow money with which to go to school, with slight chance of geting but a small portion of same refunded.

It is unthinkable the inconsequential amount of money allowed by the state board of education, and one young woman reported recently that she had been advised by a state official she will not be paid for the first year, but will be paid for subsequent years. The interminable red tape through which Negro students in this state must climb before they secure the inadequate stipend that trickles through the department of education is well nigh unbelievable.

But while Oklahoma continues to abort higher education for Negrces, other states in the Deep South have taken a different slant at the picture which in many respects puts Oklahoma to shame. Let us take Texas for example. While Texas still insists upon a dual system of education, those in authority down there have finally arrived in the decision that the laborer is worthy of his hire. This is wholly untrue in Oklahoma, where inadequate salaries and facilities are foisted upon the Negro group.

The Langston law school installed at the capitol is a fitting example of what the state seeks not to do. It negates completely the effort of Negroes to secure graduate training by throwing together a costless, makeshift "quickie" law school that benefits no one but the instructors. Think of this! The state is willing to pay fifty thousand dollars to white instructors to operate a fake, but unwilling to spend a dime upon the education of those who seek education in law. The testimony of very competent authorities in the legalistic world is already on record regarding this travesty.

But Texas has at least made a gesture that seems to have substance in it, despite the fact the Black Dispatch does not believe there can be any equality and justice in the atmosphere of segregation. Texas is paying its new president of Texas University for Negroes, located at Houston, a salary of $17,000 per annum, plus an entertainment fee of $5,000. When it is recalled that previously the top salaries for Negro college presidents range around $6,500, it can readily be seen that the Lone Star state officials have at least put one foot forward. In addition to this, faculty members of the new university are being paid comparable salaries.

Over in Maryland, the state board of education recently upped the salary of the Negro president of its state school to $15,000, with an entertainment fee of $3,000. This looks like an honest effort to deal with a situation which is wrong from the bottom up.

To show, however, there is no standardized thinking among Southern authorities respecting the higher education of Negroes, Kentucky has recently come to the front with a scandalous proposal that Negroes attend the white university and commute each day 26 miles to sit in separate classes. Kentucky thus adopts a subterfuge as does Oklahoma, and the Kentucky concoction goes still farther in not only depriving Kentucky Negroes from securing equal educational opportunities within the confines of the state, but it forces the unlucky student to sign a waiver to his rights to go out of the state for special training.

Here's what the Kentucky waiver binds the Negro student to. We publish same with the hope that no such shameful dodge of responsibility will be indulged in by school authorities in Oklahoma.

"I, the undersigned," says part of the waiver, "desiring to pursue a course of education and fully realizing that the Commonwealth of Kentucky has made ample provisions for me to obtain the prescribed course of study desired by me within the boundaries of Kentucky . . . desire to pursue my course of study outside of Kentucky . . . In consideration of cush grant (the funds to pay for out-of-state education) I hereby waive any and all rights that I may have to obtain an education along the lines and in the course of study desired by me at any institution provided by the Commonwealth of Kentucky . . ."

Civilization has hitherto appeared to disappear at the Arkansas border, but through all of the educational gloom Arkansas today beams as a shining light. Who would have thought that Arkansas would have been the first state in the Deep South to accept Negroes in graduate schools on an unsegregated basis. Earlier in the year the folk up around Little Rock decided to accept a Negro boy on a segregated basis in its law school, and within a six-month period that plan seems to have worked so well that a Negro girl is now to be accepted in the school of medicine on an unsegregated basis. Hats off to the type of social progress that is developing in the Delta swamps of Arkansas. It puts to shame the reaction of a people with whom Oklahoma Negroes have voted for and with for a quarter of a century.

One thing this hodge-podge planning does for Negroes down South is to leave them no standardized system for higher education. It stands to reason that Texas is planning only for Texans and Arkansas for citizens of that state. This sort of scrutiny of state rights seems to put local self government in an extremely bad light. It exposes the variables of prejudice to which the Negro must submit in an atmosphere where every little domestic government is a law unto itself.

The Educational Fight

Between now and when the Oklahoma Legislature convenes in January, citizens of Oklahoma, both black and white, can do much to incline state representatives and senators to a rational and proper approach to the question of graduate training for Negroes. It is a challenge facing every liberal-minded person in the state who can find time and opportunity to confer with his state representative either in person or by letter respecting this vitally important issue.

Keep in mind that the state senator and representative is your elected official whom you have a right to advise as to what you think the law should be. We have in mind belief that your legislator will take kindly to any suggestion you may make respecting this subject. First of all, he will want to represent the majority of his constituency, but if the minority is vociferous and blatant while you are silent, your representative can easily make the mistake assuming the minority is the majority.

There are two angles and viewpoints we believe should be presented to the legislators prior to the next session. (1) The utter lack of equality in educational opportunity for Negroes in Oklahoma or anywhere else in the Southland; (2) The colossal cost required to bring the Negro school structure up to the standard of the whites. We believe the battle is won if these two points alone are stressed. We have discovered that millions of fair-minded whites do not know the vicious differential existing between white and black education, and express desire to do something about it when "separate" schools are stripped naked and bare.

The next step in this discussion is to show how utterly impossible it is for the State of Oklahoma to maintain a dual system of education. In the South we have a beer income and a champagne appetite. This can be easily shown with figures assembled by the U. S. Department of Education. The South, in truth, is not financially able to support one educational structure on parity with the North and East.

Some of the inequalities, and what it will cost to achieve parity was exposed last week when the state superintendent of education of Virgina announced it would cost $300,000,000 to bring the Negro physical school plant up to the level of the whites in that state. If it takes that much to do the job in Virginia, what would it take to complete such a job in Mississippi, where half of the common school classes are taught in

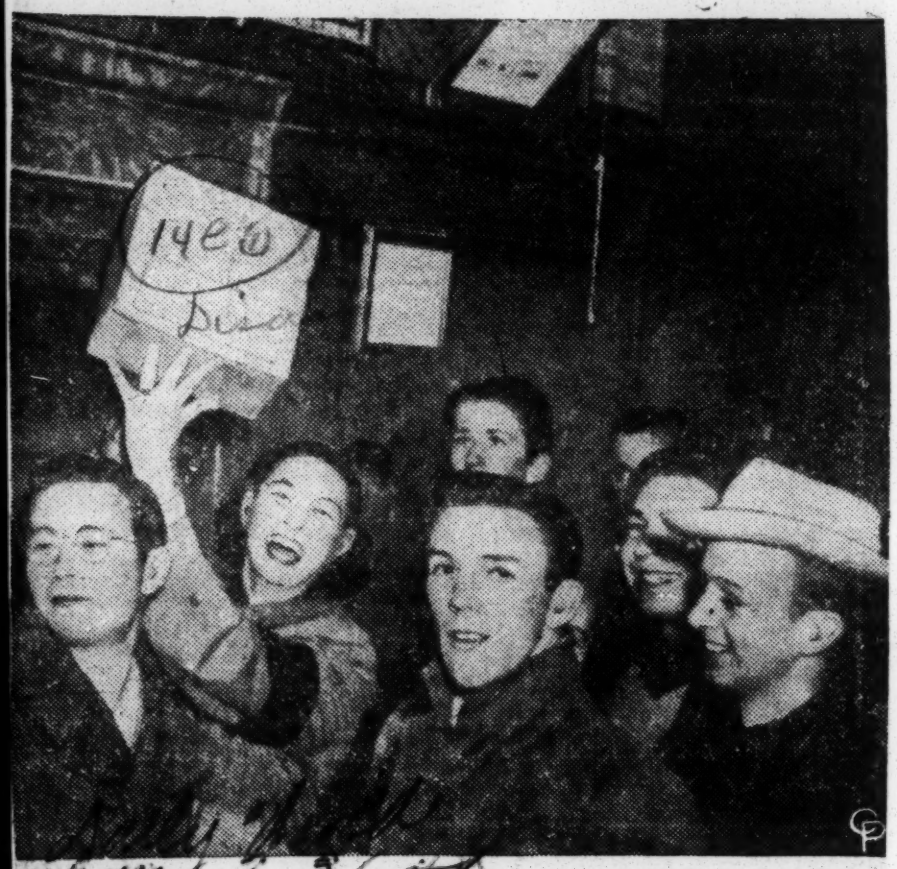
STUDENTS PROTEST NEGRO BAN



A GROUP OF STUDENTS of Oklahoma University are shown in the post office at Norman, Okla., as they prepared to mail a package to President Truman containing the ashes of a copy of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution. They burned the amendment, which guarantees civil rights, in protest against the University's ban on negro students. Holding the package aloft is Jody Casey, a professor's daughter. "SEPARATE BUT EQUAL"

This is what the latest compromise in drawing the color line looks like. Forced by a court decision, the University of Oklahoma last week reluctantly admitted its first Negro student, G. W. McLaurin, 54—but seated him in an anteroom off the main classroom. Able to see & hear the professor, McLaurin thereby presumably gets the "equal" education the courts require. But he is also kept "separate" from his white classmates, as Oklahoma's state Jim Crow law demands.

Students Stage Rally for Negroes' School Rights

LANGSTON, Okla.—The student movement seems to be spearheading the comeback of progressive forces in this state on the front of struggle against Jimcrow. A rally on the Langston University campus last Tuesday night marked a break in the period of relative inactivity among progressive forces.

The rally was the product of a joint committee established on the University of Oklahoma and Langston University campuses. The committee was set up to spark the fight for equal education for Negroes. It received the full backing of the local National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The rally will speed the formation of a mass lobby to attend the state legislature early in January. Out of this, it is expected to establish a permanent lobby. Wide distribution of literature is already under way.

Jan. 12 of this year, 18 days before students of the University of Oklahoma burned a copy of the 14th Amendment in an impressive mass protest against the stalling tactics of jimcrow state officials, the Supreme Court of the United States handed down a decision in the Sipuel Case suggesting, but not ordering, the complete removal of racial barriers at the graduate level in Oklahoma colleges.

Since that time the state administration and the courts, encouraged by the absence of further action, have become steadily bolder in their obvious determination to cancel the Supreme Court decision. The latest decision, handed down by the District Court, allows for the removal of the one Negro student, W. G. McLaurin, Ex-instructor at Langston admitted to the University Graduate School of Education on a jimcrow basis—if "equal" facilities are made available at Langston University.

THE FEBRUARY demonstration caught reactionary elements in Oklahoma flatfooted. Since February, however, every effort of both the outright jimcrow forces and the cautious 'liberals' of the O. U. administration has tried to prevent further militant action by the students.

On the campus effort has been organized chiefly through the office of the Director of Student Affairs. Director Paul McMinn has succeeded in collecting around himself a small social-democrat block, composed chiefly of members of the Student Senate, which functions under his office.

This bloc has worked consistently to disrupt any organized action beyond the sponsorship of "respectable" speakers and conferences. Their tactics have ranged from violent red-baiting to denunciation of mass action of any sort as "mobism."

For more than two months, these students have successfully paralyzed the Equal Education Committee, the only organization on campus devoted solely to the segregation issue. This coupled with the failure of the Progressive Party to concentrate sufficient energy on the problem during the summer, accounted for the relative lack of action in the past eight months.

Many students were drawn into political action for the first time by the equal education struggle. A large percentage of this group has been whittled away by the lack of a clear line of developing action during this period and by the outright confusion and harassment exploited by the social-democrat group.

However, in the first week of December, seven members of the Equal Education Committee read themselves out of the organization after failing in an attempt to block action proposals and to dissolve the group. In the few days following the resignation of this clique, an action program developed rapidly.

Plenty of money, no students at jim crow state school

OKLAHOMA CITY — Scholarless Langston University law school, set up in obedience to the Supreme Court's ruling that Negroes must have equal educational opportunity, is filthy rich, it was apparent this week.

The law school administration gave the jim crow school a $35,000 budget, which includes $27,000 for faculty salaries; $3,650 for books and magazines; and lesser amounts for other expenses.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — (ANP)—Immediate action to take the case of G. W. McLaurin, charging discrimination because of segregation at the University of Oklahoma, against the school to the U. S. Supreme Court will be taken, Thurgood Marshall, NAACP attorney, announced here last week.

Univ. Need Admit Only One Negro Under Present Ruling, Attorney General Rules

Pittsburgh Pa

OKLAHOMA CITY — Racial barriers at University of Oklahoma came tumbling down here recently, but in the opinion of State's Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson, the open door policy applied only to the one Negro, G. W. McLaurin, who was admitted on a jim-crow basis, Oct. 13.

The Attorney General's surprising statement advised the university's president, Dr. George L. Cross, that the University of Oklahoma was under "no legal obligation" to admit a second Negro applicant, Mrs. Mauderie Hancock-Wilson.

The order to the university to admit Mr. McLaurin was made by a Federal court which ruled that Oklahoma must furnish equal educational facilities to Negroes. Mr. McLaurin is a student now, but on a segregated basis.

The ruling in the McLaurin case only applied to his application, according to the Oklahoma attorney general.

Mrs. Wilson, who wants to enroll to work for a master's degree in sociology, may have to utilize the courts in her effort to gain admission.

Court Orders Salary Equality in Schools of Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 16 (AP) —Oklahoma Negro school teachers won a Federal District Court order today assuring them pay scales equal with white instructors.

Federal Judge Edgar S. Vaught signed the order, against the Oklahoma City school board and county officials, prohibiting discrimination in pay scales solely because of race.

The case was brought by Emme Lee Freeman, a Negro teacher at Douglas High School here. Since it was filed salary adjustments have been made. Counsel agreed to stipulations to permit Judge Vaught to issue an order to serve as a guide for possible future cases.

Oklahoma Court Bars Negroes From University

Norman, Okla., Aug. 2 (AP).—A State Court today denied admission to the University of Oklahoma to three Negro women. Negro leaders announced they would carry the fight against Oklahoma's racial segregation laws again to the United States Supreme Court.

One of the three rejected was Mrs. Ada Fisher of Chickasha who for more than two years has waged a court fight to enter the university law school.

The others were Mauderie Hancock-Wilson, and Helen Maxine Holmes, both of Oklahoma City.

District Judge T. Justin Hinshaw denied court orders sought by the three women to compel the university to enroll them for graduate studies.

Amos T. Hall, Tulsa Negro attorney, gave notice of appeal to the State Supreme Court.

Simultaneously, Hall announced he would begin another attack on Oklahoma's segregation statutes in United States District Court in Oklahoma City within a few days. That suit also will seek to compel admission of Negroes to white schools when equal facilities for the two races are not provided.

The attorney indicated both cases would be carried to the nUited States Supreme Court.

Columnist Proud Of Prof. McLaurin; Doesn't Think He's An 'Uncle Tom'

WHITE folks are squirming no end about the Supreme Court's ruling of equal education within States' borders. But the NAACP pushed the case through and won. A pat on the back for them and for Walter White, Thurgood Marshall, Charles Houston and all the rest who spark-plugged this legal fight.

Pittsburgh Courier

The decision is final and no Southern State can get around it no matter how they wiggle. This thing of prejudice has just got to go and the school case is a major break for the Negro. Squirm and dodge if they will, Southern whites, and for that matter, Northern whites, have to face up to it.

Mr. Cayton

They have to face up to it because of the world situation—a phony democracy, communism, and the rising spirit of the colonials. The aspirations of non-white people throughout the world and the fear of communism are going to force America, and to a lesser extent England, to get over their emotional, irrational color prejudice.

THAT'S THE WAY it is. That's the larger picture. But in this piece I want to get a little chuckle out of the zipping and zooming that are taking place south of the "Smith and Weston" line.

Here's what the Supreme Court decision meant. Every Southern State has to build a separate and equal university for Negroes. Just imagine the expense that this would mean to Mississippi where the larger part of the population is Negro! In addition to their prejudices it would cost a bit of change to build a college for Negroes—"separate but equal."

Now let's look at what the jumping and dodging white Southerners are doing. To get out of this dilemma Oklahoma pulled a neat trick. That State has been called the worst from every point of view, economically, culturally and in its hatred toward the Negro. They had an intermarriage law barring the marriage of all Caucasians with non-white people. But when the Indians struck oil and became millionaires the State Legislature passed another law declaring that whites could marry Indians, but Negroes couldn't. That made "honorary Aryans" out of the Indians just like Hitler later did for some Jews. That's Oklahoma for you.

NOW COMES THE Superior Court case and they still don't want to put out any money. Mr. G. W. McLaurin, retired professor, wanted to do graduate work. In view of the Superior Court decision, and as he lives close, it seemed the natural thing for McLaurin to apply for entrance to the University of Oklahoma. (He couldn't be denied on educational grounds as he is probably better educated than most of the white graduate students. This threw the Governor and the Regents in a dilemma.) The United States Superior Court had made a ruling; Oklahoma State Court had upheld it; but the Oklahoma State laws were against mixed schools.

The Regents of the University—doubtless instructed by the Governor—pulled a fast one by instructing Dr. George L. Cross, university president, to make plans to admit McLaurin, but give him classes individually. This they achieved by seating him in an ante-room off the main classroom. I hope Mr. McLaurin has good eyes, otherwise he won't be able to see the blackboard from where he sits—that is, if they use blackboards in Oklahoma.

Sat 10-30-48

I AM RIGHT proud of Mr. McLaurin. It took a lot of guts to sit up and face those students and professors. Some people may think he is an Uncle Tom. I don't. To buck the white Southern pattern is no easy matter. By sitting in an ante-room, though humiliating, Mr. McLaurin showed that he had courage enough to stand up for a principle—the principle of human rights. This is a greater dignity and is more important than self-indulgence.

I am really and truly sorry for some white folks. Those in Oklahoma are cowardly while that 54-year-old professor has real manhood. Some white people see the handwriting on the wall. They see the inevitable collapse of race prejudice. They see that it is really only "One World" and all humans are humans. But I don't think that Dr. George L. Cross, the Regents of the University, the State of Oklahoma, or for that matter most of the South fall among that lot.

In Oklahoma City last week, a three-judge federal court ruled "unconstitutional and void" a state law that barred Negroes from the University of Oklahoma's graduate school. The judges, all Oklahomans, did not outlaw segregation, but insisted that Negroes must have equal facilities without delay, or be taken in with white students.

OUR EDUCATIONAL MARTYRS

(AN EDITORIAL)

An Oklahoma State court has approved the University of Oklahoma's practice of confining its first colored graduate student, Professor G. W. McLaurin, to an anteroom separate from the rest of his white classmates.

The university is waging a losing fight.

First it denied entrance to the colored professor who wanted graduate training.

It lost that case.

Now it denies him the right to sit with the other students. It will lose that, too.

The case will be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The situation may seem difficult for Professor McLaurin. Any pioneer is accustomed to such hardship. Dozens of colored boys received shocking treatment at West Point and the U.S. Naval Academy before the first one reached the senior class or was graduated.

Educational pioneers like Professor McLaurin are doing their country a service, as great as those who founded our religion, settled our country, or developed our science.

No attempt to humiliate, discourage, or discredit men like Professor McLaurin can ever stop them once they experience that inward satisfaction that comes from knowledge that their sacrifice helps move the human race forward another step.

One day we will write the history of our educational pioneers and our university martyrs. There will be Henry A. Napier, Thomas V. R. Gibbs, Alonzo S. Parham and Felix J. Kirkpatrick Jr., of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point; John H. Conyers, James Lee Johnson and George J. Trivers of the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis.

There will be Donald Murray of the University of Maryland, Lloyd Gaines of the University of Missouri, Heman Sweatt of the University of Texas and Professor McLaurin and Mrs. Ada Sipuel Fisher of the University of Oklahoma, to name a few.

A generation from now, even the white people themselves, who are responsible for this situation in these backward schools and even more backward States, will ask themselves how they could have been so utterly debased as to ask persons equal to them in money, culture and intellect to accept segregation on the grounds of color.

NEW STRATEGY IN OKLAHOMA

What may well prove to be a new weapon in our fight for first-class citizenship is the strategy employed by NAACP counsel in their latest attempt to open the doors of the University of Oklahoma.

In asking $5,000 damages and a permanent injunction on behalf of G. W. McLaurin, who seeks his doctorate in school administration, the NAACP lawyers requested a three-judge Federal tribunal to hear the case which has been set for Monday, August 23.

A special section of the Judicial Code of Oklahoma provides that a three-judge Federal court shall hear all cases which attack the constitutionality of any statute or of any official order issued by a State board, such hearing to be held within ten days of the filing of a petition requesting it.

Such cases take precedence over all other cases and can be appealed directly to the U.S. Supreme Court in two or three months. In previous NAACP cases, it has taken two or three years of long, drawn-out litigation to get to the nation's highest tribunal.

Whether this new procedure will work remains to be seen. If it does, it will be a speedy way of getting action in civil rights cases in Oklahoma and possibly in other States. Many would-be plaintiffs have been deterred from filing suits, knowing of the long, tedious processes involved in getting their cases heard.

Members of the NAACP's legal staff are constantly studying the law in search of more effective techniques for getting the desired results. We hope that their latest "discovery" clicks.

Long Trial Blocked in Okla. School Case

Lawyers Use Judicial Code to Get Special Court Hearing in 10 Days

OKLAHOMA CITY—Invoking a rarely used section of the Judicial Code, attorneys seeking to end discrimination at the University of Oklahoma have launched a new attack on the State's segregation laws which will prevent a long, drawn-out trial and bring about speedy solution of the problem.

Using Section 266 of the Code, they demanded a special three-judge court to hear the case of G. W. McLaurin, who is suing to enter the university's business administration school to work toward a doctorate.

The hearing has been set for Aug. 23.

Section 266 provides that in cases involving the constitutionality of State statutes or orders by State boards, the plaintiff may demand a special three-judge court.

Three-Month Limit

That court, under law, must schedule a hearing within 10 days. If an appeal is necessary, it can be made directly to the U.S. Supreme Court in two or three months.

Such cases take precedence over all except similar cases.

A Langston University professor, Mr. McLaurin already has begun on the year's leave of absence which he plans to spend in school.

He filed suit in Federal Court Aug. 5 for a mandatory injunction against State and university officials to permit him to enroll in the graduate school this autumn. A declaratory judgment against the laws keeping colored students out of the university, and $5,000 damages he alleges were done him when his registration was refused early this year.

Can Enter in August

United States District Judge Edgar S. Vaught on Aug. 6 named Federal Circuit Judge Alfred P. Murrah and Federal District Judge Bower Broddus to sit with him on the panel.

McLaurin's petition is based on the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

The hearing, Aug. 23, will consider the issuance of a temporary restraining order. If it is allowed, McLaurin presumably could enter the university for the autumn term. He holds a master's degree from the University of Kansas.

His petition points out that the University of Oklahoma is the only State university offering courses leading to a doctorate in school administration.

McLaurin is represented in the petition for him "and all other colored persons" by Amos T. Hall, Tulsa, and Thurgood Marshall, special counsel for the NAACP. Hall is a member of the organization's legal staff.

Named as defendants in the suit are the State board of regents for higher education, the board of regents of the University of Oklahoma, Dr. George L. Cross, University of Oklahoma president; Lawrence Snyder, dean of the graduate college, and J. E. Fellows, dean of admission and records.

Far-Reaching Results Seen

Commenting on the new procedure, Mr. Marshall in New York, said on Thursday, "This is believed to be the first time this type of relief has been sought by means of a special three-judge Federal Court.

"Under this procedure, if declared applicable, the long delays in similar suits will be circumvented. The statute specifically provides that such cases 'shall be given precedence and shall be in every way expedited and be assigned for a hearing at the earliest practicable date.'

"This case wil be watched with interest by lawyers as well as by the general public."

OKLA. SCHOOL CASES TO GO
TO STATE SUPREME COURT August 5, 1948

NAACP-Press Service Dec York 7th.

NORMAN, Okla. Aug. 5.-- Denied admission to the University of Oklahoma by a decision of District Judge T. Justin Hinshaw, Mrs. Ada Sipuel Fisher, Miss Helen Maxine Holmes and Mrs. Mauderie Hancock-Wilson prepared to carry their case to the State Supreme Court, Amos T. Hall of Tulsa, who together with Thurgood Marshall, NAACP special counsel, represented the young women, announced today. 8-5-48

For more than two years Mrs. Fisher has sought admission to the university law school. The United States Supreme Court last January ordered the State of Oklahoma to provide her forthwith with educational facilities equal to those afforded at the university. Rather than admit a Negro student, the state set up a makeshift law school in Oklahoma City. Maintaining that the Jim Crow school was not equal to the university law school, Mrs. Fisher declined to seek admission. The school has had no students.

NAACP lawyers, assisted by experts in legal education and sociology, attempted to demonstrate that the Negro school was not and could not be equal to the university law school. The case was tried last May before Judge Hinshaw in the District Court of Cleveland. In July,

Press Service of NAACP N.Y.C.

Miss Holmes and Mrs. Hancock-Wilson took their cases to the same Court after the University had rejected their applications for admission to the graduate school in February. Judge Hinshaw's decision handed down on August 2, sustained the university's policy of excluding Negro students. 8-5-48

Petition Filed For New Hearing On Court Ruling

Argument Scheduled Next Week on Law Case In Oklahoma

Jan. 1-3-48

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Lawyers on behalf of Ada Lois Sipuel on Dec. 26 filed in the United States Supreme Court a brief for petitioner in her case against the University of Oklahoma.

This case is the result of a petition for certiorari granted by the Supreme Court on Nov. 10 of this year to review the decision of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma in affirming the judgment of the lower court of Oklahoma in petition for writ of mandamus to compel the admission of Miss Sipuel to the University of Oklahoma law school.

Miss Sipuel, a graduate of Langston University, posessing all the qualifications necessary for law school training, applied for admission to the first year law class of the University of Oklahoma and was refused admission on Jan. 14. 1946.

APPLIED FOR WRIT

On April 6, 1946, through her lawyers, Miss Sipuel applied to the district court of Cleveland county, Oklahoma, for a writ of mandamus. At the hearing on the case on July 9, 1946, lawyers for both sides filed stipulations of fact agreeing that Miss Sipuel was fully qualified for admission to the law school, but that she was a Negro and that the only reason she was denied admission was because of her race and color.

It was also agreed that this was the only law school maintained by the state of Oklahoma and that her refusal was pursuant to a policy, custom and usage and the state statutes requiring the segregation of the races. 1-3-48

Despite this sitpulation of facts and the arguments of law the district court refused to grant a writ. Whereupon the case was appealed to the Supreme Court of Oklahoma and on April 29, 1947, the judgment of the lower court was affirmed. Petition for certiorari was thereupon filed in the United States Supreme Court.

SUMMARY OF BRIEF

Journal & Guide

The brief for the petitioner filed in the United States Supreme Court presented an argument summarized as follows:

"Petitioner is entitled to admission now to the University of Oklahoma and her right to redress cannot be conditioned upon any prior demand that the state set up a separate facility. The opinion in the Gaines case is without meaning unless this court intended that decisions to enforce the right of a qualified Negro applicant in a case such as here to admission instanter to the only existing state facility.

"The equal but separate doctrine has no application in cases of this type. The Gaines decision must have meant at least this and should be so clarified. Beyond that petitioner contends that the separate but equal doctrine is basically unsound and unrealistic and in light of the history of its application should now be repudiated."

LOST OVER A YEAR

Norfolk, Va.

"The flagrant discrimination against the petitioner in this case is directly in the teeth of the 14th Amendment and was made with full knowledge of the decision of this court in the Gaines case. The respondents only defense is a reliance upon certain language in this court's opinion. Petitioner has already lost more than a year of legal training which she would have received had she not been a Negro." Jan. 1-3-48

The case is set for argument on either Jan. 7 or 8 and will be argued by Amos T. Hall, member of the national legal committee of the NAACP, and Thurgood Marshal, special counsel. The brief was filed by these lawyers with the following as "of counsel": Robert L. Carter. Edward R. Dudley, Marian Wynn Perry. Frank D. Reeves and Franklin H. Williams.

Oklahoma Faces New Negro School Problem

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 24—(AP)—The State of Oklahoma was faced today with allowing an aged Negro professor to attend its all-white University of Oklahoma, or hurriedly establishing a graduate school.

A special three-judge federal court yesterday heard G. W. McLaurin's suit against the state's college segregation laws, then emphasized Oklahoma should provide equal facilities for Negroes.

A final decision will be handed down by the court Sept. 24.

McLaurin tried unsuccessfully to gain admission to the university last January. He is seeking a doctorate in school administration.

The ranking member of the panel, Judge A. P. Murrah of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, said:

"The duty of this state is unmistakably clear and we think you ought to get about it."

Thurgood Marshall, chief attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and McLaurin's counsel, said the suit attacked the constitutionality of Oklahoma's laws against segregation in colleges.

Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson, defending the state, said Oklahoma recognized its obligations to give Negro citizens equal education but said the state needed time to establish the schools.

'Further Relief' Sought

To Challenge Stand Of Oklahoma U. Board of Regents

OKLAHOMA CITY. — The famous case of Ada Lois Sipuel vs. Board of Regents of the University of Oklahoma, which just left the U. S. Supreme Court in January where it won a clearcut victory, will seek "further relief" by stepping back again, on next Monday, May 24, into the District Court of Cleveland County here, the very same court from which it started its two-year journey to the High Court in 1946. As before, the battery of legal talent will be headed by Amos T. Hall of Tulsa and NAACP Special Counsel Thurgood Marshall.

It will be recalled that in January the U. S. Supreme Court handed down the decision that the state of Oklahoma must immediately provide Miss Sipuel, and hence all Oklahoma Negroes, with equal law education facilities. The answer of Oklahoma was to establish in four days a Jim Crow law school which it dubbed "equal", and when NAACP attorneys sought from the Supreme Court a writ of mandamus enjoining Oklahoma from operating the school on the grounds that it was inferior to the OU law school, the Supreme Court denied the writ claiming that the question of "whether a state might not satisfy the Fourteenth Amendment" by providing Jim Crow facilities was not before. Accordingly, Miss Sipuel is back in court and facing again a long trip to the Supreme Court in order to prove the separate law school unequal.

However, attorneys for Miss Sipuel indicate that their main purpose in this new series of trials is to attack segregation itself, on the theory that no Jim Crow school can provide the absolutely equal education they seek for their client. In this fundamental respect the Sipuel Case will become exactly similar to the Sweatt Case in Texas, which seeks entry of Heman Marion Sweatt to the law school of the University of Texas. As witnesses, NAACP attorneys are expected to call upon a number of international recognized authorities in anthropology, sociology and law, who will testify to the effect that discrimination is always the product of segregation and that therefore segregation should be legally declared unconstitutional.

An interesting sidelight on the case is the fact that just recently, on the week-end of April 31, May 1-2, an "Oklahoma Student Workshop for Democracy in Education" was held in Norman, Okla., site of the University of Oklahoma, in which some 300 white and Negro youngsters from all of Oklahoma's major colleges and universities met and pledged themselves to fight segregation in education. Also of note is the decision of a committee of Oklahoma college deans published some weeks ago. This committee, appointed by the Board of Regents of the University of Oklahoma to study the problem of race in the field of higher education, rendered a report which recommended that the only sensible solution was to abolish segregation altogether. The deans pointed out that in dollars and cents it would be ruinous to the state to duplicate for Negroes the expensive and elaborate system of higher education now provided for the non-Negro portion of the state's population.

Negro Women Barred from Oklahoma U.

NORMAN, Okla.—(AP)—A state court Monday denied admittance to the University of Oklahoma to three Negro women. Negro leaders announced that they would carry the fight against Oklahoma's racial segregation to the United States Supreme Court.

One of the three rejected was Mrs. Ada Fisher, of Chickasha, who for more than two years has waged a court fight to enter the university's law school.

THE OTHERS were Mauderie Hancock-Wilson and Helen Maxine Holmes, both of Oklahoma City.

District Judge T. Justin Hinshaw denied court orders sought by the three to compel the university to enroll them for graduate studies.

Amos T. Hall, Tulsa Negro attorney, gave notice of appeal to the State Supreme Court.

Three Ask Okla. Univ. Admission

NORMAN, Okla. — Three Negroes Friday asked federal district court for an order admitting them to the graduate schools of the white University of Oklahoma.

The three are G. W. McLaurin, Mauderie Hancock-Wilson and Helen Maxine Holmes. One desires to take a doctor's degree in school administration, another seeks a master's degree in social work, and the third a master's in commercial education.

Oklahoma has no state schoool for Negroes which provides these subjects. Oklahoma University offers graduate work in 70 fields.

The suit was based on the decision of the United States Supreme Court that a state must offer Negro students "equal facilities" in graduate work.

The trio had tried to enroll in the University of Oklahoma following the recent Sipuel-Fisher decision, but were refused admission.

The State of Oklahoma has made no effort to set up equal facilities for the three applicants since they asked for higher education five and a half months ago.

The case, which constitutes a position for a writ of mandamus, is set for hearing on July 19.

Soviet Students Write Oklahoma U. on Race

LONDON, Sept. (U.P.).—Radio Moscow said today that Moscow University students have sent a letter of protest to students of Oklahoma University concerning the alleged barring of a Negro girl from the Oklahoma University law school.

The broadcast, quoting a Tass dispatch, said the Soviet students wrote that "we cannot conceive of national inequality or oppression in our country, which is one friendly family."

What Price Segregation?

Despite the fact that two enrollment periods have passed and no self-respecting Negro has enrolled in the fake Langston law school, state authorities persist in squandering taxpayers' money to keep four men on a pay roll as law instructors when there is no one to teach.

Just think of it! Fifteen thousands dollars thrown away on the term just closing and $36,000 allocated from the governor's contingent fund for the coming year. Yes, it's going to be a long, dull summer for the law professors in the Langston law school but it is hell on bed-ridden taxpayers to have their state funds squandered in such manner.

We doubt seriously the right of the governor to use his emergency funds for this fake law school's maintenance. The legislature has been in session since this agitation started and failed to make any such appropriation and we believe a taxpayer's suit would knock out the allocation and end this educational farce and studied attempt to brazenly circumvent the Supreme Court of the United States. This is one of the cases where state government seeks to bully the federal structure.

Evidence presented the court during the recent trial at Norman was to the effect that conditions are crowded and congested at the Oklahoma university law school, but if the $50,000 at present being thrown away, together with other contemplated expenditures on the jim crow law school, were expended at Norman it would mean more to white and black youth of the state. One of the best arguments against segregation develops out of the unreasonable waste of public funds.

OPPOSES GRADUATE SCHOOL FOR LANGSTON

"It's a lie, and I never was more furious in my life," declared G. Lamar Harrison, president of Langston university, as he rushed into the Black Dispatch office Monday morning, waving a letter he had prepared for dispatch to Otis Sullivant, correspondent for a daily paper, which Sunday carried a front page story, written by Sullivant, stating that the Langston president had offered fulsome praise for the new fake, jim crow law school which opened in the state capitol Monday.

Harrison demanded that the editor of the Black Dispatch mail the letter to the Daily Oklahoman. "Read it and then mail it!" he shouted. "I want everybody to know that I made no such statement as attributed to me in that newspaper story. It is true that I was asked to attach my signature to the statement, but I refused."

Harrison then got Sam Stone on the line. Stone is the auditor for the state board of regents for the A. & M. college, and he then asked Stone to talk with Dunjee.

"No, Dr. Harrison did not make that statement," said Stone to Dunjee. "The statement published in the Oklahoman was made by Frank Buttram, chairman of the special committee appointed to establish the new law school. I know positively that Dr. Harrison refused to sign that statement," Stone said.

Bill Being Prepared In Oklahoma To Alter Old Segregation Laws

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 3.—(AP)—Oklahoma Negroes fighting college segregation possibly will re-appeal the segregation issue to both state and federal Supreme Courts.

If passed, the bill will open white graduate courses that Langston does not offer.

The state's new move, still in the drafting stage, came immediately following yesterday's latest rebuff to Negroes when the State Legislature that would alter Oklahoma's 40-year-old segregation laws. It would give the Negro students a large part of what they ask for.

This would not offer similar work.

Nation Acclaims Sipuel Decision As Great Victory

Nation-wide rejoicing resulted Monday following the notable decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Ada Lois Sipuel case, in which that high judicial body entered the State of Oklahoma to worthwith grant admission to the brilliant Chickasha girl.

Telegrams, telephone calls and letters swamped the Black Dispatch in which praise was heaped upon the Oklahoma Conference of Branches for its successful two-year struggle for education in graduate training in this state.

Walter White, secretary of the NAACP, New York, said:

"We are delighted at the court's decision. It marks the furtherest advance yet reached towards the principle that there can be no equality in a segregated system.

"It has been the Association's contention that equal but separate accommodations are a judicial myth and a legal fiction utterly impossible of attainment.

"We are determined to continue the fight until every vestige of discrimination and segregation in tax-supported school is eliminated."

The Houston (Texas) branch of tre NAACP, in a telegram signed by L. H. Simpson, president, and Lulu B. White, executive secretary, said:

"The Houston branch congratulates you and the Oklahoma Conference of Branches in the winning of the Sipuel case. You win - - - we win."

Attorney Joseph R. Booker, Little Rock: "Congratulations on your outstanding victory. Will be used by all of us with telling effect."

John Lampton, Guthrie: "The whole state is proud of the great and successful battle you have just ended for educational equality."

Calvin N. Walker, Atlanta, Ga.: "Congratulations to you and the Oklahoma Branches of the NAACP for your victory before the United States Supreme Court in the Ada Lois Sipuel case."

The Atlanta Journal telephoned the Black Dispatch Tuesday in conection with the UP report trat a Georgia citizen sought to enter the medical school in Oklahoma.

Editor Dunjee corrected this report by stating that an Oklahoman attending at Atlanta University had sought to enroll in the Oklahoma medical school.

Life magazine was on hand Thursday and Thursday night making pictures of Mrs. Fisher, at the airport when she arrived and later in the home of Mrs. E.V. Hearne, 614 North Kelly, where Mrs. Fisher remained for rest Wednesday evening.

Long-Range Program

Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher, Negro, who began a court fight in January, 1946, for admission to the University of Oklahoma, was a speaker at the recent New York Herald Tribune Forum. She said she still wants to become a lawyer but it appeared she would be an old woman before the state of Oklahoma gave her an opportunity. "In all probability my case will have to go to the Supreme Court of the United States for a third time before I am admitted to the University of Oklahoma Law School," Mrs Fisher said.

Will Again Take Fight to Supreme Court If Needed

The famous case of Ada Lois Sipuel vs. Board of Regents of the University of Oklahoma, which just left the U. S. Supreme Court in January where it won a cleancut victory, will seek "further relief" by stepping back again, on Monday, May 24, into the District Court of Cleveland County, the very same court from which it started its two-year journey to the high court in 1946. As before the battery of legal talent will be headed by Amos T. Hall of Tulsa, and NAACP Special Counsel Thurgood Marshall.

Equal Law School In 54 Days

It will be recalled that in January the U. S. Supreme Court handed down the decision that the state of Oklahoma must immediately provide Miss Sipuel, and hence all Oklahoma Negroes, with equal law education facilities. The answer of Oklahoma was to establish in four days a Jim Crow law school which it dubbed "equal." and when NAACP attorneys sought from the Supreme Court a mandamus enjoining Oklahoma from operating the school on the grounds that it was inferior to the OU law school, the Supreme Court denied the writ claiming that the question of "whether a state might not satisfy the Fourteenth Amendment" by providing Jim Crow facilities was not before. Accordingly, Miss Sipuel is back in court and facing again a long trip to the Supreme Court in order to prove the separate law school unequal.

To Attack Jim Crow Itself

However, attorneys for Miss Sipuel indicate that their main purpose in this new series of trials is to attack segregation itself, on the theory that no Jim Crow school can provide the absolutely equal education they seek for their client. In this fundamental, respect the Sipuel case will become exactly similar to the Sweatt case in Texas, which seeks entry of Heman Marion Sweatt to the law school of the University of Texas. As witnesses, NAACP attorneys are expected to call upon a number of international recognized authorities in anthropology, sociology and law, who will testify to the effect that discrimination is always the product of segregation and that therefore segregation should be legally declared unconstitutional.

An interesting sidelight on the case is the fact that just recently, on the weekend of April 31, May 1-2, an "Oklahoma Student Workshop for Democracy in Education" was held in Norman, Oklahoma, site of the University of Oklahoma, in which some 300 white and Negro youngsters from all of Oklahoma's major colleges and universities met and pledged themselves to fight segregation in education. Also of note is the decision of a committee of Oklahoma college deans published some weeks ago. This committee, appointed by the Board of Regents of the University, rendered a report which recommended that the only sensible solution was to abolish segregation altogether. The deans pointed out that in dollars and cents it would be ruinous to the state to duplicate for Negroes the expensive and elaborate system of higher education now provided for the non-Negro portion of the state's population.

Celebrated Suit Again In Court

Expert Testimony Of Different Kind To Be Introduced

NEW YORK — Mrs. Ada Sipuel Fisher's fight for admission to the law school of the University of Oklahoma will be reopened Monday, April 5, with a new trial in the District Court at Normal, Okla., Thurgood Marshall, special counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has announced. Associated with Mr. Marshall in conduct of the case is Amos T. Hall, attorney of Tulsa, Okla.

The new trial, which will be held in the same judicial district in which the university is located, comes as the result of a motion filed on behalf of Mrs. Fisher March 11, petitioning the court for further relief against the board of regents and other officials of the University of Oklahoma.

The motion for a new trial in state courts followed refusal to admit Mrs. Fisher to the law school after the United States Supreme Court had declared that the State of Oklahoma was required to provide her with an opportunity for a legal education forthwith.

WILL USE EXPERTS

"At the trial on April 5," Mr. Marshall said, "we expect to produce even more expert testimony than we presented in the University of Texas case to demonstrate clearly that it is impossible to get equal educational facilities in a separate law school. We will have experts not only in the field of legal training, but also in the fields of sociology and anthropology."

As a result of the Supreme Court ruling in Mrs. Fisher's case, a jimcro law school was established for the exclusive use of Negro pupils. No library was provided other than the library for general use in the State Capitol.

Mrs. Fisher and other qualified Negro students refused to attend the school and continued to insist upon attending the law school of the University of Oklahoma.

Law School Deans Declare Oklahoma Unit 'Not Equal'

Sipuel-Fisher Case On Trial In Norman Court

Testimony By Experts Seen

NAACP Victory

NORMAN, Okla.,—(SNS)— Facilities at the Langston University Law School in Oklahoma City were described as "not equal" to those offered white students at the University of Oklahoma by deans of the Harvard and University of Pennsylvania Law Schools in testimony before District Court.

The witnesses were called by attorneys for Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel-Fisher who are unleashing heavy legal artillery upon Oklahoma's Jim Crow law school which was set up supposedly to conform with a ruling of the United States Supreme Court.

Among those testifying were Dean Edwin N. Griswold, of Harvard, and Dean Earl G. Harrison of Pennsylvania. Dr. Max Redin, of the University of California in Berkeley, and Charles Bunn, of the University of Wisconsin.

MARSHALL IS COUNSEL

Mrs. Fisher is being represented by Thurgood S. Marshall, legal counsel for the National Association For the Advancement of Colored People, and Robert Ming, and James H. Nabritt

In the opening round of the trial Before Judge Justin Henshaw, Attorney Marshall reviewed the history of the case and declared that the Langston University Law School, hastily built to circumvent the ruling of the U. S. Supreme Court in Mrs. Fisher's original complaint, was inadequate and not equal to the University of Oklahoma Law School

The State of Oklahoma is represented by Attorney General Mac Q. Williams and observers forecast after hearing preliminary arguments that a long and bitter fight would be waged by the state to keep nationally-recognized legal authorities from testifying in the case. Attorney Marshall had told the court that he would introduce expert testimony in the case.

The feat of getting the testimony of the legal experts in the record was hailed as a victory for Mrs Fisher's attorneys, after the bitter fight by the State Attorney to prevent their appearing in the case.

LONG TRIAL SEEN

How long the trial will last is uncertain, but as opposing counsel wrangled in the opening arguments it appeared as though the trial would be a drawn out affair.

The orginal suit in the case was heard July 9, 1943, before Judge Ben T Williams. The plaintiff is asking the court to modify its order of last Jan. 22.

Robert Weaver, consultant to the American Council on Race Relations, Chicago, is among the sociologists, statisticans, and anthropologists, who may be called to show the "separate but equal clause of southern states has never provided equal facilities— an impossible realization in separate school systems.

Other experts will appear to testify as to the impossibility of gaining an equal education in a jim-crow law school, such as was hurriedly established at Langston University last Jan. 26.

The court ordered Oklahoma to grant her equal and immediate education with white students. Oklahoma's constitution provides for separate schools for whites and Negroes.

The Oklahoma state regents for higher education had established a Negro school of law in Oklahoma City as a branch of Langston Negro university, but a Negro leader said immediately that there will be "no acceptance of a Jim Crow law school."

The school was established after the supreme court of the United States ordered Oklahoma to provide equal law school facilities for Negroes as soon as for white persons. Oklahoma's constitution requires separate schools.

Student To Enter Okla. U

NORMAN, Okla.—The University of Oklahoma announced Monday it would accept the enrollment application of Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher, 23-year-old Negro, in her fight to gain admission to the institution's law school.

The honor graduate from Langston Negro University, who took to the Supreme Court of the United States her fight for admittance, was to enroll Monday.

Take Norman Student Poll

Six Questions Asked Regarding Miss Sipuel

NORMAN.—The Oklahoma Daily, liberal student publication on the campus of Oklahoma university, was last week taking a poll of 500 selected students, under the direction of Larry Stephenson, to determine what students of the institution think about the impending decision of the United States Supreme Court, which may compel university authorities to admit a Negro girl to enrollment.

An unbiased view will perhaps be disclosed by this poll for the reason that pollees are not required to give their names on the questionnaires, and the results of the poll are to be published in the Tuesday edition of the Oklahoma Daily, edited by Quinton Peters, who Saturday editorially expressed the hope that Ada Lois Sipuel would be enrolled in the law classes at Norman.

There follow the six choices of-fered students, but which to register, and the preliminary statement preceding the query:

(a) Have you heard or read about a Negro resident of Chickasha, Ada Lois Sipuel, seeking admittance to OU? She is a graduate of Langston university, Oklahoma's state university for Negroes.

(b) The reason she gave for seeking admittance to OU is she wishes to study law. Langston university does not have a school of law. Oklahoma statutes prohibit Negroes attending white institutions of learning. The United States Supreme Court is to hear the appealed case in which she is seeking admittance to OU. Disregarding previous decisions handed down by the supreme court in similar cases in other states, and disregarding existing laws in Oklahoma pertaining to the matter, what is your opinion about Negro education in Oklahoma? Which of the following six answers do you most nearly agree with?

1. Negroes should be permitted to attend all white institutions of learning in the state of Oklahoma, which would include elementary, high school, and institutions of higher learning.

2. Negroes should be permitted to attend all white colleges and universities in the state of Oklahoma, but not state elementary and high schools.

3. Negroes should be permitted to pursue graduate work in Oklahoma's white institutions, but should not be permitted to pursue undergraduate work in the state's white institutions.

4. Oklahoma should provide equal education, both graduate and undergraduate, for Negroes and whites, but in all cases in separate institutions. The state-supported Negro university at Langston should have a college, school or department equal in facilities for each college, school or department maintained in white universities and colleges of the state.

5. Oklahoma should continue to bar Negro enrollment in white institutions and not support colleges, schools or departments at Langston that are not now in existence there, but should furnish adequate funds to pay the tuition and out-of-state fees in an out-of-state college or university for any Oklahoma Negro wishing to pursue a course offered in Oklahoma's white institutions, but not offered at Langston.

6. Negro enrollment should continue to be barred from white institutions in Oklahoma—and colleges, schools or departments not now in existence at Langston should not be supported there by the state. Neither should the state furnish adequate funds to pay tuition and out-of-state fees in an out-of-state university for any Oklahoma Negro wishing to pursue a course not offered at Langston.

No opinion.

How strongly do you feel about the answer you gave to one of these six questions?

Very strongly. Fairly strongly. Not at all strongly.

Invite Mrs. Fisher To Study Law In Norwegian School

In the event Mrs. Ada Lois Fisher does not secure enrolment in the University law classes at Norman, she will still have another good way to escape synthetic, make-shift law school hurriedly thrown together for Negroes in the Oklahoma State capitol building.

Writing from Oslo, Norway, student members of "Norsk, Studentsamband," a national union of Norwegian students, in a letter dated May 7th, have invited Mrs. Fisher to complete her law education in Norway.

The letter follows:

Dear Mrs. Fisher:

As we have seen from the newspapers that you have such big difficulties in order to enter the University of Oklahoma for the studies of law, the National Union of Norwegian Students has nominated a committee, the task of which is to examine the possibilities in connection with the possible continuation of your studies in Norway.

The committee therefore permits itself to ask you, if you would be willing to come to Norway in order to continue your studies of law in order to study another subject at the University of Oslo. We are quite aware of the difficulties which are connected with such a proposition (language the difference between the studies of law in USA and Norway, etc.), but opinion and if you are willing to we only want to show that we are accept a possible invitation to continue your studies in Norway against any discrimination, and to help any student that we want to help. The letter was signed by three students, namely, Thro Bryn, Sigmund Stromme and Rolf Schoder.

3 Oklahoma Laws Protect J.C. Schools

OKLAHOMA CITY — The legal pyrotechnics involved in Oklahoma's dilemna in finding a satisfactory and democratic solution in the case of Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher, in conformity with the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling thereon, have revealed that there are three State laws which protect segregated schools.

Ironically, if Mrs. Fisher is admitted to the University of Oklahome's Law School, the school's faculty, the board of regents, and the student body of 12,254 are liable to criminal prosecution for violation of existing statutes.

Upheld by Courts

These laws, which are definite and decisive, and which have been upheld by State courts, pertain to the segregation of white and colored students in public schools and institutions of higher learning.

They supplied the foundation upon which Justice Earl Welch of the State Supreme Court upheld the action of the Cleveland county District Court in refusing Mrs Fisher's writ to compel university officials to accept her enrollment.

Mrs. Fisher Qualified

Justice Welch, while recognizing that Mrs. Fisher had "sufficient scholastic attainment and was of good character," ruled that university officials had no other alternative than to deny her request.

The jurist found that "separate education" has always been the policy of the State "by vote of the citizens of all races.

Laws passed to safeguard this "separation" defined the term "colored' 'to mean all persons of African descent who possessed any quantity of colored blood; and the term "white" to include all other persons.

What Laws Provide

There are the three criminal statutes by which Oklahoma protects segregated schools:

Section 455 (Title 70, Oklahoma statutes, 1941) holds it shall be unlawful for any person, corporation or association of persons to maintain or operate any college, school or institution of this State where persons of both white and colored races are received as pupils for instruction.

Persons, corporation or association of persons violating this statute are guilty of misdemeanor and shall be fined not less than $100 and not more than $500 and each day such school, college or institution is opened and maintained constitutes a separate offense.

Instructors Barred

Section 456 (Title 70, Oklahoma statutes, 1941), holds any instructor teaching in such an institution attempted, in district court last week to force university officials to admit her.

Judge Justin Hinshaw to whom Hall appealed in district court leaned the weight of his decision on that of Fred Hensen, assistant attorney general by ruling the establishment of a separate law school to fulfill mandate.

Hall then contended that the proposed new Negro law school to open here at

Judge Hinshaw responded with the statement that "that question is not before the court at this time as there has been no testimony as to facilities to be offered."

However, use of this method to remove the state official "doorstops" went unchallenged and provided a step for a future court action as Hinshaw retained jurisdiction in the case by making it clear that he could not determine any question which may arise concerning application and performance of duties prescribed by the order.

The order to which he referred was handed down by the unanimous decision of the U. S. Supreme Court demanding that Oklahoma provide for Mrs. Fisher immediate and equal legal educational facilities.

This mandate was issued after initial entrance steps failed in Cleveland county and the State Supreme Court by the NAACP.

ISSUES NEW OPINION

Over and above the N A A C P victory in Washington spearheaded by Thurgood Marshall and Amos Hall, the state of Oklahoma has issued a new opinion.

In substance it calls for the admittance of plaintiff to the university of Oklahoma with all scholastic privileges afforded her until a separate law school for Negroes is established and ready to function, or not enroll any applicant of any group in said class until said separate school is established and ready to function.

In the meantime, R. T. Stuart, chairman of the board of regents states that rooms 426, 427, and 428 of the state capitol building are ready as a place of enrollment and study for law students with the full facilities of the state library at their disposal.

Oklahoma Law Case Points Out Need

Lawyers Hope For A U. S. Supreme Court Declaration On Segregated Schools

Norfolk, Va. Sat.

By CARTER JEWELL

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—Developments last week in the law school case of Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher who for over two years conducted litigation in the courts to compel her admission into the University of Oklahoma law school seem to make clear the need of a United States Supreme Court ruling on the issue of segregated schools.

The 14th amendment to the U. S. Constitution and the basic law of the 17 southern states do not make segregated public schools illegal. In both instances the law specifically stipulates that equal educational facilities must be enjoyed by all.

THURGOOD MARSHALL

Though Thurgood Marshall asked the Supreme Court to clarify the decision in the Gaines case in Missouri and repeatedly contended that segregation in education was the basic issue, the court saw fit to avoid entering that phase of the case. Instead the decision was based solely on the "separate but equal interpretation of the law.

This interpretation conforms to the codes of every southern state. It is obvious, however, some legal spokesmen are contending here now, that southern legislatures had nothing more in mind than bringing the basic law of the states up to the legal and documentary status of democracy.

Sat.

ANOTHER DIFFICULTY

Another difficulty in the way of functional equality and democracy in the public schools of the South, these spokesmen say, is the decentralized structure of our government. It is left to each political sub-division to carry out the intent of the state constitutions. Also it is left to each state to carry out the wishes of the federal government.

1-31-48

The "separate but equal" educational facilities clause gives the southern states credit for a democratic constitution without the benefits of democratic action. But some Negro lawyers here are beginning to wonder if this is not all the South wants.

SEGREGATION IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

In every southern state segregation of the races in public schools is required by law. The United States Constitution does not make segregation illegal in any sphere of public functions. It only prohibits discrimination or depriving a person of life or property without due process of law—that is without giving the same legal protection or process as is accorded to others and not according to his race, color or previous condition of servitude.

Journal + Guide

The clearest and simplest statement of the individual's rights as a citizen of the United States and of the particular state in which the individual resides is that of the 15th amendment. And yet our decentralized form of government imposed some handicaps to the protection of the political and civic rights which Negroes should enjoy under that amendment.

WHAT LAWYERS THINK

Norfolk, Va.

There are constitutional lawyers in Washington who think the constitution needs some revisions to cope with the problems involved in these recent legal battles sponsored by the NAACP and other organizations.

Sat.

Most southern dailies stressed the point that the decision in Mrs. Fisher's case did not outlaw segregated schools. Some of these papers valued the omission by including that fact in the head over news release on the case.

One Associated Press story said: "Today (Jan. 12) made no mention of a contention, advanced by Miss Sipuel's counsel, that the general process of educational segregation is unconstitutional and should be thrown out. The rule, spelled out is that segregation is permissible if the facilities are equal."

Students Renew Fight to Enter Oklahoma U.

OKLAHOMA CITY—(NNPA)—A hearing in Cleveland county District Court on the application of three colored students for an order directing the University of Oklahoma to admit them was scheduled to get under way here Monday, July 26. They were refused admission last Feb. 2.

The case was due to come up on July 19, but a continuance was granted by District Judge Hinshaw in order to give Amos Hall, Tulsa attorney, time to study the State's answer which was filed by Fred Hansen, Assistant Attorney General.

The petitioners seeking admission are Mrs. Mauderie Hancock-Wilson Miss Helem Maxine

Hansen agreed that under State Supreme Court decisions in the case of Mrs. Ida Sipuel Fisher, it is the mandatory duty of the regents to provide higher education to proved students equal facilities at Langston University for such students.

He emphasizes, however, that it was manifestly impossible for the State to provide these graduate her equal facilities for a legal education.

Still pending before Judge Hinshaw is Mrs. Fisher's second suit to gain admission to the University of Oklahoma law school. The State contended in that suit that it had provided equal law school facilities in Langston School (colored) at the State capitol.

Mrs. Fisher refused to attend this school which was established hurriedly after the U.S. Supreme Court ordered the State to provide

Rejected on Color

The applications were therefore "properly rejected solely on the ground of race and color. Under public policy of this State, announced in statutory provisions, colored persons are not eligible for admission to State schools established for white persons."

He contends that the U.S. Supreme Court has held that universities may have a reasonable period of time to establish facilities without violating the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

The New Sipuel Case

Dear Sirs: When Ada Lois Sipuel (Mrs. Warren Fisher) appears on May 24 in the District Court of Cleveland County, Oklahoma—the same court in which her case against the Board of Regents of the University of Oklahoma was first heard in July, 1946—the legal concepts, theories, and philosophy underlying her case will be so different from those on which it was originally based as to create a new Sipuel case entirely.

A new case has been built out of both necessity and choice. The necessity stems from weaknesses in the original case, which represented only an oblique attack on the segregation policies of the state of Oklahoma in the field of higher education; from the wavering of the United States Supreme Court in its per curium opinion of February 16, which followed its forthright decision on January 12 that Oklahoma must provide Miss Sipuel the same legal education as it provides for anyone else and must do it "as soon as it does for applicants of any other group"; and from the stubborn determination of Oklahoma to circumvent the spirit of the Supreme Court decision by throwing up a Jim Crow law school obviously inadequate and unequal.

These factors alone would have dictated abandonment of the original argument, which was that Miss Sipuel was entitled to attend the Oklahoma University law school for the primary reason that the state had failed to provide any other. Attorneys for the plaintiff perceived at once that to pursue this theory further would result in endless litigation, for even if the Jim Crow school were proved unequal numberless times, the addition of a chair or desk or faculty member would give basis for another claim to equality which only another court action could disprove.

But the major reason for deciding to revamp the Sipuel case was the fact that Thurman Marshall, the plaintiff's chief counsel, had found a superior approach demonstrated in the sensational Sweatt case in Texas. A Houston Negro, Heman Marion Sweatt, had applied to enter the law school of the University of Texas. In his case it was decided to abandon all subterfuge and indirection and mount a frontal attack on segregation per se. Counsel argued that he was entitled to enter the law school not because no other "equal" school existed, but because equality was impossible under discrimination; no school in Texas except an unsegregated state university could satisfy the applicant's demand for equal education.

The same argument will be presented in the case of Sipuel vs. Board of Regents of the University of Oklahoma when the Cleveland County district judge bangs his gavel on May 24. As in the Sweatt case, expert witnesses—among them the country's leading anthropologists, sociologists, and law-school heads—will give testimony attempting to establish the invalidity of segregation in any form as legally repugnant to the Fourteenth Amendment.

In its February 16 opinion the Supreme Court somewhat ingloriously sidestepped by holding that the case "did not present the issue whether a state might not satisfy the equal-protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment by establishing a separate law school for Negroes," and technically speaking, the "old" Sipuel case did allow this latitude of interpretation. But the new version will have the obvious primary purpose of securing equal education for Negroes by leveling segregation barriers in higher education in Oklahoma.

Will it be successful in this? Have attorneys for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People actually been able to forge a legal instrument capable of breaching Jim Crow walls heretofore looked on as impregnable? Probably so; possibly not. But one thing is certain: the Sipuel case, whatever its outcome, will drag the skeleton of Jim Crow farther out of the closet and into the light of day. As for Miss Sipuel, she wants to get on with her education while she is young enough to profit from it.

Langston School of Law Denounced as 'Makeshift'

By DOUGLASS HALL

(Photos on Back Page)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—J. W. Sandford, businessman and fomerly president of Langston University, only State supported college here for colored persons, last week denounced the proposed "Langston School of Law" a makeshift.

"The proposed school is a desperate effort to circumvent the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court ordering the admission of Mrs. Ada L. Sipuel Fisher to the University of Oklahoma Law School" Sandford stated.

"It can only be a makeshift and could not possibly be accredited by anybody. I would not recommend that any student of any race attend it."

Mass Protest

This statement was made after a huge mass meeting at Tabernacle Baptist Church in protest of a proposed Jim Crow Law School.

Seven hundred persons at the meeting who were liberal with applause, donated $701.85.

They approved Mrs. Fisher's decision not to accept the Oklahoma board of Regents of Higher Education's plan if it was not in keeping with the letter and spirit of the U. S. Supreme Court Mandate.

G. L. Harrison, president of Langston speaking in favor of a law school at Langston asserted, "I sincerely believe that colored citizens in Oklahoma will want to take advantage of the opportunity afforded."

At the mass meeting, which was the second one held last week, James E. Stewart, NAACP president, told the group,

"We believe that someone is in contempt of the U. S. Supreme Court . . . and as soon as we find out who it is, we will fight until drastic action is taken against them."

Who is Guilty of Contempt

Contempt charges will be made against one, or both of the following:

Oklahoma State Supreme Court, which ordered the State Board of Regents to set up a Colored Law School, or the board of regents which finally decided to set up a colored university in three rooms of the State Capitol building.

While Mrs. Fisher has stated that she will not accept the Jim Crow School as being equal to the University of Oklahoma Law School, State officials were going about the business of getting it ready in event that she does show up.

To Face Issue Again

It is beleived that Mrs. Fisher will return to the University of Oklahoma, which accepted her application last Monday. Officials at the school are expected to refer her to the "colored" school at the capitol.

I visited the capitol last week to see the "colored" law school and to discuss with high officials Mrs. Fisher's case. The Governor was out of the city, but I was promised a conference when he returned.

Later Governor Roy J. Turner stated that the South was not ready to abandon its system of separate schools as yet and that he has allotted $15,000 from his emergency fund to finance the new school until June 30.

Langston University Board of Regents announced that an all-white faculty will head the school with salaries totalling $19,000 a year.

Quite a few persons did a lot of talking, but nobody wanted to be quoted. Here is what I picked up:

In a closed meeting members of the Board of Regents voted in favor of admitting Mrs. Fisher to the University, but were over ruled by legal representatives from the Attorney General's office.

Worried Bar Equal Clause

Some members of the Board of Regents do not feel that they have complied with the U. S. Supreme Court mandate, especially the "equal" clause amendment.

One State official said:

"Langston is still unaccredited But we are doing the best we can to get it accredited. A new library is being built and we plan to pave the streets and get a better teaching staff there.

However, the American Bar Association will accredit the Law School, and a different body altogether accredits Langston."

About Recognition

"Will the American Bar Association recognize and accredite the proposed Negro Law School?" I asked.

"I am afraid it will not."

"Would you recommend that a white student attend this school?"

"Well....no. But we have to start somewhere — and we can't start on top!"

"What about student conferences. fellowships, etc. at this one-student school?"

"That will be arranged by the instructors and dean."

"Will it fellowship and hold conferences with white law students?"

"Why not? The president of Langston comes to the State capitol, sit in on conferences and even eats with white persons in the capitol cafe. Colored boys from out of the State compete in baseball against whites at the local stadium —and the white pople seem to like it."

Don't Ask Me That!

"Do you feel that the State Supreme Court and the Board of Regents have carried out in letter and spirit the U. S. Mandate requiring admission of Mrs. Fisher to the University Law School?"

"Please don't make me answer that . . . Well, we have carried out the legal side, except that which requires "equal facilities" and about the spirit, I would rather not comment —

"But I will say this . . . I feel that all of the better thinking citizens in Oklahoma are ready to do away with segregation law in higher education."

"Would Mrs. Fisher's attendance at the law school really violate the Southern spirit of segregation?"

"No. It would violate a State law. All of the Regents, most of the faculty and students there would gladly accept colored students as classmates. But those laws . . . and it will take an act of legislature to change them."

Mrs. Fisher Waiting for University Gates to Open While State Officials Deliberate

Eager to Begin Normal Life of Law Student; Daily Papers Criticized for Misquoting

By DOUGLASS HALL
Staff Correspondent

OKLAHOMA CITY—Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher, who returned to this city several days ago to enroll in the University of Oklahoma, in accordance with the U.S. Supreme Court decision, is still out of school, waiting for something to happen.

She told me that she did not know when she would register but she hoped that it would be soon. Her telephone rings every five minutes.

Visitors call almost as often as the door can open and close. The press is beating a path to her door steps. "I wish that I could be just another student about to enter the university," she told me.

But Mrs. Fisher is not "just another student."

She has not attempted to register at the school. She has been advised to wait until the school has been ordered formally to let her in.

It is believed that if she appeared for registration now she would be refused on the grounds that the the university regents have not received the U.S. Supreme Court mandate, which is now in the hands of Oklahoma Supreme Court.

According to Chief Justice Thurman S. Hurst of the Oklahoma Supreme Court, a decision is being written and will be handed down possibly within a week or 10 days.

Majority Backing Her

Ten days would push Mrs. Fisher right up to the opening of the second semester. Until that time she has to just stew in her nerves and wait. White students, on the other hand, have been registering ever since Jan. 15.

Many of the students have expressed desire to have Mrs. Fisher on the campus. In fact, when she did not show up on the first registration day, some called various citizens desiring to know what had happened to her.

Some students told the AFRO that they plan to throw a "kind of human-fence" around Mrs. Fisher to see that nothing happened to her. They want to meet her at the main entrance of the campus and march with her to the registration office.

Not Concerned Over Housing

The question of where Mrs. Fisher would stay, in event she is admitted to the university has been given much play up in the Oklahoma City Daily Press.

Norman, The University Town, is traditionally "all white." I quote from The Oklahoma City Times:

"Any attempt for Mrs. Fisher to find housing at Norman would involve additional complications as the University City has been traditionally 'all white' since its beginning."

So has The University

Mrs. Fisher told me that she had no desire to live in the all white city. She could not understand why that question was even raised. She wants only a legal education.

The university is 26 miles from Oklahoma City and many students commute each day. But white students do not find it so difficult, for they have rest rooms, cafes, and many other convenient facilities.

I am told that no colored persons live in the town, not even in the lowest laboring bracket.

Misquoted, Says Mrs. Fisher

When I visited Mrs. Fisher, shortly after her arrival, she was rather perturbed about the way that she was being misquoted in the daily press. One paper had her saying, in a front page headline, "It's a Wonderful Constitution."

"I did not make that statement," she told the AFRO.

There was one piece in the daily press that she resented most of all. It quoted her as having said, "The few on the campus who might call me names—why, I won't even hear them."

Wouldn't Harm Friends

"Why, I did not say any such a thing," the young woman stated. "I do not expect to have any trouble at the university. I have been in correspondence with many students out there and they welcome me to the school."

She then called the names of some of the students but stated that she would rather not have them printed, as it would "probably cause them difficulties."

Meanwhile, although the State officials are stalling, the Oklahoma Daily has expressed the belief that neither they nor the university can escape the decision.

Practically the same attitude was taken earlier by Dr. M. A. Nash, chancellor of the State board of regents.

He said, when asked to comment on the decision, "Oklahoma will, of course, abide by the Court's ruling" and added that the State's problem is now one for the people to solve through their Legislature.

Challenge to Missouri

The decisiveness of the decision was also noted by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, which in an editorial, pointed out that altnough the decision was directed at the neighboring State of Oklahoma, "it has meaning for Missouri as well."

The stating that the Legislature can act to abolish segregation, the paper declared that Missouri should take steps to determine whether the administrators and curators at the University of Missouri favor abolishing discrimination at the university level.

"It would be an embarrassment to Missouri to learn that it was trailing Oklahoma in putting aside racial prejudice in university education," it concluded.

Need U. S. Supreme Court Mandate On Jim Crow Schools

WASHINGTON (ANP) — Developments last week in the law school case of Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel-Fisher who for two years conducted litigation in the courts to compel her admission into the University of Oklahoma law school seem to make clear the need of a United States Supreme Court ruling on the issue of segregated schools.

The 14th amendment to the U. S. Constitution and the basic law of the 18 southern states do not make segregated public schools illegal. In both instances the law specifically stipulates that equal educational facilities must be enjoyed by all.

Though Thurgood Marshall asked the Supreme Court to clarify the decision in the Gaines case in Missouri and repeatedly contended that segregation in education was the basic issue, the court saw fit to avoid entering that phase of the case. Instead the decision was based solely on the "separate but equal" interpretation of the law.

This interpretation conforms to the codes of every southern state. It is obvious, however, some legal spokesmen are contending here now, that southern legislatures had nothing more in mind than bringing the basic law of the states up to the legal and documentary status of democracy.

Another difficulty in the way of functional equality and democracy in the public schools of the south, these spokesmen say, is the decentralized structure of our government. It is left to each political sub-division to carry out the intent of the state constitutions. Also it is left to each state to carry out the wishes of the federal government.

The "separate but equal" educational facilities clause gives the southern states credit for a democratic constitution without the benefits of democratic action. But some Negro lawyers are beginning to wonder if this is not all that the south wants.

In every southern state segregation of the races in public schools is required by law. The United States constitution does not make segregation illegal in any sphere of public functions. It only prohibits discrimination or depriving a person of life or property without dce process of law—that is without giving the same legal protection or process as is accorded to others and not according to his race, color or previous condition of servitude.

The clearest and simplest statement of the individual's rights as a citizen of the United States and of the particular state in which the citizen of the United States and of the particular state in which the individual resides is that of the 15th amendment. And yet our decentralized form of government imposed some handicaps to the protection of the political and civic rights which Negroes should enjoy under that amendment.

Delay Sipuel School Trial

District Court Hearing April 19

NORMAN, Okla.—District judge, Justin Hinshaw has postponed to April 19, the new trial in the case of Ada Sipuel Fisher versus the University of Oklahoma. Judge Hinshaw in making the postponement declared that all cases on his docket must come up in regular order and that the Sipuel case could not be heard until April 19.

The new trial marks the second return to Cleveland county where Mrs. Fisher lost her initial legal step for admission to the law school of the University of Oklahoma.

Mrs. Fisher later was granted a United States Supreme Court decree that the State of Oklahoma provide her with an opportunity for a legal education immediately. She was again refused admittance to OU by the board of regents who in turn established a three-room law school at the state capitol. No Negro has enrolled at this new law school.

Regents Deny OU Entrance to Negro Woman Applicant

BULLETIN

Monday, 2:30 p. m. Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel-Fisher telephoned the Black Dispatch that she had just received by telephone content of a directive issued by the Chancellor, and read to her by Dean J. E. Fellows.

The directive stated, "The Langston university law school is substantially equal to that of the University of Oklahoma in every way" and, Dr. Fellows added, "therefore, unfortunately, I have to deny you admission to the University of Oklahoma law school."

By MALCOLM S. WHITBY

"We can neither accept nor reject your application," is the reply given Mrs. Ada Lois Fisher, Monday morning, Jan. 26, by University of Oklahoma officials, according to the youung woman when approached by the writer immediately following a 35-minute conference Mrs. Fisher and NAACP officials held with President George L. Cross and Dean John E. Fel-

Dixie Moochers

Regardless of the decision Judge Hinshaw may reach Monday in the Ada Lois Sipuel-Fisher case, we cannot forget the lack of sportsmanship displayed by the South when it openly says, as expressed in the argument made by Attorney General Hansen, that it is unwilling to pay for the luxury of segregation. You see the South has a beer income and a champagne appetite. In the common parlance it wants to "mooch" at the expense of America's largest minority group.

"We're not responsible for the cost of separate schools. The state of Oklahoma must assume that responsibility" declared Thurgood Marshall in answer to the economy plea of Hansen. "We're not attempting to break the state, but the attorney general is," continued the NAACP counsel.

Marshall pointed out to the court that Hansen when he appeared before the Supreme Court in Washington pled with the court not to make segregation too expensive. Marshall said he represented clients who wanted their rights guaranteed under the 14th amendment "and if you have a class in atomic energy for whites in Oklahoma, you should have one installed for Negroes. That is the only fair, equitable and just way that you can administer separate school laws" Marshall continued.

It is a strange doctrine the South preaches to its Negro citizens. It says first of all that it will not install courses of study in fields where there are no current occupational opportunities. This cuts the Negro off from most of the skilled trades and from much cultural development. Emphasis is placed on domestic science for Negro girls, for it is argued that the only current opportunity open to Negro girls is in maid service and cooking in the kitchens of white people. Negro men are taught service occupations, such as car washing and greasing, and in wood work, about all a Negro youth, who finishes high school in manual training, can construct when he gets his diploma is a magazine rack and a coat hanger. No Negro is sent out into life prepared to compete with the white worker in the skilled trades.

While the state establishes graduate work for whites, and offers courses in almost 70-odd fields, Mr. Hansen seems surprised to know that Negroes would want such training. Having hampered and retarded black youth in the secondary educational field by limiting his training to current occupational opportunities, Mr. Hansen seems surprised to know that a Negro might want law and medicine or perhaps archetectural engineering. He would perhaps fall dead were a black youth to apply for admission to the school of petroleum and metallurgy.

And in his argument to the court he pleads for time to erect such schools as these astounding blacks request. He interpets the Supreme Court decision to mean that a reasonable period should be given for the state to erect such institutions. But let us sift this spicious reasoning to the bottom to see if there is any thing equitable or fair in his position. Mr. Hansen knows that it is now almost three years since Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher applied for law training at the Norman school, and he knows that up to this good hour the state of Oklahoma has failed to provide another law school which Mrs. Fisher may attend equal in quality and facility with the Norman institution. Mr. Hansen knows it is not six months since another group appeared at the school and applied for graduate training in six other fields and. Mr. Hansen admitted last Monday in open court that the state has not appropriated one dollar, or taken one step to provide separate graduate schools for these applicants denied entrance at Norman.

In the language of Mr. Marshall, Mrs. Fisher would now be ready to practice law if she had been admitted to the law school at the time she applied. What does Mr. Hansen have in mind?. Does he assume the state has the right to wait an interminable length of time, while the precious years of the applicant's young life is wasted away? Does he assume the Supreme Court decision, which required the state to provide this type of education for Mrs. Fisher as soon as it did for any other citizen, gives him the right to detain Mrs. Fisher in a vacumn of ignorance while white youths complete courses in law? Does Mr. Hansen in fact understand the English language?

We have said many times in this column that the best argument against separate schools is vested in the obvious waste of public funds. We agree with Mr. Hansen that it is too costly and wastetful to maintain dual educational institutions in the south where the income of the state is not sufficient to maintain it. New York spends around $145.00 per annum upon the education of every child in the commonwealth. California spends in the same manner $127.00 per capita. Most all of the Northern states range above $100, but in the south the average per capita for education of school children is $70.00. This might be stretched out to do a fairly good job, (although it is less than half what New York expends on its school children), if stupidity did not suggest that we divide this $70.00 to install dual system of education.

Mr. Hansen was on the right subject when he discussed the teriffic cost of segregation, but we object to the attorney general making Oklahoma Negroes the fall guy while Dixie revels it in undemocratic social sanctions, and trys to live above her means.

Sipuel Case Discussed in England

The more important one becomes in this world, what one says and what one does has greater significance. As America strides forth to take moral leadership in a stricken world, alien people now hang upon every word and every act observable in the United States.

Sometime ago we pointed out in this column that one of the drawbacks and handicaps to hemispheric solidarity in the Americas develops out of the unwillingness of dark people below the Rio Grande to draw close to Colossus of the North, where it is known dark people are lynched, disfranchised and converted into social pariahs, and it appears that not only in the Americas but everywhere in the universe the eyes of the world are turned towards the United States. If Uncle Sam is to assume moral responsibility for what goes on among peoples in distant lands, the toiling, sweating masses of the earth are anxious to examine the American pattern of living, regarding its virtues and its faults.

With the thought of examining the moral fiber of the nation, students in many distant climes are watching carefully what is happening in Oklahoma respecting education for Negroes. The Ada Lois Sipuel case has the searchlight on it from England at the present moment if a letter received by Mrs. Fisher this week has any significance.

Here is what W. Bonny Rust, president of the National Union of Students of England, Wales and Northern Ireland, had to say in a letter to the American Embassy, London, England, under date of February 3. The Union is composed of fifty thousand students.

"The National Union of Students represents approximately 50 000 students from the universities, technical and training colleges of this country, organized on a basis of campus affiliation. We would like to express the grave concern of the N. U. S. at the news regarding Ada Sipuel Fisher. Press reports indicate that the Oklahoma state authorities, after refusing her permission to continue her studies at the State University Law School because of the color of her skin, set up a separate institution after an U. S. Supreme Court ruling, rathen than permit her entry to the white law school. We are even more concerned by later press reports indicating that no white students are to be allowed to study at this special law institution set up for Negroes.

"I am asked to convey to you the strong feeling raised by these reports among students in this country. We have always considered than this edueative factor to a person because of his race appears to us both indefensible in itself and unworthy of the traditions of the great American people.

"Would you please convey to the Oklahoma state authorities, to the Oklahoma State University Law School, to the principal of the new institution and to Mrs. Ada Sipuel Fisher herself, this expression of British students opinion?"

It is this sort of thing that is hurting America and Amer-

Mrs. Fisher Rates Praise of Negroes

LAST WEEK the State of Oklahoma set up an immediate law school for the specific purpose of evading the necessity of allowing Negro Americans to enter the University of Oklahoma law school.

Playing the lead role in the Court decision Oklahoma was ordered to either allow Mrs. Fisher to enter the University of Oklahoma or provide a separate law school. Thus the new, separate setup which Oklahoma decided to improvise was primarily for her benefit.

But Mrs. Fisher wasn't that gullible. Speaking for her, Atty. Amos T. Hall of Tulsa bitterly denounced the segregated law school.

When the school opened last Monday, Mrs. Fisher did not put in an appearance. In this way she virtually issued an ultimatum to the State authorities that she did not intend to accept either segregation or an inferior brand of education.

For her courage and determinatioin to win equal rights for Negro students in the South by refusing to attend the makeshift law schoool, set up for her in Oklahoma's capitol, The Courier this week proudly salutes Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel-Fisher.

MRS. ADA LOIS FISHER

THE TRUTH IS HIDDEN

To the Editor:

I wish to commend you for your courageous stand in the Sipuel case for the admission of Negroes into the professional schools of the University of Oklahoma. As long as I can remember, in the days when I lived in Oklahoma, you have consistently fought for Civil Rights, always within the framework of the Constitution of the United States of America.

It is of great concern to many of Negro and white Americans that Negro newspapers and Negro "leaders" are following the fascist line of vilifying Henry Wallace and the third party movement. Our Negro people, like millions of whites, are not being given (as you know) the truth about what is happening in America today. Honest persons and a few courageous and honest papers such as yours must take the truth to the people.

We must not be misled by the undemocratic force under the name of the people to rediscover America for American people.

We must restore through the common people an America of th the people, by the people, for the people."

Oklahoma Students Show Real Courage

In several of the large Southern universities, sparkling speeches have been made by white student leaders against the evils of educational discrimination. But in most instances nothing tangible has been done about it.

At the University of Oklahoma, however, a group of nearly 1,000 white students recently staged a spirited demonstration condemning their school's prejudiced attitude toward Negro applicants and protesting the State of Oklahoma's action in establishing a separate, improvised graduate school.

Among the leaders in this commendable exhibition of real democracy were Miss Wanda Lou Howard, Jack Bales and Howard Friedman. By their spirit, which reflects the trend of thought of countless young white collegians, they are giving all Americans renewed hope for a greater tomorrow.

To show President Truman how they felt about it, the group cremated a copy of the Fourteenth Amendment on the Oklahoma campus and mailed it to the Nation's chief executive.

For their courage in the face of Dixie tradition, The Courier this week proudly salutes Miss Wanda Lou Howard, Jack Bales, Howard Friedman and their fellow-students.

New Trial in Law School Case Opens

U. of Oklahoma Bias Is Under Fire 2nd Time

By J. DON DAVIS
(Staff Correspondent)

NORMAN, Okla. — Attorneys for both sides began unlimbering their legal guns as the new trial of Mrs. Ada Sipuel-Fisher's effort to force her admission into the University Law School got under way in District Court here Monday. Thurgood S. Marshall, Robert Ming and James H. Nabritt are Mrs. Fisher's lawyers.

Before Judge Justin Henshaw, Attorney Marshall reviewed the history of the case and declared that the Langston University Law School, hastily built to circumvent the ruling of the United States Supreme Court in Mrs. Fisher's original complaint, was inadequate and not equal to the University of Oklahoma Law School.

EXPERT TESTIMONY

For the State, Attorney General Mac Q. Williams indicated in his preliminary arguments that he would exert every effort to keep the testimony of experts out of the record. Attorney Marshall had told the court that he would introduce expert testimony.

How long this new trial will last is uncertain, but as opposing counsel cleared the legal hurdles necessary to send the newest trial into its hearing, indications were that it might be as hotly contested as the previous trials.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 31 (AP) —Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson ruled today that it would be "unlawful" for the University of Oklahoma Regents to admit six Negroes who seek graduate work.

Mr. Williamson made his "hard-and-fast" ruling at the regents' request. On Wednesday he had said the regents "were justified in refusing" admittance. This did not satisfy the regents, however, and they demanded a "yes or no" answer.

He argued that the racial segregation laws for public schooling were made by the people of the state, and that until they were changed by the people or other high authority it was the duty of state officers to enforce them.

Earlier, Dean Jerome E. Hemry of the new Law School for Negroes rejected the enrollment application of Walter M. Harrison, aged 57, a former newspaperman and a former Army officer. Mr. Harrison is white.

Mr. Hemry indicated that Mr. Harrison's application, which was made yesterday, could not be accepted because of Oklahoma's constitutional provision of separate schools for whites and Negroes.

White Man Barred From Negro School; Other Issue Hangs

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 31.—(AP)—Oklahoma decided Saturday that a white man cannot attend a school set up for Negroes, but still left unanswered the more serious racial segregation problem, "Can Negroes attend school for whites?"

Dean Jerome E. Hemry of the newly created law school for Negroes at the state capitol here rejected the enrollment application of Walter M. Harrison, 57, Oklahoma newspaperman and ex-Army officer.

Hemry indicated Harrison's application, which was made Friday, could not be accepted because of Oklahoma's constitutional provision of separate schools for whites and Negroes. No other applications have been received for the school, which was set up to comply with a United States Supreme Court decision ordering Oklahoma to grant equal and immediate educational opportunities to Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher.

The 23-year-old Negro woman refused to enroll and has taken her fight back to the supreme court where Monday the high tribunal is expected to consider her latest petition, requesting the University of Oklahoma be forced to admit her to its law school.

Meanwhile, State Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson said he would announce by Monday his opinion on the application of six other Negroes to the graduate school at the University of Oklahoma.

State Representative Harold R. Carey, Oklahoma City, Saturday asked Gov. Roy J. Turner to call a special session of the Oklahoma legislature to consider the Negro educational problem.

In a letter to Turner, he suggested the legislature appropriate $15,000,000 to Langston University, the state's only institution of higher learning for Negroes.

Meanwhile, at Norman, site of the University of Oklahoma, Irish students lampooned earlier segregation demonstrations on the campus by claiming the Irish were being discriminated against.

Time For Decision

The University of Oklahoma, which last week established a three-man faculty law school for Negroes in order to comply with a decision of the United States supreme court requiring it to either provide a law school for Negroes or to admit a Negro applicant to the university, is now faced with four other problems.

Six other Negroes have now filed applications for admission to four of the university's graduate schools—business administration, architectural engineering, school administration and zoology.

And Oklahoma does not now provide for these graduate courses at Langston university, the state's only college for Negroes.

The state constitution of Oklahoma requires the segregation of the races in the schools of Oklahoma. And in accord with this provision the state has no choice, under the supreme court decisions, except to set up graduate schools for Negroes, offering the same courses offered whites.

What is happening in Oklahoma will, of course, happen in every Southern state, sooner or later. When Negroes apply for admission to the state medical colleges Southern states will then face a momentuous decision, for no medical school can be set up overnight and medical schools are expensive both to create and to maintain. An undergraduate professor of zoology can give graduate courses in zoology, and if his teaching load isn't any greater than the teachers in the white graduate school it may be said that he can offer instruction comparable to that offered at the white university. But an instructor in business administration or school administration cannot qualify to teach medicine.

The Southern governors meeting in Florida to consider a plan of setting up a system of regional universities to handle Negro graduate and professional students—it would be a good idea if the supreme court would allow it—should consider also what the Southern states will do if the regional plan is rejected.

The time is here for a decision.

6 MORE NEGROES TEST OKLAHOMA RACE LAW

NORMAN, Okla., Jan. 28 (UP)—Six Negroes applied for admission to the University of Oklahoma today in what appeared to be a mass test of the state's segregation law. University officials delayed final decision on their applications.

Dr. George L. Cross, university president, announced the delay after conferring with the Negroes, three men and three women who came here from Oklahoma City to file their applications and open the new attack on the state law.

William R. Mind Jr., Negro, associate professor of law at the University of Chicago, inspected Oklahoma's hastily established Negro law school in Oklahoma City. He was representing the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and said he came to Oklahoma at the specific request of Thurgood Marshall, attorney for Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher.

Mrs. Fisher is asking the United States Supreme Court for an order to admit her forthwith to Oklahoma University Law School. The high tribunal said she must receive equal educational rights with whites.

In the case of the six Negroes who applied to the university today, Dr. Cross said he had asked the State Regents for Higher Education to notify him whether equal facilities existed elsewhere in Oklahoma for the specialized education which the Negroes asked.

The university president said he would call a meeting of the Oklahoma University regents "as soon as possible" to act on the applications. The Negroes sought admission to study for graduate degrees.

Hint Plan to Defy Order to Admit Negroes to Okla. U.

NORMAN, Okla., Jan. 13.—Oklahoma officials plan to defy the U. S. Supreme Court demand that they admit Negroes to the University of Oklahoma Law School by closing it to all new students next semester. This was disclosed today by a source close to Oklahoma's attorney-general's office.

One regent, who didn't want his name used, said the state still has a law against Negroes and whites attending the same schools.

"The court did not, as far as I know, declare the law unconstitutional," he said.

PLANS TO ENROLL

Mrs. Fisher, who was turned down two years ago when she applied for admission to the university, planned to enroll for the spring semester.

University and state officials refused to concede that the Supreme Court had upset Oklahoma's segregation system. But they refused to comment for publication, pending a meeting of the university board of regents tomorrow. The regents will meet with Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson Thursday to discuss the

Dr. M. A. Nash, chancellor of the State Board of Regents, said that, under the decree, Negroes could not be barred from the University unless the State spent millions to provide equal professional training facilities for them.

Dr. George L. Cross, University president, who has made it clear that he has no personal objections to the admission of Negroes, declined to comment on the decision.

University and State officials refused to concede that the Supreme Court had upset Oklahoma's segregation law, which forbids mingling of whites and Negroes in schools.

They refused comment for publication, pending a meeting today of the University Board of Regents.

Chief Justice Thurman S. Hurst of the State Supreme Court said the next step in the case is for the State court to write its interpretive opinion in conformity with the high court's decision.

Students Burn 14th Amendment in Protest of Negro Ban

White students at the University of Oklahoma at Norman Thursday solemnly cremated a copy of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution in protest against the state's ban of Negro students at the institution. Speeches were made by Jack Bales (left) and Howard Friedman. Wanda Lou Howard held burning container. The Fourteenth Amendment guarantees civil rights to every person. The university board met to discuss applications.

DEAN GRISWOLD of Harvard law school declared that the two schools were so unequal that a fair basis for comparison did not exist. "At Harvard," he said, "our students eat, drink and sleep law. A great deal of instruction in law is given by the students themselves. A large part of learning law is wrestling with problems."

The dean also pointed out that Langston was unaccredited. A Langston student could not be admitted to Harvard.

"Is it necessary," inquired the Attorney General, "to be admitted there in order to obtain a legal education?"

The dean answered meekly that it was not.

In summing up, the Attorney General said that if the Supreme Court justices "had believed the time too short to set up a law school they would have said so, and have added that therefore the petitioner was entitled to secure education at Oklahoma University."

A Local Question

HE also pointed out that until the people changed the State constitution and statutes, it was the duty of the State to uphold the principle of segregation.

"This is not an issue of how things are done at Harvard or Columbia," he said. "The issue is whether the State has provided an opportunity for legal education."

Said Thurgood Marshall as he summed up: "If you removed the race question from this case, there would not be a man or woman in the courtroom sending their children to Langston if they could attend the University of Oklahoma."

The judge will hand down a decision in the Sipuel case in two weeks.

Oklahoma's Dual School Idea on Trial

bard Foster, jr. He charged State officials with "cheap political chicanery," calling the new school a "fake, a fraud and a deception . . . in my mind an attempt to avoid the clear-cut mandate of the United States Supreme Court."

The faculty of the new school testified that opportunities to obtain a legal education were substantially equal. Dean Hemry added that it had been approved by the Oklahoma board of bar examiners and that graduates would be permitted to take the State bar examination. The chairman of the Oklahoma A. & M. College's board of regents said they had made a "bona fide vigorous effort to set up in good faith a school of law that would be equal to that at the State university."

Joseph A. McClain, chairman of the legal education section of the American Bar Association, who inspects many Southern schools, testified to the merits of Langston.

O. U. Overcrowded

DR. HERVEY, former dean of the University of Oklahoma law school and now on the board of examiners of the American Bar Association, described the Langston law school as having "courtroom atmosphere and in this aspect is superior to the O. U. school." He also said that the smaller school might give better training than the O. U. law school, which has 50 students to one professor.

He said there might also be advantages in being some distance from Langston University proper. "I prefer to have students enter a monastery and stay there three years, instead of playing in the university band or taking part in campus politics and dramatics," he said.

MISS SIPUEL

Dr. Hervey and Prof. Nabrit of Howard University asked if it would be considered advisable, in view of the overcrowding at Oklahoma U., to transfer 30 students to Langston law school. Judge Hinshaw overruled this question.

Need Association

FIVE out-of-State law professors testified for the plaintiff. Their testimony ran along rather similar lines, each stressing his particular field and explaining how a student could acquire this facet of the law better at Oklahoma U. than at Langston. Walter Gellhorn of Columbia, Malcolm Sharp of the University of Chicago and Charles Bunn of the University of Wisconsin agreed that law students learn best in association with other departments, such as political science, economics and psychology.

Dr. Max Radin of California, author of "The Law and Mr. Smith" and of many articles in law reviews, said that Langston law school, with only three professors, two of whom will teach only part time, can give at best only three points of view, while O. U. law school, with 11 professors teaching full time, gives 11 points of view.

Dr. Radin also made the point that having only one group of persons, with a similar background, further limited the new law school. It would be a limitation, he said, were they all of Scandinavian ancestry or Mayflower lineage.

Malcolm Sharp developed this point further. "If a large section of the community is educated under handicaps, competition within that group is less vigorout," he said. "A law school tries to train leaders. Leaders should be trained as part of the total community."

Negro Applies to Enter Oklahoma-Medical School

Courier-Journal, Louisville, Ky.

Oklahoma City, Jan. 24 (UP)—Another test of Oklahoma's racial segregation laws may develop soon if a Negro from Pauls Valley, Okla., carries out his plan to seek enrollment at the University of Oklahoma Medical School, it was learned tonight.

Dr. H. F. Marsh, dean of students, said he received a request for application forms "one day early this week," from a student at Meharry Medical College, Nashville, an all-Negro school.

Marsh declined to disclose the student's name, but said he is a sophomore at the Nashville college and that he indicated he wants to enter the O. U. Medical School as a junior next fall.

Applicants Already Refused.

The dean said he sent the application forms, but advised the student that the fall junior class already is unusually large, and no additions are expected to be made. Several white applicants already have been turned down, he said. 1-25-48

"I discouraged him," Marsh explained, "not on the basis of his race, but because the class already has 75 members—the most in the school's history."

Meanwhile, the State regents for A. & M. colleges today named three Oklahoma City attorneys as faculty for the new Negro law school to be set up Monday at the State Capitol.

Dean to Get $6,000.

The teachers—who may not have anybody to teach—are Jerome Henry, dean and professor at $6,000 a year; Randell S. Cobb, former State attorney general, professor at $5,000, and Arthur Ellsworth, professor at $4,500.

The regents said they have invited Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher to apply at the new school for the legal training she has been trying for two years to find in Oklahoma. However, Mrs. Fisher, whose efforts brought a Supreme Court mandate January 12 for the state to provide equal facilities for Negroes, has stated that she wants no part of the new school.

High Court Justices Rap School's Ban On Negro

Fri. 1-9-48
The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

Washington, Jan. 8 (U.P.)—Justices of the Supreme Court today ripped into attorneys for the State of Oklahoma, who were defending the policy of segregation in the state's universities, with critical questions seldom heard in the court's austere chambers.

The extraordinary questioning came during hearing on the case of a Negro girl who applied two years ago for admission to the University of Oklahoma Law School. She was denied entrance solely because of her race.

Eight justices were present. All participated in the questioning of Assistant State Attorney General Fred Hansen and Maurice H. Merrill, an attorney.

In contrast two Negro attorneys for Ada Lois Sipuel, the student, were asked only three questions during their hour-long presentation of the case.

State's Law Is Explained.

The Courier-Journal
Hansen, who opened the State's case, drew most of the fire. He explained that under Oklahoma law it is a crime for Negroes to attend schools for white persons. He said that Miss Sipuel should have applied to the State Board of Regents, who then would have been obligated either to direct her admission to the university or to open a law school upon her application. Louisville, Ky

Justice Robert H. Jackson asked: "Is it your position that there are equal opportunities afforded for Negro students?"

Hansen replied: "There is a way that a Negro applicant can get equal facilities—by applying to the Board of Regents."

Jackson 'Can't See It.'

"Can she get them now?" Jackson pressed. "If she can, I should think this case would be at an end." Fri -1-9-48

"I'm not saying that it could be done tomorrow or the next day," Hansen replied. "But it would be the duty of the board promptly to open up a law school at the Negro college."

"How can we possibly say that is equal opportunity today?" Jackson retorted. "You can argue it, but I don't see it!"

Justice William O. Douglas then interposed: "She might be an old lady by that time. It takes time to build an institution."

Hansen said that Miss Sipuel's attorneys made no move to apply to the "proper" agency in order to get separate facilities established during the two years the case has been in the courts.

"I suppose the State board has known it all that time, too," Justice Hugo L. Black observed. "Have they done anything about it?" The Courier-Journal

"No, they haven't," Hansen replied. "Our position is that Miss Sipuel does not even want to attend a separate law school. We feel she wants to attend the school for white persons."

Jackson said that would not be equality, adding: "After all, a law school opened up for one law student isn't much of a law school, is it?" Louisville, Ky.

Can't Make Stipulation.

Hansen said the State believed that if equal facilities were not provided it would be the board's duty to allow her to attend the white university.

Jackson asked: "Do you stipulate she can be admitted to the university?" Fri. 1-9-48

"I'm not under authority to stipulate anything," Hansen replied.

Hansen said Oklahoma is one of the 17 states that have a policy of segregation in their schools. He said that he does not believe it is the duty of such states to maintain schools when there had not been a single applicant and might never be. He said the cost would be very high of such a standard must be recognized.

Pleads for Ban On Segregation In Schools

PM New York, N.Y.

WASHINGTON

The Supreme Court has been asked to ban segregation of Negro and white students in public education systems. PM

The plea was made by counsel for a Negro, Ada Lois Sipuel, who was denied admission to the law school of the University of Oklahoma. New York, N.Y.

The attorney said equality of educational opportunities was required by the 14th Amendment and argued "that equality under a segregated system is a legal fiction and a judicial myth." Thurs. 1-8-48

Attorneys for Oklahoma will present their answering arguments today.

Offer Law At Negro School

Miss Sipuel appealed to the high tribunal from a decision by the Oklahoma Supreme Court, which stated, among other things, that the Oklahoma constitution and law prescribe a policy of segregated education. PM New York, N.Y.

Mac Q. Williamson, Oklahoma's Attorney General, said in a petition filed with the high court that Oklahoma law assured the girl a right to an education in law equal to that given white students. Thurs. 1-8-48

Only Has To Ask

He said he was sure that if she asked for it a law course would be established at Langston University, an Oklahoma institution for Negroes. PM New York, N.Y.

But Amos T. Hall, Negro attorney of Tulsa, argued that Miss Sipuel was entitled to her state education in law now. Thurs. 1-8-48

"We do not think that she should be required to take a circuitous route through state channels that will require 8 or 10 years for her to get the right which other citizens are enjoying now," he said.

Segregation Defined

Thurgood Marshall, NAACP attorney of New York, complained that a 1939 decision by the Supreme Court in a similar case from Missouri has been "whittled down" by later state court rulings. The 1939 decision has been interpreted as permitting a state to provide separate but equal educational facilities for whites and Negroes. PM 1-8-48

Marshall and Hall filed with the Supreme Court a brief which described segregation in education as a "device to 'keep the Negro in his place,' i. e., in a constantly inferior position." New York, N.Y. Thurs.

Oklahoma Told to Train Negro At Once

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

Court Bars Delay In Equal Education

Dec. 1-12-47

By the Associated Press.

Washington, Jan. 12.—The Supreme Court held today that Negroes are entitled not only to receive in State institutions any sort of educational training that whites can get in such schools, but also to get it as quickly as any other group.

Strict application of the order would give the State of Oklahoma just three days to admit a Negro girl, Ada Lois Sipuel, to the Law School at the all-white University of Oklahoma, or set up separate and equal facilities for her.

A new semester in which white students can enter begins January 15. There is no Oklahoma State law school for Negroes now. The applicant already has been waiting two years while the case was in litigation.

Plans Not Indicated.

At Oklahoma City, Dr. M. A. Nash, chancellor of the State Board of Regents, said, "Oklahoma will of course abide by the court's ruling," but did not indicate whether Miss Sipuel would be admitted to the University or whether separate facilities would be provided for her.

Speed was the main point in today's ruling. Negroes' rights to equal facilities, and to have them in institutions of their own states, had been affirmed by the high court in a Missouri case 10 years ago.

Counsel for Miss Sipuel contended in the appeal that the Missouri ruling should be made stronger on the issue of time, and the high court complied.

The lawyers argued that the original findings had been so applied that a Negro student might be required to make application for special schools or classes and then to wait "interminably" until they were set up.

Handled Without Delay.

Speed was further emphasized by the high court's physical handling of the appeal. The order came down just four days after oral arguments, as compared to the weeks or months which often elapse.

The order reversed Oklahoma State Court findings in the student's suit against the regents of the University, and required new proceedings in line with the new rule.

Miss Sipuel had demanded an order for immediate admission to the University Law School itself, and state courts had turned her down.

Dr. Nash declared, "The regents believe Oklahoma's problem now is one to be settled by the citizens through their Legislature."

Nash noted it would take millions of dollars to provide separate facilities in all specialized or graduate-study courses and it might be too costly all at once. He said it is up to the people of Oklahoma to decide the policy to be followed.

Arguments Give Clews.

The Supreme Court did not specify how Oklahoma should meet its new requirements, but clews were offered in the oral arguments.

Justice Frankfurter at that time asked counsel for the State if, in Today's order made no mention of a contention, advanced by Miss Sipuel's counsel, that the general process of educational segregation is unconstitutional and should be thrown out. The rule, spelled out in a Missouri case of 1938, is that segregation is permissible if the facilities are equal.

Split On Canton Negro.

The court found itself in another of the 5-4 opinion splits which often occur in civil-rights cases, in throwing out the conviction of a young Canton, Ohio, Negro sentenced to a life term for murder.

Justice Douglas, in the majority opinion, held that a confession was "wrung from a child by means which the law should not sanction."

He objected to long questioning at late hours, and to refusal of officers to let a lawyer see the Negro for three days or to allow his mother to visit him for five days. Douglas complained of "disregard of the standards of decency."

The Negro, John Harvey Haley, was 15 at the time.

Justices Black, Murphy, and Rutledge joined Douglas, and Justice Frankfurter wrote a separate concurring opinion.

Credibility Called Issue.

Justice Burton, for the dissenters, contended that "undisputed facts left comparatively little need for such a confession as was signed by Haley." He laid stress on testimony that no coercion was applied and that the youth was kept informed of his rights, and declared the question was one of the credibility of witnesses. That is a point for the trial court, he said.

Another action by the court assured a ruling on the constitutionality of peacetime rent controls.

The tribunal agreed to hear a Justice Department appeal from a decision of the Cleveland District Court which had declared the 1947 Rent-Control Act invalid.

The lower court had held that the country is now "in fact" at peace, and therefore cannot control rents under the war powers act.

Won't Hear Appeals.

The court refused to hear two appeals in widely publicized cases. They were those of:

Benjamin F. Fields, sentenced to 90 days and $250 fine for contempt of Congress on allegations that he failed to produce records in a House committee investigation of a surplus screen wire transaction.

Donald M. Johnson, son of former Federal Judge Albert W. Johnson of Lewisburg, Pa., and Jacob Greenes each was sentenced to two years and a $10,000 fine on charges of defrauding the Government in receivership and criminal cases heard by the Elder Johnson. The judge had been acquitted at the same trial.

Okla. U. Flouts Court; Bars Negro Woman

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

NORMAN, Okla., Jan 26 (UP). — The University of Oklahoma today rejected the application of Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher for admission to the university's law school, saying that a "substantially equal" law school had been created for her in Oklahoma city.

The 23-year-old Negro woman was informed of the university's action only a few hours after her attorneys asked the U. S. Supreme Court to order Oklahoma officials to admit her "forthwith" to the state university. Tues. Jan 27-48

Rejection of her application, submitted one week ago, came after school officials received a letter in which D. M. A. Nash, chancellor of the State Regents for Higher Education, informed the university that a "substantially equal" law school had been set up. 1-27-48

Oklahoma's separate law school for Negroes, established by order of the State Supreme Court, opened today, but no Negroes enrolled. Mrs. Fisher refused to enter the new school, a branch of Langston University, the states's only institution of higher learning for Negroes.

Mrs. Fisher went to Norman today to press her application for admission but university officials delayed a final decision until she had left the campus.

J. E. Fellows, Dean of admissions, advised Mrs. Fisher of the university's action after she had returned to the home of friends in Oklahoma City. Daily Worker

The university's board of regents, meeting last week, agreed to deny Mrs. Fisher admission if the separate school was found "substantially equal." Such action, they decided, was to be taken if Nash or the attorney general ruled that the new school meets the U. S. Supreme Court mandate ordering "equal" legal education facilities.

The Negro law school at Oklahoma City was created by State Regents for Higher Education after the Oklahoma supreme court declared the U. S. high tribunal had not struck out laws calling for segregation of the races in all public schools.

AskStateSupreme Unit To Decide Course Of Action

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga. Wed. 1-21-48

OKLAHOMA CITY—(NNPA)—The State Board of Regents for Higher Education is asking the State Supreme Court to decide what course of action it should follow in providing legal training for Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher in compliance with the mandate of the United States Supreme Court of January 12.

The latter tribunal ordered the State of Oklahoma to afford Mrs. Fisher an opportunity for a legal education within the state as quickly as it does white applicants.

In an application filed in behalf of the State Board of Regents last Friday by Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson, the court was asked to declare whether Mrs. Fisher should be admitted to the freshman class in the University of Oklahoma law school or whether a segregated law school should be established. The next school term begins January 29, and some action is expected by that time in order that Mrs. Fisher may matriculate

Awaits Enrollment

If the court should decide she is entitled to enter the University of Oklahoma, she will enroll. If a segregated law school is set up, she probably will continue the litigation on the ground that the separate facilities are not substantially equal to those provided for white law students.

At Washington, D. C., last Friday, George M. Johnson, dean of the Howard University School of Law, reiterated that contention of counsel for Mrs. Fisher that it takes more than brick and mortar to provide separate but equal educational facilities. Atlanta, Ga.

"It takes a faculty, students and student organizations," Dean Johnson said, adding that there were benefits to be derived by mere attendance of classes in a mixed school that could not be obtained in a segregated school. He said a student would profit by the exchange of ideas among the students and between the students and faculty members. Pitts. 1-21-48

"As was said by an expert who testified in the Texas case," said Dean Johnson, "it is not possible to give a Negro equal education opportunity in a separate school, even if the faculty is comparable, the buildings are similar, and the library is the same, and even if there are the same number of students, for the reason that a white student is studying in an atmosphere that more nearly approximates the national community in which he will have to work.

The Negro People's Fight
For Equal Education 2-5-48
By Abner W. Berry

THE SEE-SAW FIGHT of Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher for a legal education in Oklahoma is setting off some interesting fireworks. Negro and white students there have ignored the U.S. Supreme Court loophole through which state authorities dragged a Jim-crow, one-woman law school. They're fighting to bring democracy to the campus.

Last week the white students, whom the authorities would "protect" from Negroes, demonstrated in favor of the 14th Amendment.

The exclusion of Mrs. Fisher, they held, meant that the 14th Amendment was dead on their campus. They marked the fact by placing in an urn the ashes of a segregated school. Under the cover of darkness, they buried the urn on the campus.

They fought on a campus for Sweatt's admission, but the state authorities insisted upon "protecting" them from contact with Negroes. Daily Worker 2-5-48

This was not a new development. When in 1946 Herman Marion Sweatt, a Negro, was denied admission to the University of Texas law school, white students there organized a chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Worker, N.Y. 2-5-48

The Real Issue

The Louisville Times

Reading law in the office of a lawyer was a common means of preparing for practice two generations ago. The Oklahoma Negro student whose case is nationally discussed could not contend and does not contend that the arrangement Oklahoma offers would not be practical for her. Her backers are fighting segregation of races in schools, not fighting for opportunity for an individual to study law in Oklahoma, where the Constitution provides segregation.

The student's attorney's statement that "one student cannot constitute a law school" is true. And 1,000 students cannot constitute a law school. But one or 1,000 students may attend a law school. Oklahoma offers one student, plus others who may wish to attend, services of a law school. It is contended widely that the smaller the class the better the student's opportunity for education. A class of one might have definite educational advantages.

Oklahoma Challenge

A new law school opened for registration last Monday in Oklahoma's capital, Oklahoma City. It has three rooms, use of the state law library, a faculty of three attorneys. When registration closed on Wednesday, no one had applied for admission. The attorneys returned to their law practices.

Technically the school is still in existence. It is a branch of Langston University, Oklahoma's school for Negroes. It was set up under a Jan. 12 decree of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher, 23, a Negro who had applied for admission to the University of Oklahoma law school (white students) and had been rejected on the ground that Oklahoma law requires racial segregation. The court ordered the state to provide Mrs. Fisher with "equal" educational facilities "forthwith." The three-room school was Oklahoma's response.

Last week Mrs. Fisher termed the school in the Capitol inadequate, again sought admission to the University of Oklahoma. Again she was rejected. In Washington, her attorneys petitioned the Supreme Court to order her admitted. On Wednesday six other Negroes applied for admission to University of Oklahoma courses in engineering, business administration, biology, education.

NORMAN, Okla., Jan. 19—(AP)—The only Negro ever to attempt to enroll in the University of Oklahoma since it was founded in 1892 was to try again today—bolstered this time by a U. S. Supreme Court decision.

She is Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher, 23, of Chickasha, Okla., a graduate of Langston University, the state's only institution of higher education for Negroes.

Denied admission when she first sought to enroll in the university's law school two years ago, she appealed unsuccessfully to the State District Court and State Supreme Court which upheld the state's laws requiring racial segregation in the schools.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People carried the case to the U. S. Supreme Court which last Monday ruled that the state must make "equal education facilities" available to Negroes as promptly as they are for white students.

The State Supreme Court Saturday directed the State Board of Regents to set up a separate law school "to afford to plaintiff and all others similarly situated an opportunity to commence the study of law at a state institution the same as citizens of other groups are afforded such opportunities. . . ."

The State Supreme Court order, however, directed that the regents act in conformity "with the provisions of the constitution and statutes of this state requiring segregation of the races in the schools of this state."

Mrs. Fisher attended a meeting in Oklahoma City last night of state officials of the N. A. A. C. P. and Thurgood Marshall, attorney in the organization's New York office. After the meeting it was announced she would attempt to enroll in the university law school today.

Dr. George L. Cross, president of the university, declined comment other than to emphasize that the three-day official registration period for the second semester does not begin until Jan. 26.

Members of the Board of Regents, meanwhile, were to meet in Oklahoma City today to consider the problem.

United States and State Supreme Courts.

Amos Hall of Tulsa, counsel for Mrs. Fisher, said after the hearing he did not know what action he would take, but "something would be done."

"We are as much in the dark as we ever were," he said.

In his decision Judge Hinshaw said the court retained jurisdiction of the case "to hear and determine any question which may arise concerning the application of and the performance of the duties prescribed by this order.

The case went back to Judge Hinshaw for final action since it originally was filed in his state district court.

The United States Supreme Court ruled the State of Oklahoma should provide immediate law school facilities for Negroes equal to those furnished other students. The ruling did not specify whether the state should admit Negroes to existing law schools operated by the state or provide separate facilities. The State Board of Regents has announced plans to provide a law course at Langston University for Negroes, at Oklahoma City, which they said would comply with the United States Supreme Court ruling and the state law which requires segregation of Negro and white students.

Separate College Is Ready

NORMAN, Okla., Jan. 22 (AP)—District Judge Justin Hinshaw today ruled the University of Oklahoma could deny the entrance of a Negro to its law school provided the state has a separate school ready for Negroes by next Monday, but left two alternatives in the event it could not be in operation.

Judge Hinshaw ruled that if the school is not ready, the University of Oklahoma must either admit Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher, 23-year-old Negro, until a separate Negro law school can be established, or close the university law school to new enrolees this semester.

The ruling left the situation confused. Fred Hansen, assistant Oklahoma Attorney General who argued the case, indicated the school would not be ready for enrolling next week. However, in Oklahoma City it was announced enrollment would begin Monday.

Judge Hinshaw accepted reports of Mr. Hansen, which outlined the two alternatives as directed by the

Oklahoma's Battle Over Negro School Rages On

The News Birmingham, Ala.
Tues. 1-20-48

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 20—(AP)—The legal battle of a 23-year-old Negro woman to enroll in the University of Oklahoma Law School today was headed back to the United States Supreme Court. That body only last week directed the state to establish equal law school facilities for Negroes and whites.

A Negro school of law established here in a surprise move yesterday by the Oklahoma state regents for higher education was branded by Negro leaders as a "Jim Crow law school."

At a mass meeting here attended by some 600 Negroes, James E. Stewart, president of the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the association's attorneys will go back to the Supreme Court to contend that "some unit of the state government is in contempt" of the court's ruling.

Mrs. Fisher Again Asks to Enter Okla, U.

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

NORMAN, Okla., March 16 (UP).—Attorneys for Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher today began a new attempt to force her admission into the University of Oklahoma Law School and break down Oklahoma's segregation policy. Wed 3-17-48

Amos T. Hall, Tulsa Negro attorney, filed a petition in district court here asking a hearing on allegations that equal educational opportunities have not been provided for Mrs. Fisher, and that she be admitted "forthwith" to the university law school pending the hearing.

He asked Judge Justin Hinshaw to modify an earlier order issued Jan. 22, which required the university board of regents either to admit Mrs. Fisher until a new Negro law school could be established or not to admit any new law school applicants for the second semester. Following that ruling, the new Langston University School of Law was set up in the state capitol, but Mr. Fisher's attorneys contend the new school is not equal in facilities to the law school at O. U.

School Without a Student

Oklahoma, trying to cling to Jim Crow and still satisfy the U.S. Supreme Court decision in the Sipuel case (TIME, Jan. 26), had set up a "separate but equal" law school for Negroes in Oklahoma City. Only one student—Theophilus M. Roberts, a waiter at the Oklahoma Club—enrolled. Negro leaders in the segregation fight boycotted the school (so did Ada Sipuel) and turned the heat on Roberts. Last week, he quit without ever having cracked a book. Said he: "I've bucked the Church, the fraternal organizations and the man in the street. The pressure on me was more than I could take."

BRITISH STUDENTS PROTEST EXCLUSION OF ADA SIPUEL

3/5/48

New York, N. Y, March 4--Mrs. Ada Sipuel Fisher's fight to gain admittance to the University of Oklahoma Law School has enlisted the support of the British National Union of Students which has officially protested to the American embassy in London according to information received here.

NAACP - N.Y. Fri. 3-5-48

The Union, representing 50,000 students of the universities and colleges of England, Wales and Northern Ireland, has forwarded to Mrs. Fisher a copy of their letter of protest to the American embassy. The letter, signed by W. Bonnet Rust, president of the student union, expressed the organization's "strong feeling" against the exclusion of Mrs. Fisher. "We have always considered that an essential part of education is study alongside other people. To deny this educative factor to a person because of his race appears to us both indefensible in itself and unworthy of the traditions of the great American people," the letter asserts.

NEGRO LAW SCHOOL INFERIOR,
SIPUEL WITNESSES DECLARE

June 3, 1948

NORMAN, Okla., June 1.—After five days of testimony by experts branding the Jim Crow Langston Law School as "inferior", "indecent," "fraudulent" and "unconstitutional", Judge Justin Hinshaw announced here last Friday (May 28) that a later date he would hand down his decision on admitting Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher to the Law School of the University of Oklahoma.

The case, which was taken to the U. S. Supreme Court last January by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, was retried in the District Court of Cleveland County, Oklahoma on the basis of NAACP claims that the State of Oklahoma, by setting up a separate three-professor law school for Mrs. Fisher, had not complied with the Supreme Court's mandate to make available to her forthwith a legal education equal to that provided white students.

Headed by Thurgood Marshall, NAACP special counsel, a battery of legal talent including Amos T. Hall of Oklahoma, James Nabrit of Howard University and William Robert Ming of the University of Chicago carried the attack against Jim Crow in education. They sought not only to prove inequality between the facilities for legal training provided by the state for Negro and white students, but also to demonstrate the fallacy inherent in the "equal but separate" concept. The basic attack was against segregation per se.

Oklahoma Issue Sent Back To Lower Court

High Court Rules Legal Training Must Be Provided For Miss Sipuel Like All Others

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—The United States Supreme Court on Monday ruled that legal education must be provided for Miss Ada Lois Sipuel by Oklahoma as quickly as it does for applicants of any other group. Miss Sipuel's application for admission to the University of Oklahoma law school was rejected because she is colored. She sought admission to the state law school Jan. 14, 1946.

The mandate of the court was issued immediately and sent by air mail to the board of regents of the University of Oklahoma, defendants in the case.

The case had been under consideration by the high tribunal only since last Thursday. Its quick decision was indicated by Justice Felix Frankfurter during argument of the case last Thursday in his questioning of counsel for the state as to what action the state would take if the case should be remanded.

TEXT OF DECISION

The text of the per curiam decision follows:

"On Jan. 14, 1946, the petitioner, a Negro, concededly qualified to receive the professional legal education offered by the state, applied for admission to the school of law of the University of Oklahoma, the only institution for legal education supported and maintained by the taxpayers of the State of Oklahoma. Petitioner's application for admission was denied, solely because of her color

"Petitioner then made application for a writ of mandamus in the District Court of Cleveland county, Oklahoma. The writ of mandamus was refused, and the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma affirmed the judgment of the district court.

ENTITLED TO EDUCATION

"The petitioner is entitled to secure legal education afforded by a state institution. To this time, it has been denied her, although during the same period many white applicants have been afforded legal education by the state.

"The state must provide it for her in conformity with the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment and provide it as soon as it does for applicants of any other group

"The judgment of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma is reversed and the cause is remanded to that court for proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion."

Court Asked To Clarify Ruling In Gaines' Case

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—During arguments on the case of Miss Ada Lois Sipuel, who is seeking admission to the University of Oklahoma law school, the U. S. Supreme Court was asked to affirm its decision in the Lloyd Gaines case and to clarify its position so that states may no longer whittle away the effects of that decision.

The case was begun on Thursday of last week almost two years after Miss Sipuel applied for admission to the school. The court reversed the lower court's decision against Miss Sipuel on Monday.

In the Gaines case, decided Dec. 12, 1938, the Supreme Court held that the state of Missouri had to admit Gaines to the University of Missouri school of law in the absence of any other and proper provisions for his legal training within the state.

Arguing the case of Miss Sipuel, a graduate of Langston University, Thurgood Marshall, special counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, on Thursday urged the high tribunal to declare in its opinion that the only way the state of Oklahoma can comply with the United States Constitution is by admitting her to the existing white law school.

SEVERE GRILLING

Subjecting counsel for the state of Oklahoma to a severe grilling as to why the state did not admit Miss Sipuel to the University of Oklahoma law school, the court indicated its agreement in principle with Mr. Marshall's argument.

In his argument Mr. Marshall stressed the difference in treatment of white and colored applicants for enrollment in the University of Oklahoma. A white applicant would apply to the registrar at the university and would be admitted if he met the moral and scholastic qualifications, Mr. Marshall said.

Under the decision of the Oklahoma Supreme Court in Miss Sipuel's case, Mr. Marshall added, a colored applicant would be required to apply to the board of regents for higher education and the board would set up a law school when it has notice that a colored person wished to take law and when there has been a showing that there would be patronage for the separate law school.

WAITING NOT EXPECTED

"I do not believe that this court will ever say that a Negro is required to ask for segregation or to sit by and wait for the establishment of a separate school for his training at some indefinite date, which will be equal in all points—books, faculty, curricula and tradition," Mr. Marshall said.

Mr. Marshall asked the court to take judicial notice of the fact that the Oklahoma legislature has met since this case was pending and "nothing has happened."

While counsel for the state of Oklahoma were making their arguments, the justices repeatedly asked why was it necessary for Miss Sipuel to have to come all the way to the United States Supreme Court to get into the University of Oklahoma law school, which is open to students of other races.

Fred Hansel, assistant attorney general of Oklahoma, argued that if Miss Sipuel had made application to the board of regents for higher education for a course in law, that course would have been established at Langston University.

Justice Wiley Rutledge asked to whom would other applicants apply.

APPLY TO UNIVERSITY

Mr. Hansen replied that other students can get into the University of Oklahoma by applying to the University, but colored students have to go to the board of regents for higher education and ask for a school. If the board refused to open a separate school, he said, she would be entitled to enter the University of Oklahoma.

Pointing out that Miss Sipuel had applied for admission to the University of Oklahoma two years ago, Justice Hugo Black asked why hadn't a school been open for her.

"I do not believe she wanted to attend a separate law school," Mr. Hansen answered, adding that he believed she preferred to attend a white law school.

Says Old Age May Curb Okla. Law School Quest

NEW YORK—"It looks as though I may become an old woman before I become a lawyer," declared Mrs. Ada L. Sipuel Fisher before the seventeenth annual New York Herald Tribune Forum held at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria. Mrs. Fisher, who has been unsuccessful in her thirty-four-month attempt to secure a legal education in Oklahoma, is denied admission to Oklahoma University's law school solely because she is a Negro.

Stating that her decision to study law was "tantamount to a fight against segregation," Mrs. Fisher reviewed her case, which has been carried by attorneys of the NAACP to the District and Supreme Courts of Oklahoma and the United States Supreme Court.

NO SUBSTITUTES, PLEASE

Two moves on the educational front last week command our attention.

The State of Oklahoma, in announcing the setting up o a separate law school, with a three-man faculty, for Mrs Ada Sipuel Fisher, says, with tongue in cheek, that it is com plying with the mandate of the U.S. Supreme Court ordering that it provide her, pronto, training equal to that provided for white students.

District Judge Justin Hinshaw, in whose court the case originated two years ago, ruled that the University of Oklahoma could refuse to admit Mrs. Fisher to its law school, provided it had a separate school ready for her by Jan. 26.

If such a school was not ready then, the jurist ruled, the university would have to admit Mrs. Fisher until a separate school can be established or else deny entrance to all new enrollees this semester.

Oklahoma officials know full well that there can be no equality in separate schools, certainly not in the makeshift substitute which they have provided at Oklahoma City. By trying to sneak through the loophole which the U.S. Supreme Court left in its decision, Oklahoma hopes to evade its responsibility. It will fail.

At Nashville last week, representatives of the Southern Governors' Conference, headed by Maryland's Gov. W. P Lane toyed with the proposal to make Meharry Medical College a regional school to serve the needs of colored applicants from at least five Southern States.

We did not think Gov. Lane, who represents a border State, to be so naive as to fall into the trap baited by his confreres from further South. But, if there are some things that he doesn't know, he will learn them later.

As long as Southern States, in a spirit of philanthropy, want to pour some money into Meharry to keep it going, we have no objection, but if the governors of these States believe that by so doing, they are staving off a long series of law suits instituted by Southern applicants who want an education within the boundaries of the States in which they live, they are sadly mistaken.

Regional schools, no matter how fine they may be, will never meet the Supreme Court's ruling that the States provide equal education for all WITHIN THEIR BOUNDARIES. No Maryland applicant, for instance, could be forced to attend Meharry when the University of Maryland already has a school providing Grade A medical education.

As for those States which have no professional schools, even for whites, one regional school would not solve the problem. There would have to be two if the segregation pattern is to be maintained. The money spent on TWO regional schools would provide a first class State school.

The Southern States want to eat their cake and have it too. They can't do it.

The sooner they learn that the presence of a colored student in the same classroom or laboratory with whites is not going to create a commotion, the better off they will be. White students in Oklahoma say that they will welcome Mrs. Fisher at the university. Those who object are those with whom Mrs. Fisher would not have any contact at all.

The luxury of prejudice is, as we have pointed out so often, too expensive for Southern States which, on the whole, are poorer than their Northern counterparts. Giving up this luxury is the answer to a simple problem which they have complicated so badly that they have dropped back to the tail end of the educational parade while seeking a solution which is under their very noses.

Oklahoma Judge Rules Against Ada Sipuel

NORMAN, Okla. —District Judge Justin Hinshaw ruled Monday, Aug. 2, that Ada Lois Sipuel is not entitled to enter the University of Oklahoma law school because she can get a "substantially equal" legal education at the Langston law school set up for Negroes in Oklahoma City.

A similar ruling was made in three other cases pending against the University of Oklahoma.

Judge Hinshaw, ruling on evidence given in a retrial of the Sipuel case last May, said that the University of Oklahoma in "rejecting petitioner's application of Jan. 26, 1948, for admission to the school of law of the University of Oklahoma as a regular first-year law student, was legal and proper and was not a denial of petitioner's rights under the equal protection clause of the 14th amendment of the constitution of the United States."

It was not a denial of this right, the judge ruled, for the "reason that the state of Oklahoma had made available to petitioner at the school of law of Langston university a course of instruction for first-year law students which offered advantages for legal education substantially equal to those offered to white students at the University of Oklahoma."

Miss Sipuel's case will be appealed to the United States Supreme court.

Judge Hinshaw heard the arguments on Monday, July 26, in the case of Mrs. Mauderie Hancock Wilson, a graduate of Langston, and Miss Helen Maxine Holmes, a graduate of Lincoln university, Jefferson City, Mo., who applied to the district court for writs of mandamus to compel their admissions to the University of Oklahoma.

A third suit seeking admission to the graduate school was dismissed by G. W. McLaurin, a former member of the Langston university faculty, who had sought to do graduate work toward a doctorate.

Mrs. Wilson was denied admission by the university. She desired to work toward a master's degree in social work, and Miss Holmes had sought to enroll to work for a master's degree in commercial education.

Baltimore, D.C. Papers at Odds on Sipuel Case

Although only 40 miles apart geographically, the Baltimore Sun and the Washington Post are thousands of miles apart editorially, a comparison of thinking on the Sipuel Case decision reveals. The Sun, taking a middle-of-the-road stand, in its editorial, urges each State concerned to act at once to circumvent the real intention of the decision. The Post, on the other hand, says that the States must learn that the "separate but equal" educaional attempts are futile, and goes farther to say that the Supreme Court "sooner or later" will have to accept the weakness of segregation and hand down an edict accordingly.

A Wishy-Washy Editorial

(Reprint from Baltimore Sun, Jan. 14)

The Supreme Court has just served a sharp reminder on those states faced with a Negro education problem of their duties under the Fourteenth Amendment. It has reversed an Oklahoma Supreme Court decision denying access to the State University's law school to a qualified Negro student, Ada Lois Sipuel. The Supreme Court has ordered Oklahoma to provide her with legal training the equal of that given white students and to "provide it as soon as it does for applicants of any other group."

This is not basically a new decision. The Supreme Court cited as precedent the almost precisely similar Gaines case in Missouri, on which the court ruled in 1938. Missouri was ordered either to admit Gaines to the university law school or set up an equal institution for Negroes. In time, the effect of the 1938 Gaines decision will be reflected in the educational systems of all southern states. The Supreme Court reminder in the Sipuel case merely means that the time has now come for Oklahoma —abruptly.

Perhaps the most unfortunate result of Oklahoma's delay in preparing for the inevitable is the difficult predicament in which it now finds itself placed by the Supreme Court's demand for summary action.

Normally the State could decide whether to admit Negroes to the established law school or to set up a segregated Negro law school. Or it might, if the qualified Negroes remained satisfied, provide graduate instruction elsewhere by means of a scholarship scheme.

The decision in such cases depends on the predominating attitude in the community toward Negro segregation; though the most enduring compromise would be one flexible enough to reflect both present and developing attitudes. Now, however, Oklahoma is suddenly confronted with all sorts of practical difficulties in adopting any policy other than admitting Miss Sipuel to the university law school—and practical difficulties in that case too.

This latest decree of the Supreme Court serves, therefore, as a warning as well as a reminder. It serves as a warning, because the Gaines decision has already made it crystal-clear what the legal obligations of the states are. The Supreme Court has decided once and for all that the states must provide equal educational opportunities for Negroes, even in graduate studies like law, medicine and teaching.

The prudent course, for every state concerned, is to decide without further delay how this may best be done locally according to the prevailing social pattern. Otherwise it runs the risk of having to take hasty and ill-considered action, unsatisfying perhaps to all parties concerned, to comply with an inevitable Supreme Court ruling.

A Statesmanlike Utterance

(Reprint from the Washington Post Jan. 14)

Although the Supreme Court did not say in so many words that Ada Lois Sipuel must be admitted to the University of Oklahoma School of Law, there appears to be no other way, at least for the time being, to satisfy the court's mandate. This law school is the only tax-supported institution for legal education in Oklahoma. Miss Sipuel is concededly qualified for admission on all grounds save the fact that she is a Negro.

The Supreme Court reverted to its 1938 decision in the Gaines case, in which it declared that the State of Missouri must admit a Negro to the law school of the State University "in the absence of other and proper provision for his legal training within the State." Oklahoma, the court declared on Monday, must provide legal education for Miss Sipuel "in conformity with the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment and provide it as soon as it does for applicants of any other group."

Thus the court did not ban segregated legal education, as Miss Sipuel's attorney asked it to. But since no facilities now exist in Oklahoma to educate her on a segregated basis, the inference seems inescapable that until they can be established she must be allowed to share the advantages of white students at the State University law school; in a poll taken two years ago, incidentally, these students voted to let her in.

Perhaps the lawmakers of Oklahoma will discover, after Miss Sipuel has attended classes at the university for a little while, that her presence does not actually contaminate her white fellow-students and that it would simply not be worth the enormous trouble and expense to set up a separate system of legal education. Perhaps, even, other States requiring segregated schools will learn the same lesson from this interesting experiment.

It is a fiction, of course, that a State affords Negroes the equal protection of its laws in accordance with the constitutional requirement by giving them "separate but equal" educational facilities.

The President's Committee on Civil Rights referred to the "separate but equal" system as "one of the outstanding myths of American history" and pointed out that "not even the most mathematically precise equality of segregated institutions can properly be considered equality under the law.

"No argument or realization can alter this basic fact: A law which forbids a group of American citizens to associate with other citizens in the ordinary course of daily living creates inequality by imposing a caste status on the minority group." Sooner or later, the Supreme Court will have to face this stubborn fact.

Langston Called 'Worst in Nation'

(Special to The Pittsburgh Courier)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—Oklahoma's separate "Negro" law school was open Monday morning . . . but it had no students . . . for Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel-Fisher, the Negro girl for whom it was born on the strength of a decision by the United States Supreme Court last week was at Norman, seeking entrance into the "white" law school of the University of Oklahoma.

Her counsel, Atty. Amos T. Hall of Tulsa bitterly denounced the maneuver setting up a segregated law school connected with Langston, which he said was unaccredited and was "the worst Negro school in the Nation." He charged that its law school would likewise be unaccredited and thereby fail to meet the requirements of the Supreme Court order for "equal facilities."

Accompanied by Dr. W. S. Boyd of El Reno, Okla., State NAACP treasurer, and Dr. J. A. Cox Jr., of this city, Mrs. Fisher was not accepted, in accord with information given to The Courier Monday by the Dean of the Law School of the University of Oklahoma, who said the Board of Regents would not order her admission into their school.

Mrs. Fisher promptly ignored the jim-crow law school set up in the State Capitol here and designated as the "Langston University School of Law," by not making an appearance there. Reliable reports said a young local Negro man was being "high-pressured" to enter the jim-crow school, but he had declined to enroll.

Meanwhile, at the State Capitol, Dean Jerome Hemri and his faculty of two part-time instructors, waited in vain for Mrs. Fisher to appear. He told The Courier Monday: "Classes will begin on Thursday whether we have any students or not, and all salaries will be paid."

The makeshift school established after a direct order of the Oklahoma Supreme Court had been handed down last week, consisted of two classrooms in the Capitol Building and the library of the State had been designated as the law school's library. Dean Hemri said this library was "better than that at the State's 'white' law school at Norman."

Mrs. Fisher was told last week when she applied for registration at the University of Oklahoma that her application would be received.

Segregation Ban In Oklahoma Schools Sought

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 3—(AP) Oklahoma officials today were paving the way for amendment of the State's historic segregation laws.

The action comes after repeated court attacks on the laws—attacks that are now moving ahead on two fronts.

The State Attorney General's office has prepared a legislative bill which would allow Negroes to attend white colleges and universities to receive classwork not offered at Langston University, Oklahoma's only college for Negroes.

The proposed bill has been drafted and submitted to the Legislative Council, an interim body of legislators to study legislation between sessions. If approved, it would then be submitted at the next Legislature in January.

Present statutes prohibit school officials from enrolling Negroes at colleges used by white students, teachers from instructing mixed classes or students from attending mixed classes. Fines ranging from $5 to $50 are provided for violations.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Aug. 3—(AP)—The cabinet today asked the State Board of Control to look into the possibility of establishing schools of law, library science and social work at Florida A. and M. College for Negroes here.

Gov. Caldwell, reporting the decision after an executive meeting of the Cabinet Board of Eduaction and with college officials, said there might be a change to set up the new schools for the Fall term beginning next month.

Negro Women Fail in Plea

NORMAN, Okla., Aug. 2 (AP)—A state court today denied admission to the University of Oklahoma the three Negro women. Negro leaders announced they would carry the fight against Oklahoma's racial segregation laws again to the United States Supreme Court.

One of the three rejected was Mrs. Ada Fisher of Chickasha, who for more than two years has fought in court to enter the university's Law School.

The others were Mauderie Hancock-Wilson and Helen Maxine Holmes, both of Oklahoma City.

District Judge T. Justin Hinshaw denied court orders sought by the three women to compel the university to enroll them for graduate studies.

Amos T. Hall, Tulsa Negro lawyer, gave notice of appeal to the State Supreme Court.

Simultaneously, Mr. Hall announced that he would begin another attack on Oklahoma's segregation statutes in the United States District Court in Oklahoma City within a few days. That suit also will seek to compel admission of Negroes to White schools when

NEGRO SCHOOL CASE INTO JUDGE'S HANDS

Testimony Completed in Hearing on Oklahoma's Refusal to Admit Mrs. Ada Fisher to University.

Norman, Okla., May 27.—(AP)—Oklahoma's refusal to admit a Negro woman to the all-white University of Oklahoma went to District Judge T. Justin Hinshaw here today.

Attorneys for Mrs. Ada Fisher, Negro woman, and for the state of Oklahoma completed final testimony in the four-day hearing. Judge Hinshaw said following the arguments it would be about two weeks before his decision will be ready.

Mrs. Fisher has been seeking admittance to the University of Oklahoma law school since January, 1946. After her first application was denied because she is a Negro the case was appealed to the Oklahoma and the United States supreme courts.

Shuns Negro School.

The United States court held that Oklahoma must furnish equal law school facilities for Negroes. The state, acting on that decision, established the Langston university school of law for Negroes in state capitol offices in Oklahoma City January 24 this year. It is a branch of Oklahoma's only college for Negroes at Langston, Okla.

Mrs. Fisher shunned the hurriedly-established separate school, however, and attempted again to enroll at the University of Oklahoma last January, contending that the new school was "not substantially equal" to the school for white students as the court had ordered. When the supreme court refused to take original jurisdiction she entered the current case in the district court of Cleveland county.

In final testimony today Thurgood Marshall, chief counsel for Mrs. Fisher and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, introduced two more widely-known law professors.

They were Walter Gellhorn, professor at Columbia university, and Dr. Malcolm Sharp, professor at Chicago university.

Both testified that the Langston school was not equal to the facilities offered at the University of Oklahoma school of law.

Yesterday Marshall had introduced four other prominent law instructors who made similar statements. They included the deans of Harvard university and University of Pennsylvania law schools and members of the law faculties from the University of California and University of Wisconsin.

Expect an Appeal.

Whatever the result of Judge Hinshaw's ruling, the case is expected to be appealed to the state and probably the United States supreme courts again.

In the only state testimony today, Jerome E. Hemry, dean of the Langston law school, told the court the state library which has been made available to the Negro school would be kept open each night if any students enroll.

So far neither Mrs. Fisher nor any other Negro has attempted to enroll at the separate school. However, Hemry has disclosed that two prospective students plan to enroll for the summer term beginning June 7.

The court room was filled for the first time today with a few persons standing at the back. Many were students from nearby University of Oklahoma and there were about 30 Negroes in the crowd of 170.

There has not been, during the entire hearing, any attempt to segregate the Negroes in seating arrangements.

ANGRY OKLAHOMA UNIVERSITY PROFESSOR LAMBASTS STATE ATTORNEY GENERAL WILLIAMSON

Tells State Official He's Promoting a Fake, Fraud and Deception With New Law School

SEGREGATION QUESTION BARRED FROM TESTIMONY

The district courtroom of Judge Justin Hinshaw in Cleveland county was thrown into an uproar Monday afternoon, and court recessed immediately following sensational testimony by an Oklahoma university professor who charged Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson with "cheap political chicanery" in the prosecution of the Ada Lois Sipuel case.

Williamson was obviously flabbergasted by the sudden turn of the trial to a personal attack upon him. The witness, Henry H. Foster jr., had sat on the courthouse steps Monday morning and requested to be called as a witness, and the fact that he was a law professor caused the NAACP counsel to issue a subponea for him. There was no previous knowledge on the part of counsel for the petitioner as to what Foster's testimony would be.

Foster immediately followed testimony given by Dean Keeton, of the Oklahoma university law school, who reluctantly testified he did not feel the Langston law school was equal to the Oklahoma university law school.

Q. (The same question was repeated to Prof. Foster as was asked Dean Page Keaton regarding the equality of the two schools (Langston and Oklahoma U.)

A. It is not equal. Only a prejudiced or academically minded person can conceivably find the slightest substance in the statement that the two schools are at all comparable, let alone substantially equal or equivalent. The history shows that it is an attempt by them to pull themselves up by their own bootstraps and to manufacture on paper and to copy and ape the superficial idea of a college.

It's a fake, it's a fraud, it's a deception in an attempt to avoid the clear cut mandate and orders of the Supreme Court of the United States and I think it is indecent.

Cross examination by the Attorney General:

Q. You have quite a bit of feeling on this matter?

A. Yes, I have, it is cheap, political chicanery of the people responsible for this disgraceful state of affairs.

Q. Do you think that public officials who have taken their oath to support the law ought to follow through on this?

A. I think the attorney general of this state should start to uphold the Constitution of the United States which he has been ignoring for the last six months in violation of his oath of office.

Q. That's your personal view.

A. I think it is the view of every right-minded and decent citizen of this state and I think you will find out that is so.

The state early launched its attack upon efforts of NAACP counsel to introduce evidence to show the social and economic consequences of segregation, and Judge Hinshaw ruled that the only issue before the court was the question of whether the state had complied with the ruling of the high court in giving Mrs. Fisher an equal opportunity to secure a legal education.

With this thought in mind Judge Hinshaw quickly ruled out testimony prepared by Dr. Robert C. Weaver, of the United States Department of Education; Dr. Charles Thompson, dean of the graduate school, Howard University; Dr. Robert Robert C. Redfield. noted anthropologist, who was halted by Williamston before he could testify that there is no difference between the ability of the Negro and white child to learn and that segregation defeats the purpose of education. Marshall read this statement into the record following the refusal of the court to hear Redfield's testimony.

Three Ask District Court For Action

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—(NNPA)—A hearing in Cleveland County district court on the application of three colored persons for an order directing the University of Oklahoma to admit them was scheduled to get under way here Monday, (July 26).

The case was due to come up July 19, but a continuance was granted by District Judge Hinshaw in order to give Amos Hall, Tula attorney, time to study the State's answer which was filed by Fred Hanson, Assistant Attorney General.

The petitioners seeking admission are Mrs. Mauderie Hancock-Wilson, Miss Helen Maxine Holmes, and G. W. McLaurin. All have completed college undergraduate work. They were refused admission last February 2.

DENIES ARBITRARY ACTS

In his answer, Hansen cited state segregation statues and denied that university authorities "arbitrarily and illegally rejected" the applications.

He points out that these were the first applications ever made for these courses of instruction and said they were not made until the day before the second semester began.

He contended that the United States Supreme Court has held university authorities may have a reasonable period of time to establish such facilities without violating the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

He agreed that under state supreme court decisions in the Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher case, it is the mandatory duty of the regents for higher education to provide colored students equal facilities.

CLAIMS IMPOSSIBILITY

He contended, however, it was manifestly impossible for the state to provide these graduate courses at Langston University for the second semester on such short notice

He said when University of Oklahoma officals rejected the applications, they did not knew whether the state regents were going to establish within a reasonable period of time substantially equal courses.

"Therefore," he continued," said applications were properly rejected solely on the ground of race and color. Under public policy of this state, announced in statutory provision colored persons are not eligible for admission to state schools established for white persons."

Equal Educational Opportunity

BY REV. WILLIAM R. KERNAN
Editor, The Common Defense

It is hoped that all Americans will see the significance for our society of the recent Supreme Court decision commanding Oklahoma to provide virtually immediate legal education for a Negro woman, Miss Ada Lois Sipuel.

As stated, the facts of the case are these: "On January 14, 1946, the petitioner, a Negro, concededly qualified to receive professional legal education offered by the state, applied for admission to the School of Law of the University of Oklahoma, the only institution for legal education supported and maintained by the taxpayers of the State of Oklahoma. Petitioners application for admission was denied, solely because of her color." The District court of Cleveland County and the State Supreme Court of Oklahoma also ruled against Miss Sipuel.

Then, on January 12th, the United States Supreme Court in a swift, unanimous, one page order decreed, "The petitioner is entitled to secure legal education afforded by a state institution. The state must provide it for her in conformity with the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment and provide it as soon as it does for applicants of any other group."

This is a good example of how America makes progress, securing to more and more of our people the rights which they have as the gift of God. It is progress made without revolution, without bloodshed. It is progress made in accordance with the orderly processes of law. It is progress made in obedience to our great and unchanging principles of equality and equal rights as set forth in the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, the Gettysburg Address and reaffirmed in the report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights.

Moreover, this Supreme Court Decision is a reminder to us all that regardless of how basely the Communists and Fascists misrepresent us the American system of free society works.

It will continue to work. It will continue to resist the blandishments and false leads of the totalitarian left and right. It will continue to affirm its own formidable principles and, by deeds made to conform with them, move forward advancing through storm, if need be toward the goal of a nation, dedicated, in Abraham Lincoln's words, "to the proposition that all men are created equal."

Pressure Causes First U. Law Student To Withdraw

OKLAHOMA CITY—(ANP)—"Pressure" caused 34-year-old T. M. Roberts, a local waiter who was to be the first student to enroll in Langston University School of law, to change his mind here about entering last week. Accordingly to Roberts, whose enrollment had been approved by Dean Jerome Henry for the school's summer classes:

"The pressure was more than I could take. I've bucked the church, fraternal organizations and the man in the street since I said I was going. And I know the pressure wouldn't let up when I got started."

The decision came after Roberts met with a group of university officials. He did not disclose the identity of the group.

The Langston law branch was set up to meet the U. S. Supreme court's ruling that the state had to provide equal educational facilities for Negroes. The case revolved around efforts of Mrs. Ida Lois Sipuel Fisher, 24-year-old Langston graduate, who sought to enter the all-white University of Oklahoma law school at Norman. She has been denied entrance twice and at present has a second suit pending in district court, protesting that the Langston law school is not equal to the university law department.

Gaines Decision Must Be Strengthened, Say Attorneys in Okla. Law School Case

Counsel for Miss Sipuel to Ask Supreme Court to Throw Out 'Separate but Equal' Argument

WASHINGTON

The Gaines Case ruling which orders the provisions of equal educational facilities for colored and white persons must be implemented by a decision which will protect the right of qualified colored applicants to State universities.

Such is the position taken by the NAACP in the brief presented in connection with the case of Miss Ada Lois Sipuel vs. Board of Regents, University of Oklahoma, which has been set for argument before the Supreme Court Jan. 7 or 8.

Miss Sipuel, a graduate of Langston University, was denied the right to enter the University of Oklahoma's law school by the Board of Regents, whose stand was upheld by the District Court of Cleveland County and by the Oklahoma State Supreme Court on April 29, 1947.

Separate-Equal Idea Blasted

The NAACP brief, which asks the U.S. Supreme Court to overrule the State court's decision, charges first that the State court court to issue a writ ordering the university to admit Miss Sipuel to the only State-supported law school in Oklahoma.

It also asks the U.S. tribunal to re-examine the doctrine of "separate but equal" facilities to determine whether it is Constitutional. Finally, the brief insists that the doctrine should not be applied in the case being argued.

Special opposition is made to the part of the Oklahoma Supreme Court's decision which states that Miss Sipuel is given an advantage over white students in that she is allowed to obtain professional education outside the State at State expense.

However, the brief points out that argument is beside the point, the issue being whether the State of Oklahoma offers equal opportunities to its colored and white students.

Also attacked is the State Court's contention that Miss Sipuel did not apply to the colored State University in Oklahoma (Langston), as did Mr. Gaines in the Missouri case.

Not Necessary to Apply in Vain

The latter, the brief states, did not apply to Lincoln University (Missouri's State school for colored students), and the U.S. Supreme Court in its decision took special cognizance of the State Court's recognition of the fact that he did not in rendering its decision.

The NAACP also condemns the State Court's misconstruction of the Gaines case decision to penalize Miss Sipuel for failing to make a demand on certain officials to establish a separate law school for her.

Weaknesses of Segregation Listed

Then pointing out that the "separate but equal" doctrine has been proved without legal foundation, the brief lists the definite inequities existing under educational system in the 17 States and District of Columbia, which require separate school facilities.

Finally, in asking that the "separate but equal" doctrine be disregarded in the case at hand, the NAACP brief states:

"The asserted right of the State of Oklahoma to enforce segregation of the races in public schools, even to the extent of excluding petitioner from the only law school must be weighed against the national interests as set forth in the Constitution.

"This Court has re-stated our national policy to be opposed to racial classifications because such classifications are irrational and unreasonable criteria 'odious to a free people whose institutions are founded upon the doctrine of equality.'"

Year of Training Lost

Finally noting that Miss Sipuel has lost a year of valuable training (Gaines lost four years during litigation) the counsel for the petitioner ask that the State Supreme Court's decision be reversed, stating:

"This petitioner's right can only be protected by affirmative action of this court in recognizing her right to be admitted to the Law School of the University of Oklahoma without qualifying such relief by apparently recognizing the validity of the doctrine of "separate but equal" facilities in this case."

Okla. U. Advised To Keep Anti-Negro Ban

NORMAN, Okla. — (AND) — State Atty. Gen. Mac Q. Williamson does not think that Negroes generally should be admitted for study in the University of Oklahoma. He advised the board of regents here last Thursday to reject enrollment of applications of six Negroes, on the contention that issues involved in the six applications differed from those contained in the case of Mrs. Ada Louis Sipuel Fisher, 23-year-old Langston university graduate who sought to enter the state university law school.

On Jan. 12, the U. S. Supreme court ordered Oklahoma to grant Mrs. Fisher equal and immediate educational facilities with white students. To circumvent the admission of Mrs. Fisher to the state university, the regents set up a separate law school in Oklahoma City.

The six applicants filled for admission to the school for grauduate work in four departments. They are James Bond a biology professor at Langston; M. A. Dillon, honor Langston student, seeking graduate work in architectural engineering; Helen Holmes, Oklahoma City, who wants to enter the gradute school in business administration; Mauderie Hancock Wilson and Ivor Tatum, also of Oklahoma City, who are after a Ph.D. in the school administration.

Dr. George L. Cross, president of the university, found five of the applicants' transcripts in order. He said he was sending for information of the sixth one. While he asked all to fill out applications, he said he would refer the question of admission to the state and university regents for action.

The attorney general held that the regents "have broad powers as evidenced by their prompt establishment of a state school of law as a function of Langston university, constitutional authority to summon a special session of the state legislature if same should be found to be expedient or necessary."

In protest against the state's action, approximately 1,000 students gathered on the university campus, some dressed as mourners, to watch solemnly the cremating of a copy of the 14th amendment to the federal constitution. Following the ceremony, they mailed the ashes to President Truman.

Half of Oklahoma U. Students Would Drop Bars, Survey Reveals

NORMAN, Okla.—A poll of University of Oklahoma students taken here after the Supreme Court ruled that Mrs. Ada Sipuel Fisher must be admitted to the law school showed the students evenly divided on the question of educational equality.

Quinton Peters, editor of the school paper that conducted the poll, said that 50% of the students voting favored giving colored students such equality—but in separate schools — and that 43% favored admitting them on the graduate level.

Judge Orders Oklahoma To Admit Fisher

OKLAHOMA CITY — (ANP) —District Judge Justin Hinshaw threw up a temporary blockade Thursday against attempts of Oklahoma officials to circumvent the recent U. S. Supreme court's order to admit Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher, 23-year-old Langston university graduate, to the University of Oklahoma law school until equal facilities can be provided in a separate school or not to accept any first-year enrollments at the university law school this semester.

This action was taken last Thursday, following an announcement by the state board of regents two days earlier that a "Quickie" law school for Negroes was to be set up as a branch of Langston in time for the opening of the spring term.

However, the order is only a temporary reprieve for Mrs. Fisher. Unless the state bows to the decision of the supreme court, it will mean that the battle has just begun over the issue of admitting Negroes for study in the university.

NEW LAW SCHOOL TRIAL TO CHALLENGE JIM CROW

May 13, 1948

NEW YORK, May 13---The fight to gain admission to the law school of the University of Oklahoma for Mrs. Ada Sipuel-Fisher will be renewed on Monday (May 24) with the opening of a new trial in the District Court at Norman, Okla. Press Service of The NAACP

Thurgood Marshall, special counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Edward R. Dudley, assistant special counsel, left here Tuesday (May 18) to join with Amos T. Hall, an Oklahoma attorney, in representing Mrs. Fisher in her legal battle to enter the state-supported all-white law school.

The new trial was granted in response to a motion filed on March 11 on behalf of Mrs. Fisher, petitioning the court for further relief against the Board of Regents and other officials of the University of Oklahoma. The request for a new trial followed refusal of the law school to admit Mrs. Fisher after the United States Supreme Court had handed down a decision imposing upon the State of Oklahoma the obligation to provide her with an opportunity for a legal education forthwith.

In an attempt to demonstrate conclusively that there can be no equality in segregated facilities, Mr. Marshall will present an array of experts in legal training, anthropology and sociology. Among these will be the deans and other faculty members of some of the leading law schools in the country who are expected to testify that it is impossible to get equal training in a separate law school.

Okla. Judge Bars Testimony On Race Equality in Intellect

NORMAN, Okla., May 25 (UP)—District Judge Justin Hinshaw drew criticism from attorneys for Mrs. Ada Lois Fisher today as he threw out the testimony of one witness and refused to allow what he called "a frontal assault" on Oklahoma's segregation policy.

Hinshaw ruled that the Chickasha, Okla., Negro student could not file a charge that the University of Oklahoma violated the 14th Amendment when it refused to admit her to the O. U. law school.

This charge would be a "frontal assault on the segregation policy of the state," Hinshaw said, and is not an issue in the case he is trying—Mrs. Fisher's mandamus action to force the school to admit her.

William R. Ming, University of Chicago faculty member and one of Mrs. Fisher's attorneys, protested that Hinshaw was denying her "not only the equal protection of the law but of the procedural processes of the law."

Hinshaw ruled out the testimony of Dr. Robert Redfield, professor of anthropology at the University of Chicago, who said long studies have shown no convincing evidence of "any difference between Negro and white students on the question of intellectual capacity."

Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson objected to this testimony. Hinshaw agreed with him.

A Tradition Attacked

A new trial now is proceeding in Norman, Okla., which had its antecedent there more than two years ago. A Negro woman sued for admission to the University of Oklahoma's law school, from which she was denied attendance on the basis of her race. Last January the Supreme Court of the United States ruled that Oklahoma must make available for her the same legal education it provides for anyone else and must do it "as soon as it does for applicants of any other group."

The state of Oklahoma, whose laws require segregation in education, decided to establish a new law school for the plaintiff's benefit. It set up a school in less than a month's time. The plaintiff refused to attend it, claiming it was obviously inadequate and unequal.

Her counsel then made a new plea before the court in Oklahoma. It was asserted that in his opinion the new school "is a fake. ... As to the first point, a member of the faculty of the state's law school testified ... whether a state might not satisfy the equal protection clause of the 14th amendment by establishing a separate law school for Ne- ... run out.

In February of this year the Supreme Court was asked to declare the newly created school to be unequal. The court ruled ... that the case "did not present the issue ... possible wherever there is discrimination.

fraud and a deception . . . an attempt to avoid a clear-cut mandate of the United States Supreme Court. It is cheap, political chicanery." The dean of the law school also testified that in his opinion the new school would not be the equal of the one over which he presides. Wed 5-26-48

As to the other argument, witnesses were to be called to testify that they believe segregation is invalid in any form as legally repugnant to the 14th amendment. Birmingham, Ala.

However the District Court rules, we may be sure that sooner or later the decision will be tested by the nation's highest court. The matter portends very great difficulties of adjustment ahead. It is a dangerous thing to attempt to set aside a long-established tradition and sectional custom by a court's action. Neither court decision nor legislative fiat will change the thinking of most Southern people on the question of segregation. Wed. 5-26-48

THEY DID NOT LET HIM TESTIFY

DR. CHARLES M. THOMPSON

Oklahoma City Oklahoma
The Black Dispatch

Attorney Mac Q. Williamson was alert Monday afternoon to halt the testimony of Dr. Charles M. Thompson, dean of the graduate school of Howard university, the instant he was asked by Attorney Trurgood Marshall to state his views regarding the social and economic consequences of segregation. The witness was not allowed to answer the question.

Attorneys for Mrs. Fisher contend that the base of this trial rests in segregation and that they must at some point in the hearing be able to present the view of Dr. Thompson and others steeped in anthropology. The written statement of Dr. Thompson will be in the record when it reaches the appellate courts ,and it will be up to these higher judicial bodies to accept or reject the competency of such testimony.

South Carolina Decision Causes Tilt

Oklahoma City Okla

NORMAN.—Thurgood Marshall, New York, leading counsel for Ada Lois Fisher in the now celebrated law school case virtually made a sieve of the argument made by Attorney General Williamson late Thursday afternoon and brought a protesting state official to his feet when Marshall told the court "I do not see how the attorney general can stand here in this court and turn all the facts about face in the case he has just recited." Thurs. 6-3-48

Williamston was immediately on his feet and protested to the court that he should not be misrepresented in this way. Judge Hinshaw told Williamson, "I'll read the decision and reach my own conclusion," while the obdurate and unrelenting Marshall proceeded to tell the court that he was one of the attorneys in the South Carolina case Williamson had referred to. "I helped to make that decision and I think I can give this court a verbatum statement respecting what the judge said, which is quite the reverse to what has been stated in this court.

For fully two or three minutes the judge and spectators sat in a courtroom where one might hear a pin fall as Attorney Marshall, with self assurance and positiveness of one who knows, revealed to the court what he knew about the four decisions Williamson had used during the course of his address preceding Marshall.

"I do not have to offer apologies or defend the dean of the Harvard law school who has been attacked here, nor the other outstanding law scholars who have appeared this week in your court," said Marshall. Williamson had intimated to the court that Dean Griswold, of Harvard university, had failed to answer a question he had asked him "which any 15-year-old child should be able to answer," Williamson said.

Dr. Stuart Cook, of Columbia university, told the court Thursday afternoon the educational opportunity offered Negro students at the Langston law school were not substantially equal to those provided white students at Oklahoma university.

"The future leaders of Oklahoma are now in the law school at Oklahoma university. If Negro students are given opportunity to show their various abilities to other students, broader opportunities may unfold to them in future years." Dr. Cook said.

Striking at the failure of the regents to locate the law school on the Langston campus, Dr. Cook said, "Law is not something that can be considered a separate segment from other social sciences. There should be inter-play between all of these courses while the student is in an academic atmosphere."

Secret Jim Crow Vote

THE VOTING RECORD was ordered burned and every congressman was sworn to secrecy when the House appropriations committee voted on the dynamite-laden subject of barring federal money to universities and hospitals which refuse to admit Negroes.

Secret, also, was the word passed down by Republican leaders against this anti-Jim Crow amendment. However, Congr. Frank Keefe, of Wisconsin, Republican, was adamant that his party go on record one way or the other for a practical application of civil rights.

"You can talk about anti-lynching bills and abolition of Jim Crow laws," Keefe said, "but here is a practical way to show where the federal government stands—by withholding money from institutions which discriminate against the Negro."

Most vigorous opposition to Keefe's amendment, during the secret committee debate, came from Florida's Democratic Joe Hendricks.

"The North licked us in the Civil War, but not through superior bravery or ability," he said. "It was by sheer force of manpower. We lost that fight, but we're not going to lose this one. Blood will run before we will give in!

"The Southern states will never under any circumstance accept a dollar of federal money if we have to let niggers into our higher institutions," continued Hendricks. "We intend to maintain segregation in the South!"

He appealed to the Republicans to help the Southern bloc vote down Keefe's amendment, reminding them that Florida once voted for Herbert Hoover.

"Florida voted for Hoover because Al Smith was a Catholic," snapped Keefe. "That's just another example of intolerance."

The Secret Rollcall

HENDRICKS WAS FOLLOWED by George Andrews, of Alabama; Albert Gore, of Tennessee; Jamie Whitten, of Mississippi; John Kerr, of North Carolina; George Mahon, of Texas, and Albert Thomas, of Texas, who pleaded that the South be given time to work out its tough Negro problem.

"We could get along with the Negroes all right if the Northerners would leave us alone," charged Andrews, of Alabama.

Backed against the wall, Keefe got little help from his Republican colleagues.

"There is no discrimination by the tax collector," he argued. "He collects taxes from whites and Negroes alike. Yet Negroes can't be admitted to universities and hospitals which they help pay for.

"Disease knows no racial barriers," Keefe continued. "With Negro life expectancy 10 years less than whites, it presents a serious problem."

In the final secret vote, Keefe was deserted by all his Republican colleagues except three: Gordon Canfield, of New Jersey; Ralph Church, of Illinois, and Karl Andersen, of Minnesota. Two Northern Democrats, Thomas O'Brien, of Illinois, and John Fogarty, of Rhode Island, also voted with him.

The 25 congressmen who secretly voted against the amendment were:

Republicans—Taber (N. Y.), Wigglesworth (Mass.), Plumley (Vt.), Engel (Mich.), Johnson (Ind.), Jensen (Iowa), Ploeser Mo., Tibbott (Pa.), Fenton (Pa.), Griffiths (Ohio), Stockman (Ore.), Scrivner (Kan.), Cleyenger (Ohio).

Democrats—Cannon (Mo.), Kerr (N. C.), Mahon (Tex.), Sheppard (Calif.), Thomas (Tex.), Hendricks (Fla.), Norrell (Ark.), Gore Tenn.), Whitten (Miss.), Andrews (Ala.), Gary (Va.), Bates (Ky.).—©

Texas Lawyer Warns South Must Provide Colleges For Negroes

NEW ORLEANS, June 8—(AP)—Dixie must build colleges for Negroes immediately, says the Texas attorney general, or the days of segregation will be numbered.

The Texas official, Price Daniel told the closing session of Southern attorneys general here yesterday that Negroes must have equal higher education, or the U. S. Supreme Court will end segregation.

"The question before the Southern states at present," Daniel said, "is how can we maintain segregation and still offer adequate benefits for the Negro?"

He said lack of finances may prevent some states from building separate schools. However, he added, "the South cannot maintain segregation laws unless equal privileges are provided."

He suggested as one alternative the admission of Negro students into white schools under a segregated plan.

SCHOOL EQUALITY WARNING IS GIVEN

Segregation Will End Without It, Says Daniel

The South was warned Monday to be prepared to offer equal higher educational rights to Negroes "immediately" or face dissolution of all segregation by the United States supreme court.

The warning came from Price Daniel, Texas attorney general, at the close of a three-day conference of Southern attorneys general at the St. Charles hotel.

Mr. Daniel told the group that "under a recent supreme court decision Negroes must be given the same educational advantages as whites or they (Negroes) can and will apply for entry into white schools.

"The question before the Southern states at present," Mr. Price asserted, "is how can we maintain segregation and still offer adequate benefits for the Negro?

"Time is the essential factor. The states must be prepared to build separate colleges for Negroes immediately or else the US supreme court will do away with segregation in the South, he said.

Daniel said that lack of finances will prohibit many states from building separate schools and providing segregated educational benefits for the Negro.

However, he said that "the South cannot maintain segregation laws unless equal privileges are provided," according to the supreme court.

As an alternative, Mr. Price suggested that Southern states should admit Negro students into white schools "but under a segregated plan."

"Separate dormitories and eating places should be provided as well as separate classrooms and staggered hours of instructions," he told the group.

Joining in the discussion was A. E. Funk, Kentucky attorney general, who also discussed the recent supreme court decision which gave Negroes equal rights to purchase property in a restricted residential area.

Mr. Funk said the decision was a "long step forward in the fight for social equality and the abolition of race segregation in the South." He said that the ruling was not based on social equality but that the "results of the decision will have a direct bearing on our segregation laws."

In discussing the present tideland controversy, Mr. Daniel said that the National Association of Attorneys General is prepared to fight for states' ownership of the land.

At the same time he predicted that the federal government will file a suit in the US supreme court against Louisiana and Texas to obtain oil and mineral royalties now being paid by private companies.

"The government will force the issue," he said, "unless Congress passes a law definitely stating that the tidelands are property of the states."

Mr. Daniel said that should Congress fail to do this by its scheduled adjournment June 19 "we can expect the suits immediately thereafter."

The discussions were presided over by Louisiana Attorney General Bolivar Kemp and Hall Hammond, attorney general of Maryland.

The South in Struggle

By Sam Hall

Chairman, Communist Party of Alabama

Fight Gains Against Segregation in Education

THE South is faced with a major problem in education.

This section of the country has a higher percentage of school-aged children in relation to population than any other section. And along with this, the South has the lowest income in the nation. This means that funds available for education are much lower than in the rest of the nation, and on a per-pupil basis even this difference becomes greater.

Now when you add to all this the fact that the "white supremacists" of the South have used segregation to force a dual school system upon the South—then you begin to understand the backwardness of southern education.

We Communists understand the close connection between the last two points above. That is, we know that the same segregation pattern which produces a wasteful dual school set up also dooms the people of the South—white and Negro—to a low income.

Therefore the stirrings in the South against segregation in schools is attacking the real heart of the southern educational problem.

THE immediate fight on this front is against segregation in graduate and professional schools. This struggle has brought historic examples of Negro-white unity, particularly among students. The fights in Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas are especially noteworthy, and the first clearcut victory was achieved in Arkansas. The University of Arkansas Medical School has accepted a Negro student on a non-segregated basis. The University of Arkansas Law School and the University of Oklahoma graduate school have accepted Negro students on a segregated basis.

This fight has just begun. On every hand there are signs of growing support for ending segregation in graduate and professional schools. This will be the first breakthrough in ending the dual educational system in the South. It will be a major blow at the oppression of the Negro people in the South and thereby a historic advance in the fight to overcome the backwardness of the whole South.

Latest indications of support for non-segregated graduate and professional schools comes from a poll of faculty members of state universities in the South.

The Southern Conference Educational Fund, publishers of The Southern Patriot sent a questionnaire to these educators. It presented the four courses of action that southern states have taken in answer to the United States Supreme Court ruling that graduate and professional instruction offered by a state to white students must at the same time be offered to Negro students. The faculty members were asked to state which course of action they supported.

BRIEFLY these courses of action are (1) non-segregated graduate schools when desired courses are not offered by a state-supported school for Negroes; (2) admission of Negroes to graduate schools on a segregated basis; (3) establishment of regional graduate and professional schools for Negroes only; (4) the establishment of graduate schools for Negroes within the state.

A majority of the faculty members in the state universities of seven out of 11 Southern states voted for the first course of action, that is: "Opening the doors of graduate schools to Negroes without segregation, when the desired courses are not offered by a state supported institution for Negroes."

North Carolina headed the list. Eighty-eight percent of the faculty members of the University of North Carolina favored the first alternative. Oklahoma was next with 83 percent. Then came Arkansas, 80; Virginia, 79; Texas, 76; Tennessee, 70, and Florida 54 percent.

Alabama mustered only 44 percent for the first alternative and a like percentage for the regional school idea. The other three states had no figures from Louisiana, the fourth Dixiecrat state at the polls). (The survey had voted overwhelmingly for the regional schools. South Carolina faculty members voted 63 percent for regional schools and 37 percent for non-segregated graduate schools within the state. For Georgia the percentages were 74 and 26 respectively and for Mississippi 70 percent and 22 percent.

IT IS interesting to note that Alabama, South Carolina and Mississippi are states which gave a majority to the fascist Dixiecrats on Novem- viciousness and shame of the fascist segregation system. The dual system of the South forces white students to them that's far behind that of the rest of the country. This is, the educational problems of Negro students and I say this, leaving aside for the moment all the ducational set up is "separate" but in no way "equal" for Negro students. Lucy-13-18-45

The Southern Patriot gives figures for the 17 states and D. C. where segregation is maintained by law. (The figures for the South exclusively would be even worse). These figures show: 15 state supported white schools training doctors and none training Negroes. Result: One white doctor to every 843 of the white population; one Negro doctor to every 4,409 of the Negro population. Four state supported schools for training white dentists and none for training Negroes. Result: One white dentist for every 1,714; one Negro dentist for every 22,815!

It is clear that the fight to end segregation in education in the South is a fight that affects all aspects of Southern life.

Texans Step Up Fight to Implement Court Rulings on School Jim-Crow

By Ruth Koenig

HOUSTON, Tex.—The rotten structure of Jimcrow education is cracking in Texas. The growing struggle against "unequal education" is rocking the bigots' theory that equal education can be had under a segregated school system. Recent developments of this struggle in colleges and universities, the Sweatt case in Texas, and the Sipuel case in Oklahoma are being reenforced by action on all levels of public school education.

In Hearne, Texas a teen-age girl Doris Fay Jennings, has applied for admission to the so-called "white school." A Federal Court suit has been filed by the NAACP to gain her admission to equal educational facilities. And 712 Negro school children have gone out on two strikes during the school term in protest against the Negro school's wretched condition which have existed since 1945 when the school burned down.

At that time Negroes were promised a $300,000 plant to replace their lost school. School authorities did not carry through on their promise, but instead got prisoner of war barracks and had them hauled to the school building site (at a cost of some $40,000!).

SINCE THAT TIME 712 Negro students have been forced to use a makeshift $40,000 plant, while 680 white students enjoy a $3,500,000 school plant. It is estimated that the Negro citizens comprise 60 percent of the communities population and own about 60 percent of the small homes.

Grievances causing the recent student strikes are:

1—No heat whatever in the Negro school during cold weather.

2—Daylight is the only light provided for children to read by.

3—The one water fountain is so placed that on rainy days, students have to wade to it.

4—Inadequate toilet facilities consisting of one outhouse.

THE NEGRO PEOPLE of Hearne have united and stood their ground despite the hostile local sentiment and threats of being jailed for violating truancy laws by keeping their children out of school.

As one resident put it: "We can't send our children to a place like this so-called school. They might easily get sick and die. All this talk of putting people in jail, when children can't go to school. I wonder just who ought to go to jail?"

The people of Texas can win this struggle with support from the many groups who recognized that Jimcrow education is taking a heavy toll from the living standards of all, white and Negro, and not only from the standpoint of poorer equipment and facilities, but, more important, from the cultural losses.

White Students Denied Place in Negro Schools

AUSTIN, Tex. — (AP) — A white student may not be admitted to the Texas State University for Negroes, State Attorney General Price Daniel ruled.

The Texas constitution and laws provide that white and Negro students shall be educated separately, Daniel ruled.

"Substantially equal courses of study and physical facilities are offered for white students at the University of Texas and other state colleges," he added.

TEXAS BARS WHITES AT NEGRO COLLEGE

State Laws Require Separation of the Races in Education, Attorney General Rules

AUSTIN, Tex., Aug. 2 (AP)—A white student may not legally be admitted to the Texas State University for Negroes, State Attorney General Price Daniel ruled today.

Mr. Daniel gave two reasons:

1. Texas' Constitution and laws provide that white and Negro students shall be educated separately.

2. "Substantially equal courses of study and physical facilities are offered for white students at the University of Texas and other state colleges."

Citing United States Supreme Court decisions in the Gaines case from Missouri and the Sipuel case from Oklahoma, Mr. Daniel's opinion said:

"Under these decisions, it is unquestionably now the law that the states may constitutionally provide separate facilities for the education of Negro and white students so long as the facilities offered both groups are substantially equal."

He advised the board of directors of the Texas State University for Negroes that Jack Coffman, a white citizen of Houston, who had applied for admission as a student to the school, "may not legally be admitted to the Texas State University for Negroes."

The Negro university was established by the last Legislature after admission was refused a Houston Negro, Herman Marion Sweatt, to the University of Texas Law School.

Mr. Sweatt's effort to force admission is pending before the State Supreme Court.

equal facilities for the two races are not provided.

The lawyer indicated that both cases would be carried to the United States Supreme Court.

The country's highest tribunal last January ordered Oklahoma to provide Mrs. Fisher with facilities for law study equivalent to those given White students. At that time, the court refused to pass upon the constitutionality of the state's segregation laws.

Negro School Has No Students

To comply with the court's ruling, the state created a new Negro law school in Oklahoma City, but it has never had a student. Mrs. Fisher and others spurned it on grounds that its facilities did not match those of the University Law school here.

In rejecting Mrs. Fisher's new plea for a mandamus writ to compel the university to accept her, Judge Hinshaw today pointed to the existence of the separate Negro law school. He avoided any statement as to its adequacy.

Mrs. Hancock-Wilson sought a similar writ for admission to graduate studies in social work and Miss Holmes to graduate work in commercial education.

Judge Hinshaw denied their pleas with an explanation that the women had given notice of their desire to pursue such studies only three days before the opening of the universtiy's winter semester last January.

The court did not specify whether it intended, by this ruling, to hold that the two applicants should have given sufficient advance notice to enable the state to set up separate Negro schools for those particular courses.

Would Put Student In Basement

AUSTIN, TEXAS—Striving desparately to circumvent the recent U. S. Supreme Court decision in the University of Oklahoma case, University of Texas officials have arranged for instructors of the lily-white school to teach Negro graduate courses not available at the improvised Jim Crow university at Houston, when demanded.

Representatives of the University of Texas and Texas State University for Negroes approved a contractural arrangement Tuesday whereby the white school will provide training for Negroes in the present segregated school's basement quarters in Austin.

The dingy basement school in Austin, established in an unsuccessful effort to settle the Heman Sweatt case, is regarded as a part of the Negro university at Houston. Sweatt, a Houston postman, has refused to attend the segregated school.

Pending before the University of Texas is an application submitted by W. Astor Kirk, Negro Tollotson college instructor, seeking a Ph. D. degree in government. Kirk indicated last week that he would be unwilling to attend a school that was not equal to a similar school for others. The Houston school offers graduate work only in education.

He did not file formal application, and submitted no transcript for the consideration of the University.

World crisis held increasing need for economic literacy.

BARS WHITE FROM NEGRO UNIVERSITY

AUSTIN COLLEGE, Aug. 3—A white student, Jack Coffman, who sought admission to the "Texas State University for Negroes" was prohibited from doing so by the ruling of State Attorney General Price Daniel Monday.

The university was established for Negroes by the last Legislature after Herman Sweatt lost his suit to enter the U. of Texas Law School. Since then much money has been put into the institution and a strong faculty with ten members possessing doctor of philosophy degrees has been recruited. A three million dollar building campaign is underway.

Despite the pouring of oil and cattle milions into the newly created school, Sweatt has again carried his case to the Supreme Court where it is pending

Attorney General Daniel gave tw reasons for denying the white student permission to enter State college:

1. Texas' Constitution and laws provide that white and Negro students shall be educated separately.

2. "Substantially equal courses of study and physical facilities are offered for white students at the University of Texas and other stantially equal."

White Man Seeks Entry To Texas Negro Univ.

AUSTIN, Tex.—News of the man-biting-dog variety brewed in Texas last week, as Jack Coffman, white, applied for admission to the newly created Texas University of Negroes at Houston.

The school at Houston was created quicker than a Disney cartoon for the purpose of getting around a Supreme Court decision which in effect would have meant that Negroes could enroll in the lily-white Texas schools.

Coffman's move to enter the Negro university had officials of the school in a dither. They asked Atty. General Price Daniel for a ruling on the matter.

One possibility is that Texas might follow a pattern set by its sister State of Arkansas. If so, Coffman will be admitted to the school with the added luxury of having classes all by himself in spacious, but otherwise empty, classrooms.

Coffman, a resident of Houston, says that he is a graduate of Penn college, Oscaloosa, Iowa, and is fully qualified for the courses applied for.

Texas Bars Whites at Negro College

Austin, Tex., Aug. 2 (AP).—A white student may not legally be admitted to the Texas State University for Negroes, Attorney General Price Daniel ruled today. He gave two reasons:

1. Texas constitution and laws provide white and Negro students shall be educated separately;

2. "Substantially equal courses of study and physical facilities are offered for white students at the University of Texas and other State colleges."

Citing U. S. Supreme Court decisions in the Gaines case from Missouri and the Sipuel case from Oklahoma, Daniel's opinion said:

"Under these decisions, it is unquestionably now the law that the States may constitutionally provide separate facilities for the education of Negro and white students so long as the facilities offered both groups are substantially equal."

Jack Coffman, a white citizen of Houston, had applied for admission as a student to the school for Negroes.

Race College 'Legally' Bars White Student

By Associated Negro Press

AUSTIN, Tex.—Jack Coffman, a white citizen of Houston, who applied for admission as a student to Texas State University for Negroes, will not be able to enroll for two reasons, according to Atty. Gen. Price Daniel last week. Daniel based his opinion on U.S. Supreme court decisions in the Gaines case from Missouri and the Sipuel case from Oklahoma.

The two reasons were that the state constitution and laws provide white and Negro students shall be educated separately; and "substantially equal courses of study and physical facilities are offered white students at the University of Texas and other state colleges."

Daniel's opinion said, "Under these decisions, it is unquestionably now the law that the states may constitutionally provide separate facilities for the education of Negro and white students so long as the facilities offered both groups are substantially equal."

Texas School Prejudice May Cost State Millions

By JOHN L. FLORE

AUSTIN, Tex.—If the courts permit a determined state to maintain "separate but equal" Jim Crow schools here, Negro education may well cost Texas $42,076,603 in the next two years, it is estimated.

The figure represents three times the present cost of segregated schools in the state.

Starting when the NAACP entered into an all-out fight for a law school for Heman Sweatt, Houston letter carrier, the bitter school battle continues. Earlier this month the NAACP sought in federal court at Waco to have a 14-year-old Negro girl admitted to a white high school at Hearne, Tex.

Although Federal Judge Ben H. Rice Jr., ended the case with a declaratory judgment that the state law provides for equal but separate schools, whites anticipate another move by the NAACP.

Adding to the expense estimate was the request of the Texas State university for Negroes at Houston for $10,603,865 for the two year period 1949-51. At the same time Prairie View Agricultural and Mechanical college asked $1,936,738.

The Gilmer-Aiken committee has set up a school formula which would provide an equal curricula for Negro students and provide basic improvements in existing facilities at a total cost of $29,536,000 for 229,043 students in the public schools.

The estimate on future cost of segregated schools in the state was reached here the day after the test hearing on high school bias at Waco. NAACP counsel, Thurgood Marshall, said he would not appeal the adverse decision, but it was indicated that NAACP will continue a fight against high school segregation.

Texas officials said that in the past two years Negro education has cost the state $16,204,045. This represents $4,815,986 for higher education and $11,388,059 for public schools.

The Houston school, set up to circumvent Sweatt's appeal to be admitted into the white law school, plans a $7,500,000 building program. This will include a library, science building, two dormitories, a law school, medical school and other schools of advanced and professional training.

Decision Due In 30 Days in Sweatt Appeal

By J. DON DAVIS
(Courier Staff Correspondent)

AUSTIN, Texas — Embattled Texas and the NAACP's legal battery fought another round in the famous Heman Marion Sweatt case here last week. Within the next thirty days, a decision is expected as to whether or not Texas has complied with court orders by setting up a segregated law school for young Sweatt. The NAACP says it has not.

Blasting Texas' Attorney General Price Daniel's contention that "separate" schools meet requirements embodied in the recent U. S. Supreme Court ruling in the Oklahoma Law School case, Thurgood S. Marshall, chief NAACP counsel, contended there has never been a final decision in attempts by courts to make segregation statutes comply with the equality provided for in the Fourteenth Amendment.

Mr. Daniel had employed the ruling in the Oklahoma case as his chief defense weapon, since Texas has set up a makeshift law school in which Sweatt has adamantly refused to enroll. He claims that it does not have equal facilities to those at the law school at the University of Texas. Daniel had reduced the question to legality of segregation.

Atty. W. J. Durham of Dallas, a Sweatt lawyer, branded the idea of substantial equality between the makeshift school set up for Sweatt and that at the white institution as "absolutely preposterous."

With the State consistently relying upon "substantial equality" in its argument, Marshall retorted that Texas had offered Sweatt "a basement education," and that its attorneys had themselves never said the Negro school was "equal." The hearing was held before the Third Circuit Court of Civil Appeals.

Attorney Marshall told The Courier that he couldn't say whether the Oklahoma case or the Texas case would prove the payoff in the all-out fight against segregated education, but said, "I think one of them will settle the issue. We're very close to cracking it."

At a mass meeting on the eve of the trial, held last Thursday, it was revealed that Henry Doyle, one of the students attending the makeshift basement school, is serving as "secretary-custodian," and drawing $25 a week salary as an official State employe.

Marshall Sees Break In Jim Crow Issue

Daily World

Atlanta, Ga. Wed 2-4-48

BY H. S. HUGHES

AUSTIN, Texas — (ANP) — That the segregation issue in the south is very close to a break was the opinion by Thurgood Marshall chief counsel for the NAACP, in a mass meeting attended by both white and Negroes here last week.

The meeting was held as a prelude to the reopening of the case of Heman Sweatt, who seeks admission to the University of Texas law school. The case scheduled to be heard in the third court of civil appeals January 29, was postponed to February 4.

Marshall told his mixed audience that the NAACP has applied to the supreme court for a writ of Mandamus to force the University of Oklahoma law school to accept the application of Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher, Langston university honor graduate and that if the issue is straightened out in Oklahoma, it will be straightened out in Texas. Cases against segregation in Oklahoma and Texas, he said, are further advanced than anywhere else in the south. Wed. 2-4-48

Oklahoma's law school, which was set up in three days to meet the mandate of the U. S. Supreme Court, was ridiculed. The Oklahoma law school was set up as a branch of Langston university, which an Oklahoma attorney in leading the case of Mrs. Fisher described as ' 'the worst school in the country."

"One of the two students enrolled in that school," Marshall said, 'has an official state job as 'secretary-custodian" with a salary of about $25 a week.

Atlanta, Ga.

"There are people," he continued, "who will go to no end to be able to say we have Negroes who are willing to attend that school."

Wed. 2-4-48

A correspondent of a Negro weekly with a sizeable national circulation reported that an interview with one of the students enrolled in the law school on satisfactory or unsatisfactory conditions at the segregated law school here and later with Atty. Gen. Price, brought replies so similar as to suggest a good job of coaching.

Dr. C. E. Ayres, professor of economics at the University of Texas, told the audience that there is no such thing as a Negro problem, but rather a 'white problem.' He laid part of the blame for the apparent crisis on regional political paralysis."

Negro In Texas Loses Once More In School Fight

The Courier Pittsburgh

Austin, Tex., Feb. 25 (AP) — Herman Marion Sweatt, Houston Negro, today lost another phase of his court fight to gain admission as a law student in the University of Texas.

The Third Court of Civil Appeals upheld a lower court's refusal to grant Sweatt an order forcing the university to admit him as a student. The opinion, written by Chief Justice James W. McClendon, said the "controlling" question presented in Sweatt's appeal was whether the State at the time of the trial had made available to Sweatt a course of instruction in first-year law substantially equivalent to that provided at the university's law school. The court found this had been done. 2-26-48

Sweatt Case Facing Showdown

Courier Pittsburgh

HOUSTON, Tex. — The widely publicized case of Heman M. Sweatt, who filed suit for admission to the University of Texas Law School, is scheduled for a showdown in court Thursday of this week.

Recently both Sweatt and Atty. Gen. Price Daniel of Texas, when questioned concerning the ruling in the University of Oklahoma Law School case, declared that it was not comparable to the Lone Star State controversy. 1-6-48

Sweatt Hearing Set for Jan. 29

SWEATT CASE ARGUED BEFORE COURT OF CIVIL APPEALS

14e(1) Discrimination (Texas--Sweatt)

Press Service of The NAACP New York, N. Y.

New York, N.Y., Jan 29th--On Thursday, January 29, the Court of Civil Appeals for the Third Supreme Judicial District of Texas heard arguments by Thurgood Marshall and W. J. Durham, NAACP attorneys, on behalf of Heman Marion Sweatt, applicant to the School of Law of the University of Texas.

Fri. 1-30-48

Sweatt was denied a writ of mandamus against members of the Board of Regents of the University of Texas by the District Court of Travis County, Texas. The District Court, in June, 1946, ruled that the action of the Board of Regents, in denying admission to the appellant, was a denial of the appellant's constitutional right to the equal protection of the laws, but issuance of the writ was stayed for six months to permit the State of Texas to establish a separate law school for Negroes substantially equivalent to the one at the University of Texas. On December 17, 1946, the District Court denied a writ of mandamus. However, the Court of Appeals, in March, 1947, set aside the judgment of the trial court, after which time the case was tried on the merits and a final judgment was rendered against Sweatt.

Press Service of The NAACP New York, N. Y.

The present appeal is predicated upon the lower court's error in holding that the proposal of the state to establish the racially segregated law school afforded the equality required by the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Further grounds for the appeal are based upon the court's error in excluding expert testimony by Dr. Charles H. Thompson, Dean of Howard University Graduate School, and other qualified experts with reference to the quantity and quality of education offered at the universities and colleges, other than Prairie View College, maintained by the State of Texas.

Fri. 1-30-48

As pointed out in the present brief, the separate but equal educational fallacy, embedded in the laws of Texas, has resulted in a disproportionate number of Negro professionals throughout the United States. Although there is one white lawyer to every 670 white persons in the United States, there is only one Negro lawyer to every 12,230 Negroes. There is one white physician to every 735 white persons within the United States, while there is one Negro physician to every 3651 Negroes. The brief further states that whenever and wherever segregation in education is practiced under state sanction, there is admitted and flagrant discrimination in the treatment of Negroes.

Attorneys Attack Separate Schools

AUSTIN—In the third Court of Civil Appeals Thursday morning, January 29, in the State Capitol appeared Attys Thurgood Marshall and W. J. Durham representing Herman Marion Sweatt in a Mandamus suit brought in the 126th District Court. June 17, 1947 seeking admission to the University of Texas with Attorney General Price Daniels and Joe Greenhill, Assistant Attorney General, representing the State of Texas. They had come to test whether separate schools could be separate and equal.

Thurgood Marshall stated to the three judges in Court of Civil Appeals that ninety-nine and a half was not equality. He stated further ,"I don't get what you mean by substantially equal, you either have equality or you don't have it. The only way you can have equality is to have all the students together Neither of the State's Attorneys have said that this basement school of law is equal, nor have they one bit of evidence in the record to support such a claim. At the time Sweatt filed for admission there was no school in existence to compare, it was all to be, there was nothing but a paper law school."

Marshall questioned the magic in a two week waiting period. He said. "We can't go to school together, but as soon as we graduate, within two weeks we can come and sit down together and take the bar examination, we sit down together and argue cases, and from then on our profession knows no color bar. We are admitted to the Law Asscoiaitons of the State. The Courts have been attempting to make Segregation statutes, but they can't make them jive with the equal protection clause of the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution. No one has ever decided whether the statutes provide the equality required by the 14th amendment, and we aren't going to take any body's word for it 'except an expert in the field.

It so happened that Mr. Simmons was just "accidentally" in Austin at the time of the first trial or the second, and it just so happened that Mr. Simmons was present in the court room and used by the state. Upon cross examination he said. "I am not an expert, but every expert we presented said that separate schools were not in the best interest of a student. He denied the thinking of his fellow students." Price Daniels had mentioned the courts opinion in the Oklahoma University Case Marshall said, " I know what the court meant. I argued the case. The Court asked if Mrs. Sipuel could be entered in the law school by January 26, and the Oklahoma University Attorney General said 'yes.' They prepared a mimeographed copy of the court's opinion from Friday to Monday, and said that we are going to issue this 'Forth-with-order.' But that isn't over as yet. We are asking the court to issue a writ of Mandamus to force the Oklahoma University to admit her. We will know about that soon. But if the attorney General wants to use it it is all right with me.

Durham and Marshall entered the court late. As soon as Durham rested his coat. he proceeded to open the argument for Heman Sweatt. He cited four points upon which he was desirous of speaking. He went into the nature of the suit and reasons for refusing Sweatt He said that any man of any other race with less or no qualifications, and one who had denounced the constitution of the U. S. could enter the Texas University, but because Sweatt was a Negro he was refused. Durham said the State's testimony was entirely speculative and presumptive in stating that if a Negro entered a white school there would be racial trouble. Durham further contended that Dean Thompson and Donald Murray's testimony should remain in the record because is was relative and purported to show that separate education was not only unequal in quanity and quality, but was unequal in dollars and cents.

Assistant Attorney General Joe Greenhill attempted to support the contention that by their witnesses and facts, the two law schools with the same faculty, " is in my estimation the most important thing in a law school. The students are here just 20 feet away from the Supreme Court Library, and with all other requirements being equal we feel that we have established a school of law for Negroes substantially equal to that of the University of Texas."

Attorney General Price Daniels insisted that the court was correct in striking the testimony of Dean Thompson and Donald Murry from the record. He said Thompson's testimony was not relative. "We have established a good school for the Negroes. Sweatt didn't even as much as inquire about the school. Instead he wrote to Dallas to Maceo Smith and didn't ever come to see what we had for him. Then he stated that if the schools were exactly equal he wouldn't attend them. I say to this court that his interest is not in securing an education, but rather in attacking our segregation laws concerning separate schools for Whites and Negroes." "Therefore." Daniels said, "there are only two issues left: "Is the Law School for Negroes equal, and is it substantially equal to that offered to Whites in this state.

At 8:30 the small court room was practically filled and by trial time they were standing out in the halls. There they waited until noon to inquire as to what took place in the court room. About a third of the group were Whites . . . The Honorable Judge McClendon recessed court until February 4. 1948, stepped down from the bench and posed with Durham and Marshall for two pictures and then went home for the dav . . .

Sweatt Case On Way to High Court

NEW YORK—Thurgood Marshall, NAACP special counsel, announced this week that the association would carry to the U. S. Supreme Court the demand of Heman Marion Sweatt for admission to the law school of the University of Texas.

Mr. Marshall announcement followed denial by the State Supreme Court of a motion for a rehearing of the case in which it has previously denied Sweatt's plea for a writ of mandamus compelling his admission to the university.

Mr. Sweatt, a young Houston mail carrier, first sought admission to the University of Texas law school two years ago. His application was rejected solely on the grounds of race. The State then proceeded to establish a jim-crow law school. Sweatt refused to enroll in this school, contending that it did not offer facilities equal to those of the university law school.

Prepare Sweatt Case For High Court Test

AUSTIN, Tex. — The clear cut battle against Jim Crow higher education provided by the Heman Marion Sweatt case was shaped for an apepal to the United States Supreme Court Thursday in a motion for rehearing filed by his attorneys in the Third Court of Civil Appeal.

The Appeals Court last February 25, upheld Texas segregation laws in a decision denying Sweatt's plea for a mandamus to compel the university of Texas to admit him to its law school.

Nine charges of error were set out in Thursday's motion attacking the court ruling.

Filed by Attorneys W. J. Durham of Dallas, and Thurgood Marshall of New York, NAACP special counsel the motion asserted: "The record in this case demonstrated, for the first time in any case presented for decision, the inevitable inequalities in a segregated system."

The question indicated that the school segregation issue is presented for the first time in the Sweatt litigation. The state of Texas through its Atty. Gen. Price Daniel and his staff had cited cases in attempt to support argument that Jim Crow laws had been upheld where equal opportunities were afforded the Negro group. This is the state's position in the case.

The motion filed by Sweatt's counsel Thursday is believed to be a basis for direct appeal to the United States Supreme Court. Lawyers pointed out that such an appeal can be taken from the judgement of Appellate Court if the Texas high tribunal would hear the case and render its own decision. In refusing a writ of error, the Texas Supreme Court would cut the time that the case would come before the U. S. Supreme Court.

Texas Appeals Court Rules Against Sweatt in Law School Case

AUSTIN, Texas—The Texas Third Court of Appeals here last Wednesday upheld a lower court's refusal to admit Heman Sweatt, colored veteran, to the Law School of the University of Texas in the latest phase of the long-drawn-out litigation.

NAACP attorneys plan to carry the case to the Texas Supreme Court, protesting the Appeal Court's ruling that courses of law instruction provided at the segregated new law school at Prairie View are "substantially equal" to those at the lily-white university.

Should the State Supreme Court uphold the ruling of the Appeals Court, NAACP attorneys may then appeal the case to the Federal courts, where an authoritative ruling on the "substantially equal" question may at last be obtained.

AUSTIN, Tex. (ANP)—It looks as though Herman M. The refusal thus approves the decision of the circuit court of civil appeals' decision that Texas is providing substantially equal college facilities for white and colored residents and that segregation is legal.

Sweatt attorneys contend that there is no such thing as "separate but equality." Last year the State in an effort to provide "equal facilities," set up the new Texas State University at Houston.

What Negroes Are Doing

BY MATTIE B. ROWE

Schools and colleges throughout the city and county have completed plans for the 28th annual observance of American Education Week Nov. 7-13.

At Miles College in Vinesville, Dr. Charles S. Johnson, recently installed as the first Negro president of Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., will deliver the address Monday morning as the college begins its celebration.

At Daniel Payne College, where Dr. R. K. Young is the new president, the exercises will be under the general direction of Mrs. Lula E. Driver, dean of women. Friday morning Dr. S. L. Greene, Jr., president of Campbell College, Jackson, Miss., will be guest speaker.

The city schools, led on by Parker High and Ullman High Schools, will welcome hundreds of parents and patrons to see the operations of this vast system through student guides.

Dr. Milton Williams, pastor of the First Congregational Church, will be guest speaker at the assembly period Monday morning at Parker High School. On Tuesday Mrs. A. O. Ward, of the Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court, will speak on "Developing Worthy Family Life." On this same program Mrs. Edwina Divers will render a solo, accompanied at the piano by her sister, Mrs. Jessyca Divers Hayden. "Opportunities for Educated Youth" will be the subject Atty. Oscar W. Adams, Jr., will use in his address Wednesday morning. Friday morning Dr. Eugenia Mobley, of the U. S. Health Service, will speak on "Developing Early Dental Care." At the Parker annex Prof. N. E. Wills, principal of Cameron School, and the Rev. H. C. Terrell will feature the program in addresses.

Ullman High, Prof. George C. Bell, principal, announces the following speakers during the celebration:

Monday, Mrs. R. C. Stewart, "Improving the Education"; Tuesday, Emory O. Jackson, "Safeguarding Our America"; Wednesday, Mrs. E. P. Green, "Providing Adequate Finance."

The general theme of the observance, "Strengthening the Foundation of Freedom," will be discussed by student panel sessions during the week.

TAU SIGMA CHAPTER of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority has set out to enlist the cooperation of every organized Negro group in the campaign to educate the public on venereal diseases.

Through J. L. Williams, director of health education, Birmingham Health Department, Tau Sigma Chapter will sponsor the move among Negro people.

Campaign headquarters are open at Bradford's Funeral System, 1527 Seventh Avenue, North, with Mrs. Marian K. Bradford in charge.

Miss Josie M. Oliver, 813 Sixteenth Street, South, telephone 7-6058, will give information to any organized group that requests it.

Persons who want to know more about the campaign are invited to a tea on Sunday, Nov. 14, from 5 to 7 p.m. at the Federation Day Nursery. Delta Sigma Theta Sorority is sponsoring the tea.

DR. AMBROSE CALIVER, FSA specialist for higher education among Negroes, announced in Washington last week he had received pledges of financial assistance from four national Negro organizations for a project sponsored by the U. S. Office of Education to wipe out illiteracy among adult Negroes.

Supporting the plan are Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Conference of Negro Land Grant Colleges, American Teachers Association, and the Improved Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. The project is currently in operation at Atlanta University, Fort Valley, Tennessee and Virginia state colleges and Hampton Institute, aided by grants totaling $49,910 from the Carnegie Foundation.

The program offers workshops, college courses and fellowship to provide teachers and community leaders specifically trained for adult work. Assumption of greater responsibility by 50 Negro colleges in preparing 5,000 teachers and 250 supervisors of adult education will lead to making between 15,000 and 20,000 individuals literate in another year.

Negro College Enrollment Establishes a New Record

The Times

For the third consecutive year enrollment in Negro colleges and universities has reached record levels, according to a survey which will be published in a forthcoming issue of The Journal of Negro Education. The undergraduate enrollment in 111 institutions last fall was 70,874, an increase of 15 per cent over last year and an 83 per cent increase over the peak pre-war enrollment.

New York, N.Y.

All told, there are approximately 75,000 resident Negro students taking undergraduate, graduate and professional work. War veterans constituted 40 per cent of the present total enrollment. Despite the recent growth of state institutions, the survey disclosed, undergraduate students were about evenly divided between public and private colleges and universities.

Student Enrollment In Colleges Up 26 Per Cent

Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Figures released Thursday by the U. S. Office of Education show that enrollments in Negro colleges in 1947 were 26 per cent higher than in any previous year. The total registrations amount to more than 74,000 students, a figure which was described as "severely taxing the institutions' physical plants as well as teaching staffs."

Fri. 1-16-48

The largest enrollment of students was at Howard university, which boasts nearly 6,000, over one third of the number being GI student. Thirty WACs are included in this number.

WILBERFORCE UNIVERSITY WINTER ENROLLMENT PASSES 400 MARK

14e(1)

Wilberforce, Ohio—There was an over-all seven percent increase in the winter enrollment at Wilberforce University, from 376 in Autumn to 403 in Winter, according to a release made by Dr. Frederick A. McGinnis who is also dean of the new college of Education and Business Administration opened since the split.

Student Herald, Chicago, Ill.

The enrollment in the new College had a seventy-five per cent increase over the preceding quarter; the university high high school, thirty; and veterans, 16 per cent.

Judging from applications already received, Spring enrollment is expected to show further improvement.

"Now that the initial shock of the state's separation is over and the church sees its way clear, there is no doubt that our enrollment will pass the 500 mark by the Fall of 1948," declared Dr. Charles Leander Hill, president of Wilberforce University.

Preliminary arrangements for an examination by the North Central Association for the purpose of accrediting the institution in 1949 are now being made, according to University officials.

Enrollment In Colleges Reaches New, High Peak

Daily Worker

Atlanta, Ga. 1-16-48

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The 12th annual survey of enrollment in Negro colleges and universities, conducted by Dr. Martin D. Jenkins, Department of Education, Howard University, reveals that, for the 3rd consecutive year, enrollment in these institutions has reached a new peak. Approximately 75,000 resident students were enrolled in undergraduate, graduate and professional curricula during the fall term of the current school year. The undergraduate enrollment in 111 institutions was 70,874 students, an increase of 15 per cent over the same term of last year and 83 per cent over the peak pre-war enrollment. Graduate and professional enrollments include, graduate, 970 (14 institutions); medicine 512 (2 institutions); dentistry, 314 (2 institutions), and law 223 (5 institutions).

Returning war veterans constitute 40 per cent of the total enrollment. One-hundred seven institutions report a total of 29,557 veterans attending college with federal aid, including 25,489 at the college level. For the first time in the recent history of these institutions more male than female students are enrolled.

Wed. 1-21-48

Despite the recent growth of state institutions, undergraduate students are about evenly divided between public and private colleges and universities. At the graduate and professional level, however, private institutions still carry the bulk of the enrollment. Seventy-three per cent of the undergraduate students are attending fully-accredited institutions.

The typical institution has an enrollment of 490 students. The largest institution reporting is is Howard University with an enrollment of 5725 students (including 2390 veterans) during the fall term and 6926 students during the school year 1946-47.

During the full school year 1946-47 approximately 115,000 students were enrolled in Negro higher institutions. Among the 1946-47 graduates were 1,693 with a baccalaureate degree, 342 with the master's degree, 117 in medicine, 74 in social work, 70 in dentistry and 37 in law.

With the addition of Meharry Medical College which inaugurated graduate work during 1947 there are now 17 institutions of higher education of Negroes now offering work for the master's degree, although none offers work at the Ph. D level. An interesting sidelight on the efforts of the Southern States to meet the narrow terms of the Gaines decision is the fact that 6 states have established segregated law schools (North Carolina. South Carolina, Louisiana, Missouri, Texas, Oklahoma.)

The survey is reported in detail in the forthcoming Spring issue of the "Journal of Negro Education," published by the Bureau of Educational Research, Howard University.

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — Although for the third successive year, college and university enrollments have climbed to a new peak, enrollments in colored institutions have declined, according to a report made by the United States Office of Education last Saturday to Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing.

Wed 1-21-48

The report reveals that total enrollment in colored institutions is 71,000, a decline of 3,000 from the 1947 enrollment.

"That decline is not particularly significant," said Dr. John D. Russell, director of the division of higher education in the Office of Education, "because its basis is very small." He added that it was still "far beyond the enrollment of two years ago."

Tues 1-20-48

The decline in enrollment is wholly accounted for by the decline of enrollment of veterans in those institutions. The number of veterans enrolled in colored institutions is 3,000 less than the number enrolled in 1947. The present enrollment is 23,000. A year ago it was 26,000.

According to figures released Thursday by the U. S. Office of Education, enrollment in Negro colleges in 1947 was 26 per cent higher than in any previous year. Total registrations are more than 74,000 students.

Enrollment Hits Peak in Colleges

864 students this semester

Lincoln Clarion

A slight decrease in enrollment as compared with that of last year, was noted in the summary of enrollment released this week by the office of the registrar.

Totals from the college of arts and sciences, School of Journalism, School of Law and graduate school come to 864. This number is far below last year's total of 947. The summary lists 334 women and 530 men as students enrolled for courses this semester. Among these are two women veterans and 330 men veterans.

Wed 11-5-47

An analysis of registration by students in the school of arts and sciences shows 213 freshmen registered. This number is composed of 128 men (48 veterans) and 85 women. Sophomore numbers stand at 213. Included are 99 women and 116 men (69 veterans). Junior class, 191 students listed; men students number 142 (102 veteran) and women 49 (1 veteran). Senior class, 147 students recorded; 78 women, 69 men (45 veterans).

Higher Education In Alabama Enrolls 32,597 For Fall Term

BY JAMES FREE
News-Age-Herald Bureau

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7—The University of Alabama, with an enrollment of 9,150, topped all other higher educational institutions in the state in total number of students this Fall, the Federal Security Agency reported today.

Alabama Polytechnic Institute was second, with 7,655 students. This was more than three times the enrollment of Tuskegee Institute, which ran third with 2,401 students.

Howard College was sixth with 1,210 students, and Birmingham-Southern College was eighth with an enrollment of 1,078.

Total enrollment for the 26 Alabama institutions listed was 32,597. Of these 22,953 were men and 9,644 were women. These figures include 14,796 veterans, of whom 14,614 were men.

THE ALABAMA UNIVERSITY and college enrollment of 32,597 was considerably more than the total Mississippi enrollment of 19,502, but below the totals of 38,824 and 40,094 for Tennessee and Georgia, respectively.

Decline In College Enrollments Shown

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—Although for the third successive year, college and university enrollments have climbed to a new peak, enrollments in colored institutions have declined, according to a report made by the United States Office of Education last Saturday (November 13) to Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing.

The report reveals that total enrollment in colored institutions is 71,000, a decline of 3,000 from the 1947 enrollment.

"That decline is not particularly significant," said Dr. John Dale Russell, director of the division of higher education in the Office of Education, "because its basis is very small." He added that it was still" far beyond the enrollment of two years ago.

The deadline in enrollment in colored institutions is wholly accounted for by the decline of enrollment of veterans in these institutions. The number of veterans enrolled in colored institutions is 3,000 less than the number enrolled in 1947. The present enrollment is 23,000. A year ago it was 26,000.

Although the total drop in enrollment in colored institutions is 3,000, and there is a decline of 3,000 in veteran enrollment, the number of first-time students enrolled in colored institutions is also 4,000 less than it was a year ago. The present enrollment of first-time students is 19,000. A year ago it was 23,000.

This seeming inconsistency may be explained by an increase in the number of students who returned to school for advanced work.

Fisk Artist Recital

The Courier-Journal

Many years ago a group of singers, the Fisk Jubilee Singers, representing Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., went out to raise funds for their institution. They sang before kings and queens, and thousands of people contributed money, thereby making possible the erection of Jubilee Hall at Fisk University. This institution today maintains a high standard in music and other fields of work.

On Sunday, May 16, at 5 p.m. at Plymouth Congregational Church, a local group of Fiskites is presenting a Fisk Artist Recital. Bishop Buford F. Gordon, the only bishop Fisk has produced, and Mrs. Andrades Lindsey Brown, a noted musician, will appear as special guest artists on this program. The public is invited to attend this affair. Sat.

Jack Adkins Takes Over Coaching Duties At Fisk

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — (SNS) — Fisk's bid for athletic laurels lies in the hands of her new head coach, King-sized Jack Adkins, whose football teams put LeMoyne College on the map a few years ago. He is succeeding Julian Bell who resigned several weeks ago.

Fresh from the West Coast where he engaged in USO work during the war, the former Fisk center returns to his alma mater with singleness of purpose. "My prime concern," he says with the full impetus of his 6:4, 245 pound body, "Is to try to return Fisk to her former high place in the sports world." Sun.

After looking over the boys who've been reporting for spring practice he reports that the prospects are good and adds that the fall enrollment promises to strengthen the lineup.

Adkins is a former teammate of Fisk's immortal back, Tubby Johnson, now athletic director at Fisk; and the late Jimmy Lunceford. The three played along with T. J. Long, Louisville; Maceo Smith, Dallas; and Ned Goodwin, Tulsa, in the early twenties when Fisk was a threat to all-comers.

FORMER LEMOYNE MENTOR

Following his graduation in 1926, Adkins went to LeMoyne as head coach and athletic director and organized its first varsity football team. Five years later the college was playing intercollegiate competition against Fisk, A. and I. and Lincoln. In 1932 LeMoyne joined the Southern Athletic Conference and has a commendable record in varsity competition.

Daily World

Adkins is remembered by Tennessee sports fans for his daffy spaghetti shift and his razzle-dazzle revolutionary forward pass psychology that legalized a heave from anywhere on the playing.

FISK COLLECTS JOPLIN CLASSICS

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

Nashville--A rare assortment of songs, pictures, articles and other materials relating to the musical career of Scott Joplin, pioneer ragtime composer, is the newest addition to the Fisk University Library's special collection of Negro ana according to an announcement by Mr. Arna Bontemps, librarian.

The collection includes photographs of Scott Joplin and of the Missouri community with which he is identified, a manuscript biography of the composer, musical scores of Joplin's works and other valuable documents connected with the Negro pianist whose "Maple Leaf Rag" created a new vogue in American popular music during the nineties and influenced the course of its future development. Thurs.

Mr. S. Brunson Campbel of Venice, Calif., a former pupil of the great musician, who in recent years has sought to memorialize the name of Scott Joplin, donated this valuable contribution to the University. 6-3-48

BEST OF RAGS

Joplin's ragtime compositions are generally recognized as being by far the best of the rags, the most durableand the most influential. Born in Texarkana, Texas in 1868, at 28 he had become one of the great tribe of wondering piano players whose creative genius brought on the revolution in American popular music.

At the time of his death in 1917 the piano st list had penned over 40 hits, among them being "Maple Leaf Rag" "Chestnut Street in the 90's," "Essay in Ragtime," "Easy Winners" and "Sunflower Slow Drag." Biographies have since traced the migratory musician's journeys by the trail of published sheet music that he left throughout the country. Daily World

In 1910 Joplin had his own publishing house and studio where he published his opera "reemonisha". The opera into which he had poured his great fund of musical originality was a failure and despite his rise to riches through ragtime, he died a very disappointed and broken-hearted man. Thurs. 6-3-48

Mr. Campbell, the original "Ragtime Kid," has also published articles on Joplin in various magazines, and has given Joplin's musical history to the Historical Society of Petin County, Mo. at Se-dalia where his beloved "Maple Leaf Rag" was written, and also to the Missouri State Historical Files.

Fisk Manual To Aid College Graduates In Finding Jobs

NASHVILLE—(ANP)— A manual to aid college graduates, especially in the liberal arts division, in finding jobs will soon be published by Fisk university, it was announced this week.

The information in this booklet will be based on the results of a study just completed by a five-member student team from Fisk which conducted a vocational guidance project in a countrywide survey. These students interviewed successful Negroes and asked them how they became qualified for their positions.

The new manual will give the requirements and opportunities in various fields for Negro college graduates. Fisk also plans to open a vocational guidance program next fall to help students choose and prepare for worthwhile positions while studying at Fisk.

Employment opportunities for Negroes are improving, the student survey revealed. Work for Negroes as journalists, industrialists, labor leaders, actors and entertainers is available throughout the country, the study revealed.

Covering the east coast were Paul Bontemps of Nashville and Melvin Williams of Brooklyn. They found good opportunities in Negro newspapers, magazines, advertising, radio script writing and announcing.

In the southeast Goldie Gibson of Cincinnati and Joan Banks of Columbus, O., said that Negroes must remember, "After we have become identified with a particular occupation we become its representatives and it is up to us to keep its standards high."

Interviewing employers and employes in the southern states and California, William Phillips of Waco, Tex., discovered that employers favor hiring students with good liberal arts education plus initiative and a willingness to learn over those wth a high degree of specialization. He added that many fields were being opened to college graduates.

Dr. Dwight Wilson Is First Fisk Archivist

NASHVILLE — Dr. Dwight H. Wilson, international archivist, assumed office on April 1 as the first Archivist of Fisk University, it was announced recently by President Charles S. Johnson.

Dr. Wilson will act in the dual capacity of Archivist and Records Administrator, not only having custody of the non-current records but providing for the more efficient use and management of current ones. In addition to administering the official documents of the University, he will also administer the American Missionary Association Archives and other organizational archives entrusted to Fisk.

Prior to Dr. Wilson's appointment at Fisk, he spent sevearl years at National Archives where he organized and completed a number of archival projects which won him commendation.

Upon leaving National Archives, he was sent to Italy where he served as Archival Consultant to Allied Commission Archives and Deputy Director of Allied Forces Records Administration Archives. In Rome he reorganized Allied Commission Archives; and, after his return to this country, he exerted every possible effort to prevent the loss of these valuable records to the United States Government.

Colonel R. H. Jackman, Allied Force Records Administrator, cited Dr. Wilson for performing his "arduous and complex duties with credit and distinction to himself and to tne Program." Mayor R. V. Russell, Deputy Administrator (British) said that he "at all times handled his onerous and exacting duties with imagination and tact displaying great abilitiy and judgement. He can be thoroughly depended upon to tackle any archival difficulty with really clear thinking and common sense ideas. Dr. Wilson is held in high esteem and respect by all the British Officers who come to him for advice and counsel."

The Fisk University Archives will be Dr. Wilson's immediate concern, and he has launched a program for the recovery of all records relating to Fisk, which are still extant. A member of The Society of American Archivists he says that President Johnson is believed to be the first president of a Negro school to see and fill the need for an archival program.

Fisk U. Receives Myrdal Collection

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The recent gift of the Myrdal Collection microfilm series to the Fisk University Library by the Carnegie Fund is the third major microfilm to be obtained by the library, according to librarian Arna Bontemps.

These documents are financed by the Carnegie Corporation in connection with the famous Gunnar Myrdal study on the Negro in America.

Nearly a hundred authorities collaborated on special research projects to collect the tremendous amount of material that went into "The American Dilemma," published in 1944 in two volumes.

Four books growing out of the study have also been published independently, one of which is Dr. Charles S. Johnson's "Patterns of Negro Segregation."

Fisk University Head Honored By Harvard U.

By NNPA News Service

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk University, was honored by Harvard University at commencement exercises here June 1, when the 312-year-old university conferred upon him the honorary degree of doctor of laws.

He was cited as an educator, author, and social statesman, wise in his unremitting offorts to move America forward toward our historical goals of real equality and justice."

Former honors received by Dr. Johnson included the degree of doctor of letters, conferred by Virginia Union University in 1928; doctor of humanities, conferred by Howard University in 1941, and doctor of letters conferred by Columbia University in 1947.

COLORED MARSHALL

For the first time in the history of Harvard a colored student led the student body as marshal in the university's annual commencement.

The honor student is 21-years old Chester Middlebrook Pierce, son of Mrs. Hetty Pierce, of Brooklyn.

An outstanding athlete, the six-foot-four, 215-pound youth played tackle for Harvard's varsity football team, and was the first colored youth on an Ivy League team to play intercollegiate football south of the Mason-Dixon line.

A letterman for three years, Pierce will be graduated as a premedical student and next autumn will enter Harvard medical school.

Fur Theft Expose Nets Fisk Student

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—A 27-year-old Fisk University student was returned to Detroit last week to face charges of receiving and concealing stolen property.

Identified as Frederick H. Black of 1816 Jefferson Street, he was arrested by Nashville police following the expose in Detroit of a widespread theft ring involving stolen furs.

According to Detroit Detective Sgt. Ray Loomis, Black has disposed of at least eleven expensive fur coats and jackets on the Nashville market.

$25,000 IN LOOT

Information which led to Black's arrest was given by Drake Tolbert, 28, of Detroit, after he pleaded guilty to the systematic looting of the Nadell Fur Company of forty-five coats and jackets valued at $25,000. More arrests are expected, Detroit police said.

Tolbert told Loomis that Black and his wife formerly lived in the same Detroit hotel as Tolbert and his wife. They became friends and Tolbert said he asked Black if he wanted to buy a fur coat cheap for his wife. Black allegedly purchased the coat and asked if Tolbert could furnish more coats for fencing in Nashville.

Drop Charges Against Fisk Univ. Student

NASHVILLE — Charges of receiving and concealing stolen property in connection with the operation of a fur theft ring have been dropped in Detroit, Mich., against a Fisk University student, police there have disclosed.

The student, Fred Black, 27, was picked up here at the request of Detroit police and taken there Oct. 19 after he allegedly disposed of a number of stolen fur coats and jackets in this area.

In a letter to Fisk University officials, Jack Harvil, chief of Detroit detectives, said that through Black's cooperation "we were able to recover a large quantity of furs which had been stolen from a local store by one Drake Tolbert."

Fisk U. President Defends Publicly Supported Schools

Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk University, speaking Saturday in Davage Auditorium, Clark College, defended publicly supported education, before the Southeastern Conference of the Fisk General Alumni Association.

The noted educator and sociologist told the audience, "There are some persons who have mistaken the development of publicly-supported education as a threat to the position and future of private colleges, when actually we should welcome the development of sentiment towards publicly-supported education as a needed opportunity for private colleges to fill their real function in pioneering new areas and standards in liberal arts and education."

"There will always be privately-supported colleges," Dr. Johnson said" in a Democratic society because it is in this way in which voluntary, energetic and non-governmental associations of citizens express themselves in cooperation with government."

"There are 1751 institutions of higher learning in America. Of this number, 1004 are privately-supported. Of the 105 Negro colleges, the great majority and all of the old ones, are privately-supported."

NO THREAT SEEN

Dr. Johnson explained that sentiment towards publicly-supported education was no threat to the privately-supported school in explaining that, "Actually enrollment in private colleges, both general and Negro, has been generally more rapidly than publicly-supported schools."

"We had 59,000 students receiving education in privately-supported schools in 1947; 70,000 in 1948; and by 1955 we shall probably pass 100,000."

Dr. Johnson stated that "One of the dangerous myths regarding private education is that many philanthrophists have felt that the kind of school to support must have vocational untility..... they overlook the fact that general education is the best kind of vocational preparation."

"More than 62 per cent of the people in education and the social sciences are graduates of Negro liberal arts colleges."

"Many people have asked" said Dr. Johnson "How necessary is the Negro private college?" What we are aiming at is to do away with segregation! ! !

"The Negro college exists to make it unnecessary as a Negro college in order to do what it must to become the best of all possible colleges." This is very necessary in order to close that gap in the general cultural level of these two segements of the population."

J. Howard Bennett of Chicago, Ill presided at the meeting. Remarks were given by G. E. DeLorme, Second Vice President, of the General Alumni Association.

Earlier, Dr. Johnson had spoken on "My Program for Fisk." Mrs. Helen Young Howard spoke on "Problems and Solutions for Local Fisk Clubs."

Calls Education 'Adaptation to Change';
1st Year's Achievements Add to Status

NASHVILLE — A broad program designed to keep Fisk University among the top-ranking schools in the United States was outlined by Dr. Charles S. Johnson as he completed his first year as president of the institution.

The able sociologist and educator said:

"In these accelerated times, education is more than following a curriculum. It is an adaptation to change.

Major Objective Told

"In a world full of change, we're aiming at the development of intelligence, the ability to meet new situations. Being just an educator is an empty title unless one is grounded in social reality."

Last year's program at Fisk was based on that theme. Emphasis is on fundamental research in the fields of physics, chemistry and the social sciences—all programs to be broadened in the future.

1st Year's Work

Since Dr. Johnson's inauguration, Fisk University has com- an endowment fund campaign which raised $411,000; completed plans for the building of a $450,000 women's dormitory;

Re-organized the student personnel program; expanded the work of the International Student Center; increased its faculty, and the number of visiting lecturers from the Sarbonne, Cambridge University, the London School of Economics, and the University of Port-au-Prince, Haiti.

The 972 students are from 35 States, mostly from Texas, Tennessee, Illinois, Mississippi, New Jersey, Florida, Ohio, Louisiana and California. This year they have a student newspaper, "The Fisk Forum," and a football team which is winning—for a change.

Calls Education 'Adaptation to Change';
1st Year's Achievements Add to Status

NASHVILLE — A broad program designed to keep Fisk University among the top-ranking schools in the United States was outlined by Dr. Charles S. Johnson as he completed his first year as president of the institution.

The able sociologist and educator said:

"In these accelerated times, education is more than following a curriculum. It is an adaptation to change.

Major Objective Told

"In a world full of change, we're aiming at the development of intelligence, the ability to meet new situations. Being just an educator is an empty title unless one is grounded in social reality."

Last year's program at Fisk was based on that theme. Emphasis is on fundamental research in the fields of physics, chemistry and the social sciences—all programs to be broadened in the future.

1st Year's Work

Since Dr. Johnson's inauguration, Fisk University has com- an endowment fund campaign which raised $411,000; completed plans for the building of a $450,000 women's dormitory;

Re-organized the student personnel program; expanded the work of the International Student Center; increased its faculty, and the number of visiting lecturers from the Sarbonne, Cambridge University, the London School of Economics, and the University of Port-au-Prince, Haiti.

The 972 students are from 35 States, mostly from Texas, Tennessee, Illinois, Mississippi, New Jersey, Florida, Ohio, Louisiana and California. This year they have a student newspaper, "The Fisk Forum," and a football team which is winning—for a change.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., March 7 —The human mind that conceived the need for smashing the atom must feel an equal compulsion for improving relations between nations, races and individuals if there is to be peace and progress, Dr. Fred McCuistion, associate director of the General Education Board, New York, declared today.

He spoke before 3,000 Southern educators, students and alumni attending the two-day celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of Florida Agricultural and Mechanical College, one of the region's leading Negro institutions.

"When we needed the atom bomb the scientific mind came through with machinery that can smash and control the atom's energy," he said. The Times

"Surely it is just as important to capture and develop what is radiant in human personality as what is radio-active in something else. That same human mind can do it if the urgency is there."

The celebration also served as an occasion to honor D. E. Williams for twenty years' service as state supervisor of Negro education. An engraved plaque that was bought by the Negro school children of the state was presented to him and speakers extolled him for his work in racial cooperation. In response he said: 3-8-48

"The real heroes are your teachers working on the firing line day after day without acclaim for their services and your parents who have the faith to put their children through the best training that is provided them." Mon.

Dr. William P. Gray Jr., president of Florida A. & M., announced that in the past fifteen months the state had allotted $4,000,000 for expanding its physical facilities.

State supervisors of Negro education attending the ceremony were I. J. K. Wells of West Virginia; C. J. Martin of South Carolina; Dr. N. O. Newbold of North Carolina, and H. L. Cousins of Georgia. Assistant supervisors C. A. Hicks, of Arkansas and Dr. Robert Hatch, of Alamaba, also attended. New York, N.Y.

Other educators present were Dr. F. M. Garver, professor emeritus of the school of administration and supervision, University of Pennsylvania; Dr. Doak Campbell, president of Florida State University, and Colin English, superintendent of public instruction in Florida.

Rejects $237,500 "Gift" From Florida's Governor

(14e(1)) Mr. Dwight Pearce Jr. Fairbanks

MIMS, Fla.—In a sharply worded letter to Governor Millard F. Caldwell of Florida, Harry T. Moore, executive secretary of the State Conference of Branchs of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, informed the state's chief executive that Florida Negroes would not consider as a "gift" his proffer of $237,500 to the Florida Agricultural and Mechanical College at Tallahassee.

The Governor was awarded the sum as damages in a libel suit against Collier's Magazine as the result of editorial censure of his alleged statements and lack of effective action in the lynching of Jesse James Payne in Madison County two years ago. At the time he filed suit against the magazine, the Governor promised to give any sum awarded to him to the state college for Negroes.

Disappointed Over Inaction In Payne Lynching In 1946

SHERIFF NOT SUSPENDED

Cricitizing Governor Caldwell for his failure to suspend the sheriff, Mr. Moore further asserted: "We wish to make it clear that we shall not consider this as a gift to the Negroes of Florida. Florida A. and M. College is a state-supported institution. The support and development of this school is the responsibility of the State of Florida. It Florida A. and M. College is not getting sufficient financial support to make it measure up to the stan dards maintained at the University of Florida at Gainesville and the Florida State University at Tallahassee, is is the fault of our state government, and not the responsibility of Florida Negro citizens. Therefore, any money that you give will be contribution to our state government, and not a gift to the Negroes of Florida. We wish also to emphasize the fact that such a gift will not soothe the wounded feelings of Flor. Negro citizens. We are still disappointed because of your failure to take effective action in the Payne lynching."

Colored Pastor To Teach In China

NEW YORK—(ANP)—Appointment of the Rev. Darius L. Swann, Negro educator, to the foreign languages department of the University of Nanking, China, has just been announced here by the United Board of Christian Colleges in China. Mr. Swann, who arrived recently in China, is the first Negro to become a faculty member of one of the mission-supported Christian colleges in that country.

Born in Amelia, Va., 24 years ago, Mr. Swann was graduated in 1945 from Johnson C. Smith University in Charlotte, N. C., and three years later received a bachelor of divinity degree from that institution. His experience includes interracial work in New York, service as an assistant in the religious education department of Johnson C. Smith University, and as student pastor in Mt. Pleasant Church, Franklinton, N. C. He was ordained in June by Southern Virginia Presbytery.

Florida Students Hold 1st Interracial Session

MIAMI—(ANP)—Student representatives from Florida A & M College, Tallahassee; Bethune-Cookman, Daytona Beach; and Edward Waters College, Jacksonville, came here recently to attend the joint session of the Florida Student Government Association and the Florida Intercollegiate Press Association, on the campus of the University of Miami.

Mel Mesquitta, who represented the press from Edward Waters College, said, describing the three-day meeting it was a wonderful experience:

"This meeting gave us an opportuuity to come close together and to exchange idea. We found the white students very friendly although of course all on the campus did not approve of our coming.

Courtesies Extended

"We stayed at the Mary Elizabeth Hotel and they came for us every morning and took us to the university. We ate together on the campus. They took us to the Orange Bowl football game and then one of the students had a private party at his home afterwards.

"This was the first time colored students have been invited to join the association. Dr. Lovejoy, head of the interracial commission at the university, came with Red Robins, president of the Student Association, and Frank Stokes of the Press Association and two others to invite us personally.

"At our school, a delegation was appointed to meet them, including several African students, and they thought it very generous that Dr Lovejoy came himself."

Understanding Is Goal

Mesquitta who is from Jamaica, B.W.I., is editor-in-chief of the Edwards Waters College Review. He said the chief object of the meeting was to bring the students together. Indirectly it will lead to the breakdown of segregation.

"The press can do a lot to break down barriers," Mesquitta added. "Delegates attended from 14 schools and we will exchange our school papers."

Mesquitta was accompanied by Miss Colota Tunsi who attended the sessions on student government.

Florida Normal was the only colored school in the State unable to accept the invitation.

Workshop Is Success At Florida Normal

Daily World Fri. Atlanta, Ga. 7-30-48

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. — Florida Normal and Industrial College, St. Augustine, Florida ended its Child Development Workshop on July 15. Dr. Flemmie P. Kittrell, Head of the Home Economics Department of Howard University, Washington, D. C., was the director. Consultants representing the areas of Social Work, Religious Education, Elementary and Nursery School Education served with her. Rev. Edward T. Graham, Director of the Urban League Affiliated Negro Service Council and pastor of Mt. Zion Baptist Church of Miami; Mrs. Harry V. Richardson of Tuskegee Institute; Miss Alice A. Smih, Miss Catherine Hayes, and Mrs. John L. Tilley, of Florida Normal and Industrial College served with Miss Kittrell. Special emphasis was placed on the needs of the young child.

The President of the College, Dr. John L. Tilley said that there were two unusual things about the Care Workshop Group. One was that the group attending cut across educational lines limiting itself only to those who work with young children and including mothers with varying amounts of training from th community as well as those identified with the College staff, home demonstration agents, ministers, school principles, and college staff members. With Florida's present interest in kindergartens, persons whose concern was with young children whether in the home, school, church or community, seemed interested in knowing more about the child during the years before he reached school age. The other was the attendance of the teacher of the College's rural demonstration school with a group of five mothers whose children attend the school. Included in this group was the President of the P-T.A.

Field trips, demonstrations, individual and group projects were a part of the workshop activities.

Florida Normal and Industrial College has under construction on its campus a Family Life Center made possible through joint grants from the General Education Board of New York and the Northen Baptist Convention. This Center is planned to meet the needs of the community near the College. Wherever possible, the College's resources will be used to advance the Center's program. The plans provide for a community reding-room, a medical room for well-baby and other clinics, a hobby room for teen agers and a community center designed to serve as a nursery school during the day and an adult center in the late afternoon and evening hours. Atlanta, Ga.,

Specialists in Family Life Education, Home Economics and Nursery School Education have worked with the College authorities from the beginning on plans for this Center. The Child Development Workshop marks the beginning of the College's new Family Life Program. Tue. 7-30-48

Howard Graduate To Teach In France

WASHINGTON, D. C.—William C. Pritchett, who received his B. A. degree from Howard University in June, received word from Paris this week that he has received a teaching assistantship in France and will be assigned to the Ecole Normale de Garcons at Arras.

WM. PRITCHETT

Mr. Pritchett, a native of Wilmington, Del., received this award through the Committee on Franco-American Student Exchange. He will arrive in France for the Fall term, and will remain abroad for one year. His duties will consist, mainly of teaching English conversation to French students.

Mr. Pritchett made application for the French Government Teaching Assistantship to continue his education through foreign travel and study. Dr. Mercer Cook, professor of romance languages at Howard, recommended him for the position.

During his college career he majored in romance languages and was appointed a student assistant in the department shortly before he received his degree. He says he will return to the United States and work on his master's degree after the year's stay in France.

Dr. Harry Richardson New Head Of Gammon Seminary

14e(1) Atlanta Daily World Atlanta, Ga. Jul. 6-15-48

BY V. W. HODGES

Dr. Harry V. Richardson, a former Chaplain of Tuskegee Institute for the past 15 years, was the unanimous choice of the Board of Trustees for the presidency of Gammon Theological Seminary. The announcement of Dr. Richardson's election was made to the press by Dr. M. S. Davage, Secretary of the Division of Educational Institutions for Negroes in the Methodist church.

At the time of his election, Dr Richardson was on leave from Tuskegee directing a Southwide program for the training of the Negro rural ministry, a program sponsored jointly by the Home Missions Council of North America and the Phelps-Stokes Fund.

The new president-elect is a native of Jacksonville, Fla., where he received his early education. He attended Western Reserve University for his collegiate work, and the Divinity School of Harvard University for his theological trainin gfrom which institution he was graduated the two highest honors in the school. In 1945, he received the Doctor of Philosophy degree from Drew University after entering a most remarkable academic record.

Dr. Richardson has been active in interracial work in many parts of the Nation, especially in the South. He is the founder and executive secretary of a statewide interracial ministers' alliance in Alabama and serves on a number of committees seeking to improve interracial relationships. Under him the Southwide program for the trainin gof Negro rural ministers has grown into one of the most extensive ministerial training activities in America. Twenty highly train ng of Negro rural ministers work in 10 southern states offering a wide variety of services to rural pastors and congregations. And more than 1,200 pastors were registered in classes conducted by these workers during the past year, while over 400 church women were given training in improving rural worship and making the home Christian.

The new Gammon president is a frequent contributor to magazines and learned publications. He is the author of "Dark Glory," a detailed study of the church among Negroes in the rural South. He is also the author of a chapter in the book, "The Christian Way in Race Relations and is listed in Who's Who among religious leaders of America.

Dr. Richardson will assume his duties on September 1.

DR. HARRY RICHARDSON

New President Urged for Gammon Theology School

Atlanta Journal 4-20 7-11-48

NASHVILLE — "Gammon Theological Seminary is not as good now as it was 25 years ago," and should be reorganized under a new president.

This is the conclusion reached following a comprehensive survey made under the auspices of the Commission on Theological Education, the Board of Education and the Association of Methodist Theological Schools, all branches of the Methodist Church.

The survey, which covered 10 institutions, was requested by the Methodist Department of Educational Institutions.

Not Pride Inspiring

Following the study of Gammon which is located at Atlanta, the surveyors say:

"In no sense is it 'an outstanding institution for the education of the colored ministry' as the catalogue states.

"In no sense is it a theological school of which a great church can be proud—if one is at all realistic in viewing facts."

The study analyzes the institution from 10 major points of view: Administration, admissions and guidance, graduation and placement, faculty, curriculum and instruction, institutional self-study, the library, sources and number of students, the plant and finances.

Lacking in All Phases

In all phases, the study shows, Gammon is found wanting. However, although many patrons and friends suggest closing the seminary, the surveyors go on record in their report as opposed to the suspension of activities.

Discussing first the administrative set-up, they criticize the intermingling of authority between the 15-man board of trustees and the general board of education.

Commenting on the unusual number of church dignitaries on the board, they recommend that a "fair proportion" of the trustees be laymen who could spare time from their own affairs.

Ask Lay President

The same recommendation that he be a layman who is not burdened with too many other responsibilities is made regarding the presidency.

Moreover, it is suggested that the new president be a "highly gifted and educated" man who could settle down to making the seminary his life work (as the president of one colored Methodist college has so conspicuously done).

Another alternative, they say, would be to elect someone from another denomination. However, citing the strong denominational ties, they admit that that might not be too desirable.

Although the present president, Dr. John W. Haywood, is not doing so, the head of the institution is supposed to teach two hours a week in a seminar.

Regarding that, the surveyors say, "There are good reasons for doubting that in the present set-up the president should do any teaching. Full time is needed for promotion."

Hit Lack of Personnel

Also criticized is the fact that there is no dean and that the registrar, who is a full-time teacher, has to do much of the work that officer would handle.

The requirements for admission to Gammon, according to the study, are practically the same as in other Methodist seminaries. In reality, a large number of students come from non-accredited colleges, but from all outside evidence, are not required to make up deficiencies.

In addition, it is stated that it is practically impossible for students to fail, inasmuch as the requirements are too low and the grading correspondingly too high. (Only two professors' marks approach normal; four grade students so high few can fail; and one probably marks too low.)

Procedures Criticized

"On the whole, the provisions for admission, guidance and advancement in the work are deficient in number and form and very lax in application," the surveyors charge.

The placing of the number of semester hours for graduation at 94 is meaningless, for under the present set-up attainment of the necessary grades is easy, the report says.

Not only is there no systematic procedure for placement of graduates, but no trace is kept of alumni, the group disclosed.

Faculty's Morale Low

Perhaps the greatest criticism is that levied at the faculty, which the report says, "is in a rather disrupted state" and whose morale is low.

Sat. 7-17-48

There are only two full-time teachers, where there should be six and preferably eight.

"Whether viewed individually or collectively, the faculty cannot be regarded as qualified to produce capable scholars or to inspire great preaching," was the conclusion reached after visits to most of the classes.

Three members of the faculty were termed relatively good, although lacking in some respects.

The report made note of the fact that the teachers are poorly paid and that there is no provision for retirement allowance or insurance.

Curriculum Re-Study Needed

Turning to another phase of the problem, the surveyors state, "Clearly the time is overripe for a thorough re-study of the entire curriculum."

For one thing, it was revealed, there is little logic underlying the division of the courses, and as set up, the work offered "would hardly pass as good undergraduate instruction," the report says.

The chapel itself is stately, somewhat too large for the student body, but the services themselves appear inadequate, the surveyors charge.

Potentialities Neglected

Little self-analysis has been made. That which has been, the survey adds, was done primarily for a purpose, once to obtain accreditation and again in an appeal for funds.

The kind that is needed is that "which stresses especially the improvements which can be made within the available and normally prospective resources."

Turning next to the library, the surveyors state that the present building is a firetrap and is not well-arranged for maximum efficiency, that almost half of the books on hand are uncatalogued rolling Gammon, "it is difficult to make an entirely clear statement concerning the capital funds of the seminary," the report states.

Of the total endowment of $632,406.94, the board of trustees hold $354,126, which includes all of Mr. Gammon's gifts. The board of education holds approximately $276,000.

Consolidation of all funds under management of the board is rec-that its general appearance "falls far below the number that should be in training."

"It is even too small for affecting paid to it.

They pointed out that the location is expected to cost a million dollars, and urged that the estimates be made flexible so that unexpected needs which arise may be handled easily.

Because money is scarce, the group says that the less than 50 enrolled at Gammon each year ommended.

Larger Endowment Urged

According to the survey, the school's income rose from $35,024.29 in 1938-39 to an estimated $68,138 in 1946-47. The expenditure rose during that time from $35,807.08 to $67,557.

However, since the amount coming in is far below what is required, tuition accounting for only $3,392, the endowment must be greatly increased, or the church itself must supply more support.

5-Point Program

Finally calling for a long range program, the surveyors ask that the following items be included as "musts."

1. Effective transfer to a new campus in association with Atlanta University.
2. Reconstruction of a strong faculty chosen with relationship to the total curriculum needs.
3. Revision of the curriculum in the light of ministerial functions and the nature of the Christian faith.
4. Development of an adequate field program related both to the acquisition of recruits for the ministry and of funds for the expanding work of the seminary.
5. Exploration as rapidly as seems prudent of the organization of a federated theological seminary in connection with Atlanta University, in which other denominations would co-operate to create a really great center of theological education.

High Methodist Post Goes To Dr. Haywood

Dr. Charles F. Boss, Jr., executive secretary, Methodist Commission on World Peace, announced to the Jurisdictional conference in Atlanta last Friday the appointment of Dr. J. W. Haywood to the staff of the Commission. Dr. Haywood, who has been president of Gammon Seminary since 1944, will enter upon his duties with the Commission on July 1. will include visitation and work in connection with the annual conferences of the Methodist church which embraces not only the Central Jurisdiction but the total church denomination.

Dr. Boss' announcement of this high appointment was made in connection with an address before the delegates and visitors at the conference. Speaking of the great desire of the commission to secure the services of Dr. Haywood, Dr. Boss said: "For the past three years the Commission has sought to interest him in accepting a call to serve on our staff. Dr. Haywood's coming will greatly strengthen our work and enhance the cause for peace throughout the church.

Bishop Robert E. Jones, speaking on behalf of the Gammon Trustees said of President Haywood's resignation, "The Board considers the services rendered outstanding when viewed from the background of the problems your administration inherited. A siminary student body of 54 college graduates in these times when candidates for the ministry are exceedingly few, is in itself, a

A Cappella Choir Formed

Rust Music Dept. Heads Sees Dream Come True

Pittsburgh Courier Sat 11-27-48

Pittsburgh, Pa.

CHICAGO—(ANP)—Every time the a cappella choir of Rust College, a Methodist school in Mississippi, sings, its director, Miss Nathalie Doxey, is living in a dream come true."

This choir, considered one of the best college choral groups in the Nation, is the result of seventeen years planning, teaching and working for Miss Doxey. Her story is told by Olga Reed Pruitt in the Christian Advocate of Nov. 11 in an article, "The Walls Come Tumblin' Down."

ATTENDED OBERLIN

Born of parents who had been slaves, Miss Doxey has been interested in music all her life. Her parents established a home for her and her brother in Holly Springs, Miss. She began to study music seriously at Rust College and at 15 she went to Oberlin Conservatory of Music.

At Oberlin her musical world was first enlarged from the piano and spirituals of her past. Because of her increased zeal for music her parents then sent her to the American Conservatory of Music.

During these days while living at the YWCA and attending the conservatory she met Marian Anderson who was then developing her voice. They studied their music together and Miss Doxey often accompanied the great contralto.

GETS BID FROM STATION

Year by year, through an indirect technique, she improved the music talents of her students. For six years she took quartets to the Methodist meetings and they heard the Hamline singers. One year she herself studied at Hamline.

In 1931 her singers had improved so that radio Station WMC of Memphis invited them to broadcast and the Garden Club in Holly Springs asked them to sing also at the opening of ante-bellum homes for an annual pilgrimage.

Ministers throughout Mississippi and Tennessee invited her group to sing at their churches. Meanwhile, Rust College opened a music department with Miss Doxey its head.

Sat 11-27

FORM A CAPPELLA CHOIR

The Rust singing group continued to improve. By 1947 Miss Doxey felt that it had developed enough to be called the Rust College A Cappella Choir.

This sixty-five-voice unit easily performed works by Tschaikowsky, Verdi, Bach and other great composers just as did that Hamline choir sixteen years before.

Degrees In Music Will Be Offered At State In '49

Nashville Globe
Nashville Tenn
Fri 12-24-48

The introduction of a curricula leading to the Bachelor of Music Degree and the Bachelor of Arts Degree in all branches of music including music education at Tennessee A. and I. College, has been announced by Dr. Herbert F. Mells, newly appointed head of the department of music.

According to Dr. Mells students may enroll in this program beginning with the fall semester of 1949. The department offers a curricula for music majors and minors in music education, piano, voice, organ, theory and composition, and orchestral instruments.

Majors may pursue a four year course for the B. A. Degree in Music Education with a major applied in either piano, voice, organ or orchestral instruments.

In commenting upon the expansive music program President Walter S. Davis explained that for a while it was doubtful whether this phase of education would be emphasized at the College in the near future. "However," he reflected, "in view of the rich hertitage that music has played in the schools of the state, it became apparent that Tennessee State College could render further service by preparing its future educators to carry on this tradition."

A thorough and rigid study of the finest choral literature is being offered through a new music organization, the Tennessee State Meistersingers. The combination of five musical organizations including the Meistersingers, Concert Singers, Choir, Men and Women's Glee Clubs will constitute the institution's newly formed Festival Chorus. The Chorus will be under the direction of Dr. Mells.

Among the distinctions won by the Concert Singers is the fact that they have represented the state of Tennessee at two World's Fairs. They are under the direction of Mrs. Marie Brooks Strange.

Having distinguished himself as one of the country's most outstanding music educators, Dr. Mells comes to Nashville from Hampton Institute where he served as head of the music department for years. At Langston University where he was employed in a similar capacity for 12 years he built up the music department.

Crude Structure Placed on Campus In Front of Gym

The Courier

(Special to the Pittsburgh Courier)

TALLADEGA, Ala.—A flaming cross was left on the Talledega College campus during an hour of social activities Saturday evening, April 10, for students attending the Alabama Student Conference on Civil Rights which held its three-day session here April 9-11.

The crudely constructed cross wrapped in sack cloth was left by unknown individuals who stopped their car just long enough in front of Callanan gymnasium to put the cross out, pour on oil and ignite it. The burning cross was immediately put out by a student on his way to the gymnasium. (Other than this incident, there was no disturbance or threat of disturbance to the conference members or meetings.)

INTERRACIAL

The Alabama Student Conference on Civil Rights is composed of white and Negro students from Alabama College. About sixty or more visiting students from ten Alabama colleges and universities attended the three-day conference. The lack of adequate facilities limited the number of students invited from each institution.

Principal speaker at the Saturday session was Aubrey Williams of Montgomery, Ala., editor of The Southern Farmer. Mr. Williams praised President Truman for "being the first and only President ever to come out openly for the Civil Rights Bill." Mr. Williams declared that "the battle for a decent America is being and will be fought in the South and we are fighting it here more cleanly than they are anywhere else in the Nation." He predicted the FEPC and the anti-lynching bills will soon become laws.

OPENING SPEAKERS

Sat 4-24-48

After a panel discussion led by Jerome Shaw on "Our Historical Heritages," group discussions were scheduled for the entire afternoon.

William Ferguson, a Birmingham student, was elected chairman of the Alabama Student Conference on Civil Rights; Donald Myers of Talladega College, vice chairman; Barbara Jean Carter, Talladega, secretary, and Ford Petty, University of Alabama, treasurer.

Sat 4-24-48

RESOLUTIONS

The conference adopted a constitution and resolutions endorsing President Truman's Civil Rights program. The group voted to send copies of its resolutions to President Truman, Governor James E. Folsom, members of Congress and the State Legislature, the State Department of Education, the press, institutions of higher learning and interested persons.

All persons who attended the conference were housed in the college dormitories and ate in the college dining hall.

High Rate of Student 'Mortality' in Colleges Is the Subject of a Significant Study

By BENJAMIN FINE

Fifty per cent of all students who enter college or university drop out before they complete their college careers. The majority leave in their freshman or sophomore years. Millions of dollars are lost annually as a result of this academic mortality, and thousands of men and women are handicapped by being stamped as "failures" early in life.

These conclusions are reached in a penetrating two-year study of America's 655 liberal arts institutions, conducted by Dr. Archibald MacIntosh, vice president of Haverford College. Called "Behind the Academic Curtain," the report is sponsored by the Educational Research Fund of the Tuition Plan. It gives advice to students on how they can get the most out of college. Parents are taken behind the campus gates and are helped to understand the machinery that operates the largest educational system in the world.

College administrators, who will have to handle an estimated record enrollment of 2,500,000 this fall, will find much of value in the MacIntosh study. An authority in his field for the last two decades, Dr. MacIntosh maintains that the excessive number of dropouts is both "shocking" and unnecessary.

Students and their parents so often fix their attention on gaining admission to college that they fall into the error of thinking that a degree will automatically follow four years later. Actually, Dr. MacIntosh points out, nearly half the class will fall by the wayside within the first two years. While in many instances these withdrawals are unavoidable, foresight and careful planning by the college would have prevented this waste in the majority of cases.

Admissions at Fault

Academic failure was found to be the chief cause of student mortality, with financial reasons next in importance. Dr. MacIntosh blames the admission director, in part, for the large number of student failures. If every effort were made to assure the entrance of students who could successfully undertake the academic work of the college, the loss from academic failure would be considerably lowered.

How can the huge number of dropouts be reduced? More student guidance, especially during the freshman year, is offered as one answer to this serious problem. The expansion of the curriculum, the adding of new courses and the shifting of the emphasis to special training have all served to augment the need for guidance. In some of the small colleges, the study notes, there is a feeling that no kind of organized guidance is necessary. It is assumed that inasmuch as every member of the teaching staff is in close touch with the students, the faculty members are in a position to advise the students.

The danger is that guidance may become everybody's business and therefore nobody's business, says Dr. MacIntosh. In such a situation a student may flounder badly without anyone's recognizing his difficulty. However, no matter how elaborate the guidance service may be, students will gravitate toward those people in whom they have personal confidence.

An example of what can be done at a small college is illustrated by the program at Midland College, Fremont, Neb., where counseling involves a personal relationship between students and faculty. The counselor has the student in one of his courses, and confers with him periodically to assist him with his problems.

Guidance Program

President Harold Taylor of Sarah Lawrence College reports that the entire faculty is used in the guidance program, "if guidance is interpreted to mean all planning, academic and other, with both faculty and students." All students have conferences with the faculty advisers weekly or biweekly. Similarly, Swarthmore College has no formal guidance program, but students at matriculation are assigned by the deans to course advisers who are regular members of the teaching staff.

It was found that those colleges and universities with strong guidance programs had a lower student mortality rate than institutions where guidance was weak or inadequate. Many of the institutions reporting in the study indicate that better guidance would strengthen the entire academic program of the college. Several of the colleges were unable to employ a sufficient number of guidance counselors for financial reasons.

The difference in the mortality rate among the colleges was found also to depend upon size and other factors. In his study Dr. MacIntosh classified the institutions according to size. The student mortality in the different groups works out as follows:

Classification	Percentage Loss
Junior colleges	32.1
Men's colleges (over 1,000 students)	37.0
Women's colleges (under 1,000)	45.2
Women's colleges (over 1,000)	50.6
Men's colleges (under 1,000)	55.5
Coeducational institutions (over 1,000)	61.1
Coeducational institutions (under 1,000)	55.7

It is not surprising that the figure for the junior colleges should be low, Dr. MacIntosh points out, since the students are in attendance for two years only. Many of these take the junior college work as their final education and are not facing the problems connected with a four-year course. Others are preparing for further work at a different type of institution and wish to make as good a record as possible.

Selective Student Body

The figure of 37 per cent for men's colleges with a student population of over 1,000 seems rather surprising in comparison with the other groups. But the study shows that such institutions as Amherst, Colgate, Dartmouth, Harvard, Lehigh, Princeton, Union and Washington and Lee are included in this category; these colleges have a highly selective student body, since they get far more applicants than they can admit. Many students are eliminated before they enter.

At the other extreme, Dr. MacIntosh does not seem surprised that the largest percentage of loss occurs in the large coeducational institutions. The admissions policy in these institutions cannot be nearly as selective as in the smaller colleges. Moreover, the large college population presents complicated problems in the guidance and directing of the students.

Dr. MacIntosh urges the colleges and universities to examine their own policies and find out what causes this huge difference in numbers between students who are admitted and those who are graduated. Many of the students who are "flunked out," he fears, suffer a feeling of frustration, a lack of self-confidence, and a futile groping for direction. The report adds that "it is impossible to measure the loss in human potential that is implied here."

Recognition of the need for better guidance is growing. The study of college losses suggests that the expense involved in setting up a sound program of guidance will pay for itself in the more effective development of the student body. Such enlarged programs would help to assure a more useful life for many young people.

Importance of Planning

Survival in college is of paramount importance because in these days of overcrowding the odds are heavily against a student's getting a second chance. The prospective college student should begin his planning for a college education while still in high school, Dr. MacIntosh stresses. From the outset the boy or girl who wants to go to college must realize that admission and successful performance after admission demand positive and intelligent action on the student's part.

In thinking about his future the student should be able to work out some idea of his general academic direction. He ought to be able to differentiate between a real desire for a college education and a mere drifting with the tide.

Here is a significant study that throws light on an important phase of college life. Too many persons, educators as well as parents, are more concerned with the admission of students into college than in keeping them there once they are enrolled. It is appalling to find that half of the students who will enter our colleges and universities this month will fail to complete their courses. This study, which is to be published soon by Harper's, will make a valuable contribution in the field of higher education. It is a thoughtful, provocative analysis of a highly essential although commonly neglected phase of college life.

College Heads At Inauguration Of Eisenhower

By GLADYS P. GRAHAM

NEW YORK — (ANP) — College presidents of America's leading Negro colleges were present at the inauguration of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as president of Columbia university, held in the warm sun at South Court, Morningside Heights last week.

Delegates from 310 American universities, 36 foreign institutions and 34 learned societies participated in the ceremony. Thousands of people watched.

Among Negro educators attending the installation program were:

Dr. Horace Mann Bond, president, Lincoln university (Pa.); Dr. Rufus Early Clement, Atlanta university; Dr. Adam Daniel Beittel, Talladega college; Dr. Martin Jenkins, president, Morgan State college; Dr. Mordecai Wyatt Johnson, Howard university, and Dr. Charles Spurgeon Johnson, Fisk university.

Dr. Johnson is the first Negro president of Fisk. Last June he was granted an honorary doctor of letters degree (honoris causa) from Columbia.

Two Columbia students, Marvin Cawthorne, Toledo, O., and Kenneth Jenkins were members of the university choir directed by Dr. Lowell Beverage. Cawthorn is a music major. Jenkins, a scholarship student, is majoring in English.

University Women To Appeal Bias Case

Association Seeks to Oust Unit Barring Negro

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12 (UP) —The American Association of University Women announced today it will appeal a court ruling which kept it from expelling its Washington chapter in a dispute over racial discrimination. The A. A. U. W. board of directors hinted that it also will seek revision of the association's by-laws to prevent repetition of the squabble which began in 1946 when the local chapter refused to accept a Negro woman who was a member of the national A. A. U. W. The national association sharply reprimanded the Washingtonians and said the by-laws provided only an educational requirement for membership.

When the deadlock continued into this year, the national association moved to expel the Washington chapter. The latter group forestalled the action by going into court here for an injunction. On July 20, Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws, of the District Court of the District of Columbia, ruled in favor of the Washington chapter. He said the A. A. U. W. couldn't expel it over the issue unless it changed its by-laws.

Television Institute Fails To Win Certification Approval

Expert training in the fields of radio-repair, radio-services, radar, refrigeration, television, and allied sciences are available at the Midway Television Institute, 2210 Auburn Avenue, N. E., but Negro veterans are unable to take advantage of it. Prime reason is the failure of the institution to gain accrediting from the Veterans Educational Council of Georgia, although no similar training is available in this area with the exception of Georgia Tech.

The Midway Television Institute of Georgia, Inc., received its charter in the summer of 1947. It immediately thereafter made application for approval of training for veterans. When an inspection was made early in August the veterans council took no action upon the request. That was due to the fact that the school was not then in operation.

Yet, this was not the end to the school's comedy of errors, runaround in its labor for accrediting. Classes were actually begun on September 22, 1947. While the school was in session, the school was again examined by the Veterans Council. The authorities of the school were given the impression then that the teaching staff, equipment, and other physical surroundings were such as to justify approval, but alas this was not so.

Undaunted the Institute re-entered its application for recognition during November, 1947. The brief pointed out the difficulty experienced by Negro veterans in the South getting this type of training. However, no meeting of the Council was held in November. Yet, on December 3, 1947, a Council meeting was held at which time the application was again disapproved.

The Veterans Educational Council did send along with the notice of disapproval a set of standards which was the first of the kind ever made available to the authorities of the school.

Among the specific requirement set out in the table of standards are:

1. There must be 50 square feet of floor space for each student.
2. One instructor may not teach more than 25 students in one class session.
3. The premises must be such as will be approved by health officials, building inspectors, and the fire department of the city.
4. The instructor must be such as will meet the requirements of Educational Council.

Equal Education In Oklahoma

The clear and ringing unanimous decision handed down this week by the United States Supreme Court, in which the State of Oklahoma was ordered to make immediate provisions for the equal educational opportunities for Negro applicants seeking to study law, lays the foundations upon which Negroes in other states of separate and unequal status may seek relief.

Under the ruling, the State of Oklahoma is permitted to make one of four choices:

"It may have segregated law schools. It may have segregated instructions in the University of Oklahoma. It may have temporary mixed instruction in the University of Oklahoma until a separate institution is established, or it may have mixed instruction."

The time is at hand for all the southern states to meet these simple tests of fairness and justice to the Negro without a hint of force or compulsion from any source, save the hearts of those who administer the funds. A study of equal but separate education in the South the current Southern Patriot finds: That Alabama spent in 1944-45 $56.31 per white pupil and $22.85 per Negro pupil. The value of per pupil enrolled was $143 for white and $29 for Negro. The average salaries of white elemetary teachers was $1,031 and $639 for Negro teachers;, average salaries of high school teachers were $1,340 white, $858 Negro. The State (Mississippi) appropriated $754,414 for higher education for whites and $285,238 for Negroes.

Louisiana in 1944-45 spent $30.10 per Negro pupil enrolled, against $100.10 for white. Negroes received 17.6 per cent of the total spent, although they comprise 36 per cent of the population Negro Teachers received an average of $810.98; white $1,683.23. Of the white children enrolled 34_9 per cent were transported; 3.6 Negro. This disproportionate situation can be multiplied indefinitely throughout the States, which hide behind the excuse of 'separate but equal' accomodations between whites and Negroes. It is the very heart at which the U. S. Supreme Court decision in the Oklahoma case strikes.

Let all of the other states set about correcting these conditions here and now, since it will only be a matter of days or months before other Negro applicants will seek to gain admission into law schools and other schools maintained under state tax-supported direction.

The Negro's Terms

From New York Tribune

A bold piece of advice is delivered to the presidents of seventeen Negro land grant colleges convened in Washington. A carefully report by a committee of lawyers states that segregation in education is discriminatory and therefore unconstitutional. And no degree of agreement or compromise should be permitted. This is full demand for abolition of segregation, the absolute contradiction of the doctrine of gradualism in the improvement of Negro life. It is familiar through repetition in our part of the world, but the ideas of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People hardly pass with equal ease in the South. Thus the mere fact that seventeen Negro college presidents, heading state-supported institutions enduring under the official blessing of segregation statutes, accord friendly reception to such an all-out proposition is a notable development. The opinions of these educators may well lack practical force on their home terrain, but there is courage involved here. Any Negro teacher who rises to condemn the system under which he operates as completely wrong is attacking from within. The aroused Negro ,conscious where he is heading, is in the end the most effective foe of segregation.

While the pattern of segregation in education, at least in graduate and professional training, has suffered several interesting dents in recent months, the total advance is far from great. The rule of "separate but equal" is still generally followed, although it is under increasingly sharp attack. The statement is being constantly hammered that separate schools cannot be equal, that the entire premise of segregation is a violation of equality. Such sturdy insistence is to be admired, even though the ultimate agreement has an aggravating habit of receding into the distance. But the immediately interesting point is that the Negro is laying down the terms, and almost entirely by the force of his own efforts the Negro is steadily speaking in more compelling tones.

111 of the 164 Catholic Colleges Bar No Students

Priest's Study Shows Adjustment of Average Person in Average School Made 'Painlessly'

By JAMES L. HICKS

NEW YORK—(NNPA)—Of the 164 Catholic institutions of higher learning in this country, 111 accept colored students without reservations, 7 offer them "partial opportunities" of education, and 22 refuse to accept them under any circumstances.

These findings are the result of a study of "Catholic Colleges and the Colored Student" made by the Rev. Richard J. Roche, a Catholic priest, who submitted the study as a thesis for his doctorate degree at Catholic University in Washington.

In making the study, Father Roche received responses from 154 of the 164 Catholic colleges he queried. Of the replies received, 14 could not be classified.

Adjust Satisfactorily

As a result of his study Father Roche concluded that "The adjustment of the average colored student in the average Catholic college can be accomplished satisfactorily, without serious results to either college or student."

Father Roche found that in the East 51 of 55 schools said they had no restrictions on colored students; one school of the 13 queried in the South said it had no restrictive policy; 37 out of 45 in the Midwest disclaimed restrictions.

Seventeen of 21 in the West said they have no restrictions; and 6 out of 19 schools in Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, West Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia said they do not discriminate against colored students.

Counting The Graduates

Ohio American Baltimore Md.

He was James Russwurm who became the first of our college graduates when he received a degree from Bowdoin College in Maine 122 years ago. Today, nearly a century and a quarter after John Russwurm's debut, it is safe to estimate that about 10,000 tan Americans received degrees from white and colored colleges and universities in this country during June, 1948.

That figure is considerably larger than what Dr. Charles S. Johnson, now president of Fisk University, expected when he published "The Negro College Graduate" in 1938.

He predicted then that, roughly speaking, 4,900 graduates of colored colleges might be expected in 1950 and 369 from white colleges, a total of 5,268. Another estimate by Dr. Johnson anticipated between 5,000 and 6,000 graduates from our institutions in 1950 more than twice the number ever graduated by them up through 1936. Baltimore Md.

Actually, Dr. Johnson's first figures were probably equalled if not topped as early as 1946 when over 4,500 bachelor's degrees were granted in colored colleges alone. In 1950 the number is likely to be over 15,000. Sat. 6-26-48

Chief reason for the miscalculation, of course was the unforseen onset of World War II and the influx of veterans studying under the GI Bill who now make up approximately three-fifths of our student populations, especially in the undergraduate schools.

They are mainly responsible for the fact that many institutions this year reported the largest graduating classes in their respective histories.

Howard University, for instance, conferred degrees upon 661 graduates, A. and T. College, 375; Virginia State, 302; Florida A. and M. 230; North Carolina College 220; Johnson C. Smith, 201; Hampton, 185; Morgan, 180; Virginia Union, 173; Fisk, 167; Fayetteville Teachers College, 159; West Virginia State, 115; Shaw, 100.

This list of institutions, though far from complete, shows the progress made in higher education since the time of John Russwurm, who incidentally, became one of the founders of our first newspaper, Freedom's Journal. Sat. 6-26-48

In his day there were no colleges at all for colored and because of racial prejudice, his contemporary, John McCune Smith, was forced to travel to Scotland to obtain the medical education which qualified him to become the first professional graduate. 6-26-48

There are now several professional schools among the institutions of higher learning for members of the race.

Seventeen of these institutions provide graduate offerings, enrolling a total of 970 advanced students in 1947-48. They conferred 311 advanced degrees in 1946, 352 in 1947.

But John Russwurm and the others who immediately followed his example were lonely pioneers, just about a century ago.

Whe nthe Civil War broke out, in 1860, there were 28 graduates of recognized institutions. And between 1826 and 1876 the grand total of holders of bachelor's masters, doctor's and professional degrees amounted to only 314.

There was, however, a steady rise in the number of graduates after the turn of the century, but a marked increase did not appear until the twenties. Between 1920 and 1935 the number of graduates doubled and the advance since then has rapidly accelerated.

Futhermore, although veterans have swelled the college rolls considerably. and although a drop may be expected after the next four years, graduation classes will undoubtedly continue to be much greater than they have been in the past.

For even before the passing of the GI Bill, registration in our colleges had hit a new high. In 1941, before the war,, the fall enrollments amounted to over 40 000 students, exclusive of men and women studying at white institutions.

Meet Challenge Of Democracy

The doors of equality and democracy, which have been gradually opening at Washington University, swung further ajar Tuesday. The Graduate School of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences were added to the School of Medicine and the Graduate School of Social Work in removing the restriction on qualified Negro applicants. Announcement of the latest action of the university was made by Chancellor Arthur H. Compton. Authorization was given by the Board of Directors.

Dean Carl Tolman of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences indicated that he felt the action was a long step in the right direction. He said he felt that interracial education is a matter of enlightment and acquainting the school with the workability of races attending classes together.

The dean, who holds a Bachelor of Arts degree from the U. of British Columbia and A.M. and Ph.D. degrees from Yale pointed out that Chinese and Asiatic students have been admitted to the graduate school for some time. "It seemed to me completely out of place to bar students of one particular color, and I felt that graduate schools, especially ought to be above that sort of consideration," he stated. 5-14-48

The head of the liberal arts college conducted a survey of the matter of mixed education in the school with the heads of departments and found unanimous approval. He then made a recomendation to the central administration of the university who conveyed it to the directors.

"Henceforth, anyone can be considered for admission to the school irrespective of race, creed or color," he said. "Admission have always been on an individual basis and all applicants must meet the same standards of ad

Gov. Laney said that he could "see no grounds for allowing any Negro" to enter the school "at this time." On a "good will" tour of the west coast, he said:

"Hundreds of white boys who tried to get into the medical school before, were told they couldn't get in because they lacked room. If we had a medical school big enough to accommodate everybody, then the board's action would have been justified.

"The point is they pushed white boys aside for this Negro. We have a subsidy for Negroes who want to go to a school of this kind, but we do not provide a subsidy for white boys and girls. I don't think this Negro is any better than the white boys who were out this year."

I know Miss Irby. We are both graduates of Knoxville College Nurse Training School. Her entrance in the medical school has not caused the comment and excitement that the Kentucky law student has caused.

I have not been able to understand a lot about Kentucky. We Negroes won't hurt associates any more by studying in school with them than we would working in their homes, nine times out of ten not as much, as they might be associating with a different type of Negro. I have gone to school with white students, have been taught by white teachers, worked with white doctors in white hospitals as well as in Negro hospitals and with Negro doctors and I have never heard of my contaminating anyone because I am a Negro. I even had one year's training in a city hospital in the South along with the white nurses as early as 1912. Kentucky is just now waking up to that point after the pulling of many political strings.

Louisville Courier

Many young Negroes just like Miss Irby only want a fair chance to better their conditions in the state they call home without being embarrassed and made a political football. The Day Law is as antiquated as the ox and cart would be. All we want is to be treated as American citizens, a chance to live a normal life in the land that our fathers, sons or brothers fought for.

I can understand how Miss Irby felt when she started to school this fall in Little Rock. Just as I felt on my first case in a private hospital in the South for all white patients and all white nurses. The nurse wanted to know what to do with me. The superintendent, being broadminded, told her to just let me alone. I was capable and had the same training she had and could take care of my patient as well as she could; any nurse coming from Knoxville College with the recommendation I had need not be questioned. I had no trouble in the Meridian Sanitorium after that and never worked with a better group of nurses. That was in 1916. So all we need is a chance and someone to speak as this superintendent did.

Methodists Combine Two Texas Colleges

(Special to The Courier)

AUSTIN, Tex.—Two of America's strongest Methodist schools—Wiley College at Marshall, Tex., first Negro college organized west of the Mississippi River, and Samuel Huston College here—were merged last week in unanimous action by trustees of both institutions.

The announcement was made in Nashville, Tenn., by Dr. Matthew S. Davage, head of the Department of Institutions of the Methodist Church, who last year came to Marshall to intervene when the Wiley College campus was rocked by student strikes and demonstrations. The merger was predicted last week by The Pittsburgh Courier.

It is expected that the plant of the merged schools will be located here. The two schools have a combined enrollment of approximately 1,400 students, with an annual budget of some $700,000. Both schools are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Samuel Huston is the youngest Methodist school, having been founded in 1900.

Sat 6-12-48

The merger is expected to put an end to strife previously existing at Wiley which saw last week the resignation of President E. C. McLeod and the dismissal of Fred T. Long, athletic director of Wiley for twenty-five years.

Africans Enrolled In American Colleges Show Marked Increase

CHICAGO, Ill. — (ANP) — Negro colleges and universities and American educational institutions generally for the first time in history are opening their doors to large numbers of Africans.

In 59 different American colleges and universities 154 students from Africa were registered in 1947 as contrasted with 110 last year. The largest increases have been in students from the West African countries (111 out of the total of 154 were from West Africa), and Ethiopia (17 students). There are no students from British East Africa in American schools and a very limited number from French, Belgium, and Portuguese Africa, so far as the U. S. Department of Education can determine at this time. Of the 30 white students 24 came from the Union of South Africa.

EQUALLY DIVIDED

Twenty-nine of the 154 were registered at non-accredited institutions. Students were about equally divided between northern and southern schools. Eighty-five were enrolled in purely Negro institutions. Eighteen were studying at larger universities such as Harvard, Princeton, Columbia, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the University of Michigan, etc.

Medicine and dentistry competed with liberal arts for the highest registry of students, although if the natural sciences and engineering are grouped together, an equal number of students are found in these fields. Eight only were registered in agriculture but none was found preparing for work in the social service fields.

LONG RANGE PLANS

An indication of Liberia's long range plans for the building of the country was revealed by the fields of study in which the 26 Liberian students were enrolled. Four were studying medicine; 2, civil engineering; 6, agriculture and forestry; 2, mining and engineering and the others were distributed in the fields of sociology, liberal arts, home economics, library science, and physical education . As with the students from Ethiopia, most of the students from Liberia were on Liberian government scholarships.

Oklahoma Still Biased In Schools

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.— (NNPA)— Although inequalities in the educational facilities have kept the State of Oklahoma in continuous turmoil for more than three years, the budget for twenty-three educational institutions for the year 1949-50 discloses no intention on the part of the state regents for higher education to equalize facilities.

Of a total of $15,293,161 asked for by the regents, Langston University would get only $547,260, of which $422,060 would came from the State and $125, 200 would come from other sources.

Knoxville College Gets $3,700 Fund For Improvements

Knoxville, (Atlas News Service)—Knoxville College, one of the 32 colleges participating in the United Negro College Fund, Inc., has raised about $3700 on a goal of $5,000 according to Dr. J. Reed Miller president.

Knoxville College is the only four-year Negro college in East Tennessee. Money received from the fund will be used for improvement to buildings, and for salaries and library equipment.

The 1949 United Negro College Fund will begin in April. Four Tennessee colleges are affected—Knoxville College, Fisk University at Nashville, Lane College at Jackson and LeMoyne College at Memphis.

White Daily Believes Work, If Equal; Says Facilities An Injustice

LITTLE ROCK, — (ANP) — "The principle of racial segregation can be successfully defended only when it can be demonstrated that it works no injustice upon those affected by it," according to an editorial opinion in the Arkansas Gazette, white daily, here last week. The editorial, entitled "Separate But Unequal," was tracing the effectiveness of the segregation policy in the state, which it declared to work "reasonably well in most instances, although far from perfect."

However, the paper pointed out that the south's traditionally recognized principle of proviling "separate but equal public facilities for the two races," fell down completely in one instance "to the detriment of hundreds of our Negro citizens."

This instance took place in West Memphis, where the population is almost equally divided between Negroes and whites. At the beginning of the current school year, 840 white students began using a completely new high school, an old but refurnished grade school, a new athletic field and an imvroved school bus system.

Contrasted to this, 400 of the potential 1,000 Negro students in the city began their school year in a 40 by 60 foot auditorium of a church and in an 18 by 20 foot church kitchen, without any desks, blackboards or teaching aids of any kind. The city has had no Negro school building since a 10-room frame structure burned last November. The classes in the church building were instituted as an an emergency measure, but still go on although the principal has repeatedly stated that "under these conditions no real schooling is possible."

Grades one to seven use the auditorium; while the eighth to 12th grades meet in the church kitchen.

Commenting on this state of affairs, the editorial said, "That is a great and obvious injustice. It comes at a time when the white school system was being vastly improved at a cost of many thousands of dollars. The school board is the same body that allowed another school term to get under way without making even minimum provision for the Negro students under its jurisdiction."

The editorial stated that this was not a "typical" example of the public school system in the state, but believed it bad enough to warrant increased activity by proponents of federal civil rights legislation to stamp out these practices.

"We can defend segregation," the editorial declared, "but we cannot defend the injustice that result from it when public officials neglect their simple duty.

"There is only one way to counteract the mounting pressure for passage of federal legislation the south finds so objectionable. We must demonstrate, as West Memphis has so far failed to do, that we accept our full responsibility toward our Negro children and are prepared to discharge it.

Federal Office Revives Advisory Committee, Lapsed in War

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25 (AP).— The Office of Education revived its National Advisory Committee on the Education of Negroes today. The committee, organized in 1938 to advise the office on Negro problems, was allowed to lapse during the war when travel restrictions limited its activity. Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator, said Dr. Ambrose Caliver, Office of Education specialist for higher education of Negroes, again will direct the committee's activities. Acting Commissioner of Education Rall I. Grigsby said the twenty-six committee members were chosen from more than seventy candidates nominated by major educational associations.

Colored people, he says, prefer attending their own schools.

Majority Of Dixie Faculties Favors Dropping Racial Bars

RICHMOND, VA., Nov. 21.— (AP) — A survey released today shows that faculty members in a majority of Southern universities favor removal of racial bars in graduate and professional schools.

The survey was conducted by the Southern Conference Educational Fund and ballots were mailed to every faculty member in 11 Southern state universities, Aubrey Williams, of Montgomery, Ala., president of the organization, said.

Williams, former National Youth Administration head and now editor of the Southern Farmer, in reporting the survey, said:

"The commonly held attitudes toward Negroes are breaking down. There is strong and unmistakable evidence of a growing support in the South for making the Negro a part of the citizenship of the nation.

"It is gratifying to see this fine reaction of our educational leaders."

The report was presented by Dr. James A. Dombrowski, of New Orleans, director of the Southern Conference Educational Fund.

On the basis of replies received, Williams said, 69 per cent of the university faculty members favored opening the doors of all segregated regional schools for Negroes as proposed by the Southern Governors Conference. Williams said, favored other plans of graduate schools to Negroes without segregation when the desired courses are not offered by a state-supported institution for Negroes.

This plan already has been adopted by the University of Maryland law school and the University of Arkansas medical school, he said.

5 Additional Students Here From Africa

NEW YORK (ANP) — The American Council on African Education announces the arrival of five more African students to study in American universities under the council's scholarship scheme. The students, whose ages average 25, are. Ezirim Ezimako, Ude Okoye, Ezendu Okeke, Chukwuemeka Okeke and Austin A. Njakar.

Ezimako, Okoye and Okeke have registered with Florida Normal and Industrial College, St. Augustine where they will study education, engineering and industrial arts respectively. Chukwuemeka Okoye is at Bethune-Cookman College, Daytona Beach, to study political science. Austin Njakar, who will study economics, awaits assignment.

150 Scholarships

The ACAE scholarship students now number 35 in this country instead of 25 as was planned originally. The organization has launched a 1948-1949 program to enable 100 more students to come here within this period.

The council's president, Prince A. A. Nwafor Orizu, has been touring the country for the past six weeks.

Over 150 scholarships have been made available to the council by various institutions.

NEGRO EDUCATION

During the past week the boards of trustees of Hampton Institute, Va., and Tuskegee Institute, Ala., have held meetings in New York, and the heads of the seventeen Negro land-grant colleges of the Southern and Border States have convened in Washington, presumably about finances and the aims and purposes of these worthy schools in the present-day world. It is safe to say that the major concern of all these bodies was the social and economic welfare of the vast majority of the nation's Negro population for whom they provide leadership.

The land-grant group expressed awareness of the growing mechanization of the Southern farms and the rapid industrialization of many sections of the South. One speaker for the land-grant group stressed the need of a higher quality of industrial training for Negro youth, and another, noting the slow but steady approach of the period of history when cotton will be handled mainly if not wholly by machinery, said that the white sharecropper during the last fifteen years has been disappearing from the South at a more rapid rate than the Negro share-cropper.

The tasks confronting the private colleges like Hampton and Tuskegee, besides the problem of raising finances in an age when large gifts are less frequent for Negro education, will be to strike a balance between the old-type "industrial school," which was restricted almost wholly to teaching handicrafts, and the liberal arts college, which stresses social inquiry without arriving at a ready answer to the principal problems of the day. The Negro colleges without money cannot prepare a scientist. Without close contact with modern industry, they cannot train technicians for an atomic age. What will be their "middle ground," and how will they reach it?

There has never been for the people of the United States a greater moral challenge than the cause of Negro education. The North and the South must widen the scope of their charities to improve the opportunities for Negro youth. The North, if for nothing more than its own selfish interests, must increase the educational opportunities for those who have long been moving into the industrial cities of this area. From the social and religious side of the question, the nation should be aroused to a demonstration that democracy can be made to work for all its people.

Thirty Colored Students Attended N. C. Assembly

RALEIGH, N. C—Around thirty Negro students participated here last week in the 11th annual Student Legislative Assembly at the State Capitol. Institutions they represented were: Shaw University, St. Augustine's College, Johnson C. Smith University, and North Carolina College.

Getting recognition in both houses of the mock legislature, Negroes were chosen for the post of speaker pro tem in the Senate and the House. The Senate chose John Kelly of Raeford, a student at A. and T. College, and House members elected Thomas Byers, a student at Johnson C. Smith University.

NEGRO DELEGATES

The Negro delegates in the House were beaten in their effort to attach an amendment to a bill which would establish graduate and professional schools for Negroes.

Both Houses passed the measure but the Negro delegates sought to inject an amendment which would have permitted Negro students to attend all state schools. In the House they voted in a block against the bill which passed by a 63-39 vote.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—For several years prior to 1945, Lorenzo R. Gresham had the idea of establishing a radio-television school. During the latter part of 1945 this idea was brought very forcibly to his mind due to the fact that many Negro servicemen were returning from the service and wanted to learn radio and television but did not have a place in Washington to take such a course.

College Presidents Urge Students to Seek Scholarships

New York—Presidents of seven Iowa colleges have joined the presidents of 172 leading colleges who have issued a call to Negro students to apply for ten thousand scholarships. These presidents comprise the Board of College Scholarship Fund for Negro Students.

The Fund helps Negro students to finance their education at 968 inter-racial, non-segregated institutions. According to Fund officials, few Negro students realize that thousands of scholarships are available to them.

Send Names

Students are urged to send their names and addresses to the College Scholarship Fund for Negro Students, Room 462, 360 West 122nd street, New York 27, N. Y. The Fund is supported by voluntary contributions and therefore offers its services free of charge.

Iowa college presidents represented on the Board include Dr. Russell D. Cole, Cornell College, Mount Vernon; Dr. Charles E. Friley, Iowa State College, Ames; Dr. Virgil M. Hancher, State University of Iowa, Iowa City; Dr. Byron S. Hollinshead, Coe College, Cedar Rapids; Dr. McLeod M. Pearce, Geneva College, Beaver Falls; Dr. Samuel N. Stevens, Grinnell College; and Dr. Edwin E. Voigt, Simpson College, Indianola.

'Separate-Equal' Hoax Is Perfect Contempt Set-Up

The Black Dispatch
Oklahoma City, Okla.

"Those state regent fellows sure set it up for the NAACP this time," expressed an East Second street business man Sunday in commenting on the latest announced move of the Board of Regents for Higher Education, barring the entry of Mrs. Ada Lois Fisher from the Oklahoma University School of Law.

Mrs. Fisher, a Langston honor graduate, attempted to enroll at OU in January 1946 and the NAACP took up her battle following admittance refusal, and carried her case through Oklahoma's district courts, the state supreme court and finally to the highest tribunal at Washington, which recently rendered an unprecedented mandate, ordering the state to enroll the young woman at the time any other student is enrolled. Sat. 1-31-48

The state board of regents in special session hastily formulated plans to establish a jim crow law school on the fourth floor of the State Capitol building in Oklahoma City in time for January 26 second semester enrollment, and announced on Saturday the appointment of Atty. Jerome Hemry, Oklahoma City, as dean at a salary of $6,000 per annum; Former Attorney General Randall S. Cobb, professor, at $5,000 per year, and Arthur Ellsworth, young city attorney, as professor at $4,500 per year, all white.

The "quickie," Houdini-like law school creation was made a division of non-accredited Langston university, state supported Negro institution, that for more than a decade has virtually begged for salary appropriations similar to those of the new law faculty that would attract instructors of the highest literary attainment to head the school's several departments.

Wide comment received by this paper brand the higher education leaders' latest move as the "height of nonsense," considering Langston's many years tradition as the champion "political football" of all jim crow state institutions, resulting in a run-down eye-sore of a school and not accredited by any rating agency in the nation other than the Oklahoma board of education. During the present Turner administration a non-high school graduate was appointed to the faculty as public relations director.

Although Langston has miraculously developed strong athletic teams, its students cannot earn the physical education degree issued by this state, due to lack of certain facilities required by the Oklahoma Board of Regents.

Miss Sipuel is quoted as having no thought of entering the newly created law school, supposedly equal in every respect to the 40-year-old law program provided by the state for white students at Norman. Sat. 1-31-48

A new legal battle is expected following hearing from Mrs. Fisher's application made at Norman on Monday.

State University Bill Also Approved

ALBANY (NNPA) — The State Assembly last Thursday passed and sent to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey the university bill providing for eventual expenditure of $200,000,000 for construction of facilities for a new State university. Sat 3-20-48

Also sent to the governor was the companion Quinn-Olifee bill, outlawing racial discrimination in private non-sectarian colleges, passed also last Thursday with only one negative vote.

In a joint statement, Dr. Frank D. Fackentahl, acting president of Columbia University, and Dr. Everett Case, president of Colgate University, representing the Association of Colleges and Universities of the State of New York, expressed their "cordial support" of the Quinn-Olifee bill.

Report More Africans Coming to America For College Entrance

The Black Dispatch
Oklahoma City

CHICAGO, — (ANP) — Negro colleges and universities and American educational institutions generally for the first time in history are opening their doors to large numbers of Africans.

In 59 different American colleges and universities, 154 students from Africa were registered in 1947 as contrasted with 110 last year. The largest increases have been in students from the West African countries (111 out of the total of 154 were from West Africa), and Ethiopia (17 students). There are no students from British East Africa in American schools and a very limited number from French, Belgium, and Portuguese Africa, so far as the U. S. State department can determine at this time. Of the 30 white students 24 came from the Union of South Africa. Okla.

Twenty-nine of the 154 were registered at non-accredited institutions. Students were about equally divided between northern and southern schools. Eighty-five were enrolled in purely Negro institutions. Eighteen were studying at larger universities such as Harvard, Princeton, Columbia, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the University of Michigan, etc. Sat. 1-31-48

Medicine and dentistry competed with liberal arts for the highest registry of students, although if the natural sciences and engineering are grouped together, an equal number of students are found in these fields. Eight only were registered in agriculture but none were found who were preparing for work in the social service fields.

An indication of Liberia's long range plans for the building of the country was revealed by the fields of study in which the 26 Liberian students were enrolled. Four were studying medicine; 2, civil engineering; 6, agriculture and forestry; 2, mining and engineering, and the others were distributed in the fields of sociology, liberal arts, home economics, library science, and physical education. As with the students from Ethiopia, most of the students from Liberia were on Liberian government scholarships.

Kittrell Closed, Too Few Students

KITTRELL, Ky. (ANP) — Kittrell College failed to join other institutions of higher learning in opening up its 1948 fall term of operation here last week, and may remain closed until the fall of next year.

The resumption of the fall term was withheld primarily because the student enrollment was not up to levels hoped for, and not sufficient to justify the program. In addition the school's buildings are in need of repair and several thousands of dollars will be needed to effect renovations.

School officials hope that the repairing and renovations can be completed by next fall, so that it may again resume operations.

THE TRUTH ABOUT KITTRELL COLLEGE

Christian Record

By Dean Evans D. Brown

Truth is stranger than fiction. Let us give the general church as well as the general public the whole truth about Kittrell College; so that it might replace some of the pure fiction published during the last few years.

It is quite true that Kittrell College is a church school under the immediate supervision and control of the 2nd Episcopal District of the African Methodist Church. The institution is 62 years old, having been established in 1885 by the North Carolina Annual Conference.

Yes, indeed it is true. Kittrell was one of the first colleges below the Mason and Dixon Line to receive an adequate endowment whose value remains until this hour. Let the general church lift up a glad heart to the imperishable memory of the name; the late JOHN R. HAWKINS.

Besides the endowment, Kittrell has great and bountiful posessions: more than 300 acres of rich, fertile, and productive land—a veritable silver, gold, and diamond mine ("If the general church only knew how to dig this rich gold mine and could somehow be made to see the wisdom of its potential possibilities."); it has hundred of thousands of dollars worth of great spacious school buildings and equipment.

Let us tell the whole truth; for part of it will not suffice. With respect to this question of the chairmanship of the Trustee Board of Kittrell College (this thing that the general church rightly calls: "EPISCOPAL SUPERVISION", it is quite true and it ought to be quite sufficient to declare that whenever a Bishop's administration of affairs has been put through an acid test and found

Tillotson Home Econ. Among Best

AUSTIN, Tex.—Tillotson College boasts one of the best home economics departments in the Southwest. Special emphasis is placed on this field at Tillotson. Large numbers of girls register for this course bent not merely on a diploma and a means of livelihood, but also on mastering the art of home-making so that its major benefits may be made available to their own people in the South.

This course grants the Smith-Hughes certificate. The practice home, where groups of six students in the department live for stated periods and learn through the laboratory method the science of home-making and home-economy, sets a pattern for a better home life.

3 New Suits Aid Okla. School Fight

Facilities of 3 Varied Fields Asked in Move

NORMAN, Okla. — Determined to keep up the fight for equal educational opportunities, in the South, three more persons have filed suit in District Court here demanding the right to be admitted to the all-white University of Oklahoma.

Those who filed are:

G. W. McLaurin, 55, who wants to take a doctor's degree in school administration; Mrs. Mauderie Hancock-Wilson, who seeks a master's degre in social work, and Miss Helen M. Holmes, who wants a master's in Commerical education.

While there is no colored State school offering these subjects, the white university offers graduate work in 70 fields.

Refused Admittance

Before filing the lawsuit, the three tried to enroll at the State University, but were refused. McLaurin is a retired professor.

Since the U.S. Supreme Court in January ruled that a State must offer colored students equal facilities in graduate work, Southern States have been concerned over the fact that they would seek facilities in various fields not available to them in their states.

This is the weapon now being used.

Although another Supreme Court decision may be necessary to settle the question once and for all, Southern lawyers and educators have concluded that:

Colored students must be admitted to white graduate schools or equal graduate schools for colored students in complete duplication of white schools must be built.

Bethune-Cookman Remembers 1923

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla.—Last week's commencement exercises at Bethune-Cookman College, which was sparked by addresses from Dr. Arthur Riggs Charlesworth, pastor, First Methodist Church, Deland, Fla., and the Hon. Hobson R. Reynolds of Philadelphia, brought stories and memories of the college's founding and early years.

Given an "A" rating in January by the Southern Association, the college has risen steadily since it evolved from a merger in 1923 of two Florida educational institutions —Cookman Institute of Jacksonville and Daytona Normal and Industrial Institute of Daytona. Cookman College was founded in 1872 by the Rev. D. S. B. Darnell as the first institution for higher education of Negroes in the State of Florida. Daytona Normal was founded in 1904 by Mary McLeod Bethune to provide industrial and literary training for girls on the elementary and high school level.

DUAL PROGRAM

For thirteen years the school pursued the dual program of high school and junior college work. In 1936 the high school department was discontinued.

The institution became a senior college in 1946, accredited by the State Department of Education and the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Samuel Huston, Wiley Merger Contemplated

Student demonstrations, charges and counter-charges of "inefficiency," "family politics," and mistreatment rocked several Southern colleges last week. At two of them—Lane College and turmoil-harassed Wiley College in Texas — the presidents resigned. Alcorn A. and M. College was the scene of multiple faculty dismissals and its president was lambasted by deposed instructors.

(Special to The Courier)

MARSHALL, Texas—South Carolina-born Dr. E. C. McLeod, graduate of Harvard and Boston universities, resigned Saturday as president of Wiley College. His resignation, which was accepted by the board of trustees, climaxed the sensational 1947 student strike at the Methodist institution.

At the time the resignation was accepted, it was reported that a merger of Wiley with Samuel Huston College, Austin, Tex., is being contemplated.

His resignation becomes effective Sept. 1, 1948.

CHANGES NECESSARY

In resigning Dr. McLeod wrote the board that he felt that certain changes were necessary in the administration of the institution's affairs, in educational standards and procedures, in ethical standards and social practices—both among staff members and students. These changes, he said, must be immediate.

"It is my firm conviction that these needed changes can be hastened by a shift at the head of the administration. To simplify the task of the board of trustees on this point, I hereby tender my resignation as President of Wiley College to become effective Sept. 1, 1948," he wrote.

Dr. McLeod's resignation was demanded by the student body when it went on strike just before commencement time last year when Texas Rangers were called in to maintain order on the campus. The Rev. J. S. Scott, acting president for four months, is still at the helm.

It is understood that a merger of Wiley with Samuel Huston College, a sister Methodist institution in Austin, Texas, is being contemplated, with Austin as the potential site of the plant.

Dr. McLeod was born in Bennettsville, S. C., June 18, 1898, attended Clafflin College at Orangeburg, S. C., and the Gammon Theological Seminary. Later he attended Boston and Harvard Universities. He pastored in the Tennessee and South Carolina Methodist conferences; taught at Bethune-Cookman College, 1931-35, and came to Wiley in 1939 as professor of religion and philosophy and college pastor. In 1942 he became president.

Dr. McLeod is a member of the executive committee of the United Negro College Fund and a member of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity. He has one son.

Allen U. Worth Over $1,000,000, Report Reveals

COLUMBIA, S. C.—Negroes are weary of second and third-class educational institutions, Dr. Samuel Richard Higgins, president of Allen University, said in an exclusive interview here Saturday.

The statement was made following disclosure that as head of the AME-operated Allen University, Dr. Higgins had submitted his quadrennial report to AME Secretary of Education, the Rev. E. A. Adams, showing the university had doubled its worth with four years.

WORTH A MILLION

Capital resources of the institution, according to the report, total more than a million dollars, whereas in 1944 it was approximated at $500,000.

Additions include a new dormitory for women, named in honor of Presiding Bishop Frank Madison Reid, a music conservatory valued at $50,000, properties of the Deloach Sanitarium recently acquired at a cost of $80,000, improvements of the Hurst Athletic Field, repairs to older buildings and acquisition of a teachers' home.

Move To Oust Higgins As Allen Head

By MODJESKA SIMPKINS

COLUMBIA, S. C.— (ANP)— A move, which has been operating undercover for some time, to oust Dr. Samuel R. Higgins, as president of Allen university and replace him with the Rev. Frank Veal of Cincinnati, broke out from under its wrappings here Wednesday during commencement exercises at the institution. The plan, fostered by the Revs. E .A. Adams and T. J. Miles perennial Columbian aspirants for the bishopric, is thought to be guided by Dr. Robert W. Mance, local physician, erst while churchman and leader in AME church politics.

News of the movement to drop Higgins, who has done a herculean task at Allen during his more than a decade service, was revealed to friends by an outstanding churchman a week before the commencement. However, it was thought at the time that no one would be foolish enough actually to attempt it.

This thought was doomed to die in its infancy, for a news release was published soon after which gave full credit for all the improvements at the school to Bishop Frank Madison Reid, despite the fact that the prelate has spent less than a full term in the diocese and Dr. Higgins has served as head of the institution for more than a decade, with marked development in the setup being noted prior to Bishop Reid's coming to South Carolina.

Another choice bit of information is that Rev. Veal has been a close friend of Dr. Mance for many years.

A DEBT THAT SHOULD BE PAID

Afro-American, Baltimore, Md.

Few persons stop to realize that many of our colleges which have managed to survive have done so because of gifts from people, many of whom never had an opportunity to attend college.

America has had this remarkable demonstration of unselfishness. Supported first by the clergy, then by the wealthy and now largely by public funds, college education is still provided for the few by the many. Sat. 1-24-48

Our own colleges have a small alumni body because they have been in existence less than a century. As they grow older and the number of alumni increases, these graduates of colleges will be required to take an increased share in the support of their Alma Maters.

Hardly a college student in the early days attended college for four years without a scholarship. Many students worked out their board and lodging and received their education free. Even the student who paid his tuition got four times what he pays for in services.

In no place in the world does a boy or girl get "so much for so little" as at college. It is time these alumni paid some of it back.

The AFRO suggests that every college graduate 10 years out of school begin now to pay back the money his college gave him.

Nabrit Named Coordinator Of Carnegie Program Here

Daily World 14e(1)

Dr. S. Milton Nabrit, dean of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences of Atlanta University, has been named the new coordinator of the Atlanta University Center Carnegie Grants-In-Aid Program for the colleges and universities of the Southeast including Atlanta University, Clark College, Dillard University, Fort Valley State College, Morehouse College, Morris Brown College, Spelman College, Southern University, Talladega College and Tuskegee Institute. He succeeds Dr. Ira DeA. Reid who resignew from Atlanta University to join the faculty of Haverford College.

The Carnegie Grants-In-Aid Program was initiated in 1947 for a five-year experimental period to improve instruction by assisting the instructional staffs of the participating institutions in research and study through a cooperative arrangement between the colleges and the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. The program has as its basis the belief that the greatest single need in American higher education is the improvement of instruction.

Members of the faculties of the Atlanta University Center who were recent recipients of Carnegie research grants were Miss Myrtl Bowers of Spelman College, who spent the summer in London, England, on A Study of Turkish Nationalism; Miss Essie M. Curtright of Morehouse College, who spent the summer in Madrid, Spain, on A Research Project in Spain on the Contemporary Spanish Drama; Samuel H. How Senate Voted on School Pact

WASHINGTON — In the final vote on recommiting the Southern Regional Education Compact, eight Republican Senators from Northern States voted with the Southern Senators in favor of the regional plan drawn up by fifteen Southern governors. Their votes were "No" on the recommit motion made by Sen. Wayne Morse, (R.-Ore.).

They included Senators Harry Cain, Washington, who has a consistent record against any liberal legislation; William Knowland, California; Alexander Wiley, Wisconsin, chairman of the judiciary committee which favorably reported the bill and a leader in the floor fight for its adoption; Albert W. Hawkes, New Jersey, and Homer Capehart, Indiana. Sen. William Jenner of Indiana did not vote.

The final vote was a close 38-37 vote in favor of sending the resolution, House Joint Resolution 334 and its Senate companion bill, Senate Resolution 191, back to the committee "for further study."

The complete vote follows:

California U. Graduates First Negro Engineer

BERKELEY, Cal. — (ANP) — The University of California here had its first Negro graduate in civil engineering in the 1948 June class. The graduate is Howard P. Grant of Los Angeles.

Grant now works for San Francisco county as junior civil engineer. During the war he served as an engineering draftsmen in the army air forces.

At California he earned two letters in basketball and served as president of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity. Before the war he attended U. C. L. A. where he served as president of the University Negro club.

Dr. Haynes a Trustee of New York State Univ.

PAWLING, N.Y.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey last week announced the appointment of Dr. George E. Haynes as one of the 15 trustees of the new New York State University. Dr. Haynes was the only colored member of the commission which recommended the creation of a higher education program without discrimination of any kind.

The first persons of his race awarded a doctorate by Columbia University, Dr. Haynes last year resigned as secretary of the race relations division of the Federal Council of Churches, a post he held 25 years. Since then he has been consultant on Africa for the YMCA.

Educators See Gen. Eisenhower Inaugurated At Columbia Univ.

NEW YORK —(ANP)— College presidents of America's Negro colleges were present at the inauguration of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as president of Columbia University, held in the warm sun of South Court, Morningside Heights last week.

Delegates from 310 American universities, 36 foreign institutions and 34 learned societies participated in the ceremony. Thousands of people watched.

Among Negro educators attending the installation program were:

THOSE PRESENT

Dr. Horace Mann Bond, president, Lincoln University (Pa.); Dr. Adam Daniel Beittel, president, Talladega College; Dr. Martin Jenkins, president, Morgan State College; Dr. Mordecai Wyatt Johnson, president, Howard University, and Dr. Charles Spurgeon Johnson, president of Fisk. Dr. Johnson is the first Negro president of Fisk. Last June he was granted an honorary doctor of letters degree (honoris causa) from Columbia.

Two students, Marvin Cawthorne, Toledo, Ohio, and Kenneth Jenkins were members of the university choir directed by Dr. Lowell Beverage. Cawthorne is a music major. Jenkins, a scholarship student, is majoring in English.

In his address, Eisenhower stressed the value of the freedom of the individual. He said that theories of communism would be taught at Columbia. He said:

"The truth about communism is, today, an indispensible requirement if the true values of our democratic system are to be possessed."

He warned the people against complacence also. He said:

"In today's struggle, no free institution can be neutral. All must be joined in a common profession—that of democratic citizenship; every institution within our national structure must contribute to the advancement of the nation."

N.Y. College Aide Quits Under Fire on Race Issue

Probe Board Finds He Segregated Students in Violation of School's Democratic Policy

NEW YORK — Simultaneously with the report of a special faculty board that he practiced racial segregation in the Army Hall dormitory at City College, W. C. Davis, assistant to the president and director of Army Hall, resigned.

A committee was appointed last November by Dr. Harry N. Wright, president, to investigate charges made by student residents that Davis discriminated against two colored students last September when he transferred them to all-colored quarters after they had originally been assigned to other rooms.

Numerous Accusations

During the past 18 months, Davis had been accused by Columbia and New York University student residents and by employees, of segregating colored students, of engaging in anti-union activities, and of maintaining an unsanitary cafeteria.

In its report, the investigating committee contended that Davis proved himself guilty when he said he kept exclusive rooms for colored students because colored people seemed to prefer their own company.

Out of Line With Policy

The board commented, "it is inherent in our democracy and the goals of democratic education which City College pursues that involuntary segregation of individuals on the basis of irrelevant factors such as color or religion, is detrimental to individuals and to the institution as a whole."

It was pointed out by the committee that nowhere in the classrooms, laboratories, gym floors, locker rooms, lounges, lunch room, swimming pool, athletic teams, orchestras, bands or ROTC is there any distinction made at the school because of race, creed or color.

"Therefore none should be made in the assignment of living quarters of the college," they commented.

Davis will continue as an economics teacher, a post he has held since 1941. Dr. Wright disclosed that Army Hall building, a former Hebrew Orphan Asylum, will be administered from the college proper with the college's business manager, the cafeteria supervisor and his office absorbing the function.

One of City College's two colored professors was a member of the committee appointed by Dr. Wright to investigate Davis. He was Dr. Kenneth Clark, an instructor of psychology. Dr. Warren Brown, sociology instructor, is the other colored faculty member.

Gaines Decision Aids Dixie Students

Because of its far-reaching implications, the U. S. Supreme Court 1938 decision in the Lloyd Gaines case was a landmark in the history of Negro educational rights, according to the Negro Year Book of 1947.

That decision, the Year Book observes, has prompted the South to provide equal educational facilities for colored students, particularly those seeking graduate and professional training.

The Book also noted that in 1930 North Carolina established a graduate school and Law school at North Carolina college for Negroes at Durham. In the same year Maryland purchased Morgan college, incorporating it into the state educational system and established graduate studies there.

Virginia followed, offering graduate work for Negroes at Virginia State college.

EDUCATION BOARD AUTHORIZES BIDS

Building Plans Approved; SLC Request Denied

BY ED M. CLINTON

(The Times-Picayune Staff Correspondent)

Baton Rouge, La., Sept. 20. — Bids totaling more than $600,000 for construction jobs at colleges under their control were approved here today by the state board of education.

At the same time the board ignored a plea by President G. J. Tinsley, Southeastern college, Hammond, for permission to seek a $14,000 grant from the state board of liquidation.

The construction bids approved and accepted, were for a girls' dormitory at Southern university, Negro college at Scotlandville, to cost a total of $385,300; and for a new dairy building at Northwestern State college, Natchitoches, at a bid of $48,845.55.

The Southern university job goes to Caldwell and McCann, Baton Rouge contractors, who had bid about $25,000 lower for the same job last year. R. J. Jones, Alexandria, was the successful bidder for the Northwestern project.

Emergency Repairs

The board also approved the action of Southern university in spending $30,000 for the repair of several bathrooms as an emergency measure.

Dr. Tinsley's request for permission to seek additional funds from the state liquidation board was ignored after both Board Chairman George T. Madison and Board Member Dr. Rufus C. Harris intimated that it was a bad time for such action.

"There are reasons why it shouldn't be done at this time and I would be glad to go into those reasons if anyone cares to hear them," Dr. Harris declared.

Dr. Tinsley urged the permission because of deficiencies in his budget for supplies, and informed the board:

"During the legislative session I was told, sub rosa if you will, that if we needed that extra money the board of liquidation would give it to us. We need it because we are running very close on supplies. Several of the members of the liquidaton board also told me they would see we got what we needed. I think they would give it to us at this time."

Madison, however, proceded to the next subject on the agenda without proposing any action on the request.

(The board of liquidation in its one meeting to date has distributed more than a third of the million dollars a year to which they are limited under the present law. A constitutional amendment to be voted on in the November election would remove that limit.)

The board also debated requests from several of the colleges under their control for permission to increase salaries of some faculty members.

In one case, that of Grambling college, Negro institution, the board was informed that the salary scales at the school were, in some cases, lower than the minimum standard for public school teachers in Lincoln parish, where the school is located.

President Ralph Jones reported that several of his instructors have left for more remunerative jobs in the public school system, thus endangering the efficiency of the college.

The board deferred action to permit more study of the proposed changes.

President Felton G. Clarke, Southern university, was more successful with his request to raise the pay of the school's dean, auditor and business manager, each by $20 a month, but only after he had told the board that the Texas State college for Negroes is paying much higher salaries than the Louisiana Negro university.

"You mean he (the dean) could get $10,000 a year over there?" one board member asked.

"They pay their dean $12,000 a year," Clarke replied. "They pay their president $18,000 a year," he added.

In other actions today the board heard reports of their education and finance committees and acted on several parts of the agenda which had been referred to the building committee. The building committee held no previous session and did not report on their portion of the agenda.

These actions included approval of personnel changes at several of the state colleges and special schools, referring a proposed change in the site of the new dairy unit at Northwestern to the building committee for more study, denial of a request for an extension course at Leesville private trade school, and deferral of a request for establishment of a plumbing course at the T. H. Harris trade school, Opelousas.

7 Chalk Up 'Firsts' In U. S. Education

A number of educational firsts for Negros occurred recently. Miss Clara B. Fentress of Los Angeles earned a B. S. in the school of apparel designing at UCLA. Theodore W. Coggs of Milwaukee became the first of his state to graduate from the University of Wisconsin law school.

Sociology students, Mrs. Lillie Holland and Mrs. Leona Evans, became the first on the campus students at Washington university of St. Louis, and Fred Brown and Leroy Young were allowed on the campus of the University of Missouri to attend the United Nations organization meeting.

And finally, on March 1 in Des Moines, Miss Idah M. Smith entered the new class in nursing at Iowa Methodist hospital to be the first colored girl admitted for a nursing course in an Iowa hospital.

Study Made To Specialize Business Ed. In Colleges

Study of a tri-way concentration of Negro Business educational training in Georgia's three Negro colleges is currently the target of a group of Business leaders and school representatives which held its first meeting in Atlanta recently.

Called at the request of Dr. Aaron Brown, President of Albany State College and Chairman of the Negro State College Presidents, the committee had been asked to work toward a five-point program to specialize Business Education among the colleges for more effective training.

The purposes as outlined were:

(1) To hear discussions regarding the need of Business Education in Georgia.

(2) To list ways by which the three State Colleges can meet these needs.

(3) To suggest the number of institutions which should be assigned the responsibility of meeting these needs.

(4) To suggest how many institutions should grant degrees in Business Education.

(5) To list any other data pertaining to the general problem of the discussion.

The committee included Mrs. O. P. Williams, Departmental Head of Business Education, Fort Valley State College; Robert C. Long, Departmental Head of Business Education, Georgia State College; Mrs. L. Orene Hall, Commercial Department Head, Albany State College; J. B. Blayton, of the Department of Business Administration, Atlanta University; Dr. Joseph A. Pierce, Department of Mathematics, Atlanta Univ., and R. R. Reed, Exec. Sec'ty of the Georgia Negro Chamber of Commerce.

During the initial meeting the committee distinguished three areas of emphasis: Business Administration, Business Education and Secretarial Training.

Mr. Blayton reminded the group that an outlook of practicality in training should be of grave concern in mapping such a program. As such, he explained that attention should be focused on the opportunities awaiting students upon graduation.

The committee unanimously agreed that although the program calls for concentration of training in the respective schools, there were certain courses rudimentary in any phase of Business Education and should be included in all areas of emphasis.

The current objectives of the three colleges in Business Education were placed before the committee in an ostensible attempt to scrutinize the curricula in light of the overall program of concentration.

Following a lengthy discussion of the tri-way program, the committee agreed to submit its findings to the Presidents of the three colleges for consideration. Upon their approval, the program is expected to be submitted to the State Board of Regents for study.

A reliable source disclosed that the program is being readied for possible acceptance by the Board of Regents and subsequent initiation in the colleges at the beginning for the Fall school term.

Run Out Of Milledgeville School Meef

Police Chief, Judge Warn Of Danger At Hands Of Klan

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga.—Three Negro educators, presidents of Georgia state colleges, were terrorized and intimidated by rowdies of the Ku Klux Klan while attending a meeting of the council of state colleges here last week, and fled from the city in the middle of the session to escape theatened violence.

The college presidents were James A. Colston, of Georgia State College at Savannah, C. V. Troup of Fort Valley State college, and Aaron Brown of Albany State College, who together with a number of assistants and associates, were charged by the Klansmen with violating the "Jim Crow" customs of the town by sitting in the council sessions with representatives of white colleges.

The Negro delegation to the council was housed in the homes of local Negro families and took their meals in Negro restaurants, but attended the sessions of the council at the Georgia State College for Women where the other delegates were in attendance. On the second day of the meeting Dr. Guy Wells, host of the council and president of the State college for Women was called upon by the chief of police and judge of the city court, and told that white residents were incensed at the presence of the Negro educators on the college campus and that the local Klan had threatened to react with violence if the Negro delegates came on the campus any more.

Dr. Wells and the other white delegates are reported to have urged the Negro delegates to ignore the warning and to remain for the other sessions, but when the chief of police said that he could not guarantee their safety, the three college presidents and their associates declared that they felt it advisable to withdraw from the meeting and leave town.

As they left the college campus they were cursed and reviled by a crowd of white hoodlums, who followed their cars to the edge of town and warned them not to return. Milledgeville is Klan dominated, and is one of the most vicious mill towns in eastern Georgia. It also houses Georgia's insane patients.

Pro-Wallace Club Asks End to Ban On Negro Students

The Worker New York, N.Y.
June 4-18-48

ATLANTA.—The student Wallace-For-President Club at Emory University at its regular meeting on March 25 passed a resolution calling on President Goodrich White to take immediate steps toward the admission of Negro students to the university's graduate schools.

The editorial staff of Emory Wheel, campus paper, had already urged this step in an editorial Feb. 26.

The letter to the president of the university, which is a Methodist institution and one of the most highly accredited schools in Georgia, said in part:

"In view of the great traditions of the Methodist Church as a liberal and forward-looking church, and particularly in view of the active and leading part the Methodist Church took in the Abolitionist movement of a hundred years ago we feel that it would be most appropriate for the schools of the Methodist Church to take a leading role today in guiding the South and the nation toward fuller realization of our high democratic ideals."

THE RESOLUTION on discrimination in education noted that 95 years' experience has shown that education of all is degraded by the segregation system, and that the "separate but equal facilities' idea was falacious and a poor screen for injustice.

The statement further condemned the regional school scheme as "a perpetuation of the enervating and degrading system of segregation. . . ." It listed the widespread support among white Southern students to the admission of Negroes to graduate schools—at the University of Oklahoma, University of Texas, University of North Carolina, and many other large schools—and asked the Dr. Goodrich and the Emory Board of Trustees "take immediate steps to implement the admission of Negroes to the graduate school of Emory University on the basis of equal opportunities for all. . . ."

Admit Negroes To Emory, Urges Wallace Club

Atlanta Constitution

The Emory Wallace-for-President Club — six students strong — has urged the admission of Negro students to Emory.

Simultaneously, Don West, a leader in the State Wallace-for-President movement, Tuesday said it was undetermined whether he would teach at Oglethorpe University next year. Pres. Phillip Weltner would not comment on published reports that West's contract would not be renewed because of his political activities. West said there had been no complaint on his class work.

Emory Units Ask Admission Of Negroes

Tomorrow
June 7-4-48

ATLANTA, Georgia — (SNS) — A spokesman for the Emory University Wallace-For-President Club Robert W. Young, secretary-Treasurer of the organization, Tuesday, urged Dr. Goodrich C. White, president of the institution, and the trustees, to give "careful consideration of the admission of Negroes to the University on all levels."

The recommendation came in the form of a "Resolution on Discrimation in Education" adopted March 25 at the regular meeting of the organization.

Atlanta, Ga.

Young wrote President White "IN view of the great traditions of the Methodist Church, and particularly in view of the active and leading part the Methodist Church took in the Abolistionist movement of a hundred years ago, we feel that it would be most appropriate for the schools of the Methodist Church to take a leading role today in guiding the South and the Nation toward fuller realization of our high Democratic ideals."

June 4-18-48

The letter concluded with "We of the Emory Wallace-For-President Club hope that you will carefully consider the points brought forth in this resolution and that you will do all in your power as President of our school, Emory University, to carry forward the historical traditions of America . . ."

The resolution expressed opposition to discrimination in any form.

Hampton Institute

Students Bury Hampton Institute After Solemn Rites Sunday

Staff Correspondence

HAMPTON, Va.—Students at Hampton Institute declared a weekend of "mourning" after receiving a statement from the school's board of trustees Saturday night that President Ralph P. Bridgman's resignation tendered to the board on Saturday had been tabled "for further consideration." The school was buried in solemn ceremonies Sunday morning.

All dances and other social functions were cancelled, and the students decided on a non-cooperative program for the weekend. A spokesman for the students, however, told a Journal and Guide representative Sunday that normal student activities would be resumed Monday.

The students decided on these tactics, the spokesman said, "as a test of strength of the students" for the benefit of members of the trustee board and members of the faculty.

Attendance of students at the opening program of Founder's Day Saturday night in Ogden Hall was variously estimated at from 38 to 100. It was also reported, on good authority, that only a few of the faculty members attended this program.

FUNERAL SERVICES

The "funeral" and "burial ceremonies" in front of Ogden Hall at 10:30 Sunday morning was a climax to the reaction of the students to the report of the trustees on President Bridgman.

In sharp contrast to the lack of student attendance at Saturday's program and church services in Memorial Church Sunday at 11 a. m., this event was attended by a large number of students. They used this method to dramatize their disappointment at the report of the trustees, for as one student spokesman said, the students "were fed up with the administration at Hampton."

A statement was issued to the students and trustees of Hampton Institute last Nov. 3 setting forth the reasons for the vote of "no confidence" in the institute's administration. This statement says that on April 23, 1945 a petition signed by 701 students requested the administration to secure a full-time director for the division of trades and industries and other changes.

COMPLIANCE PROMISE

President Bridgman promised compliance with the request for a full-time director of the division of trades and industries by the fall semester and said that favorable action had been taken on all the other requests in the petition. The statement charges that no action was taken on this item in September.

Numerous other complaints in committee's statement include one to the effect that only three instructors were employed for the 108 students enrolled in building construction, architectural design and architectural engineering.

A study of the complaints, letters and documents on the students' case against the administration show that most of these complaints stemmel from a lack of certain offerings at Hampton Institute for some of the positions which graduates of the institute have sought after leaving the campus.

HAMPTON'S 5TH IN 18 YEARS

Hampton Institute got its fifth president in 18 years when the Board of Trustees on Saturday announced the election of Alonzo G. Moron as acting president.

Mr. Moron becomes the second colored person to serve in this capacity—R. O'Hara Lanier having served from 1943-1944—and the first Hampton alumnus to be so honored. He was graduated from Hampton in 1927.

Since its founding by General Samuel C. Armstrong in 1868, Hampton has been headed by nine men, all but two of them white. Gen. Armstrong served for 25 years and his successor, Dr. H. B. Frissell, for 24. Since that time, only one president has served more than 10 years and that was Dr. James E. Gregg, who served 11 years (1918-1929).

Rapidly shifting administrations at Hampton have served to diminish the influence of the institution and many of its friends and alumni have feared that the deterioration which set in would eventually consume the institution.

These persons point out that Hampton is the one remaining major institution of higher learning without a full-fledged colored president. They note with concern that neither Mr. Lanier nor Mr. Moron was given full title but was listed merely as "acting." No white head of the institution ever came in with such a restriction.

The naming of Mr. Moron, therefore, still does not satisfy many friends of Hampton who see in the appointment a mere temporary arrangement which might be terminated in a year or less. These persons believe that if a colored man is to succeed at Hampton, he should be given as much time as whites have been given to demonstrate his capability.

The job of heading Hampton is admittedly difficult. As a private institution in the South whose support from private philanthropy has been steadily declining, it needs as its head not only an administrator who can keep faculty and student body together, but one who can do a first-class job of fund raising.

One columnist said facetiously some months ago that "all Hampton needs is a new president, a new student body and a new alumni group." The situation probably is not that bad, but it will take some smooth manipulating to satisfy the various elements on Hampton's strife-torn campus.

Mr. Moron seems to be a personable individual, sufficiently young and sufficiently independent to have a mind of his own. As chairman of the interim committee, which has been Hampton's governing body since the resignation of Ralph P. Bridgman, he has apparently impressed the trustees satisfactorily.

We hope that he will be given an opportunity, without strings attached, to do a job. We wish him well.

HAMPTON AT THE CROSSROADS

When the trustees of Hampton Institute last week accepted the resignation of President Ralph P. Bridgman, they rang down the curtain on an educational tragedy which has been on stage far too long.

Back in October, we wrote an editorial which began: "The skids are under Ralph P. Bridgman . . ." and ended with a plea to the institute's trustees to relieve him of the presidency.

We believe now, as then, that the trustees and a small minority among the alumni, should abandon the theory that only a white president can do the job which Hampton needs.

Howard, Fisk, Lincoln and Atlanta U., to name a few, have long since given the lie to the old "white superiority" myth.

Hampton, with six presidents (one acting) in less than 20 years (since 1929) has reached a point where it ought to settle down. The 80-year-old institution needs a strong man at the helm if its prestige and influence are not to be impaired.

We hope, therefore, that the trustees will take ample time in selecting the Bridgman successor to comb the educational field with a fine-toothed comb. We believe that in their searching, they will find a qualified leader and administrator from within our own ranks.

Sure Hampton To Get Negro Heads, Cite Names

NEW YORK — There is absolutely no question but that Hampton Institute will have a Negro president when a successor to recently retired President Ralph Bridgman is found, the Defender learned here this week.

Following the difficulties in administration and the faculty dissatisfaction that beset Bridgman's term in office, this paper learned, it was generally agreed among the Board of Trustees that it would be "very foolish" to name another white president. This is a slight reversal of the Board's earlier stand that no racial qualifications should ever be considered in filling the executive offices of the school.

The principal unofficial choices of the Board for the post at this point are Professor Allison Davis of the University of Chicago, R. O'Hara Lanier, U. S. Minister to Liberia, Professor Arthur P. Davis of Howard University, and William Trent, Jr., Director of the United Negro College Fund. Mr. Lanier served once as acting president of Hampton.

As the Board has not met to consider candidates suggested persons will come up the first time officially in the Board's forthcoming Spring meeting. However, members of the board have unofficially discussed these names so far. It is considered significant that so far to date all those most seriously suggested and considered for the presidency are not now on the faculty or executive staff of the Institute. That fact is expected to hold true.

Dr. Mays Won't Head Hampton

BY STAFF CORRESPONDENT

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va. — Reports that Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, president of Morehouse College, Atlanta, had accepted the presidency of Hampton Institute are "definitely unfounded," the AFRO learned this week.

Dr. Mays, now attending the World Council of Churches at Amsterdam, is not due back in the United States until Sept. 14.

From an authoritative source, however, it was learned that members of the nominating committee appointed by the Hampton trustee board to select a new president, are almost unanimously agreed that Dr. Mays would be an excellent choice but point out that the Atlanta educator has commitments which make him unavailable for the present.

Dr. Weaver Considered

Among other candidates who have been interviewed by the committee, headed by Dr. Henry W. Foote, chairman, are Dr. Robert Weaver, director of Community Services of the American Council on Race Relations in Chicago, and Dr. Hollis Price, president of Le Moyne College in Memphis.

It was pointed out that practically every educator favored by the committee is unavailable for one reason or another and, for this reason, progress in the selection of a new president has been very slow.

It was felt at one time that a temporary solution would be to name some retired educator to serve for a year, during which time he would hold things together while the committee continues its search for a permanent head.

The name of Dr. O. W. Holmes, retired president of Morgan State College, Baltimore, was mentioned in this connection, as was that of a retired professor of agriculture at Cornell University, now employed in the U.S. Office of Education.

Color Not Issue at All

A trustee, who asked that he not be quoted, said that while the board has tried to leave color out of consideration in selecting a new president, it has found so far that there are more likely colored candidates than white.

The regular meeting of the full trustee board will not be held until October but the nominating committee, in all probability, will meet before that time. In fact, it was pointed out, a special meeting of the entire board may be called should the nominating committee in the meantime agree upon a choice.

Hampton's affairs are now being administered by an interim committee whose chairman is Alonzo G. Moron. Associated with him are Prof. Collis H. Davis, dean of students; Don A. Davis, comptroller; Major Walter R. Brown, secretary of the institute, and W. Barton Beatty, director of public relations.

Alumni In Drive For Hampton Funds

HAMPTON, Va.—Lorenzo C. secretary of Hampton Alumni Association, last week reminded his organization that the next report of contributions to the college development fund is due December 15 and reviewed contributions of the past year.

White said $10,000 had been given as a direct gift to college; $2,000 toward lighting Armstrong field; $2,625 for purchase of uniforms for the 60-piece band and six majorettes and $153, for belts and sabers for ROTC officers. This year's alumni drive will set its goal for $25,000.

Patterson Not Named to Hampton

BALTIMORE

Widespread rumors to the effect tmat President Fred Patterson of Tuskegee had been selected as Hampton's president were spiked Monday by Dr. Channing Tobias, president of Hampton's board of trustees.

"There is absolutely no truth to that," Dr. Tobias told the AFRO, adding that the trustees had not yet selected the committee which would be empowered to bring in names of possible candidates for the position.

This committee, he said, will be selected Friday when the board meets in New York. In denying the rumor, Dr. Tobias did not rule out the possibility that Dr. Patterson might be considered.

Studying in California

The Tuskegee president is now on leave taking advance study at he University of California, Palo Alto

Members of Morgan College's trustee board here were still noncommittal over rumors that Dr. Charles Wesley of Wilberforce had turned down their offer of the Morgan presidency.

The board is scheduled to meet an announceemnt would be made, Thursday of this week, after which it was said.

Hampton Front All Quiet; Field Cut

NEW YORK — No new developments in the race for Hampton Institute's presidency is expected until the meeting of the executive committee in early October.

Meanwhile at least one possible choice seemed eliminated when Dr. Robert Weaver accepted a teaching appointment from New York University.

Hampton's New President

From Norfolk Virginian-Pilot

WITH the resignation of Dr. Ralph P. Bridgman as president of Hampton Institute, which became effective on August 31, the board of trustees of this old and top-ranking institution for the higher education of the Negro, will inevitably face the question of whether the time has arrived for the appointment of its first Negro president. It is the only major Negro college in the country that is not now headed by a Negro educator.

Dr. Charles S. Johnson became the first Negro president of Fisk University at Nashville in 1947, and Dr. Horace Mann Bond became the first Negro head of Lincoln University in the same year. Virginia Union University at Richmond has had a Negro president for more than a decade. Tuskegee Institute, at Tuskegee, Ala., had Booker T. Washington (a Hampton graduate) as its first president, and Virginia State College at Petersburg is another institution for the higher education of the Negro that has always had Negro presidents. Dr. Mordecai Johnson became the first Negro president of Howard University at Washington in 1926.

Hampton has had a presidential line of white administrators, nearly all ministers, since the death of General Armstrong, its founder. The line extended down to and included Dr. Bridgman himself. Some of the presidents of Hampton in the ministerial line have been well trained educators, but it has become increasingly difficult for them to adjust themselves to the Negro-white Hampton environment. Their problem has been one of adjustment to a Negro community on the one hand, and a white community on the other, and it has been a complicated one in recent years.

Hampton's ministerial presidents have been in the missionary tradition of Negro education. Hampton long ago came of age as a Negro college, and it is now time that its board of trustees give its status recognition by the appointment of a Negro president. White presidents of Hampton have in recent years found themselves plagued by questions of race relations in the administration of the college which would be largely solved by the appointment of a Negro president. There is no question that a Negro educator, fully qualified for the post, can be found—perhaps among Hampton's graduates.

Next month a 20-year-old Negro girl will enter the medical school, and for her there will be no segregation from other students. Whether there will continue to be segregation where separate instruction can be offered more easily than in medicine, the university has not said. But that seems less important than the fact that Arkansas is making the gestures of compliance with the principle laid down by the high court.

The same cannot be said for Oklahoma, where there has been a hasty arrangement of makeshift graduate courses in the state's all-Negro Langston University. Nor can it be said for Missouri. In this state the question was raised during the last legislative session, when a $400,000 appropriation was voted for a new building for the Lincoln University law school in St. Louis.

The legislature ignored the contention that it would be cheaper for the state to admit Negroes to the law school at the University of Missouri than to continue this division of Lincoln for a relatively small group of Negro law students.

Governor Donnelly vetoed the appropriation but he ducked the real issue The new building, he said, should be at Jefferson City with the rest of Lincoln University instead of at St. Louis.

For Missouri and the other border and southern states the order of the Supreme Court is plain enough. They must admit Negro graduate students to their state universities or provide costly duplicating facilities. They will do well to watch Arkansas.

That state's attempt at compliance means a minimum burden on the taxpayers. And there is no evidence to date that it creates a situation that enlightened citizens will not accept.

Baltimorean Associated With New Music Head at Hampton

HAMPTON, Va. — Heading Hampton Institute's department of music this year will be Henry M. Switten, for the past decade head of the piano, theory and composition departments of the Westminster Choir College, at Princeton, N.J.

Associated with Dr. Switten will be two other new music staff members, Miss Jessie A. Fitzgerald, of Baltimore, a B.A. and M.A. degree graduate of Wellesley who has done advanced study at the Juilliard School of Music, and Miss Julia Perry, a product of the Westminster Choir College.

Holding the Bachelor's and Master's degrees in music, Miss Perry is the recent winner of voice and composition contests sponsored by the National Association of Musicians.

Native of France

Born in Bar-le-Duc, France, Dr. Switten, son of Jean-Baptiste Switten, a professor at the University of France for 30 years, in 1925 became the youngest person ever to receive a doctorate of music from that institution.

An accomplished pianist, organist, composer, and choral director, Dr. Switten studied in Paris with such musicians as Georges de Launay (piano), Eugene Gigout (organ) Nadia Boulanger and Henri Dallier (theory and composition) at the Conservatoire de Paris, and several others.

Dr. Switten also has conducted the choir at the University of Arizona, where he founded and headed the organ department and taught theory and composition from 1933-1937. He has appeared as piano soloist with leading symphony orchestras and has done concert work on his own.

Hampton Urges Creation Of Vann-Lewis Memorial

CHICAGO, Ill.—"In appreciation of the support and inspiration from both the late Robert L. Vann and Ira F. Lewis," Bandleader Lionel Hampton last week pledged $500 "for the establishment of The Pittsburgh Courier Memorial Journalism Scholarship in memory of Mr. Vann and Mr. Lewis."

"I can think of no more fitting way," Hampton stated, "to express our sentiment at a difficult time like this. I salute The Courier for having given Negro journalism two of its greatest giants."

A Glance Over the Educational Front

When asked about reports that he was being boomed for the presidency of Hampton Institute, V. I. Gov. William Hastie said that he had heard nothing about it. . . . Jack Coffman, white, of Houston, refused admission to the colored University of Texas, has indicated that he will take his case to the Federal Courts . . . U.S. Judge H. Church Ford ruled that Lyman T. Johnson could not enter the University of Kentucky. An appeal is planned.

That Southern governors have not abandoned the regional educational plan was disclosed with the appointment of Dr. John E. Ivey of the University of North Carolina to prepare a detailed plan on how the scheme can be made to work. . . . The one-man law class attended by Silas Hunt at the University of Arkansas, has been suspended because of Hunt's illness . . . . Ex-Brooklyn Dean Resigns as Head of Negro School—Board Clears Him of Charges

2-2-48 mon.

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAMPTON, Va., Feb. 1 — Dr. Ralph P. Bridgman, president of Hampton Institute since 1944 and former dean of students at Brooklyn College, has submitted his resignation effective not later than Aug. 31. Times

The institute's board of trustees said that the resignation had been tabled for further consideration and an appeal went out to the 1,700 students and nearly 300 faculty members asking their "loyal cooperation in maintaining the work of the institute during the transition period before further decisive action is possible."

The board met in a seven-hour session yesterday before releasing Dr. Bridgman's resignation and its statement. New York, N.Y.

The board accepted unanimously the report of a committee which investigated Dr. Bridgman's administration following mass meetings last October in which students voted 522 to 3 and faculty members 43 to 5 for his dismissal.

The committee report cleared the president of charges of "a lack of integrity, coercion, duplicity, procrastination, and confusion in carrying out programs," but stated that the effect of evidence "does disclose wide and deep seated opposition to him which is very serious." 2-2-48-mon.

If a new president is named this year, he will become the fifth since 1940 to head the Negro technical school, which was founded in 1868.

Observance of the institute's founder's day comprised a symposium this afternoon and an address tonight by Charles H. Houston, chairman of the legal committee of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

5 Eye Job As President Of Hampton Inst.

NEW YORK — The many educators under consideration for the presidency of Hampton Institute are being narrowed down to a field of five prominent men who will be interviewed here in the latter part of July. Sat. 1-24-48

They are Dr. Frederick D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, Dr. Benjamin Mays, president of Morehouse Collece; Dr. Robert C. Weaver of the American Council on Race Relations; Dr. Hollis F. Price, president of Le Moyne College; and Dr. Horace Mann Bond, president of Lincoln (Pa) University. They will talk here with the committee of Hampton trustees who have the task of selecting a president under the direction of Board Chairman.

Although Presidents Mays, Patterson and Bond, particularly, are now at the helms of large, well-established schools, one factor which may influence their acceptance of any offer is Hampton's endownment, the largest of any Negro college. The Institute's ten million dollar backlog could make possible a salary offer which might wean away any one of the candidates mentioned from his present post. 7-10-48

Support Hastie For Hampton Post

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

(By Pittsburgh Courier Press Service)

HAMPTON INST., Va. — The name of Governor William H. Hastie has been introduced into the speculation concerning the selection of a president for Hampton Institute, according to informed sources here. Sat. 1-31-48

Governor Hastie is rapidly gaining support among the faculty members and staff personnel here. While the Governor of the Virgin Islands has not been approached on the subject, supporters are said to anticipate a change in the national administration which would mean the end of Governor Hastie's tenure in the Virgin Islands. (Governor Hastie was appointed by a Democratic administration.)

A recent poll among the faculty of Hampton installed President F. D. Patterson of Tuskegee Institute as the popular choice of the faculty for the position vacated by President Ralph P. Bridgman. Second to Dr. Patterson was Dr. Benjamin Mays, president of Morehouse College. Governor Hastie's name had not been brought up at the time this poll was taken.

Informed sources here doubt if Dr. Patterson will be interested in the position.

BRIDGMAN QUITS HAMPTON

Head of Institute in Virginia Is Joining Detroit School

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAMPTON, Va., Sept. 1—Ralph P. Bridgman, former dean of students at Brooklyn College, has resigned as president of Hampton Institute to become chairman of the Department of Family Life at Merrill-Palmer School in Detroit. Mr. Bridgman has served four years as president but has been on leavbe from administrative duties since Feb. 20 New York, N.Y.

No successor has been chosen yet by the board of trustees of the 80-year-old Negro college. There was speculation that a Negro educator might be appointed to take Mr. Bridgman's place. Suggestions have come from the faculty, half Negroes, that an administrator of that race would be more appropriate as head of the institute.

Mr. Bridgman, a graduate of Harvord and Columbia Universities, has specialized in sociological fields. Thurs. 9-2-48

Dr. Bridgman's Resignation First Tabled Then Accepted After Protest

Ballimore, Md.

By LOIS TAYLOR

Staff Correspondent

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—Ralph P. Bridgman, president of Hampton Institute since Feb. 1, 1944, has resigned under pressure.

Announcement that the board of trustees had accepted his resignation was made here Sunday evening in notices posted on all campus bulletin boards.

The notices read:

"President Ralph P. Bridgman has insisted that his resignation be accepted and the chairman of the board of trustees, acting for the board, has complied with his request.

Date not Set Yet

"Pending the effective date of the president's resignation, and until further instructions are received from the board, we, the undersigned officers of Hampton Institute, shall exert, in co-operation with President Bridgman, every effort to provide responsible and uninterrupted administration of the affairs of Hampton Institute."

The statement was signed by Dr. Stephen J. Wright dean of faculty; Collis H. Davis, dean of students; Don A. Davis, comptroller; Alonzo G. Moron, business manager; Walter R. Brown, secretary of the Institute, and W. Barton Beatty, public relations director.

Telling the trustees that he did not think that he was the person to continue to run Hampton, Mr. Bridgman on Friday tendered his resignation as head of the 80-year-old institution to take effect on Aug. 31, 1948, the end of his present appointment, in the "best interests" of the school.

Planned Delay

The trustees on Friday, after hearing a report from an investigating committee composed of there board members, voted to lay the tent among the students. resignation on the table in order gating committee's report on Saturday afternoon.

Boycott Answer to Board

A subsequent meeting of the trustees with the entire staff and a meeting with the entire student body served to bring about a somewhat better appreciation of the trustees' stand.

Nevertheless, the opinion of both students and staff members Saturday night was that the trustees' decision was a catastrophic one—this led to a boycott of the Founder's Day activities.

The investigating committee expressed "confidence in President Bridgman's integrity, his faith in Hampton and what it stands for, freedom from race prej- with the investi- and the soundness of his had honestly educational program."

Wide Opposition Cited

"We are obliged to recognize, however, that although the charges made against the president did not appear to be substantiated by the and discussions with gating committee he demonstrated the impossibility of continuing an effective education- al program under the ministration.

A similar reaction was evidenced among student leaders to whom was submitted, and that many of small importance.

Committee of Six Share Responsibility

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—An interim administrative committee for Hampton Institute began its functions last Friday as President Ralph P. Bridgman, whose resignation was accepted by the board of trustees upon his insistence three weeks ago, went "on leave from the administrative responsibilities of president."

The committee, appointed by the trustees' executive committee at its meeting Feb. 13 in New York City includes:

Dr. Stephen J. Wright, dean of faculty; Collis H. Davis, dean of students; Alonzo G. Moron, general business manager; Don A. Davis comptroller; Walter R. Brown, secretary of the school; and W. Barton Beatty Jr., director of public relations.

Moron Named Chairman

The executive committee appointed Mr. Moron to serve as chairman of the interim committee.

The official board statement to staff and students, besides naming the committee, said that:

"President Bridgman's resignation shall be fully effective Aug. 31, 1948, and that, beginning Feb. 20, he shall be on leave from the administrative responsibilities of the position of president;

To Work on Reports

"With the understanding that he will continue work on reports for the board, and on other matters important to the institution until they can be transferred to the interim administrative committee.

"Alonzo G. Moron is appointed herewith to serve as chairman of the interim administrative committee, to preside over its meetings, and to represent the committee in its dealing with the board. . .

Committee's Responsibility

"Each member of the interim administrative committee shall be fully responsible for administrative operations within the province of the position he occupies.

"The interim administrative committee shall allocate among its members the administrative duties which have been carried by the president; that these duties shall be performed temporarily by the members of the committee. . .

"Each member of the committee shall be responsible for keeping the other members currently informed regarding his administrative operations . . . "

"No Confidence" in Him

Mr. Bridgman's resignation from his post at Hampton followed a three-month investigation by a trustee committee of circumstances leading to "no confidence" votes in him as chief administrator of the college by a majority of the student body and interracial staff at Hampton last October.

While the trustees in a statement during Founder's Day exercises on January 31 cleared Mr. Bridgman of charges of lack of integrity, "duplicity," and "creating disunity" on the campus, they admitted that their investigation had disclosed "a wide and deep-seated opposition to him that is very serious." However, they voted to "table" the resignation which he had submitted on Jan. 30.

Mr. Bridgman's insistence that his resignation be accepted followed a boycott of the Founder's Day events by students and staff members after they learned of the trustees' decision. Dr. Channing H. Tobias, chairman then accepted the resignation, on behalf of the board, on Feb. 1.

DR. RALPH BRIDGMAN

Bridgman Lasted Exactly 4 Years

HAMPTON, Va.—Eighth person to head Hampton Institute since it was founded in 1868, Mr. Bridgman became president of Hampton exactly four years ago, succeeding Dr. R. [illegible], who for a year had served as acting president following the resignation of Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean.

Dr. MacLean, who became president in 1940, had been preceded by the following:

Arthur D. Howe, 1930-1940; George Perley Phenix, 1930; James Edgar Gregg, 1918-1929; [illegible] Frissell, 1893-1917; and Samuel Chapman Armstrong, founder, 1868-1893.

...ive effect is great and does disclose a wide and deep-seated opposition to him which is very serious . . .

". . . Your committee recommends that the board lay his resignation on the table for reasons which are likewise concerned with the best interests of the institute."

Dr. Tobias Explains

Dr. Channing H. Tobias, board chairman, told the AFRO that the trustees did not decline President Bridgman's resignation. He explained that the decision to table it temporarily was made in order to avoid the disruption of the college program which a sudden change of administration would produce.

He also pointed out that public confidence in Hampton Institute had been impaired and that prospective donors of large contributions were questioning its stability.

The intention of the board, Dr. Tobias continued, was to have time to give adequate consideration to Hampton's long-range aims and to work out a sound adjustment which would be in the best interest of all aspects of the college's present program and future welfare.

"Unscheduled" Events

A number of events, scheduled for the week end, failed to take place while several happenings, not listed on the official Founder's Day program, took place.

One of these unlisted happenings was a 10-inch snowfall which piled the campus with snowdrifts Saturday night and crippled transportation in the area.

Also previously unscheduled was the series of student activities planned to be held simultaneously with the Founder's Day exercises which the student body had decided not to attend.

One of these was a "funeral" for Hampton Institute staged by students Sunday morning as the traditional Founder's Day sermon was being delivered in Memorial Church by the Rev. Henry Wilder Foote, a member of the trustee board.

Dr. Foote was one of several visiting speakers who came to bring appropriate messages to the campus population of approximately 2,300 and found themselves addressing fantastically small audiences or no audiences at all. The church was one-fourth occupied.

Trustees' Action Hit

This was due, not to animosity toward the visitors, but to a boycott of the entire Founder's Day observance which developed after the trustees announced Friday evening that they had received and were "tabling" President Bridgman's resignation.

Speakers Embarrassed

Dr. John Hope Franklin, professor of history at Howard University, delivered a forceful address on the contributions of colored soldiers in various wars of this country in Ogden Hall, Saturday night, but his audience was limited to 100 people, made up of townspeople, a few staff members, and a sprinkling of students.

A special program which was to have followed Dr. Franklin's address was called off because student participants, including the college choir, failed to appear.

"Funeral" Rites for School

While the church service was in progress, a procession of about 700 students formed on the campus, headed by five "pall-bearers" carrying a black-draped casket in a semi-serious "funeral march" protesting the trustees' action.

The procession wound through the campus and ended up at a building formerly used as a gymnasium, where the "death" of Hampton Institute was announced and a funeral sermon preached.

The procession then followed the "casket" to the lawn in front of Ogden Hall where it was placed on a funeral pyre.

Naval Award Postponed

A major highlight of the scheduled Founder's Day program was to have been a military review and presentation of a naval award to Hampton Institute for services contributed by the college during World War II.

This event, scheduled for 3 p.m. on Sunday, was canceled because inclement weather prevented Rear Admiral W. L. Ainsworth from traveling to the campus with the award.

Symposium Called Off

The boycott of a symposium on "Opportunities Made and Used in World War II" was nearly one 100% effective.

Scheduled participants included Lester B. Granger, executive secretary of the National Urban League and a Hampton trustee; James C. Evans, adviser to the Secretary of Defense; Lt. Gen. Elwood Quesada, and Campbell Johnson, executive assistant to the director, Office of Selective Service Records.

When the speakers arrived in Ogden Hall for the symposium at four o'clock, they found only 14 persons seated in the hall, not one of whom was a student. By 4:15 p.m. the audience had increased to 30 and the symposium was called off.

Phone Call Settles Issue

Shortly after this, word was circulated around the campus that President Bridgman had insisted that his resignation be accepted in a telephone conversation with Dr. Tobias, who had returned to New York. On behalf of the board, Dr. Tobias accepted the resignation.

Verification of this report came at about seven o'clock Sunday night when notices signed by the officials of the college, were posted on all bulletin boards, announcing that the resignation had been accepted.

Although President Bridgman declined to make any public comment on his resignation, it was reported that he communicated with Dr. Tobias immediately after the students' "funeral service" Sunday morning.

Apprehensive lest other demonstrations be staged during the week, disrupting classroom and other campus activities, he is said to have insisted to Dr. Tobias that his resignation be accepted immediately for the best interests of Hampton Institute.

Howard Freshmen to Meet "New Look" in Education

Counselor Service Designed to Decrease Mortality Rate; Careful Checks Planned

WASHINGTON—"A new look" in the field of education will be introduced at Howard University's College of Liberal Arts, this fall, when a freshman class expected to number 1000 students is formally welcomed at Andrew Ranking Memorial Chapel on Oct. 5.

The innovation at Howard is the establishment of a counselor service under the directorship of Dr. Frederick Watts, a trained clinical psychologist. He is being assisted in the organization of the program by Dr. Paul F. Lawrence, formerly a research consultant to the Pepsi Cola Scholarship Board.

In revealing Howard's new counseling and guidance program, Dr. St. Clair Price, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, told the AFRO representative that he believes it will be an answer to the university's need for better students.

To Get Needed Stimuli

"We have an excellent faculty," Dr. Price stated, "now we need the students, who will receive the most intense stimulation to their teaching methods."

The dean explained that part of the work of the counseling service will be the screening of freshman class applicants. Not only is Howard interested in accepting students who have maintained high scholastic averages during their preparatory school training but the university is interested in the students' needs, Dr. Price stated.

The screening, it was reported, will consist of intelligence tests, the usual character references and an interview.

Seeking to Prevent Misfits

The counselor, trained in clinical psychology, acts more or less like a personnel interviewer and it is his responsibility to steer the prospective student into his rightful field and to determine whether the prospect will be a college "misfit."

Dean Price explained that Howard's "student mortality" is little above the national college normal. That is, according to average figures, about 13% of the persons first registering in the freshman class fail to return to school for sophomore training.

Only about 50% of the freshmen are graduated, he also stated.

About 16% of Howard's freshman drop out during their first year and more than 50% of them never graduate. "Our objective is to reduce this student mortality," the dean declared, "and the only way that we can see to do this is to exercise greater care in the selection of our freshmen.

"We are going to discourage our students from taking professional courses, when we find that they aren't equipped for that field.

To Follow Progress

Dr. Price, who is about to enter his seventh year as dean of the College of Liberal Arts, asserted that the counselors after selecting suitable freshmen will carefully follow the new students' progress during their initial collegiate year.

The dean reported that the new Howard faculty will number 186 members, about 68% of them are holders of Ph.D.'s. The College of Liberal Arts had 4,188 students enrolled last year, but he doesn't expect an enrollment that large this fall.

In College Field Since 1920

Dr. Price is 58 years old, a native of Barbadoes, B.W.I. He received his undergraduate training at the University of Michigan, obtaining his A.B. degree in 1917.

The educator intended to pursue the field of journalism after graduation, but he received an appointment as a principal of a mixed elementary school in Ypsilanti, Mich., where he served for two years.

Following his principalship at the small Michigan school he joined the faculty at West Virginia State College, where he served from 1920 until 1930. At West Virginia State College, Dean Price was director of the Teacher Training Division at the time he was given an associate professorship at Howard.

Prior to assuming his present post, Dean Price served as director of the summer and evening schools at Howard.

Interest in Athletics Cited

In addition to his other duties, Dr. Price serves as chairman of the athletic committee and has been credited with exhibiting interest in Howard's return to power in athletics.

"Our strong football teams have been a great help in boosting the school spirit on the Howard campus, the dean declared. "And I feel that we can field strong athletic squads without lowering our scholastic standards."

About the World War II veterans, who compose about 33% of the Liberal Arts College's enrollment, Dr. Price has nothing but praise, as he states:

"The veterans have been a wonderful tonic to the institution. They have entered school with a purpose and have thoroughly integrated themselves into all departments of the college."

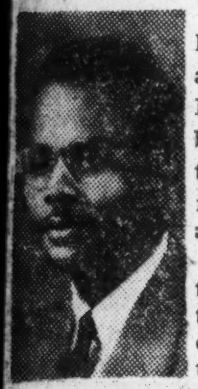
WASHINGTON — William C. Pritchett, who received his B. A. degree from Howard University in June, received word from Paris this week that he has received an assistantship in France and will be assigned to the Ecole Normale de Garcon at Arras.



W. C. Prichett

Prichett, a native of Wilmington, Del., received this award through the Committee on Franco - American Student Exchange. He will leave America in time to arrive in France for the fall term, and will remain abroad for one year. His duties in France will consist mainly of teaching English conversation to French students.

Pritchett made application for the French Government Teaching Assistantship because of a desire to continue his education through foreign travel and study. Dr. Mercer Cook, professor of Romance Languages at Howard university, recommended him for the position.

During his college career, he majored in romance languages and was appointed a student assistant in the department shortly before he received his degree. He says he will return to the United States and work on his master's degree following a year's stay in France.

Howard Prof. To Lecture At White Colleges

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Dr. John Lovell Jr., associate professor of English at Howard University, has departed for the far West to assume a visiting lectureship on behalf of the American Friends Service Committee in 14 colleges and universities of Iowa and California, it was announced last week by Howard University officials.

The purpose of these lectureships, sponsored by the Friends, is to introduce Negro scholars into white universities and colleges on a regular basis. The visiting lecturer assumes the duties of a regular member of the department, and enters into the social life of the campus.

He thus breaks down artificial barriers which have previously attached to his membership in his race or group.

The colleges Dr. Lovell will visit are: in Iowa—Parsons College, William Penn College, Central College; in California—Pomona College, Scripps Women's College, Claremont Men's College, Mills College, College of the Pacific, Stanford University, University of California at Berkeley, University of California at Los Angeles.

He will be away for the entire winter quarter, from January to April.

Topics which Dr. Lovell has been asked to discuss are: "Challenges to American Democracy as Seen in the Literature," "The New American Theatre," "Bernard Shaw and the Theory of Propaganda Through Film," "Negro Drama Through a Looking Glass," "Philosophical Backgrounds of New England Transcendentalism," and "Thoreau."

At the University of California at Berkeley, from which the lecturer received his doctoral degree, Dr. Lovell will also conduct the weekly poetry reading in the Morrison Recreational Library.

HOWARD UNIVERSITY, Washington, had largest enrollment, 6,000, with over one-third of this number GI students. Thirty Wacs are included in this number.

According to Dr. Russell, of the Office of Education, almost as many applicants had to be turned away because of lack of accommodations.

Budget To Congress Calls For $2,747,000 For Howard In 1949

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA) Estimates totaling $2,747,640 for the partial support of Howard University are carried in the federal budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1, next, which President Truman transmitted to Congress last Monday.

This sum represents a decrease of $1,439,840 from the appropriaton of $4,287,840 for the university for the current fiscal year. This reduction is accounted for by a decrease in the direct appropriations for building plans and con-

The university receives federal funds for the partial support of undergraduate, graduate and specialized education and training.

FACILITIES CROWDED

An explanatory statement in the budget points out that facilities at Howard are at present crowded to the limit, chiefly with veterans, with the result that enrollment cannot be increased in 1949.

To provide a lower teacher-student ratio, an additional $145,000 is recommended for salaries and expenses.

To complete the construction of a dental school building, and an auditorium building with facilities for the school of music and the teaching of fine arts—authorized and provided for in the fiscal years 1947 and 1948—an additional contract authorization of $750,750 is recommended in the estimates.

FOR ALTERATIONS

An appropriation of $507,240 is also recommended to make alterations and installations in the powerhouse and science hall, made necessary by the new construction program.

President Truman also recommended an appropriation of $50,000 for the preparation of a master development plan for the university, to guide the future design and construction of buildings and improvements, including roads, walks, utilities, recreation facilities, and landscape development, to remain available until expended.

For salaries and expenses of the university an appropriation of $2,190,400 is recommended toward a total university budget of $4,131,004. The difference between the federal appropriation and the total obligations for personal services and miscellaneous expenses is obtained by a total $1,822,491 which the university estimates it will receive from private sources, $68,533 reimbursement for services performed, and $49,640 by transfer from salaries and expenses of Freedmen's Hospital for technical and professional personnel detailed to the hospital.

FEDERAL APPROPRIATIONS

Obligations, toward which federal appropriations are recommended, include administration and general expenses, $382,454; resident instruction and departmental research, $2,391,216; general library, $117,667; operation and maintenance of physical plant, $538,849; service enterprises, $651,276, and other non-educational expenses, $49,542; total, $4,131,004.

Salaries at Howard include Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president, $10,000; James M. Nabrit, secretary, $7,125; V. D. Johnston, treasurer, $8,181, F. D. Wilkinson, registrar, $5,905.

On the administrative staff, the budget lists three deans and directors of student personnel, $19,173; director of student health service, $6,098; administrative assistant to the president, assistant treasurer, assistant registrar, director of employed personnel, and director of publicity, $4,902 each.

Among the officers of instruction are listed thirteen deans and directors, $83,882; 113 professors, $610,745; forty associate professors, $211,218; 68 assistant professors, $312,194, and 145 instructors, $485,651.

Ghandi associate honored at Howard

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Dr. Amiya Chakrarerty, professor of English at India's Calcutta university and a close associate of the late Mahatma Ghandi, was guest of honor at a luncheon in his honor at Howard university recently. His wife and daughter and the Indian ambassador were also present.

porting the 1948 campaign of the United Negro College Fund, today (Saturday, CBS, 4:00—4:30 P. M., EDST, from Washington, D. C.).

Thomas D'Arcy Brophy, chairman of the publicity committee of the United Negro College Fund, Inc., and president of the advertising agency, which arranged by Hall Johnson, from New York on behalf of the United Negro College Fund, today will speak on behalf of the campaign for funds for 32 private Negro colleges. Goal this year has been set at $1,400,000. The receipts are one of the members and beneficiaries of the Fund. This is the fifth year the United Negro College Fund has appealed

Dr. William Stuart Nelson, New Howard University Dean

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—Dr. William Stuart Nelson, now serving as Professor and Dean of the Howard School of Religion, nas been appointed Dean of the University, it was announced by Mr. James M. Nabrit, Jr. Secretary of the University.

Dean Nelson will continue to serve as Professor and Dean of the School of Religion for the time being.

The Dean of the University will be responsible to the President of the University for the supervision of the educational divisions of the University including all of its schools and colleges, the University Library and the student personnel divisions of the University.

Born in Paris, Kentucky, in 1895, Dean William Stuart Nelson received the A. B. degree from Howard University in 1920, the B. D. from Yale University in 1924 and studied at the University of Paris, 1921-22; at the University of Berlin, 1922-23; and at the University of Marburg, Germany in 1923 and from 1925-26. As a result of his extensive travel and study in Europe he became a fluent linguist and served as interpreter at a number of important international conferences.

Educator; After serving at Howard University as Instructor and later, Assistant Professor of Religion, 1925-29 and as Associate Professor of Philosophy and Assistant to the President 1929-31, Dr. Nelson accepted the Presidency of Shaw University, Raleigh, North Carolina. During the five years of his leadership there the financial position, at first critical, was greatly improved, the instructional program was strengthened, student enrollment and scholarship were raised, the number and caliber of the faculty were elevated.

BRILLIANT CAREER

Dr. Nelson became President of Dillard University in 1936 at the end of its first year of operation, and he continued in that post for four years.

Since 1940 Dr. Nelson has served as Dean of the School of Religion at Howard University. In spite of the numerous problems which have beset this period of national defense and war, the School of Religion under the leadership of Dean Nelson, has grown in stature in the field of theological education.

Several noteworthy periodicals have come into existence under Dr. Nelson's sponsorship. While at Dillard University he launched "The Arts Quarterly," the first art publication to be produced at a school for Negroes. "The Journal of Religious Thought," now in its third year of publication and under the editorship of Dean Nelson, has already achieved national acclaim as a scholarly publication of exceptional merit.

Dean Nelson served as editor of "The Christian Way in Race Relations," a volume sponsored by the Institute of Religion and published by Harper and Brothers.

Howard University has taken formal cognizance of the conspicious achievement of Dean Nelson by conferring upon him an honorary degree in 1936, and the Alumni Award, for distinguished post-graduate service in 1948.

Milton Elected Chairman Of Howard Univ. Trustees

WASHINGTON, D. C.— Lorimer D. Milton, distinguished bank president, educator, civic and business leader of Atlanta, Georgia, was unanimously elected Chairman of the Howard University Board of Trustees at its regular monthly meeting, it was announced Wednesday by Dr. James M. Nabrit, Jr., Secretary of the University.

Mr. Milton, President of the Citizens Trust Company in Atlanta, will succeed Dr. P. B. Young, Sr., Publisher of the Norfolk Journal and Guide, who resigned as Chairman of the Trustee Board in September for reasons of business and health.

The Citizens Trust Company is the first and only bank owned and operated by Negroes to be admitted to the Federal Reserve System. Besides being president of this bank, Mr. Milton is a member of the faculty of Atlanta University and is the co-owner and operator of a number of businesses, including several drug stores.

The newly-elected Chairman of Howard University's Board of Trustees is also a member of the Small Business Advisory Committee to the Secretary of Commerce. He has been a member of the Board of Trustees of Howard University for several years and has served as Chairman of the Finance Committee and a member of the Executive Committee.

Mr. Milton is a graduate of Brown University, where he received the A. B. and the A. M. degrees.

Howard U gets $2,000 from Hillman Foundation

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Howard University has received an award of $2,000 from the $1,000,000 Sidney Hillman Foundation which honors the memory of the late president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

The sum will be used for scholarships. Each year for 25 years, the foundation will award $30,000 in funds to various individuals and institutions.

Embree urges Howard to admit all

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Howard university should cease to be a segregated Negro school and open its classrooms to all students on the sole basis of ability, Edwin R. Embree, noted anthropologist and president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, said here last week after receiving an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from the university.

Urging "that Howard become a truly national university," Dr. Embree pointed out that the school's charter does not in any way restrict the race, religion, or national origin of students, faculties, or trustees. He recalled that Howard's first faculty and all of its earlier enrollment was white, and that the school's founders had never intended it to become a racial institution, created though it was "because of a special concern for the freedman."

It was understandable, Dr. Embree said, that Howard should have become segregated, because of finances and prejudices, but added, "It is time for Howard to fulfill its chartered purpose of higher education not for Negro youth but for American youth." He noted that only one-and-a-half percent of its 5,000 students today are non-Negro.

He acknowledged that this "free admission does not now exist throughout the country," but also declared that "no self-respecting college or university in the North or West these days rejects students on the basis of creed or color," with "faculties . . . undergoing a veritable transformation."

"And within the past six years, 50 of our most important colleges and universities have appointed a total of 75 Negroes to their faculties, most of them to regular, permanent posts

"Negroes who protest discrimination sometimes are as guilty of it as their white neighbors. Some Negro preachers have a vested interest in segregated housing. Realtors, both white and Negro, make easy money out of ghetto housing. Some Negro teachers see a selfish benefit to themselves in being assured positions in a segregated school system.

Concluding, Dr. Embree glimpsed the impressive prize that might be reached if Howard should immediately free itself from the notion that it had to be a Negro university: "America needs a great national university. Almost every enlightened nation has in its capital city its capital university, the capstone of the higher education of all its people. It is proper—and natural—that Howard should become the great national institution of America. It stands in America's capital city. It has solid standards of scholarship which in many branches during recent years have grown to high distinction. It is the only university supported by the federal government—by direct Congressional appropriations. And so already in effect, Howard is the American national university."

Interim Agreement Completed Gallinger's Doors Opened To Interns From Howard U.

An interim agreement under which Howard University medical school faculty members and students will serve at Gallinger Hospital was completed yesterday.

The plan, tentatively outlined in March, was approved after conference of District officials with deans of the medical schools of Georgetown, George Washington and Howard Universities.

It provides that the Howard medical school dean may nominate up to 25 per cent of the Gallinger interne complement; recommend attending physicians and a member of the hospital's executive committee. Georgetown and Washington medical schools will each nominate 25 per cent of the Gallinger interne staff. The Health Department will name the remaining internes from medical schools in other communities.

Howard interne appointments will be recommended on October 15. They will not start serving until July 1, 1949, because the present complement of 37 was appointed before Georgetown and George Washington agreed to give up their previously exclusive right to supply internes to Gallinger.

The agreement reached yesterday will continue indefinitely until Howard personnel become available to share equally all Gallinger posts with the other two medical schools, Sweeney said.

Hint Higher-Ups In Howard Grade Racket

The Defender 1480 Sat 4-17-48

Student Says Only Used As 'Tool' In Plot

Expect Big Scandal To Break When Court Sifts All Facts

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Rumors that some "higher ups" may be involved in the alleged grade-fixing at Howard university gained momentum this week following a continuance in the case of Carl Prince, suspected ring leader of the racket who was quoted at the time of his arrest as claiming he was "an innocent victim of circumstances and a tool of the higher ups."

Belford V. Lawson, attorney for the defendant told the Defender that he had agreed to the government's request for a continuance because "the racket appears to be widespread and we need more time to investigate some persons in the inner circle." He also stated, "There appears to be a lot of students involved."

Prince, a student veteran charged with false pretense in the practice which police said drew $150 to $500 in fees from students for altering grades on official records was allowed to remain free on a $300 bond for hearings on May 3-25-48

Student Confident

Slight of stature, barely scaling five feet in height, the young veteran who is a resident of Yorktown, Va., told the Defender that the students at Howard university "are on my side." This is not confirmed. He deported himself with obvious confidence and chatted with marked intelligence following his appearance with counsel in the United States branch of the Municipal court.

This air of self-confidence drew sharp rebuke from Detective Sargent John Apostolides of the district check and fraud squad who was overheard in the corridor chiding Prince for what he termed his lack of concern for the thousands of students at the university. "You seem to be off of the hook," he remarked.

Apostolides told Attorney Lawson that the case was much bigger than they had originally expected. He said that much information had been turned up which he was not at liberty to reveal at this time. He did hint strongly that with the arrest of Prince, "accomplices" may be expected momentarily.

Girl Complains

The grade fixing racket came to the attention of police last week after a girl student complained to the university that she had paid Prince $100 to raise a failing grade only to be advised later by the institution that she was being dropped for failing the course involved.

Meanwhile three other Howard university student veterans are being held by United States Commissioner Turnage in $200 bond each for grand jury action on charges that they fraudently cashed another veteran's subsistance check of $45. 3-20-48

The secret service said the youths took a check belonging to Dan Eugene Richardson Jr., and cashed it at a liquor store after one of them identified himself thru a student identification card which had been altered with an ink eradicator. Held in this charge are James Reid, 26; James Moffatt, 22 and James Delaney, 23, all students of the university veteran's dormitory.

Big Money Involved In Grade Changing

WASHINGTON — A student, disgruntled at allegedly paying $100 to have a failing grade revised upward only to be notified that she was being dropped from school anyway, last week exposed a huge grade changing racket involving thousands of dollars at Howard University, police say.

She is Brutise M. Smith, who complained to university officials that she paid student veteran Carl Prince, 21, $100 to change a failing grade, then when notified by the school she was to be dropped, returned to Prince who allegedly demanded another $100 to carry through the deal. She refused, reporting the incident to the registrar, Frederick D. Wilkinson.

According to investigator Prince had nine or more accomplices working in three university offices "fixing" students' record cards. Police said students were charged from $150 to $500 for uplifting grades, pending how low the grade was and how high they wanted it raised. Prince is charged by police with accepting money under false pretenses and has been released on $300 bond pending further hearings in municipal court here this week.

Cards Missing

Stating 200 to 300 students' records are missing, university officials have launched an investigation to determine the scope of the grade changing. Photostatic copies of the cards are available, however, it was pointed out.

Advanced copies of exams were alleged obtained for $15 to $75, depending upon their importance, it is reported. University officials say cards are missing from the dean's office, the veterans' office and the registrar's office.

Student Freed Of Grade-Fixing Charge

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—False pretense charges against Carl Prince, 21, Howard University student, accused of accepting $100 to "fix" university records so a girl student could get a passing grade, were dismissed last Friday in Municipal Court. 3-29-48

Judge Casey ordered the dismissal when the girl who brought the original charges failed to appear as a witness. The case previously had been continued three times.

Chicago U. Drops Biased Applications

CHICAGO—(ANP)—In an effort to make its non-discriminatory admittance policy of a reality, the University of Chicago announced last week that it had dropped the picture and discriminatory questions from its application blanks.

Dean of Student Robert M. Strozier said that the results of a recent survey by the Chicago Council against Racial and Religious discrimination and the Women's Council for Fair Educational practices, and the student paper caused the university to make these changes.

This report revealed that 22 per cent of the higher education institutions asked five or more discriminatory questions in their application blanks. The student newspaper, the Chicago Maroon, brought it to the attention of the dean about three weeks ago that the U. of C. was listed in this group.

DROP PICTURE NOW

Pictures on application blanks have been eliminated immediately. Questions that could lead to discrimination will be eliminated by the summer of 1949 Dean Strozier said.

These questions will include those on race, languages spoken in home mother's maiden name, parent's birthplace and other like queries.

Declaring that he was sure the university did not discriminate against applicants the dean called the questionable queries on the blank "as near useless appendages that have hung on as the form grew." He said:

"As I am so close to the general admissions policy of the university I know that no discrimination is exercised on racial or religious basis and therefore did not realize the implications of the form.

"None of the information has been used in any way but of interest to the student.

BIAS COLLEGES SUED

During the 1930's several suits were brought against public institutions of higher learning because of their refusal to admit qualified Negro students. Tracing the history of such suits, the Negro Year Book of 1937 refers to the effort of Thomas Holcutt in 1932 to secure admission to the School of Pharmacy of the University of North Carolina as probably the first suit of a Negro student to enter a southern white institution.

'Senate' Unanimously Ends Segregation In Co-Ed Residence Halls

BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—A student group on the campus here last week voted unanimously to end segregation in women's residence halls, and revealed that if the university trustees approve their action, 84 Negro girls will be rehoused.

The action was taken by a special committee of the Indiana university student Senate which reported favorably on passage of a bill "to eliminate undemocratic practices of discrimination by segregation in women's residence halls".

Seek Trustee Okay

After further approval by the entire body of the Senate the bill must go to the University Board of Trustees before it becomes campus law.

The committee heard student testimony which revealed that 84 colored women are now residing in three houses which were formerly one-family residences and that they are barred from the regular dormitories which house white women students.

Rap Quota System

It was also pointed out that the school operates on "an unofficial quota system" by admitting only 84 Negro women each semester for the past four semesters.

Last year a Co-op house asked the board of trustees to permit it to invite the colored girls to reside there, but the request was denied.

The bill outlawing segregation in the dormitories was introduced by Senators Sarah Chapman McClain and J. Arnold Feldman. Majorie Beard was chairman of the special senate committee.

AVC and Jews Aid Plan

Witnesses testifying for the bill were Dr. Francis Wormuth and Prof. K. C. Davis, with other faculty members; and Wilson A. Head, executive secretary, Indianapolis NAACP; Karl Sondermann, American Veterans Committee, and Louis Greenberg, Indiana Jewish Community Relations Councils.

Segregation On Campus Would Be Abolished

Indiana University Student Senate Favors Proposal

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — (ANP) —A special committee of the Indiana University Student senate unanimously favored a bill which would end the segregation of Negro women on the campus after committee hearing last week.

Approval of a proposed act to eliminate jim crow among women on the campus by the committee plus the fact that every witness testified in favor of the bill brought the prediction that the student senate will pass the bill.

The suggested bill, Senate bill No. 2 is entitled "An act to elimate undemocratic practices of discrimination by segregation in women's residence halls." After being approved by the student senate, the bill then must be favored by the university board of trustees to become law.

Testimony before the student committee revealed that 84 colored women were forced to live in three houses, all former one-family dwellings because they are barred from the regular dormitories.

It was also pointed out that the school operated an "unofficial quota system" by admitting only 84 colored women each semester for the last four semesters. Although a co-op house asked that colored girls be admitted last year, the board of trustees refused its request.

Senators Sarah Chapman McClain and J. Arnold Geldman introduced the bill. Marjorie Beard was chairman of the special committee, and Douglas Baugh and Feldman were members. Witnesses included Dr. Francis Wormuth and Prof. K. C. Davis and others of the faculty, and Wilson A. Head, executive secretary, Indianapolis NAACP; Karl Sondermann, American Veterans committee, and Louis Greenberg, Indiana Jewish Community Relations councils.

Indiana U. Opens Dorm to Negroes

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (ANP)—For the first time, a dormitory on the campus of Indiana University was open to colored women students when the school was redecorated and Lincoln Hall was made available this semester. Negro men had already been integrated on the campus.

Survey By Penn College Professor Bares Iowa College Bias Against Negroes

By ROBERT O. BLOOD, Jr.
Department of Sociology
William Penn College

In an era when relationships between the white minority and the colored masses in the world are increasingly significant, half of Iowa's colleges fail to give their students any opportunity for intergroup fellowship.

In the current issue of the "Iowa Journal of History and Politics" (January 1948), Ronda R. Bergman generalizes that "all Iowa colleges, both private and State-supported, are open to Negro students". As far as theory is concerned, this statement is nearly accurate. But in the realm of actual practice, the marked absence of such students from most of our campuses undermines our collective self-confidence.

True it is that in April, 1947 there were enrolled in thirty-six Iowa colleges surveyed some 274 Negro students, nearly twice the 150 estimated in the article cited, "The Negro in Iowa". But seven-eighths of these were to be found concentrated in the three largest educational institutions in the state, the State University with 90, Drake with 80, Iowa State College's 50 plus the fifteen at smaller William Penn College. The remaining thirty-seven regular enrolled students (omitting the two exchange students from Hampton attending Grinnell) were scattered among fifteen other colleges, and eight of these had but one Negro student apiece.

More important perhaps than such absolute figures is a study of the relative number of Negro students in the student bodies of the college reporting. Seventeen colleges with a total enrollment of nearly six thousand students had no colored students whatever.

Half of the nineteen colleges in which Negro students were present had substantially fewer than the proportion of Negroes in Iowa's total population (0.7% in 1940). And six of these 19 colleges, including Drake, had less than a proportionate share the Negro population of their local communities. These figures suggest that by and large these Iowa colleges are neglecting their educational responsibilities toward the Negro people of our own state.

Despite the fact that many Iowa colleges draw their students from nationwide constituencies, the survey shows that none of them is meeting fully the challenge of equal educational opportunities for all Americans. Only Central College with 1.3%, William Penn with 5.4%, and Drake University with 1.9% exceeded the 1% mark, and these two fall far short of serving the tenth of the nation which is colored.

The case of this situation does not seem to lie so much in the few instances of discrimination in admissions as in the failure of most Iowa colleges to make themselves clearly and concretely available to qualified Negro young people. That some of our colleges have honestly desired to remedy this one-sided situation is indicated by the following letter received from the President of a well-known Iowa college:

". . . I am not returning the questionnaire for we do not have any Negro students enrolled in our student body. This is not because there is any discrimination practiced, for they would be accepted by the students and community and would find the facilities of the community available to them. Our location in a small community where there have not been students of the colored race for many years has militated against an easy securing of such students. Our admissions committee is seeking such students and we hope they may be on our campus for I am sure they will have a happy experience here."

The problem which such colleges have faced of knowing how to contact qualified Negro students is now being effectively approached through an organization announced in the latest issue of the Phi Beta Kappa "Key Reporter". The College Scholarship Fund for Negro Students" is acquainting Negro students with those colleges which in the past received few or no applications from Negro students, although they are anxious to have Negroes represented in their student bodies." Correspondence with the Fund (at 360 West 122nd Street, New York) will be welcomed. I am sure, from all Iowa colleges which are concerned to promote interracial understanding and help train Negro leadership. No longer is the scattered distribution of Iowa's own Negro people a barrier to such service.

Jefferson School Not Fazed by Clark

Daily Worker

A counter-offensive of Jefferson School students and faculty is meeting "Attorney General Tom Clark's attempt to straitjacket the American people with thought control," Howard Selsam, the school's director said yesterday.

The school is organizing "to bring larger numbers of students to Jefferson School than ever before," Selsam declared. News of Ky, N.Y.

Hitting Clark's listing of the school as "subversive," Selsam declared that "the very meaning of Jefferson is poison to the through control clique." It was Jefferson, Selsam recalled, who said, "Educate and inform the whole mass of the people. They are the only sure reliance for the preservation of our liberty." 1-8-48

STARTS FIFTH YEAR

The school starts its fifth year with 140 courses, many of them new, 200 classes and close to 100 teachers. During the past four years more than 45,000 students—factory workers, clerks, office workers and professionals—have sought its answers. So successful have been its classes that annexes have been started in all the counties and this year marks initiation of extension courses in New Jersey and Inwood, as well. Daily Worker

"The Jefferson School is the only school where progressive - minded people can get the kind of education that will provide an understanding of the forces that work in our society today and teach them to act against reaction," said Selsam. "Is it any wonder that Clark doesn't like it?"

But its students and alumni are out to make this the biggest year in its history. New York, N.Y.

"It is because our school has carried out its aim that Clark has centered his fire against us," said the soft-spoken director in his office at the Jefferson School, 575 Avenue of the Americas. Times

"We will not flinch in our responsibility to tell the truth to the people. Only through a basic understanding of what makes our world tick can we defeat reaction's drive today and build the foundations of a better world. This is the kind of truth the people want and need to know." 1-8-48

Registration for the winter term which begins Jan. 19 is now going on and will continue through Jan. 24, from 2 to 9 p.m. daily and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturdays.

Courses are offered in Marxism, Socialism, economics and philosophy and on the Marshall Plan, China, Our Times and World Politics. A full cultural program for children and adults is also offered.

Change Name Of Alabama College

NORMAL, ALA.—Change of name from the State Agricultural and Mechanical Institute to the Alabama Agricultural and Mechanical College was made January 14 when the State Board of Education took final action on a request for the change by Dr. J. F. Drake, president of the institution.

The college is located at Normal, in the northern part of the state, and is the land-garnt college for Negroes of Alabama.

Alcorn College Granted $25,000

ALCORN, Miss.—(ANP)— Alcorn A. and M. College, in conjunction with Mississippi State College has been granted $25,000 by the General Education Board to finance a series of socio-economic studies pertaining to Negroes in Mississippi, it was disclosed here last week. The project is under the direction of Dr. Emile Hooker, research specialist who holds a Ph.D. degree in agricultural economics from Cornell University.

Dr. Hooker has worked at Tuskegee and at Hampton and was for many years, an assistant to Dr. George Washington Carver.

Aside from the general objectives of gathering specific information on economic, educational, and health status of Negroes in the state, and of analyzing and interpreting it so that steps toward improvement may be taken, the project will also attempt the following

RESEARCH OBJECTIVES

(1) Collect information on economic, educational and health status of Negroes in Miss. from original and secondary scores by type of farming areas and translate the information into published form to be used by institutional agencies on the county, state and federal levels and by the local chapter of the Southern Regional Council on racial relations.

(2) Analyze and process data so that information may be available on the status of Negroes by area and economic groups, to encourage them to improve their status, to improve institutional services in health and education, and to improve deficiencies in farm organization and practices.

Mississippi Gets Bill To Set Up Law School

JACKSON, Miss,. — (ANP) — Mississippi's only state institution of higher learning for Negroes, Alcorn Agricultural and Mechanical college, will be the home of a segregated state law school if a bill before the house of representatives of the state legislature, now in session, can be passed.

Introduced by Rep. Chalmers Alexander of Hinds county, the bill requires the state board of trustees for schools of higher learning shall set up a law department at Alcorn for training to meet requirements necessary to practice law in Mississippi.

Under the new bill, the board will pick a faculty to provide a course of study to "conform in its respects and in its requirements, to the requirements upon the department of law now conducted at the University of Mississippi."

The proposed law would be effective immediately on passage.

Alcorn Receives Gram From Gen. Education Board

Alcorn A. and M. College and Mississippi State College have announced a grant of $5,000.00 to the two Colleges jointly for the employment of a Negro trained in Agricultural Economics or Rural Sociology to carry on socio-economic studies pertaining to Negroes in Mississippi.

Dr. Emile Hooker has been employed as the research specialist. He holds a Ph. D. defiree in Agricultural Economics from Cornell University and has worked at Tuskegee and at Hampton. For years he was an Assistant to Professor Geo W. Carver.

Aside from the general object of gathering specific as well as general information on the economic, educational, and health status of Negroes in Mississippi and if analyzing and interpreting such information so that necessary steps for improving the general status of the state may be taken ,the College lists the following as the objectives of the project:

1. To collect specific as well as general over-all information on the economic, educational and health status of Negroes in Mississippi from original and secondary suorces by type of framing aresa and for the state as a whole and translate this information into published materials to be used by institutional agencies on the Copnty, State and Federal levels and by the Mississippi center of the Southern Regional Council on Racial Relations.

2. To analyze and process data and general information as indicated in "1" above so that objective and concrete information may be available on the general status of Negroes by areas and by economic groups to the end that (a) Negroes may be encouraged and assisted in helping themselves to improve their status (b) institutional services in health; and education including general, vocational and adult, may be improved; (c) the economic status of rural Negroes may be improved through a better understanding of the deficiences in farm organization, farm practices and possible credit need by Negro farm operators and an appraisal of how those deficiences can be dealt with.

3. To provide much needed research information to members of the staff of Alcorn A and M College that will be of value in appraising and improving specific curriculum offerings and the general stitutional program of work.

4. To give recognition and emphasis to the need for economic improvement on the part of the Negro race within the State and to create a consciousness on the part of all the peoplethat progress in the State cannot be maximized unless all the people of the State make improvement.

There is great need for this program of work. Approximately one-half of the population of Mississippi is composed of Negroes. But there is little or no resreach work at the present time dealing with problems peculiar to the Negro population as such. His economic educational, and health status generally speaking is extremely low.

There are many ways in which the Negro could help himself if given the proper encouragement and opportunity. Institutional services and the economic status of Negroes could be significantly improved to the mutual advantage of both the white and colored races. Probably the most logical point of departure for such a program of improvement is that of providing information on the problems involved and appraisal of how these can be attacked.

The initial effort will probably be channelled towards the assembling and organization of secondary data now available in many places. In addition, an effort will be made to meet, in some measure the very great demand basic research pertaining to the Negro in the State.

Mississippi Chapter of the Southern Regional Council is cooperating in carrying out the project.

This program of work should run indefinitely but the request for funds to the General Education Board covers a period of five years Financial assistance is needed over a long enough period of time to have the program of work well established and to have the worth of each a program demonstrated.

College Asks State Funds

JACKSON, Miss.—(ANP)—Alcorn college has asked the Mississippi legislature for appropriations of $2,275,000 for the 1948-1950 biennium for operation expenses and expansion program so that it may provide better facilities for education of Negroes in the state.

Dr. William H. Pipes, president of Alcorn, told the house appropriations committee that for close to 75 years Alcorn has been almost entirely forgotten by the state in a financial way. Recently, however, he added, the college has been remembered: a new highway has been made.

A request for $40,000 for support was justified as follows: For instruction, Qualified teachers must be paid higher salaries and the college stands a good chance of losing many it has if salaries are not increased. The agriculture division and the trades division are in dire need of equipment in order to do a good job, and or operation and maintenance of plant.

Mississippi will do well to give better maintenance to so valuable a plant as Alcorn. Money for this work has been extremely inadequate in the past.

A request was made for $1,935,000.00 for permanent improvements including electrical system; sewage disposal system; make a topographical map of the campus; build additional flunes; rework steam lines in buildings; an emergency water well; an additional boiler at power plant; street lighting; system of class bells.

Firing Charges At Alcorn Denied

(Special to The Courier)

ALCORN, Miss. — Announcing that he was seeking to bring Alcorn A. and M. College up to such standards as to secure an "A" rating, Dr. William H. Pipes, president of the school, announced that his teaching staff for the next term has been reduced from fifty-seven to forty-six members. Alcorn has an over-all staff of 140, including clerical workers.

At the same time several deposed members of the faculty fired charges alleging that Dr. Pipes' action was being taken for purposes other than those set forth in the letters notifying them of their dismissal.

Among those not being rehired for the next term are the dean of men, a dean of instructions, and the head athletic coach, who last season developed Alcorn's football team into a national power, losing only one game to Tennessee State during the entire year.

The dismissal notices went out on May 21.

It was understood that a minor incident occurred at the institution several weeks ago when students broke up dishes in the dining hall and threw food over the floors, in protest against what they termed "unfair treatment." Dr. Pipes denied this.

"INEFFICIENCY" FOR SOME

Explaining his action to The Courier, Dr. Pipes said that he wanted Alcorn to get the "A" rating, and it would be necessary to increase the standards of his faculty before that could be done. Therefore he was releasing some of the members of the faculty with lesser degrees in order to replace them with staff members holding degrees which meet Class "A" standards. He did say that two or three of the dismissed instructors were dropped for inefficiency.

Dr. Pipes pointed out that when he took over as president three years ago, he accepted such teachers as he was able to get then, but now he wanted to improve his faculty standards and secure teachers with more M. A. and Ph. D. degrees. The high school is also being discontinued this year.

Alcorn is said to be the oldest Negro land grant college in the United States.

Florida A. & M. Given $500,000 For Hospital

Defender

MIAMI, Fla.—(ANP)—The Florida budget committee awarded $500,000 to Florida A && M college for the building of a new hospital and $800,000 for a new sanatorium last week. Chicago Ill.

The new hospital will be the only one open to the general Negro population between Pensacola and Jackonville. It will erve a a Negro nurse training center and student infirmary. Oct. 7-10-48

The total project will cost $1,250,000. The federal government, the city of Tallahassee and private donors will contribute the additional funds needed to complete the project. 7-10-48

The Lantana tuberculosis sanatorium will cost $3,240,000 Other expenses will be paid by the same sources as the hospital. Chicago Ill.

Governor Receives Many Letters In Protest To The Fla. A. & M. Band Appering In Miami; Dec. 6 – 1947

The Florida Tattler Jacksonville, Fla.

It was reported to the Tattler last week that a flood of letters coming from white citizens throughout the State of Florida were sent to Governor Caldwell protesting the appearance of the Fla. A. and M. College Band down in Miami on December 6, 1947.

It seems as if the Negro College Band really pulled off something that the U. of F. Band could not do with all her finances and opportunities at her disposal. Sat. 1-31-48

It's very narrow on the part of those who wrote letters in protest — But the Fla. A. and M. College Band is still going strong with its capable leader Mr. Foster, a Tuskegee Man.

The Fla. A. and M. College is now operating on about one-fourth of what the University of Florida operates but yet is doing a bigger and finer job.

There seems to be somewhat of a streak of jealousy existing somewhere in more ways than one.

It was also reported that the basket-ball togs of Fla. A. and M. were of such design that the U. of F. demanded them and got them. Fla. A. and M. is setting a pattern seemingly for the U. of F.

It seems to us that there is some undercurrent afoot to throw a wrench into the Orange Bowl Classic, that is one thing the entire State awaits annually.

Now let us hope that the Governor will receive more letters but in favor of the Fla. A. and M. College. A half loaf seems to do what a whole loaf does. — Amen Sat. 1-31-48

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Jan. 8 — Mrs. Alfred I. DuPont, head of the extensive DuPont interest in Florida, has contributed five thousand dollars (5,000.00) to the Florida A and M College Hospital Campaign here recently, according to an announcement by Dr. William H. Gray Jr. President of the College. This contribution one of the largest received by the institution in its effort to build a nursing school and health center for the Negroes of Florida, was given to develop a Du Pont Memorial Clinic. Mrs. Du-Pont in making the contribution told President Gray that she was greatly impressed with the nursing education program of the college and the need for improving the health conditions of Negroes of the state.

Dr. Gray also announced that the college has received over one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000.00) in gifts towards the project. The city of Tallahassee has tentatively appropriated one hundred fifty thousand dollars ($150,000.00) for the program;; the state of Florida, five program; state of Florida, 5 hundred thousand dollars $500,000.00) and it ernment will match these funds to assure the building of the 100 bed hospital at a cost expected to exceed one million dollars $1,000,000-00.

Damage Suit Funds Promised College

Sat. 3-20-48

By NNPA News Service

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Governor Millard Caldwell of Florida, who is leading the fight for Congressional approval of the compact of 14 southern states to set up regional schools, reiterated last Friday that he will donate Florida A. and M. College the money as damages for libel from Collier's magazine. Norfolk Va.

A United States District Court jury at Tallahassee, Fla. on March 9 awarded Governor Caldwell damages of $237,500 against the magazine. The jury deliberated two hours before returning its verdict.

The Governor had charged that the magazine had falsely and maliciously quoted him as condoning a lynching.

William L. Chenery, publisher of the magazine, announced that the verdict would be appealed.

$200,000 Veterans Village Dedicated At Fla. A. and M.

Daily World Tampa, Fla. 11-2-48

TALLAHASSEE, — (SNS)—Secretary of State R. A. Gray was the principal speaker for the dedication ceremonies of the $200,000 veteran village at Florida A. and M. College at ten o'clock Saturday morning as a main feature of Homecoming Day at the school.

The housing units were named in honor of Lieutenant James R. Polkinghorne, Jr., a student of the College who lost his life in the European Theater of Operations during World War II.

Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., the highest ranking Negro Officer in the Air Force and his 332nd Fighter Group from Lockbourne Air Base in Ohio flew over the college campus and gave a salute during the ceremony at 11:15 o'clock. William Mitchell, of West Palm Beach commander of the Negro American Legion of Florida, also appeared on the program. A plaque was presented to the parents of James Polkinghorne of Pensacola by Captain Roy Spencer, who was in the battle in which Polkinghorne lost his life.

At half time of the game between Kentucky State, ranking team of the Midwestern Negro Conference, and Florida A. and M., Southern Conference champions, Colonel Davis reviewed the newly activated R. O. T. C. Unit at the college. The famous Florida A. and M. College band presented its usual spectacular performance for the half time show. Tampa 11-2-48

Dr. W. H. Gray, Jr., President of the college and Lucille G. Coleman, of Jacksonville, President of the General Alumni Association, presided over the various activities of the day which attracted over 7,000 people.

Fla. A. & M. Gets $3,000,000 Budget

Tampa Tribune Norfolk Va. 11-20

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — The State Board of Control of Florida approved the recommended budget to be presented to the forthcoming Legislative session of over $3,000,000 a year for Florida A. and M. College, $1,881,639.38 of which will come from state funds according to an announcement by Dr. William H. Gray Jr. president of the college. N.Y. 11-25-48

The budget as presented by President Gray, calls for an 85 per cent increase and makes provisions for training in journalism, sociology, political science, economics, social work, and library science.

Over $50,000 a year would be spent buying books for the recently built one-half million dollar new library, while the budgets of the agriculture and nursing education divisions would be doubled. Norfolk Va. 11-28-48

GEORGIA STATE COLLEGE ASSUMES 'NEW LOOK'

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

Sat. 3-20-48

BY MARION E. JACKSON

SAVANNAH, Ga.—(SNS) — The "New Look" has come to Georgia State College and its brilliant young president, James A. Colston has a whole lot to do with it. Where once apathy was as long as the moss on the campus trees has come a new birth of progress and accomplishment.

All of this has come about in a short span of time. It was July 1, 1947 when President Colston officially took the reins to the institution. He found the plant run down, teachers in the doldrums, and academic achievement almost non-existent. It was a grim task ahead. President Colston recognized it. Yet, without batting an eye he plunged into the task of making a firstrate institution out of Georgia State College. How he has succeeded can now be told.

The college now boast three new buildings which will house the infirmary, fine arts department, and a new cafeteria and student union unit. Add to this, the institution is in the process of re-roofing every building on the campus. A new water system is being installed which will give adequate fire protection to the institution.

RENOVATION

Most of the college buildings are being renovated. Notably, the Willcox Gymnasuim where all athletic activities are coordinated under Ted Wright, head coach and director of athletics. Daily World

The Georgia State students have shown their enthusiasm for President Colston's program launching a campus beautification program of their own. They are seeking to enhance the moss-draped dignity and impressiveness of the campus, which has been magnificently-endowed by Mother Nature. Atlanta, Ga.

They are having some success. The "kinks" in the campus are being ironed out. Natural beauty is being aided by the craftsmanship and skill of the Georgia State students. Sat. 3-20-48

"The State College" President Colston said "has its responsibility to the community."

"We are working for improved Negro business by meeting with business men and discussing their problems. We are going to the individual firms to talk with the owners for the purpose of giving them the "know-how" for expanding their business. We have a branch in Savannah and institutes in several counties where teachers and students discuss problems common to the operation of successful business."

"We have night school for business peopie. Here they can obtain the fundamentals of accounting and salesmanship."

VARIED PRESENTATIONS 3-20-48

Meanwhile, Georgia State is working for better campus roads, improved curriculum, good public relations, and better cultural programs. This scholastic years the college has presented the Don Cossacks Chorus. Muriel Rahn, the Southernaires, American Negro Repetory Players and Leon Fliecher. In May the college will sponsor a musical festival featuring high schools from all over the state of Georgia. 500 pupils will combine in a mass chorus. Daily World

President Colston has a genuine interest in athletics. He points with pride to the purposed athletic field, where football and track activities will take place Atlanta, Ga.

Yet, he insists that "athletics are only one phase. We look forward to greater development in music, arts, scholarship, community service and overall development."

GEORGIA STATE—Reading Clinic

A Reading Clinic, designed to give students the advantage of systematic analysis of reading problems, has been opened at Georgia State College. Particular emphasis will be placed n "reading for understanding". The laboratory is equipped with a newly devised machine which takes motion-picture graphs of the individual's eye movement as he reads and designates his comprehension and speed of reading. Enrollment Up At State College For Negroes

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 8 (AP)—Enrollment at Kentucky State College for Negroes at the opening of the winter quarter totaled 691, compared to 635 a year ago.

The college announced late today that the new quarter's enrollment, which began Saturday and closed yesterday, disclosed 377 men and 314 women, compared to 325 men and 310 women a year ago.

Division by classes this year and last, with this year's figures shown first, was given as: freshman, 264 and 299; sophomores, 211 and 158; juniors, 116 and 80; seniors, 73 and 73; and special students, chiefly veterans, 27 and 25.

The drop in freshmen was ascribed to lack of sufficient quarters for men and the fact that so many of the big freshman class of a year ago returned as sophomores. It was added that approximately 400 men had to be turned away last September.

White Student Barred From Negro College

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Dr. R. B. Atwood, president of Kentucky State College for Negroes, reported that he had rejected the application of a white girl for admittance to the college last week.

The girl, Betty Marie Ellis, a student at the College of the Bible at Lexington, Ky., had applied for admittance to the College "in preparation for a missionary career."

Dr. Atwood said his rejection was due to the segregation laws of the state which prohibit white and Negro students attending the same school.

Campus Publication Urges Admission Of Colored To Library

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — (NNPA) — Students from Louisville Municipal College should be admitted to the University of Louisville library, says an editorial published in the U. of L. student newspaper last Friday.

The editorial was written by one of the Cardinal editors, Dick Cohen. He says "The University of Louisville, as a democratic institution which teaches and expounds the principles of democracy, must now put those theories to concrete shape and form and agree to admit colored students from our own school, Municipal College, to the use of our library on Belknap Campus."

President John W. Taylor, of the University of Louisville, commented to a reporter that "Until there's a demonstrated necessity of it, I don't see any need to raise the issue."

He said that if needed books aren't available to students at Municipal College they probably can be obtained on loan from the Belknap Campus Library.

4 Lawyers Hired To Teach Ky. Law Student

LEXINGTON, KY.—(ANP)—John W. Hatch, of Springfield, Ky., the only Negro to avail himself of law courses under the state's plan to keep Negroes and whites from attending the same schools together and yet give each equal college-education opportunities, lost the seven University of Kentucky professors who have been instructing him since September, but gained four more, when the university added a quartette of Frankfort attorneys to its staff for that purpose here last week. In addition, Hatch's classroom work is being shifted from the campus of Kentucky State college for Negroes to the state capital where there is a huge law library.

Immediately after Dr. H. L. Donovan, university president, made the announcement, Dr. R. B. Atwood, head of the state college, charged that the change "violates" the agreement to teach Negroes at his school what they could not get at the university.

"Without raising any question of the competency of the new teaching personnel it must be apparent to all that the new arrangement is even more cumbersome than the former plan and works an additional hardship upon Hatch, who must adjust himself to the new teachers in the middle of the semester.

"Moreover," Dr. Atwood said, "the new plan violates both the letter and spirit of the agreement between the state board of education (governing the college) and the university board of trustees. Among other things it stipulates that courses offered on the campus of the college by the university shall be taught by regular instructors who teach at the university. Obviously the new plan does not meet these requirements."

Students Protest Sipuel Case Status

Daily World Library 14e(1)

Atlanta, Ga. Fri. 3-5-48

LANGSTON UNIVERSITY—(Special)—Out here between the dust bowl and oil fields of Oklahoma, 850 students of Langston University, including G. I's staged a demonstration Thursday afternoon against Jimcrowism in Higher Education. The mass protest was made before the Representatives for the State Regents Committee who came out to estimate the cost of setting up a graduate school at Langston University.

The six-man committee, composed of deans from the University of Oklahoma and Oklahoma A. and M. were given a view of placards flashing their messages from buildings and hands of students. Placards carried by students said "No accrediation, no graduate school"; Graduate school here? Impossible! Cart before the horse."; etc.

Two weeks before a group of students from Langston University had gone to the State Capitol to point out the inadequacies of undergraduate work at Langston.

It is said that when the Board met these students representatives from Langston, the latter acquitted themselves well. They asked for improved undergraduate work only. Several members of the Langston University faculty have stated it is a crime for any Negro institution in the South to attempt graduate work.

REGENTS INVITED

At the conclusion of their meeting at Langston, the Regents Committee for studying the proposed graduate school at Langston were asked to witness the Coffin Parade in the main corridor of the Administration Buildings. Hundreds of young men and women, uncovered and bowed heads, walked by a huge gray casket which bore the legend:

"Here lies an undergraduate mind felled by the lack of undergraduate facilities!"

Alfred Harrell, President of the Student Council, made a short speech, "Why Build this House, Graduate Work, On the Poor Foundation of an Inadequate Undergraduate School." "Student gripes" were stated on placards read by Harrell (1) lack of gymnasium; (2) need for a science engineering school; (3) need for an increase in the stabilization fund; (4) lack of pavement; (5) lack of an adequate water system; (6) lack of a nursery for GI apartments, etc. The speaker was emphatic in saying that the facilities at Langston University should equal the facilities for any white college of liberal arts and sciences; and he was opposed to the attempt to set up a Jimcrow university as an evasion of the Constitution.

Throughout Thursday night, radio broadcasters carried news items concerning the demonstration at Langston Universit. It was perhaps the most dramatic protest ever staged by a Negro student body. Friday night Miss Ada Lois Sipuel was the guest at a mammoth benefit dance on the campus. She said afterwards that nothing had given her greater inspiration than this demonstration of solidarity on the part of the students of her Alma Mater.

Points Out The Erroneous View Of Accrediting

Daily World Atlanta, Ga. 3-23-48

LANGSTON, Okla. —(ANP)—Although Langston university has been accredited by the North Central associations, that does not automatically make it equal to Oklahoma or every other accredited white school, Dr. G. L. Harrison, president of Langston, said this week following the announcement that his school had been approved by the college association.

"The demand now for equality of opportunities for Negroes and whites in the field of higher education is just as great today as it was the day before Langston university was accredited," Harrison said.

Harrison called for all Negroes as well as whites interested in seeing equality of educational opportunity to continue the fight, especially in Oklahoma. Sun. 5-23-48

ERRONEOUS VIEW

"Many have the idea that if two or more institutions are accredited they are therefore equal," he said, "for an example, they would assume that if Central State college at Edmond, or Phillips university and the University of Oklahoma are accredited by the same accrediting agency, the three schools are equal in every respect. This, of course, is erroneous. Daily World

"There should not be a confusion that accreditation means equality. Langston university was accredited as a college and not as a university. I trust that those, like myself, who feel that equality of opportunity for higher education in Oklahoma should exist between the races will not lessen their efforts to bring about this equality." 3-23-48

The Langston president cited the fact that the North Central association has accredited only five Negro secondary schools of 122 accredited schools in the state of Oklahoma. He asked not only for work to achieve approval of colored schools by the association but also that they "will be equal to secondary schools for whites." Atlanta, Ga.

RECORDS INSPECTED

The association, representing 48 members from 20 middle western states, approved Langston, unanimously, last week at its annual meeting. Before being accepted, Langston had all its records thoroughly inspected by the board of review.

This board turned in its report to the executive committee which in turn approved it and then presented it to the commission. At the commission meeting, open to the public, anyone may criticize the report, but no one objected to the accrediting of Langston.

It is approved as a four-year institution eligible to grant the A. B. and B. S. degrees.

Langston Professor On National Committee

LANGSTON, Okla. — (ANP)—E. A. Miller, director, division of mechanic arts at Langston university, was appointed recently to the membership committee of the National Association of Industrial Teachers trainers, American Vocational association.

In this position Mr. Miller will act as keyman for Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas.

Langston's Accreditation Threatened

Placing emphasis upon Black Dispatch charges that the North Central Association for Colleges and Secondary Schools was overlooking some of its basic regulations when it hurriedly, and overnight, accredited Langston university ,the wholesale resignations of faculty members coming to life last week do not come as a complete shock, for Langston university with its inadequate salary schedule, has always been preyed upon, not as this time, by an outside college, but by the larger high schools of the state.

News comes that Drs. Upthegrove, Martin and Richards have resigned from Langston university to take positions at the new Texas university at larger salaries. This is an indictment that fixes itself immediately upon the legislature and the coordinating board hitherto having refused to provide sufficient salary funds. Across the years it has been Oklahoma City, Tulsa and Muskogee who have from time to time taken competent and worthwhile professors from Langston because these city high school boards paid higher salaries than Langston university. The Black Dispatch

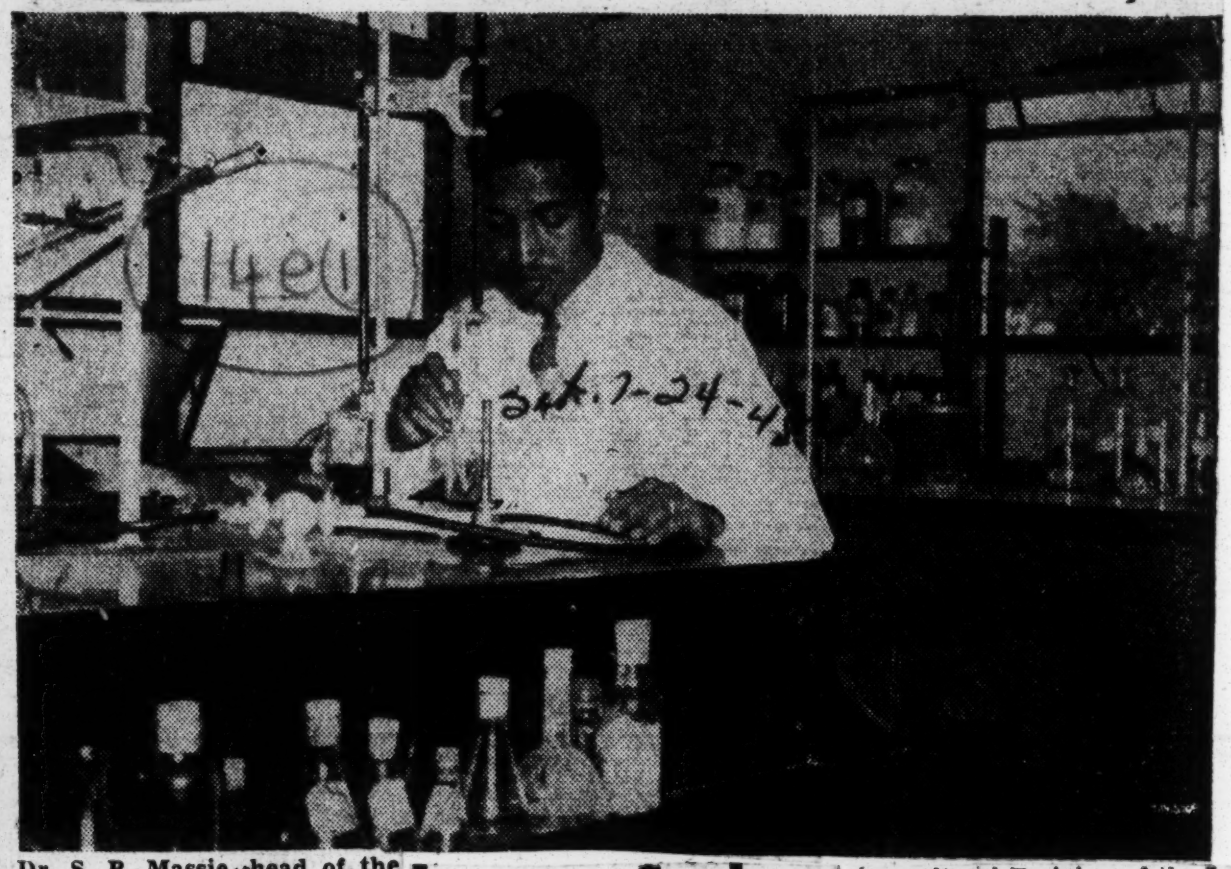
One of the stiff regulations set down in the North Central rule book is that adequate salaries, lifting a college professor above the plane of want, must be paid. The theory is that a man who must devote a large portion of his time attempting to make ends meet, cannot maintain a proper frame of mind. Adequate salaries relieve men of anxiety regarding their economy, permitting them to enter the atmosphere of contentment and tranquility essential in the impartation of knowledge. Oklahoma City, Okla.

Now the question is, did offcials of the North Central Assoication for Colleges and Secondary Schools give sufficient study to the salary question and its direct relationship to the Langston situation when it winked its eye at accreditation? Can it not be seen unless this situation is immediately remedied there will across the years be the constant menace from outside influences of this character? Already the Langston president is quoted as saying that others on the faculty have been approached, and it stands to reason that no man of family who thinks in terms of future security will be invulnerable to proffers of substantial increase in his yearly wage.

It should not have been difficult for North Central officials to ascertain what type of salaries was being paid professors for doing similar work at Oklahoma university, and about the only way assurance can be established that men of high scholastic rating will come to and remain at Langston university is to set a salary scale at Langston university on parity with O. U. Sat. 7-10-48

Those who observed with considerable askance our caution a few months ago regarding the "quickie" accreditation of our only state university may note this week substantial reasons why grave consideration should be given to mushroom growth appearing from nowhere overnight. Is it not a startling revelation to discover that this fault in our Langston salary schedules may perhaps be the cancer that will wipe out accreditation until corrected? Should not someone in authority have stressed this point, and seen to its correction before accreditation?

Langston University Chemist Works On Research Project



Dr. S. P. Massie, head of the department of chemistry at Langston University, is shown working in his laboratory on a research project, sponsored jointly by the university and the Upjohn Company, drug manufactures of Kalamazoo, Mich.

The project, which is concerned with the synthesis of some new analygesics, is being carried forward in cooperation with Dr. R. P. Perry of Langston, who has likewise had considerable experience in drug research and the synthesis of new chemotherapentic substances.

A native of Little Rock, Dr. Massie completed his undergraduate work at Arkansas State College. He holds a master's degree from Fisk University, and the Ph.D. from Iowa State College.

Langston Conducts Workshop For Vet-Aggie Instructors

LANGSTON, — Forty-one men engaged in agricultural instruction in the state attended a special three weeks workshop organized for teachers of Vocational Agriculture and Veteran Training Agricultural instructors at Langston university which closed last Saturday.

The thirteen regular teachers of Vocational Agriculture and 28 Veteran Training Agricultural Instructors comprised over half of the 71 men employed in the two groups.

The instructors included individuals from the Langston university staff, one visiting professor, the A. & M. college staff and the staff of the Red Plains Soil Conservation Station at Guthrie.

The work in Organization and Planning Instruction was under the direction of D. C. Jones, professor of agricultural education, and Samuel E. Fuhr, newly appointed supervisor of Veteran Agricultural Training of the Langston university statff. Harold M. Jones, agricultural engineer of Manassas, Virginia, and visiting professor conducted the farm mechanics program. The program in pasture and soil conservation was planned in consultation with S. H. Settler, director, division of agriculture, Langston university; Dean Oliver S. William, Oklahoma A. & M. college; and Harley Daniels, supervisor, Red Plains Soil Conservation Experiment Station. Instructor for the course included Harry Elwell and Maurice Cox, of the Red Plains Station; Louis Durr, Horace Haws, Dwight Stephens, and W. W. Hoffine, all of A. & M.; Roy Erwin of the Cottonwood Creek Soil Conservation Service.

young man," stated Mr. Smith, "is a small bundle of human energy driven by a great and sincere desire to be free. It is his great and evident sincerity which I believe to be responsible for his fine success in selling the Bonds that are financing our court fights against segregation here in Texas."

If It Is Not At Langston?

This writer was called over the telephone last week by a reporter for the state's leading daily, and inquiry made as to whether we approve the proposal that Oklahoma's school laws be changed so as to permit Negroes to attend the University of Oklahoma. This is what we have been fighting for for a number of years, but we want to be sure we are voting for the right thing when we give our approval, and because we do not think the suggested change in the law approximates what we have in mind, we told the reporter we did not approve the proposed legislative enactment.

The proposed legislation is a thinly disguised attempt to preserve segregated schools with the approval of Negroes. The new enactment would make it possible for Negroes to attend classes at Norman and take graduate courses, IF THE DESIRED COURSES ARE NOT PROVIDED AT LANGSTON. This is where we baulk.

There are offered at Norman today more than 70-odd graduate courses to white students and none at Langston. We do not intend to be stupid enough to assume this "if" in the new law has any substance whatsoever. We know, and every other intelligent citizen in this state knows, that the State of Oklahoma is not going to set up and operate, for the benefit of Negroes at the Langston school 70-odd graduate courses in kind and quality as provided at Norman for whites. Knowing this, we are not going to indulge in wishful thinking, and join in a slumber party where the questionable bed is braced up with unstable "ifs."

We herewith publish Section one of the proposed amendment, so that Black Dispatch readers may see that the [illegible] severe penalties remains the same, save and except the questionable "if."

[illegible] unlawful for any person, corporation or association to maintain or operate any college, school or institution where persons of both white and colored races are taught, and any person or corporation who shall operate such college, school or institution in violation hereof shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, and each day such school, college or institution shall be open and maintained shall be deemed a separate offense. Provided, that the provisions of this section shall not apply to courses of instruction given at colleges or institutions of higher education of this state established for and/or used by the white race, where such courses of instruction are not given at colleges or institutions of higher education of this state established for and/or used by the colored race."

Section two and three of the separate school law are both amended by employment of the same and identical language as disclosed above. Segregation remains intact, except for this proviso "if the state does not provide graduate training at Langston the Negro student can secure it at Norman. This is one of those cases where reaction attempts to eat its cake and still retain it.

Now the Black Dispatch is not going to be any part or parcel of his indecision regarding segregation. If the state wants to act in good faith, why not do so by repealing separate schools laws, and if it does not want to go that far, why not repeal the penalty provisions of the statute? Either way we fix it so that Negroes may attend white schools where they may receive impartial training.

As we said to the reporter who inquired regarding our position on this subject, we are fundamentally opposed to segregation because it is based in the idea that one human being is better than another. We cannot have good relations in America so long as this unbrotherly idea and notion prevails. We do not care to bolster up an evil, we want to get rid of it.

Those who propose this new idea by which Negroes may attend the University at Norman may have the best of intentions, but let's stop attempting to put new wine in old bottles.

STUDENTS MAY STRIKE AT LINCOLN UNIVERSITY

Jefferson City, Mo., May 27.—(AP)—Students of Lincoln university for Negroes tonight scheduled for tomorrow morning in protest over disciplinary action against a girl student switchboard operator.

After a demonstration in which about 400 of the 900 students marched around the campus carrying lanterns and placards, it was announced at a rally that pickets would be placed around the home of President Sherman D. Scruggs and the campus quadrangle to dissuade the students from attending classes.

Prior to the strike call, three members of the student council met with President Scruggs, who later announced that the case would be reconsidered by the disciplinary committee of four faculty members, and that he would inform the students of its action at 1 p. m.

Alexander B. Cotay, of British West Africa, president of the student council, said the students also were demanding more voice in student affairs.

The girl in the case is Dolores Bailey, Salisbury, Mo.

President Scruggs said she had been disciplined for violating campus rules, including failure to sign out when leaving the campus. She was suspended from classes for the remainder of this semester and the summer session, and placed on probation for the first semester next fall.

Chinese Students To Enroll In Lincoln, Pa.

LINCOLN U., Pa.—(ANP)—The Lincoln University Theological Seminary began to take on an international flavor with the announcement here that two students from China would enroll in September.

The two Chinese students who have been attracted to study at Lincoln seminary, both by its international reputation and by the challenge of race relations in the world today, are C. H. P'an from the North-Eastern University at Shenyang, North East China, and Hsu Yang-San of the Anglo-Chinese College of Kulangsu, Amoy, China.

Lincoln Students' Strike

Students at Lincoln University, Jefferson City, Missouri, have staged a strike against what they describe as "harsh punishment" of a fellow student for an infraction of the campus rule. For that perfectly simple reason they are demanding more voice for students in determining the policy of the college or else the 900 college co-eds would remain on strike.

Local citizens are also reported to be aroused over what they resent as "degrading statements" on the part of the administration at Lincoln about their homes. The unrest came as a result of the expulsion of a junior at the school for having left the campus and visited a local home which the institution regards as "off reservations."

It appears that the local citizens want an apology from the administration for placing their homes in the "off reservations" category and that the homes visited by the young woman was "first class" and the owners "upright citizens."

It is rather difficult to understand the mind of the local Missourians who are lending their influence to such an unreasonable and pointless strike. Worst still, is the fact that they do not seem to understand how important it is for just any college or university, not merely Lincoln, to be the sole judge as to when and where students under its supervision, may or may not go.

For them to belabor the point that "off reservations" was meant to cast aspersions upon their homes or upon them. The term, used most frequently in the Army, but also in hundreds of other capacities, means nothing more than a territory not under the control of the immediate institution or agency. Thus, the homes of the citizens in question may have been the very best in the city. But that does not deny to the president his undisputed authority to say where students may or may not go.

Hence, it would appear that neither the local citizens nor the striking students have much to justify their action, since all of the malcontent and unrest seems to have stemmed from a technical difference in interpretation. And as for the demand to have more voice in the policy of the school, it seems that that would depend upon what policy they have in mind. There is great virtue in student government these days. We are of the considered opinion that more and more students should be permitted to share in the rules which govern them. But no student is qualified to make rules and share in the establishment of policy until they learn to evaluate between what really matters and what matters most.

A student who has no more self-control and good judgment than to allow 900 fellow students to be misled on a foolish and flimsy act of hers is not worthy of a place on the law-making councils. Manifestly, she is wrong and no amount of wind-jamming can make it right for a boarding student to leave the campus in defiance of the law made by the college.

Name 4 Curators To Board Of Lincoln U. (Mo.)

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Four new members, two of them Negroes, were appointed to the Board of Curators of Lincoln University by Governor Phil M. Donnelly last week.

They are two St. Louisans, Carl G. Stifel, 3025 S. Skinker Blvd., and Frank L. Williams, 4217 Enright ave. The other two of Kansas City are Canby G. Lord and Earl D. Thomas.

Williams is a former principal of Sumner and Vashon High Schools in St. Louis, now retired, and is at present doing a weekly column of opinion for the St. Louis Argus. He is also an official of the United Negro College Fund.

BY ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK — On Sunday, I flew to Charleston, Va., to speak at the West Virginia State College, a land-grant college for colored students.

Three of us received honorary degrees—Irvin Stewart, president of West Virginia University; Henry Lake Dickason, president of Bluefield State College; and myself. My address was on human rights.

Mrs. Roosevelt

I was very grateful to Gov. and Mrs. Clarence W. Meadows for meeting me at the airport. And after the ceremonies at the college, I went to their home to meet a group of their friends and had a delicious supper before I caught a plane back to New York City.

* * *

ON THE WAY to West Virginia, I went through some anxious hours, for I was told that we might not be able to land at Charleston—in which case I would have been put down at Cincinnati and I did not quite see how I could get back from there to the college in time to make my speech.

Free Press

And on the return trip to New York, they kept telling me we would be delayed, and at one point there was some question about getting to New York at all!

Detroit, Mich.

All's well that ends well, however, and I am very glad that I was able to go, for I enjoyed every minute of the day.

I READ with regret of the death of Mr. James E. West, who had so long been the head of the Boy Scouts of America.

I am sure that the many people who worked with him will feel his loss, and in an organization of this kind, the loss of someone who has been associated with it for so many years touches a great many people.

Lane College Students "Protest" Subsides After Explanation Of President's Recent Resignation

The short but heated furore which broke out among the student body at historic Lane College in Jackson, Tenn., Wednesday and Thursday of last week, had subsided to the satisfaction of all parties concerned by the end of the week, according to Bishop J. Arthur Hamlett of Kansas City, Kan. Chairman of the school's Board of Trustees and head of the Second Episcopal District of the CME Church.

The approximately 600 students of the 61-year old institution, led by about a score of upper-class spokesman, headed by William C. Jackson, president of the student Council, protested what they considered to be the "forced resignation" of Dr. D. S. Yarbrough, who has served as president of the College for the past three years; the "demotion" of widely-known Dean P. R. Shy to a professorship; and the "dismissal" of a number of instructors at the institution.

Last Wednesday, while Bishop Hamlett was conferring with Board members, groups of students assembled on the campus to listen to student speeches of protest, sing college songs, and stage a demonstration.

The Bishop said the extent of the student feeling reached noticeable proportions Thursday morning, the day of Senior graduating exercises. A group of Seniors went to the Bishop and indicated their intention not to participate in the Commencement processional until they had received an explanation from him concerning the points of their immediate concern.

Bishop Hamlett offered to meet with the student group, after asking them why they had "reversed the order of procedure and staged a demonstration before making their enquiries." He agreed to call a meeting of the Board members, with Doctor Yarbrough present, to answer the students' questions.

The meeting was held following the Commencement exercises, during which the senior class procession was held. The students received satisfactory answers to their questions, and the threatened "strike" ended to a harmless close.

BISHOP ISSUES STATEMENT

In a story carried in the Jackson Sun, a local daily, and which he confirmed, for the most part, Bishop-Hamlett issued a formal statement relative to the situation.

Lane President Forced to Quit

Raps School Board; 600 Students Protest

JACKSON, Tenn. (ANP) — In protest against the resignation of Dr. D. S. Yarbrough from the presidency of Lane College, the demotion of Dean P. R. Shy to a professorship and failure to reinstate several teachers, more than 300 students of the institution staged a mass demonstration here last Wednesday.

The protest, directed against the college board of trustees, blamed "family policies on the part of relatives of board members and of Bishop J. A. Hamlett, board president." According to Dr. Yarbrough, the decision to resign was his own, but was dictated by political implications and "meddling" by trustees.

He indicated that efforts "to make Lane a Class A college" have been hindered by the board and that politics in the administration had tied his hands. He charged the registrar's office was poorly run and records were in an "impossible" condition.

Bishop Hamlett's relatives and others "foiled" all attempts to create a student government, a democratic system of faculty members, leaves to staff, improved recreational programs and efficiency, he said. Dean Shy made no comment. Bishop Hamlett, who lives in Kansas City, could not be reached.

600 Students at School

The student demonstration was led by William Jackson, of the student council. They asked reinstatement of the dean and teachers, and continuance of Dr. Yarbrough as president. They refused to participate in any college activities, even graduating exercises Thursday. There are 600 students.

Bishop Hamlett has his son, J. A. Hamlett Jr., his son-in-law, the Rev. W. A. Miller, his foster son, Myles C. Stevens, attorney; and his brother, J. H. Stevens, all members of the trustee board of this 61-year-old church institution, mother college of the CME Church, of which Bishop W. Y. Bell is a graduate.

After a two-day meeting, the 64-member board accepted the resignation of Dr. Yarbrough, but left open the question of the position of dean and dismissed several others, including teachers and hall matrons.

Veiled Hint

The Rev. N. T. Walker, chairman of the executive committee, indicated that if Dr. Yarbrough had not resigned he would not have been re-elected anyway. "I have in my possession some damaging matter," he said. Dr. Yarbrough said "there's nothing to Walker's statement."

Dr. Yarbrough succeeded to the presidency when W. Y. Bell Jr., son of Bishop W. Y. Bell, declined the position. Four years ago, Dr. J. F. Lane, son of Bishop Isaac Lane, died after serving 37 years. Now J. H. White, of Whiteville, Tenn., has been elected, making a total of four presidents in four years.

At the trustee meeting, Dr. B. U. Smith of Chicago asked: "Are men to have any security in these jobs; how can we ever expect to keep prepared men, or to attract them when they know they have no security? It seems that only a few persons know what is going on."

J. H. Stevens, treasurer, according to reports, has failed to make a report on the building funds and other financial reports have been hazy.

Lane College Begins Half-Million Drive For Fund Campaign

JACKSON, Miss.—President J. H. White launched a one and a half million dollar campaign designed to meet the immediate instructional, facilities and equipment needs of Lane College Nov. 1 with the organization of the student body, faculty and staff, into committees and setting up specific goals for each committee and the Lane College family.

With the detailed organization of the college family complete, the full force of this organization is scheduled to begin local solicitation immediately in an effort to raise a minimum of $35,000 in the city of Jackson alone.

The amount of $10,000 has already been pledged by the faculty and student body and the citizens of Jackson will be asked to donate the remaining $25,000.

TO LAST ONE YEAR

The campaign is scheduled to last through March 15, 1949 when the United Negro College Fund Campaign, of which Lane College is a participating member, gets under way and will have priority for fund raising throughout the country.

Dr. White has high hopes that the quota set for Jackson will be met on schedule. Other sources expected to contribute generously on a national and regional level are the CME Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, alumni and former students and foundations.

President White points out that on the basis of the findings and partial report of a survey staff, appointed by the Lane College Board of Trustees, to study the college situation and make recommendations toward meeting basic standards of a first class Institution, it is evident that Lane has not developed in proportion to the remarkable opportunities with which it has been presented.

AREA NEEDS COLLEGE

This has been due largely to the lack of adequate funds from which to provide facilities, equipment and instructional staffs to meet the many and varied needs and interests of the hundreds of students who seek higher educational training at Lane.

With more and better high schools being provided in Lane's immediate service area, and the responsibility of providing higher educational opportunities to a Negro population of approximately 250,000 Lane must prepare to meet the unusual challenge for service in many areas to its people.

Latin-Americans View Our Morals and Race Relations

EAST LANSING, Mich.—Latin-American students in training at Michigan State College have returned to their homes with three major attitudes toward the United States.

1. An increased dislike for "the manner in which we treat the Negro as compared with way he is treated at home."

2. Increased respect for "the morals of American women."

3. An increased conviction that "regardless of financial cost, their own countries should develop the most complete possible self-sufficiency."

These attitudes were published in a study of sixty-two students from eleven South and Central American countries by Drs. Charles P. Loomis and Edgar W. Schular of the M. S. C. sociology and anthropology department.

Commenting on the attitude of Latin-American students toward the behavior of women in the United States, the sociologists said: "A year's study in the United States seems to have increased the (Latin-American) trainees' belief that women's sexual freedom before marriage, immorality and lack of sanctity of marriage were more typical of the United States than of their own countries.

PLEA MADE TO AID AFRICAN STUDENTS

Their Future Value to Native Lands Emphasized by Head of Lincoln University

By GEORGE STREATOR

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LINCOLN UNIVERSITY, Pa., Feb. 7—The oldest institution of higher education for Negroes in the United States, which was established here as Ashmun Institute in 1854 but renamed "The Lincoln University" the morning following the assassination of the Great Emancipator, today asked for greater opportunities for the foreign youth of African descent who seek preparation for their roles as leaders of an awakened people."

The appeal was made by an alumnus, the first Negro president of the university, whose grandparents were born in slavery in this country, Dr. Horace Mann Bond.

He said that the Africans studying here "exhibit an industry in application to their studies and an ambition to prepare themselves for service to their countrymen that puts to shame the indifferent and mercenary aspirations of many American youths."

Nineteen African students are enrolled at Lincoln, a school for men, who are aided by their parents, the British colonial government and some by volunteer student societies similar to the American Council on African Education which now pays for eight students.

The college expects five African youths to arrive here this week from Nigeria, West Africa. There are also ten students enrolled from British Guiana, the Canal Zone, the Virgin Islands and Barbados, Grenada and Jamaica. The total enrollment of the college is 520.

Observing these foreign-born students who have entered the school with varying degrees of preparation, Dr. Bond related his experiences with young men "from cultures classified by the average American as 'primitive', who are able to assimilate with the greatest of ease the most advanced and exacting studies in this institution."

He said that one can perceive "if his heart is right" millions of pre-literate folk throughout the world, who have a wealth of genius that would, if allowed, enrich humanity in all its fields.

"Western civilization has touched these people," he said "and they have become suddenly, vibrantly, excitingly alive. It is our aim to provide every opportunity possible to feed their aspirations."

Dr. Bond exhibited letters which the college has received from Lincoln graduates who returned to Africa, including one from Livingstone N. Mzimba of the class of 1906 who said he "rejoiced" at the success of his son who was being graduated from Witwatersrand University, Johannesburg, South Africa — a medical school which had "finally lifted the color bar."

The majority of the African students who have been graduated from Lincoln were reported to have returned to their countries where most of them occupy positions of distinction. This is "consistent" with the purpose of the founders of the institution whose first three graduates went to Africa as missionaries for the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church, Dr. Bond declared.

Dr. Bond addressed an appeal to "the Christian conscience" of the Negro peoples of America to promote a greater interest in African students who come to this country. A group assembled by James B. Macrae, professor of education, listed among their ambitions the hope of improving in their countries conditions of health and education at all levels to provide "a greater respect for freedom among all peoples of African descent."

Lincoln University reported an annual endowment yield of $40,000, plus $77,000 received from the Pennsylvania State Aid, $20,000 from the United Negro College Fund, Inc., and $150,000 from tuition and fees.

White Minister Lincoln Graduate

LINCOLN U., Pa.—(ANP)—One of the interesting sidelights of the Lincoln University commencement was the award of the degree of Bachelor of Arts by President Horace Mann Bond to the Rev. Charles William Ivy, pastor of the Baptist Church of Oxford.

The minister was the second white student to be graduated from Lincoln during the presidency of Dr. Bond, the first Negro president of the university. The first was Ralph Oves, in the class of 1947, who was captain of the football team prior to his induction into the Army.

Lincoln U. Educator On Tour Of India

ADDIS-ABABA, Ethiopia — (ANP) — T. Thomas Fortune Fletcher, Ph. D., formerly professor of English, Lincoln university, Jefferson City, Mo., and at present Le Directeud de l'Ecole Medhanes-Alem, Addis-Ababa, left by plane for India on July 22 where he will spend two months studying the new India, together with educational institutions in both India and Pakistan.

Dr. Fletcher heads one of Ethiopia's oldest and most aristocratic schools, The Medhane-Alem School for Boys. He will be accompanied by his administrative assistant, William E. H. Howard of Athens, Ga.

A writer of note, Dr. Fletcher expects to interview government and educational leaders in both India and Pakistan. He regards as a high point of his tour a meeting with Mrs. Sarojini Naidu, Indio's famous poetess.

Dr. Fletcher is a graduate of Fisk, Columbia, and New York universities, having studied also at the University of Chicago and the University of London.

900 Lincoln U. Students Strike

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — (ANP)—Complaining of the "harsh punishment of a student for an infraction of the campus rules and demanding more voice for the students in college policy," 900 students of Lincoln University went on strike last week.

Local citizens are also aroused over the situation at Lincoln because they claim that the school has made degrading statements about their homes.

The unrest at Lincoln came to a head when a faculty committee expelled Dolores Bailey, a junior of Salibury, Mo., for leaving the campus without signing out and visiting a private home considered "off reservation" or off limits by the university.

Students protested that the punishment was too severe and at mass meetings led by the student council and heads of campus groups, demanded that the committee reconsider its decision. The disciplinary committee reconsidered, but did not change.

Municipal College Seniors Told to Carry 3 Talismans

The Courier Journal
Louisville, Ky. - Thurs 6-3-48

The three talismans which Dr. Charles S. Johnson last night asked graduates of Louisville Municipal College to carry with them were love of truth, love of beauty, and love of man.

The president of Fisk University, Nashville, spoke at commencement exercises for 20 students at Quinn Chapel. Diplomas were awarded by Dr. John W. Taylor, president of the University of Louisville, of which L.M.C. is a part.

Dr. Johnson declared that one who has learned the love of truth, beauty, and his fellow man can never be "altogether poor or lost or wretched."

Says Quest Never Ends.

"Truth is to be sought not only in college and in the laboratory," he said, "but all through life by the maintenance of an open and inquiring mind, a willingness to be convinced, and a respect for facts."

The Courier Journal
Louisville, Ky.

"Truth also is to be cultivated in our relations with our friends, our associates, and in general with the world in which we find ourselves.

"We have to recognize that truth today, like the other old-fashioned virtues, involves something more than upright conduct, avoiding lies, and paying bills.

"Many a man who is just and honorable in his dealings with his family, his friends, and his immediate business associates is utterly false in his larger social responsibilities. As a politician he will not betray his party, but he will betray his community; as a businessman he will meet his financial obligations, but he will undercut his competitors and underpay his workers; as a worker he will take a day's pay for less than a day's work."

ANOTHER STUDENT BODY VOTES FOR ADMITTING NEGROES

ANNAPOLIS, March 22 — Another southern college student body has voted overwhelmengly for the admission of Negroes into the school. In a poll conducted by the Student Government of St. John's College, third oldest college in the nation, the students voted 165 to 33 for ending the jimcrow tradition.

Other southern student bodies which have taken similar stands include the Universities of Arkansas, Texas, North Carolina, Missouri and Oklahoma.

A spokesman for the Student Government at St. John's said the result will be presented to the authorities "so that they may bring our policies line with other liberal institutions. At least they will know how the student body feels about racial bans in education."

Dr. John Kiefer, college president, however, declared the poll was "purely an expression of student opinion" and refused to comment on any effect it might have on administration policy.

Students pointed that nearby universities have been admitting Negroes for some time. They are the University of Maryland's law school and the University of Delaware.

St. John's College was founded in 1698 as King William's College. The only two older colleges are Harvard and William and Mary.

FAVOR ENROLLING NEGROES

St. John's Students Take Stand, Make No Demand on College

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 16 (AP) — Students at St. John's College have gone on record overwhelmingly as favoring the admission of Negroes.

Robert Davis of Scottdale, Pa., moderator of the student government, said today that undergraduates had voted 162 to 33 for this resolution:

"The student policy hereby resolves that it would welcome the admission of students of any race or color to St. John's College."

Davis, a senior, added that the resolution was not intended as a petition to or a demand on the administration, but was rather the result of student discussion and deliberation about whether an admissions policy which would enter Negro students would be acceptable to the student body.

John S. Kieffer, president of the college, said he had no comment now.

There are no Negroes among the approximately 240 students enrolled.

Five to One

Students at Maryland's St. John's College last week put aside their Great Books long enough to take a vote. How would they feel about letting Negroes attend St. John's? The vote: 162 ayes, 33 noes.

Princess Anne College Renamed Maryland State

PRINCESS ANNE, Md. — The name of historic Princess Anne College has been officially changed to Maryland State College (Division of the University of Maryland), according to Dr. John T. Williams, president.

Since Dr. Williams, former dean and acting president of Kentucky State College took office here in 1947, the curriculum and school program has been completely overhauled. The reorganization is not complete, however, according to Dr. Williams.

He plans several more additions to the faculty, and has begun a program of expansion which calls for the erection of several additional campus buildings.

Maryland State College had its beginning in 1886, as the Delaware Conference Academy. Later, Maryland Agricultural College with trustees of Morgan College, then owner of the academy, to provide instruction for Negroes under the Morrill Act.

Additional land was purchased and courses in agriculture, industrial arts, and home economics were offered. Princess Anne Junior College as it was then called, was purchased from Morgan College in 1935 by the State of Maryland. A year later it was made a four year college.

Under the new curriculum, bachelor's degrees are offered in general agriculture, agricultural education, general home economics, home economics education, industrial arts education, building construction, music, photography, radio, cabinet making, ceramics, machine shop, electricity, pre-med icine, history and government, english, sociology and ecnomics, biology, chemistry, physical and health education, mathematics and physics, and secretarial education.

NEGROES' FARMING CITED FOR SCHOOL

Maryland College Head Says Land Ownership Increase Backs Charter Plan

By GEORGE STREATOR

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PRINCESS ANNE, Md., Dec. 5 —The increase of land ownership by Negro farmers in this state by 4.1 per cent over 1940 estimates supports plans to develop the old Princess Anne Academy into Maryland State College, a land-grant college for Negroes under the charter of the University of Maryland, Dr. John T. Williams, president of the new college, said today.

Because of the location on the Eastern Shore of Maryland "where land is better, with plenty of room for expansion," he said that it was the dream of the newly collected faculty that they might develop here a community of self-sufficient farmers, as well as train artisans who could earn a living in the industry of Maryland and of Virginia and Delaware.

The establishment of this college has been opposed in Baltimore because of the belief among many that the new college is intended to divert Negro youth from a move to obtain instruction in the University of Maryland at College Park, Md.

Dr. Williams said that he did not propose to be drawn into the controversy now going on between the adherents of the Morgan State College—the state college for Negroes not connected with the University of Maryland—and the officials of the university, headed by Dr. H. C. Byrd, president. The controversy has centered on the proposed expansion of Princess Anne Academy into an endowed unit of the university, a move opposed by many Negroes as an attempt of the state to circumvent legal actions designed to gain admission of Negro students into the university itself.

"Tolerance" Is Asked

Coming to this school, a year ago to study the situation, Dr. Williams said that he had been in education all his mature years and had accepted the oppointment here only after studying thoroughly the criticism already directed against the expansion program. He had been dean of the Kentucky State College at Frankfort. A specialist in agriculture, he said that the heart of the program of the college would be the teaching of home economics, agriculture and the mechanical arts, subjects required under some grants bestowed by the Federal Government.

Dr. Williams asked for "a tolerant Negro public," which would hold that the general move to wipe out racial barriers must be founded upon a higher level of instruction for the masses of the Negro population in the lower grades. Lacking this, he said, the Negro public must work to use every possible means to raise the mass standards through a course of teaching designed to improve the living standards of the families.

He said that it was planned to train adults as well as children, and to use the institution for every type of helpful assemblage that would improve the lot of the peoples of the Eastern Shore.

Dr. Williams has been supported by Dr. Byrd in the assertion that Maryland is thirty years behind the rest of the South in the development of an efficient land-grant college. At the present time, he said, no school in Maryland is providing for Negro youth instruction in carpentry, painting, masonry, electrical work, plumbing and the use of modern agricultural machinery above the rudiments of high school education.

A grant of $3,755,000 to this local college by Maryland has been criticized by Negroes and whites who have looked upon the Eastern Shore as too far off the beaten path for the successful development of an efficient college for Negroes. Instead of a college, The Baltimore Afro-American has recommended "a first-rate high school, a junior college or it should be closed."

No Liberal Arts Courses

Supporters of the new college have argued that in all these years the adherents of the present Morgan State College allowed the school at Princess Anne to fall to pieces, and have pointed out that Princess Anne Academy was once owned by the same Methodist Church board that once supported Morgan as a private institution.

Dr. Williams defended the location of the college on the Eastern Shore with statistics intended to show that Negro farmers could be built up as a class, economically and socially, faster in this area than around Baltimore.

The general program proposed here follows the paths laid out for other land-grant colleges for Negroes in the South, "but with the one exception—it will not be hampered by the responsibility of maintaining a liberal arts, teacher-training curriculum that usually amounts to crowding out completely the teaching of the trades," the educator said.

In its first year of operation, the college reports an enrollment of some 300 students, most of them men. About 100 are veterans. In "breaking new paths," the college enrolled a considerable number of youths from Delaware, Kentucky and other border states, a fact that has been sharply criticized by the group at Morgan College.

Students Vote 162-33 To Admit Colored

ANNAPOLIS, Md., (ANP) — St. John's College undergraduates voted 162-33 to admit Negroes to the school, it was disclosed here Wednesday by Robert Davis, Scottdale, Pa., moderator of the student government. The vote was taken on a resolution which said:

"The student polity (body) hereby resolves it would welcome the admission of students of any race or color to St. John's College."

The school, which has been called "the seat of the 'Great Book's' academic program," has about 240 students. Davis explained that the resolution was not intended as a petition or demand on the administration board of visitors and governors.

"This is the present policy of the university as indicated by the president's explicit instructions to the deans of the professional and graduate schools.

Not Legislative Body

"However, the board feels it should point out that it is not a legislative body. It derives and administers its powers as a result of the laws and appropriations made by the State Legislature.

"It has been the practice of the Maryland General Assembly to appropriate funds for colored schools and white schools in the public schools system and to appropriate funds for either education for colored and white schools within the State.

"The board is very anxious to provide the colored race every facility for education above the public school system which is enjoyed by members of the white race.

Up to Legislature

"The board, through its president, has placed the situation squarely before the Legislative Council of Maryland.

"That council is now giving consideration to the matter and, it is hoped, will make such recommendations and appropriations as will enable the State to meet its obligations to the colored people."

Cites Court Decisions

Citing court decision and judicial interpretations which call for the provision by the university of graduate and professional training, the memorandum read by Rabbi Lieberman pointed out that such training not only must be equal but must "be provided immediately."

The memorandum recommended two things:

1. That a public statement of policy be made affirming the right of every citizen of the State to be considered for admission to graduate and professional courses and degrees on the basis of his qualifications and without regard to race, creed or color.

2. That this statement of policy be implemented by appropriate directives to the heads of the various graduate schools and departments.

Franklin H. Williams, assistant special counsel from the national office of the NAACP, spoke on the legal aspects of the matter, declaring that the Constitution and Federal and State courts have made it clear that there can be no equality in a policy of separation and segregation and termed the university's practice and policy "shameful and disgraceful."

He cited the cases of Martin Booth, Wilmore B. Leonard and Mrs. Lucille Williams who have been denied the opportunity for graduate study at the university. While other reasons may have been cited, he pointed out, the refusal in each case was actually based upon color.

Dr. Byrd Silent

Dr. H. C. (Curley) Byrd, university president, sat throughout the entire presentation and subsequent discussion but did not take part.

Senator Millard Tydings asked whether Maryland citizens would accept a "duplicate" university in which all facilities were substantially equal, and was given an emphatic "no" reply by Mr. Williams and Mr. Murphy.

Also speaking for the committee were Dr. Arthur O. Lovejoy, Milton P. Brown, Sidney Hollander, Mrs. Dolores Hunt, Mrs. William P. Lentz and Mrs. John Ramsey.

Board "Keenly Conscious"

Judge Herman M. Moser, who was forced to leave the meeting because of a pending court case, said before leaving that he came to give his endorsement to the stand of the Baltimore Urban League in the matter.

At the conclusion of the discussion, Judge Cole declared that members of the board are "keenly conscious" of the situation and will give "every consideration" to the delegations petition. He said that he could not comment upon the pending Booth case but that the boards position would be expressed through its attorneys when the case comes to trial.

16 Groups Represented

The organizations represented at the meeting were:

Americans for Democratic Action, Dr. Arthur O. Lovejoy; Association of Administrators and Supervisors in Colored Schools, by Henry N. West and William N. Parrott; Baltimore Jewish Council, by Dr. Leon Sachs; Baltimore Teachers Union, AFL, Mrs. Dolores Hunt and Lewis Latane.

Baltimore Urban League, by Sidney Hollander, Judge Herman M. Moser, and Saul M. Perdue; Child Study Association of Baltimore, Inc., Mrs. Henry Rosenberg; City Teachers Association, Milton A. Dugger and Dr. Miles W. Connor; Council of Churches of Maryland and Delaware, the Rev. Asbury Smith;

Wellesley College to Omit Racial, Religious Inquiries

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WELLESLEY, Mass., May 16 —In order to free Wellesley College from "even the appearance of unfair discrimination" in the selection of its students, inquiries about race and religion are to be dropped from the application blanks for admission, President Mildred McAfee Horton announced today.

"This action was voted by the Academic Council after careful consideration and it was ratified by the board of trustees at its meeting May 14," President Horton said.

The race and religion data are already on blanks received for the class entering in 1948, it was explained, but will not be used for purposes of selection. The questions are to be dropped from blanks sent to applicants for admission in 1949 and will be eradicated from the cards of those already registered for admission.

SCHOOL TO DROP DATA INQUIRY ON RACE, RELIGION

Wellesley, Mass., May 19 (Special)-To free Wellesley college from "even the appearance of unfair discrimation" in the selection of its students, inquiries about race and religion are to be dropped from application blanks for admission, according to an announcement by President Mildred McAfee Horton.

"This action was voted by the academic council after careful consideration and it was ratified by the board of trustees at its meeting May 14," Mrs. Horton said.

Race and religion data already are on blanks received for the class entering in 1948, it was explained, but will not be used for purposes of selection. The questions are to be dropped from blanks sent to applicants for admission in 1949 and will be removed from the cards of those already registered for admission.

Wellesley never has had a 'quota system' with a definite percentage of students of any religious preference selected each year," President Horton said, "but there has been a conscious planning of the community to include representatives of varied racial and religious groups."

The Wellesley president added that the board of admissions, in an unanimous decision, decided not to seek the information eliminated from the blanks in any other way.

Miss Radcliffe

Even for Radcliffe College, which for 69 years has gone about giving women the advantages of a Harvard education with little fuss and no feathers, Betty Fitzgerald was something special. In her freshman year, this sweet and seemingly shy Brookline, Mass., girl showed leadership ability and moved into extracurricular prominence by being elected to the board of administration of Briggs Hall, her dormitory. A member of the Student Assembly in her sophomore year, she went up to the Student Council in her junior year and was elected class secretary.

Betty Fitzgerald: No fuss or feathers

In December 1946, Betty was a Radcliffe representative at the organizing convention of the National Students Association in Chicago and a founder of the permanent NSA at Madison, Wis., the following summer. On the side she worked on The Radcliffe News and sang with the famous Choral Society. Last spring she was elected president of the senior class and, to double the honor, was chosen this year from a field of eleven candidates to be class marshal.

And in 1973: For any girl, Betty's extracurricular record would be considered distinguished. But though Radcliffe, traditionally reticent, was wisely matter-of-fact about it, there was one thing which made her even more noteworthy: Betty was a Negro, a fact not mentioned in any of the newspaper publicity. Daughter of a Harvard man, J. MacFarland Fitzgerald, and sister of the sophomore class vice president, the 20-year-old senior had risen in school politics on the strength of the popularity-winning personal charm and ability which had made her a success in Girls Latin School in Boston and Brookline High and later the biggest of campus "big wheels" at Radcliffe.

Last week Betty Fitzgerald's greatest collegiate moment came when, as class marshal, she headed the procession of 218 women who were awarded degrees at Radcliffe commencement exercises in Sanders Theater, Harvard. Although there had been Negro girls at Radcliffe since its founding in 1879, Betty was the first Negro to be either senior president or marshal.* Her reaction: "The best part of it is that when my class returns for its 25th and biggest reunion in 1973, I lead the whole caboodle into Sanders Theater again."

Wellesley Drops Question on Race

First College in Mass. to Clean Its Slate

FRAMINGHAM, Mass.—Wellesley College, one of the most famous institutions for women in the entire world, has announced that in the future its application blanks will not contain questions regarding the applicant's race.

Wellesley thus became the first college in Massachusetts to state in print that it would dispense with anything that might contribute to the vicious "quota system" in student admissions.

In making the announcement the school hurriedly denied that there had ever been any "quota" system as such in operation there.

Quotas Blasted

It did state that in the past it has tried to make sure that "the college community" would include representatives from all groups "racially and religiously."

The "quota system" in the State's thirty-odd colleges came up for a thorough airing twice in the past three years.

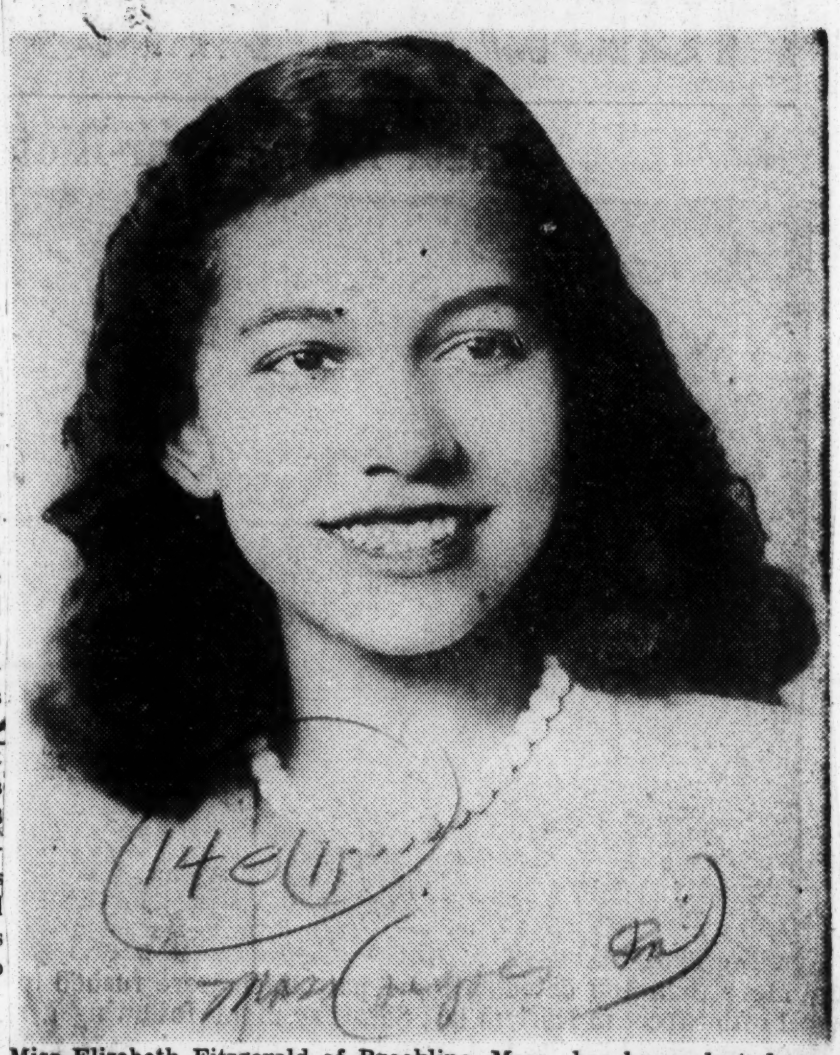
Once during the FEPC hearings, when it was testified that colored, Jews and Irish Catholics were systematically excluded or discriminated against in virtually all schools and colleges in Massachusetts, and again this year in hearings on bills to abolish educational segregation.

Mind Vs. Questionaires

Harvard, Boston University and other schools testified before legislative bodies that discrimination is farthest from their thoughts, but none explained the ever-present, "What is your race?" on their questionaires.

Wellesley's raceless application blanks are due to be circulated for the first time next year. The school promises to cross out the race and religion answers on all those now in circulation.

Class Marshal at Radcliffe



Miss Elizabeth Fitzgerald of Brookline, Mass., has been elected marshal of the senior class at Radcliffe College in Cambridge where she is also president of her class. Active in the Radcliffe Choral Society and the student council, Miss Fitzgerald is also on the editorial panel of the Radcliffe News and chairman of the National Student Association Committee. She is a member of Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority.

First Negro Becomes Officer In Senior Class

BOSTON — (ANP) — For the first time in the school's history a Negro, Henry Levy Parker, was elected to an office of the senior class at Gordon college last week. He is class vice president.

He is also serving as treasurer of the Hypernicon staff whish publishes the senior class book. He once served as treasurer of his sophomore class. Outside of school he is assistant to the rector of St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church in Cambridge.

Harvard Has Three Men of Distinction

Pittsburg Courier

Pittsburg Pennsylvania

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — By attaining top positions in student activities three Negro students have distinguished themselves at Harvard during the past year. Two have been prominent on the gridiron and one outstanding in court work at the Law School.

Frank Jones of Greensboro, N. C., a senior at Harvard College, has been named varsity football manager for the 1949 season. His appointment follows two years of competition for the post.

Jones was assistant varsity manager a year ago when another Negro student, Chester Pierce of Glen Cove, N. Y., held a starting berth on the Harvard varsity football eleven. As a first-string tackle, Pierce played in the Harvard-University of Virginia game and was the first Negro to participate in a major inter-regional football contest South of the Mason and Dixon Line.

In the field of law, a third-year student at the Harvard Law School, George E. Lee Jr. of Baltimore, Md., has won a place in the semi-finals of the Ames competition, a contest between student law clubs. A place in the final stages of this contest signifies marked excellence in mock trial procedure.

College Women Accept Mrs. Russell

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. —(ANP) —The Minneapolis College Women's club accepted its first Negro member last week when members voted 588 to 129 to acept Mrs. Nell Dodson Russell into the group.

The Minneapolis club is a branch of the American Association of University Women. Its rules for membership require only that a woman has attended an association approved college or university for at least two years.

Mrs. Russell attended the University of Minnesota. She is now completing a book, "Brother Your Prejudice Is Showing," on University of Minnesota fellowship. She is also a newspaper columnist for the Minneapolis Spokesman-St. Paul Recorder newspapers.

Racial, Religious Questions Dropped at Univ. of Minn.

ST. PAUL, Minn.—All questions as to race and religion are being removed from basic records and application forms at the University of Minnesota, it has been announced.

The university stated that the questions are being removed so as to eliminate a source of "possible discrimination," which the questions represented.

It was admitted that the move was in response to a request by the governor's interracial commission that such questions be omitted.

The university stated that such questions will not appear on new forms, and that they will be blocked out on those remaining of the present supply.

This rule will apply from the nursery and kindergarten, operated by the institute of child welfare, up to forms for graduate and student application information.

Such questions will also be dropped from forms used by the Institute of Technology placement service. The question of religion will remain on the religious census card at the university, since that census is entirely voluntary.

On the regular census card, however, all references to racial origins and nationalities of parents are to be dropped.

New Group to Boost Education in Miss.

JACKSON, Miss.—Under the sponsorship of college administrators, a new educational organization, designed to unify higher educational practices for Negroes in Mississippi, was officially started Oct. 14.

To be known as the Mississippi Association of College Administrators, the association has as its objectives: the formulation of a plan to offer extension work to in-service teachers that will be on a State-approved level; the recommendation of standards to the State Board of Education by which greater benefit may be obtained by Negroes from the $25,000 appropriated by the State for Negro education outside the State, and the development of a system by which accurately processed records may be obtained from high schools.

LOOSE HANDLING

At a meeting held at Jackson College, attended by eighteen educators, the sponsors of the new organization charged that these all-important issues were handled too loosely.

Addressing the group, Dr. P. H. Eason, State director of Negro Education for Mississippi, said that as soon as the necessary machinery could be set up, the Board of Education will be directly in charge of all teacher certification in this State.

Dr. Eason urged the eighteen educators to recommend standards for extension work for in-service teachers and submit them to the State Board of Education for study.

Jacob L. Reddix, president of Jackson College and host to the association, was elected president; John Long, president of Southern Christian Institute, vice president; Miss M. E. Shannon, registrar of Mississippi Industrial College, secretary; L. B. Fraser, dean of Tougaloo College, treasurer.

Junior College For Negroes Set Near Itta Bena

Jackson, Miss., —(Special)—Mississippi's first Legislature-authorized junior-vocational college for negroes will be established about two miles from Itta Bena in Leflore County on Highway 82.

Selection of the site, announced here by W. B. Fontaine, secretary of the State Building Commission, was made by a committee of the Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning, headed by Dr. H. M. Ivy of Meridian. It was the choice over sites offered at Indianoia and Tutwiler.

The college, for which the initial state appropriation is $300,000, will comprise about 550 acres, most of which embodied the Ralph Lembo plantation. As an inducement for locating the college near Itta Bana, the Leflore County Board of Supervisors voted $20,000 to help in its construction, and also agreed to build roads at the institution. Legislative authority must be given, however, to the county's cash offer.

Mr. Fountaine, who is also executive counsel to Governor Wright, said the building commission will negotiate the necessary papers for purchase of the lands at its Jan. 13 meeting.

Forrest Cooper of Indianola, here in interest of the site there, expressed keen disappointment in the board's selection. H pugorsi the board's selection. His group had offered 487 acres on Highway 49 for the site, of which 102 acres in 16th Section school lands were offered without cost. In addition, citizens of Indianola offered a $5000 bonus, while county authorities agreed to build highways at the colleg. Price of the Indianola college.

lands was $46,155, while the Itta Bena location will cost $50.000.

SITE FINALLY FOUND FOR NEGRO COLLEGE

Mississippi Now Has Choice Of Three Delta Towns

$300,000 IS AUTHORIZED

From The Commercial Appeal
Jackson, Mississippi, Bureau

JACKSON, Miss., Nov. 23.—At long last, a site for the 1946 legislative-authorized negro junior college in the Delta, seems certain of selection.

The State Building Commission announced Tuesday it would inspect three suggested sites on Nov. 30. They are Tutwiler, Itta Bena, and Indianola. A legislative appropriation of $300,000 has been authorized for construction of the first such college for negroes in Mississippi, to be known as a vocational college.

Carroll Residents Objected

Efforts to locate the college on the abandoned Greenwood Air Base several years ago were blocked when residents of Carroll County, in which most of the land is situated, objected. Around $1,500,000 in surplus buildings and other facilities could have been utilized at the Greenwood site.

In other actions, the building commission:

Approved a grant of $35,000 for replacing the destroyed cow barn at Mississippi State College; approved initial expenditures under the legislative appropriation of $1,100,000 for expendituresiterimen $1,100,000 for experiment stations at Verona ($11,297), and coastal plains station at Newton ($31,950).

College Given Funds

Granted State College $9854 for funds expended on temporary repairs to Lee Hall, which was damaged by fire, and $3574 for repairs to the organ and chimes in the building due to fire damage.

A tentative site for $3,000,000 memorial hospital proposed here by the Catholic Church, will be selected by James Canizaro, architect, and inspected by the building commission. Mr. Canizaro is to designate a tract on state-owned lands at the corner of Peeler and Highland Avenues in North Jackson, for the board to inspect.

On the Educational Front

Mississippi legislators have appropriated $300,000 for the erection of a new colored college, but turned down the Greenwood Army Air Base as its proposed site, spurning a $3,000,000 gift of the government. A few residents in the area had objected to the school. Now the Board of State Institutions is faced with the impossible task of buying ground, erecting buildings and working out a year's budget with $300,000.

THE JOHNSONS BUILD AN EDUCATIONAL "OASIS" IN MISSISSIPPI "DESERT"

Chicago Ill Sat 1-10/48

Forty years ago Professor J. E. Johnson and his young wife, Bertha, both diciples of late Booker T. Washington, selected a few acres of land in the piney woods of Jefferson Davis County of the state of Mississippi—Prentiss was and is the name of the town of about 700 souls—and there on faith alone they founded an educational institution for Negro boys and girls.

This institution has grown with the years in every way and when it opened its doors for the forty-first time, September 22, 1947, more than 600 young men and women came to prepare themselves for life's work. When they shall have completed their courses there, most of them will remain in Mississippi and assume the responsibilities of citizenship. Some will migrate to less prejudiced fields. Upon the shoulders of those that remain, the greater burden rests, for they will be the parents of the next generation of Mississippi's citizens.

FOUNDERS ARE OPTIMISTS

Sat 1-17-48

The founders of Prentiss Institute are optimists. There were times in their earlier days when they were tempted to give up the struggle, but forty years of experience has taught them that it can be done, if they believe in themselves, in God and in mankind. Unlike the large endowed schools of the nation, Prentiss Institute depends on its friends throughout the country to keep its doors open.

Many of these friends have died and new ones are needed to fill their places. The country-at large-deplores the educational conditions of Mississippi (and the entire southland) but what do they do about it? Here is a chance to lend a helping hand, and by so doing undermine the teachings and practices of the late Bilbo and today's Rankin and Eastland. This institution is laying the foundation for a new type of citizenry in Mississippi. These conscientious leaders have demonstrated through forty years their ability to carry on.

DRICH WARNS STATE TO EDUCATE NEGROES

Improve Schools Or Retard Mississippi, He Tells Farm Gathering

Fri 10-29-48

By KENNETH TOLER

From The Commercial Appeal
Jackson, Mississippi, Bureau

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 28.—Mississippians were admonished Thursday by the State Farm Bureau Federation's president to improve educational opportunities for negroes or stand by and have them provided by outsiders "the way we don't want it."

Memphis Tenn

Speaking before the annual convention of the farm organization, President Ransom Aldrich of Michigan City charged that "too long have we misused education funds in Mississippi." He was especially critical of "some of our selfish people" he accused with blocking a legislative approved $300,000 junior college for negroes in the Delta.

Must "Show Yankees"

Advocating that improved education be extended to negroes as well as whites, the former member of the Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning, said:

"Just so long as we keep the negroes an economic liability, just so long do we retard Mississippi's progress. "We talk about 'Damnyankees.' We'd better do something to show the 'Damnyankees.' Too long have we misused education funds in Mississippi. This thing has got to be solved by ourselves or somebody is going to come in and solve it for us—and it won't be solved the way we want it solved."

Mr. Aldrich admitted that "it takes a lot of nerve to stand here when political issues are so hot and talk about this, but maybe it is the best time."

Fri 10-29-48

Opposed by Citizens

In connection with the authorized Delta Junior College for negroes, which the college board sought to locate on the abandoned Greenwood Army Air Base but was blocked by protests from citizens of Carroll County, in which part of the land is located, Mr. Aldrich charged:

"It has not been located or a dollar spent, and it is because some of our selfish people are not willing to have an institution located in their community. I say that is wrong."

Opposition of the Carroll Countians was expressed by them as due to lack of school facilities for families of those who would attend the institution, as well as an asserted law enforcement problem.

Other speakers included Senator Stennis and Representative Abernethy of the Fourth Congressional District. Both discussed farm programs.

Praises Price Supports

Representative Abernethy said there "is a well organized campaign against supports and farm programs generally, but we know that support prices have not been responsible for the high prices of foods."

"The greatest increases in prices paid by consumers are coming on items which are not supported," he said. "Actually, the supported commodities are holding down good prices—not boosting them."

The convention will elect officers Friday.

Faculty Members Favor Admission Of Colored Students

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—(NNPA) — A poll of faculty members of University College, Washington University evening school, on the question of admitting colored students to their classes, disclosed 75 per cent of those replying to the inquiry favored their admission, it was announced last week.

John J. Keesler, a chemical engineer and former mathematics instructor at the university, said he acted on behalf of a citizens' committee in making the postal card poll last October. He said about 60 per cent of the 274 receiving the cards replied. He said the committee planned to poll the university faculty and the student body on the question at a later date.

Colored students are now admitted to graduate work in the George Warren Brown School of Social Work at the university and to the school of medicine but the university directors recently declined a scholarship fund for the school of law carrying a provision the awards must be made without discrimination of color or race.

More Negro Classes Asked in Missouri

State Law Change Urged to Obey U. S. Ruling

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Dec. 2 (UP).—The Board of Curators of the University of Missouri today recommended limited enrollment of Negroes at state-supported institutions of higher learning, including the university.

The curators made their recommendations to the Missouri House Committee on Equal Rights, which is studying the state's segregation law with a view to changing its educational provisions.

The statement reviewed state law and noted the recent opinion of the United States Supreme Court, which ruled that Oklahoma and Arkansas must provide equal education faciliities for Negro students.

Summing up the M. U. regent's findings, the statement recommended that the equal rights committee seek a change in Missouri law to permit enrollment in the university and the teachers colleges of Negro students "in those divisions and curricula where instruction of equivalent character" is not afforded by Lincoln University for Negroes in Jefferson City.

Curators Seek Way To Admit Negro Students To Missouri University

By NNPA News Service

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—The University of Missouri Board of Curators last Thursday recommended that state laws be amended to permit the admission of colored students to state-supported institutions of higher learning to pursue courses not offered at Lincoln University.

The recommendation was made at a hearing conducted by the House Committee on Equal Rights by former State Senator Allen McReynolds, president of the board.

The board's statement said that the state constitution enacted in 1875 provided for separate public schools for white and colored pupils, but that the 1945 constitution provided for separate schools "except in cases otherwise provided by law."

Mr. McReynolds said: "It is the board's understanding that the United States Supreme Court and subordinate federal courts have held that, under the federal Constitution, it is the duty of the state to supply opportunities and facilities for education to Negro students which are substantially equivalent to those afforded to white students."

WANTS LAWS AMENDED

He urged the committee to recommend to the General Assembly that state laws be amended to provide that state-supported institutions of higher education admit colored students in those divisions and curricula where instruction of equivalent character is not afforded by Lincoln University.

Mr. McReynolds said Lincoln University should be kept as a separate institution.

In referring to federal court decisions, Mr. McReynolds said it is clear that educational programs not available at Lincoln either must be duplicated there "or the programs at these (white) colleges must be opened to Missouri Negro students."

Speaking at the hearing for Adjutant General John A. Harris, Major Clyde Lear said the Missouri National Guard had approved separate combat engineer units for colored men because that is Army policy. Two colored combat engineer companies have been authorized for Kansas City and two for St. Louis, but they have not been activated.

Michael J. Carroll, head of the State Employment Security Division, said the policy of his office is to follow community practices in hiring colored persons and to comply strictly with the state merit system. A number of colored persons are working now in the Kansas City and St. Louis offices, he asid.

If the board's recommendation is enacted into law, McReynolds said it would "not necessarily" mean segregation in the classroom. He called that an administrative problem, to be studied when it arises.

Frederick A. Middlebush, university president, said "the least critical part of the problem would be the teaching of the student in the classroom." He suggested other problems—housing, feeding and so on—would be much more critical.

JIM CROW GETS BLOWS

During the past week, old Jim Crow in Missouri took a pretty hard blow when the Board of Curators of the University of Missouri in an official act recommended legislation which would permit Negroes who seek higher learning to attend the state university at Columbia.

We hasten to hail this move as a hard blow right between the eyes of old James Crow in this state who has weathered many battles to retain his crown.

We are particularly pleased with the action in this case on the part of the curators, because we understand President Fredrick Middlebush made the recommendation to the Board.

And while it is true that the action taken in this case is quite a forward step toward the elimination of racial segregation in the schools of higher education in the state, yet it strikes us that the legislature will have its opportunity to look into the whole question of segregation in the public school of the state.

Surely the time is ripe for such study. Only the stupid and uninformed of the signs of the times, will be among those wringing their hands crying "taint time yet."

Students Quit; Waiters' Pay Too Low at Charity Ball

BALTIMORE

Because a "guarantee" of from down to approximately $2 or $3, some 71 Morgan College students walked off jobs, Wednesday, as waiters at a charity ball attended by approximately 3,000 persons.

The affair, a benefit given for the University Hospital, was held in the Fifth Regiment Armory.

Oscar Harris, member of the senior class and president of the Student Council, had been placed in charge of recruiting the student waiters at the request of Edward N. Wilson, Morgan's registrar. Sat. 5-15-48

Felt He "Honored" Students

Earlier in the week, George Johnson, white caterer of Catonsville, personally visited the college in search of waiters.

He told the AFRO, "I've favored that crowd out there (meaning Morgan students) and thought it would be an honor to be represented among the group at the ball and an honor for the college to have its students participate."

All the guests at the benefit were white.

In order to recruit waiters, Mr. Wilson posted a notice asking for 75 boys in which he stated the full particulars. Baltimore, Md

Affair Deemed "Unpromising"

Because it was a charity affair, the sponsors could afford to pay only $3 per man to cover his carfare, rental of a white coat and incidentals, it was explained.

However, because of the anticipated large attendance, from $10 to $20 in tips were guaranteed. Accordingly, 71 students reported at the Armory around 6:30 p.m.

Harris said his group decided to leave the affair when it appeared they could only earn $2 or $3 each, which would not compensate them for the night's work, pointing out:

"It would have been around 2 p.m. before we would finish, which would have meant we would miss the last bus and have to ride taxicabs back to the campus.

"In addition, social security and money for the rental of coats would have to be deducted from our earnings, which would cut deeper into whatever we made. So that all in all, the night didn't look at all profitable for us."

$5 Gurantee Refused

He said that when the caterer refused to guarantee them even $5 per man, they removed their coats neatly folded them up and quietly walked out, leaving the guests to make out the best way they could.

Many of Morgan's students regularly work for the various local caterers and receive a flat guarantee of $10, which doesn't include tips.

Caterer Johnson, who spoke of his 40 years of sophistication gained through extensive travel in the show business, expressed himself as being "deeply hurt."

All for Sweet Charity

"I went out there (to Morgan) to help those boys. When they came on the job I talked to them, explained the details and told them of what a job they were doing to aid charity," he said, continuing: 5-15-48

"What happened was the greatest jolt I've received since being in the show business. I wonder if some of them don't feel badly now that it's all over."

Johnson added, "some of them came back and worked but I don't know how many. I was kept quite busy otherwise."

Gov. Lane Hints No Morgan Transfer at Inauguration

The Afro American (14e)

Baltimore Md

BALTIMORE

Addressing an audience at the inauguration of Dr. Martin D Jenkins as seventh president of Morgan State College, Gov. W Preston Lane Jr., declared Friday night that the college would maintain its integrity under its present board of trustees.

Inauguration ceremonies were held in Douglass High School auditorium. Sat 12-26-48

The Governor's statement, made before high State officials and a gathering of top-ranking educators from colleges and universities throughout the country, was regarded as putting an end to the request of Dr. H. C. Byrd that Morgan College be turned over to Maryland University.

Dr. Byrd, who is president of the University of Maryland, recently made the request before the legislative council of the Maryland Legislature, that the change should be made "So that segregation could be properly maintained."

Door Always Open

The Chief Executive said, "As Governor of Maryland, I have been glad to be of some substantial aid to Morgan College."

Further, he lauded the Morgan board of trustees and expressed both his official and personal welcome to Dr. Jenkins.

"I shall always be happy, ready and willing to discuss with him problems of Morgan College. The door at Annapolis is open and he shall always be welcome."

Dr. Byrd was on the platform when the Governor made his statement.

The Governor; U.S. Senator Herbert R. O'Connor, under whose administration as Governor Morgan got its first appropriation for new buildings; city, State and prominent officials from all over the nation, heard all the colored speakers declare their unalterable opposition to any form of segregation in public education.

Urges Continued Fight

Dr. Jenkins himself declared, "I have always been and shall always be opposed to the pattern of racial segregation in American life."

The strongest anti-segregation statement was made by Dr. John W. Davis, president of West Virginia State College, and dean of College Presidents as well as former president of Land-Grant College Presidents. Balto 12-25-48

Amidst loud cheering by the audience, Dr. Davis said:

The anti-education movement in America today must not cause us to yield even infinitestimally in the fight against expansion of jim crowism and racial segregation, not only in education but in all other phases of American life."

He declared bluntly that "For the good of America, racial segregation must go."

Decries Regional Plan

Referring to the Conference of Southern Governors recent meeting in Savannah, Ga., Dr. Davis said: "The advocates of regional education in the South on a segregated basis or within the framework of racial segregation know that it is wrong and unconstitutional.

"This thing must be resisted and defeated if we would safeguard the moral position of our country as a leader among nations of the world."

Continuing along this line, Dr. Davis declared that white teachers who are so prejudiced at heart they cannot teach colored children are harming the intellectued souls and minds of white children.

He added that colored teachers who are not sufficiently trained to teach white children are unfit to teach colored children.

Make Schools Mixed

"So-called colored colleges," he said, "must cease to be by opening their doors to white youths. youths.

"Colored college presidents must work themselves out of jobs which limit their status to that of a colored college president.

"'This integration of effort will not cause any competent persons to be without a teaching assignment. It will only redistribute our teaching personnel and the children to be taught."

Following in the same vein, Dr. D. O. Holmes, president emeritus of Morgan College, whom Dr. Jenkins succeeds, reviewed the history of the "Negro College" in this country.

Tracing this growth, he said the first period of development extended from 1860 to 1885; the second from 1885 through the following three decades, and the third from 1917 to the present.

Declaring that progress has been made, Dr. Holmes, however, decried the fact that the present pattern of education in 1948 requires that a colored president be inaugurated for a college operated exclusively for colored students.

Eager and forward-looking youth of both races wonder what is wrong with this picture, he said.

"The progressive colored student is justly intolerant of inequalities which he observes in educational facilities at all levels, and naturally demands reform. This attitude is necessary and wholly commendable," he declared.

Change Forseen

But, he predicted, that the fourth period in the development of colored colleges will bring change.

He listed the reasons for this expected change as the high cost of dual education, social change and the growing realization that colored and white can study together.

Further, he saw the ice of prejudice melting and the "river starting to flow to the sea," and for this reason urged youths to contain themselves just a little while longer but not to relax in the fight for full equality. Sat 12-25-48

Opposes Segregation

Dr. Jenkins said he hoped that his assuming the presidency of a segregated college would not be interpreted "as any defense of racial segregation in education.

I reject, as any self-respecting I opposed segregation because colored person must, the basic assumption underlying all phases of racial segregation, namely, the colored people are inherently and inescapably inferior to other racial groups in our population."

Dr. Jenkins stated he further opposed segregation because it serves to depress the general level of accomplishment among colored people; weans opposition in world leadership and is contrary to Christian ethics and democratic principles."

Other Speakers

Other participants on the program were John Dale Russell, director Division of Higher Education, U.S. Office of Education; Carrington L. Davis, member of Morgan board of trustees, who presented the symbols of authority to Dr. Jenkins; the Rev. Joshua O. Williams, pastor of Sharp St. Methodist Church, Baltimore; Balto 12-25-48

William L. Vannaman, who read a message from Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro Jr., and the Rev. Matthew G. Sullivan, dean of Loyola College, Baltimore.

Achievements of Morgan Under Dr. Holmes Cited

Student Body Tripled, Faculty Expanded in 10 Years, Registrar's Article Reveals

BALTIMORE

With the declaration that Morgan College is not only "going" but is "going places," the most recent edition of the Morgan Bulletin cites progress under the administration of retiring President D. O. W. Holmes.

Edward N. Wilson, registrar, is author of the summary which lists achievements during Dr. Holmes's 10 years of service. These include an increase in the annual budget from $853,879 in 1937 to $3,321,579, last year.

Teaching Staff Increased

The faculty now includes 78 full-time teachers, 26 of whom hold the doctor of philosophy degree, in comparison to 20 faculty members in 1937.

The student enrollment has grown from 302 to 1300 within 10 years; and the proposed building program provides for an enrollment of only 1500.

For 3,000 students, Morgan needs six additional dormitories, an education building, and a fine arts building, Mr. Wilson states.

Would Double Capacity

He points out that with these additions to the 24 projects already included in the present program, the college can adequately take care of 3,000 students.

The bulletin also contains an article by Dr. Frederick H. Dedmond, professor of romance languages, who explains the need for

Farewell Banquet for Morgan College Prexy

Rounding out nearly 11 years of service at Morgan State College, Dr. D. O. W.Holmes, who will retire from the presidency in June, was feted at a testimonial banquet, Tuesday, by the faculty and staff members. Dr. Holmes, under whose administration the budget of the college has increased over three million dollars, was lauded by all factors of the college community, including the alumni and the student body. Pictures at the guest table during the banquet which was held in the Morgan Christian Center, are left to right, Dean George C. Morris Brown's Good Fortune

World Atlanta Ga. Sun. 9-26-48

An enduring monument to competitive sports was dedicated Friday night when more than 16,000 fans gathered in the $250,000 Herndon Stadium.

The ceremony was not only a testimonial to the high place that intercollegiate athletics hold in our everyday lives but a glowing tribute to the vision and courage of Bishop W. A. Fountain, Sr., Pres. W. A. Fountain, Jr., Bishop R. R. Wright, the AME Church of Georgia and the college administration, along with others who through inspiration, contributions, labor and encouragement made the stadium possible. Sun. 9-26-48

There has come increasing recognition of the importance of competitive sports as a means of physical development, entertainment, and as a factor in molding character. Our newspapers have heightened their interest in reporting the feats of sports heroes in many sports. Any such project of the nature of Herndon Stadium must thereby be associated with the growing stature of sports in world affairs. As such we wholeheartedly commend those responsible for the construction of this worthy athletic plant.

It was befitting that Georgia's "first" woman Olympic winner should be the guest of honor at our "first" major stadium dedication exercises. Miss Alice Coachman symbolizes like Herndon Stadium our growth and responsibility in many fields. We are proud of Miss Coachman and of Herndon Stadium. Both show what Georgia can do along progressive lines. They are indicative of progress, maturity in our thinking on the value of competitive intercollegiate sports, and advancement towards the solution of acute and aggravating athletic problems. 9-26-48

We repeat the statement that we are proud of Herndon Stadium. May we have many more such projects in the years to come.

What Is Wrong With Morris College?

The Lighthouse Informer

It "Could Save Itself, If It Would," Official Declares

Morris College at Sumter, operated by Negro Baptists, has for the past several weeks and months been the subject of considerable discussions among Baptists, educators and state educational officials.

The State Department of Education has had in hand since October 28, 1947 certain data it considerally raised, "What is wrong with Morris College?"

These data, in the form of a written by a special committee investigating South Carolina colleges, have been made available to President Odell Reuben, to trustees of the institution, and are sympathetic, but frank, analyses of the school's problems and shortcomings. One Department of Education official made it clear this week that "we want to do anything to hurt or discredit this fine college. We need it and every service it offers. And we want to work along with it until it 'arights itself.'"

NOW ON PROBATION

Morris College is now on a probational status. It can quit this position today or tomorrow if it is able to fill up several gaps which are pointed to in the report of the investigating committee a year ago. It is strictly up to Morris to lift itself up or remove itself entirely.

General reports tossed about by the two or more factions of the State Baptist Convention, which in effect set the time limit as wo years, do not take into accounting the view of state educational officials.

These officials realize readily that it takes time to do all the things required. They indicate they might not hold rigidly to a two year deadline if Morris on her own gets busy and begin delivering, showing she honestly intends to become first class or at least in line with state requirements.

"The principal fault we have observed with Morris," one official said, "is that the college seems willing only to do what it is prodded into doing. We will receive and accept a proposal for eliminating one condition and then await the report of its accomplishment. Some time later, we check and find that somebody overlooked it or was delaying it without any reasonable purpose. Then, somebody will get busy and do this job and begin again to wait for us to make the next move.

"Many of the problems confronting Morris today need not now exist, and would not exist if those responsible for the school had kept at jobs the school cut out for itself long ago when discussions were first made."

"TOO MANY COOKS"

The specific tasks laid before the school in the committee report of last yar will be set forth in this discussion. But before they are given it is necessary to look into some of the background and other facts incidental with Morris College.

One point state education leaders touched up again and again during a discussion of the college this week was that the State Board does not know who is and who isn't authorized to act for the college.

One official said that there are 99 trustees and quite often one committee, presumedly acting for the trustee board, will communicate with the State Board, setting forth provisions and plans, or passing on some requested information. A little later, an entirely different group will write or come in with a conflicting version and will promptly denounce the first group.

It is neither the wish nor province of State Board people to say how the trustee board should be made up. But it definitely wants Morris' board to designate a small committee of not more than seven or nine persons, with whom it could deal and whom it could list officially as the spokesmen for the college.

The Board finds it impossible to try to do business with 99 people, these being split into several and hostile and confusing groups.

MIXING CHURCH POLITICS

While state officials didn't say so in this many words, it was obvious that they considered "indiscreet" and out of place having dumped before them the political woes and differences among trustees and the whole Baptist Church.

This spring, trustees elected one man president; one faction "unelected" him and later elected a second man. Groups from both sides ran to the State Department with their versions, hanging out dirty laundry.

The particular reference here is to the election of Dr. L. M. Tobin of Atlanta, an associat professor at Morehouse College, pastor of one of Atlanta's largest Baptist congregations and who, up to about three years ago, was an outstanding Baptist leader in South Carolina, a member of the Morris faculty.

Dr. Tobin, on his election, visited the State Department, presumably preparatory to considering acceptance, made a "good" impression and left. He had the necessary qualifications, the State Board felt.

A little later, a group of trustees and Baptist ministers came by to report that Dr. Tobin had been shamefully highjacked out of office by the "Daniels' faction," the group detailing some of the incidents.

There were other visits after Rev. Reuben was finally elected.

STATE'S ROLE CLEARED

There have been numerous rumors that somebody on the State Board "suggested" who would have been its choice for the presidency of the college during the spring election. These rumors are exaggerated.

Several trustees and supporters of the college did ask state officers for the requirements of a president of a college, under present standards. These were told that the president, since the college was principally engaged in turning out school teachers, should himself have a degree higher than the college level, in education. Or, if he didn't have this training, he ought to have a dean or some other person helping him run the school, looking after curricula, etc. who did have the training.

How the contrary got around is explained away in the same manner many other rumors, and countersayings, coursing the State.

NAME IS AT STAKE

The name of Morris College is being kicked around by factions of the Baptist connection for partisan reasons, alrgely because of opposition to the Reverend G. Goings Daniels and the "old guard" which also have a hand in running Morris.

But this fight, which could well cut off all finances from the various churches and padlok the doors is nothing at all when compared with somethings the laity of the Baptist churches and padlock the doors is

On file in the State Department of Education is a number of letters from city and county superintendents of education, from principals and from Morris College students and graduates, which combine to show that the name of the college is way down the list.

All of these show soundly that Morris College hasn't been turning out competent graduates, persons who can hold their own in present day educational circles, and something basically must be changed.

Take for example the following letter written by a person just about to receive a Morris College diploma. The letter bore no signature; has no date, salutation. The writer put her name only on the envelop. It is reproduced from the page of onionskin paper on which it is written, with the punctuation, very poor grammar and poorer spelling:

Lou 10-31-48

"To The State Departmen of Education. I hav tooken the natural examation me for teacher,s and I have notice that everyone have their mark.

"I'm interest in finding out what did I made as a senior of Morris College."

There is also on file at the State Department of Education evidence that sometime ago Negro teachers in Sumter schools where Morris College students in teacher-training did practice work sought to have the students withdrawn.

The teachers didn't object to the extra work they had assisting these understudies. They objected to the disastrous effect on their little pupils by persons who lacked woefully in preliminary details.

But Morris College is trying desperately to get in line. State officials are very much impressed with the college's new registrar, a Mr. Smith, and also the program laid out by President Reuben.

"On paper, it is an excellent program," an official said. "But it is just on paper. We are anxious to have it translated into the new Morris College."

Overall, this official pointed out, the situation in which the college finds itself is not a hopeless one. He summed up the picture in these words:

"The State Board would save Morris College if it could; Morris College could save itself, if it would."

(Next Week In the second of three articles on Morris College, the special committee's report on the college will be published.)

Morris Brown College

We have an efficient faculty, progressive and loyal. Our salary scale is equal to any in the South with rank and tenure and security.

Turner Theological Department: Five full time Theological professors—forty-eight students.

Sixty-one churches in and around Atlanta—all small churches are allocated as training stations for Morris Brown College nd Turner Theological Seminary Ministerial students.

We maintain a regular AME Church with all Departments of any regulated church.

All Georgia Ministers are in school through our Area Councils and Summer Institutes and Conference Institutes. WE ARE PRAISING GOD FOR OUR SUCCESS.

Student body over nine hundred (900): Annual cost to operate, four hundred thousand ($400,000) dollars. (1) Three new buildings. We are proud to report the completion of three class room buildings, built and finished and occupied since last June, at no cost to the Institution, except that of heat, water and lights. (2) Finest Stadium in our group—over two hundred fifty thousand ($250,000) dollars and a Gymnasium at a cost of $95,000—We pay only $11,000 of this amount. It is one of the most beautiful in the South. This Gymnasium will be fully equipped. This gymnasium was handled outside of budget. $11,000 overplus to Gymn.

(3) THE NEW STDIUM: The Herndon Stadium one of the finest in the South is nearing completion at a cost of over $250,000.

These three new class room buildings, the Gymnasium, the Stadium, etc., are products of the thinking, ingenuity and pioneering skill of our capable and dynamic President, William Alfred Fountain, Jr., who is one of the most progressive and self-sacrificing Educators in our racial group; and pardon me, when I say that, I am proud to be the father of such a fine son. He is a "gem of excellence."

(4) Plans are being completed for a $250,000 girl's dormitory—The Trustees have inspected the plan and blue print and given the "Go Sign"—The Contractor, Chief Aiken, has been secured and an agreement signed.

(5) CHARTER:

The much spoken of CHARTER was a business instrument to assist in financing one of the finest projects of the race. It has accomplished its objective and when Bishop R. R. Wright Jr., my succesor, gets ready to dissolve this instrument, it will be dissolved.

Our Church is made up of great men and women and great deeds. Are we going to let our prestige and heritage be dragged in the mud by little men in high places.

The General Conference has spoken, and from it there is no appeal. I am assigned to the Twelfth Episcopal District, Arkansas and Oklahoma. I am happy in my new field.

"White Paper" Outlines

WHAT'S WRONG WITH MORRIS COLLEGE

Atlanta Daily World
Thurs 11-11-48

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(SNS)—

The "white paper" prepared following an official visit to Morris College at Sumter, on October 28, 1947, a report which sets forth officially what the State Board of Education finds Morris College needs to do to meet present state educational requirements.

The second and final portion of the paper follows:

Atlanta Ga

II. RECORDS--THE REGISTRAR

The Records at Morris have been very poorly handled. Frequent changes on transcripts have been noted and it is difficult to place responsibility. The Registrar's office is accessible to all and persons other than the registrar could make chages on records. There is no fireproof depository for safe guarding the records. A new registrar has been employed. He holds a Master's Degree and is making a sincere attempt to improve the work of his office. However, he has not had specific training as a registrar. The Committee recommends

1. A separate suite of rooms for the Registrar accessible only to him and his helpers, and the placing of sole responsibility for record keeping on the registrar.

2. Fire-proofing of a room for the preservation of his records.

3. Further training for the registrar in this specific field.

4. Immediate study of modern methods employed by registrars through visitation.

III. THE LIBRARY

During 1946-47 session, Morris raised approximately $100,000.00 and erected a new library building. It also employed a new librarian who has practically completed her training in Library Science. The College deserved a great deal of credit for these two forward steps. The library, however, as a functioning unit is still extremely weak. Most of the materials are obsolete. It can not possibly meet the needs of 600 students and it was clearly inadequate for the summer school last summer, which was the largest in the state. A student library fee of $2.00 per student, recommended by Dr. J. B. White, was charged last summer, but the money was not spent for library materials. An initial sum or at least $20,000.00 should be spent for materials. An initial sum of at library fee should be charged each year, and a small sum of at least $2,000.00 should be spent annually. It was felt by some of the committee members that the library is the weakest factor at Morris College.

IV. CLASSROOM AND LABORATORY EQUIPMENT

Thurs 11-11-48

Classroom and laboratory equipment is generally inadequate at Morris. The most serious condition was found in the Science Department, particularly in the Physical Sciences. But there was evidence of insucicient materials throughout the college. Music, Arts, Arts and Crafts, and Audio-Vision materials were practically non-existent There was a general lack of Art in th various rooms, corridors, etc. Learning comes through inter-action with an environment. The environment. The environment at vironment at Morris is poor respecting good materials of instruction.

V. ADMISSION OF NEW STUDENTS--EXAMINATIONS

The Committee was very frank with the administrators at Morris concerning frequent criticisms being made about the qualifications of Morris graduates, and about the apparent ease with which students can receive credits. The admission policies and requirements of an institution have much to do with the quality of its product. The admission system at Morris has been weak but some recent steps have been taken to improve this condition. The Dean explained that Morris had long faced the problem of having to admit students from quite a number of weak and non-accredited high schools. He stated that he had begun this fall to give entering freshmen a standardized examination but he had not established any norms suitable for admission bases and could use the examinations only for guidance purposes. The Committee recommends that:

1. A Faculty Committee be appointed to work with the Dean and the Registrar in the formulation and enforcement of admission requirements and policies.

2. Standardized tests to be given to all new students and norms be established for admission purposes.

3. Students not scoring high enough for admission to the freshman class be admitted as sub-collegiate students and be given remedial work without credit until they can achieve admission to the college as regular students.

4. Standardized examinations such as the Graduate Record Examinations to be given to seniors as a basis for graduation.

VI. GUIDANCE

Morris College is not alone in being weak in its guidance program. This weakness is found in almost every college. The Committee recommends that more attention be given to guidance. Morris has already begun a guidance program and has named a member of the faculty to do this work.

In pointing out the weaknesses at Morris College the Committee wishes to make clear that it does not consider Morris to be the only college in the state that needs improvement along these lines. Below will be listed a number of things for which Morris College should be given credit and praise. We have called attention to needs as the committee saw them. The Committee lists the following conditions, partly as a summary, but more specifically, as those conditions needing immediate attention and correction. Improvements on these should constitute the "MUST" program if accreditment of the college for the purpose of teacher education is to be continued:

1. Immediate inauguration of admission and graduation requirements along lines pointed out above

2. Immediate and continual strengthening of the faculty as cited above.

3. Immediate provision for adequte materials and equipment in all departments beginning with Science.

4. Immediae and continued purchase of suitable books, magazines, and other materials for the Library.

We list below a number of things for which Morris College should receive due credit and commendation:

1. FACULTY COMMITTEES-Several faculty committees responsible for special phases of the college program have been set up and are beginning to function .

2. RECOGNITION OF DEAN-For the first time, in 1947, the president and Dean worked together in selecting 6 new faculty members.

3. FACULTY-Of the 6 new members elected in 1947, all but one holds a Master's degree, or has completed requirements for the degree. The one exception is in the business education department. In 1944-45, seven faculty members held master's degrees and in 1947-48, eight hold master's degrees.

A survey of the faculty for 1947-48 shows two important changes

(A The teaching load has been satisfactorily reduced to the standard level. Only two faculty members work as much as 21 hours a week. The average works between 15 and 18.

(B) Salaries have been greatly increased since 1944-45. The average salary that year was $95.00 for nine months. The lowest in 1947-48 is $125.00 plus summer school. The maximum is $200.00 plus summer school

Thurs 11-11-48

There is by no means as much as desired, but Morris College has been supported solely by South Carolina Negro Baptists. The college has never received any money from any other source. In view of this fact, the finances of the institution reveal a masterful effort on the part of the local Negroes.

4. REGISTRAR'S OFFICE- Although there is much to be desired before the registrar's office reaches a high level of efficiency, both records and management have been greatly improved since 1944-45.

5. LIBRARY-In 1944-45, the library was housed in a college class room of ordinary size; there was a part time, untrained person in charge; the budget made no provision for the purchase of library materials. In 1947-48, a well-planned and adequate library building is in use; a full time librarian is in charge-she has completed all the requirements for a B. S. in library science; the last financial report from the president's office shows $2,600.00 in the library fund to be used for the purchase of library materials when library shelves ordered in August are delivered.

Baptists Give $23,000 In Morris College Drive

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta Ga

SUMTER, S. C.—Negro Baptists laid $23,000.00 on the table here at Morris College Thanksgiving Day in what President Odell R. Reuben describes as a heart-trending, precedent shattering annual affair, to pay over more than one-third of a $60,000.00 fund trustees of the college have raised.

Thurs 11-11-48

This sum is expected to be swelled considerably when final reports are in hand. It represents $3,000 more than the $20,000 trustees had hoped the rally would raise. Two additional rallies are scheduled for the spring and at school closing time, when all of the money is expected to be on hand.

RECORD ATTENDANCE

Sparked, perhaps, by recent turmoil over the standing of the college, confusion which has grown out of a difference within the State Baptist Convention more than from anything else, clergy,laity and just plain citizens swarmed over the the ten acre campus throughout the day, climaxing it all in the afternoon by witnessing a football game between Morris College and Storer College, which the former won by the lop-sided score of 39-0.

On Wednesday students who had never raised more than $578.00 in such drives, reported some $2,200.00 of their own. And the next day many churches which had customarily paid $100.00 placed before the college as much as $500.00.

President Reuben, commenting on the day, said "it surpassed our widest partcipation and all of us were really cheered over the spirit and determination of the loyal supporters and friends of the college agreed that Morris College is going to help it get where it wants to places and applauded the accomplishments which have been made this school year.

National Advisory Committee on Negro Education

NEGRO EDUCATION GROUP IS REVIVED

Committee Folded During War Due to Curbs

(The Associated Press)

Washington, Dec. 26.—The office of education has revived its national advisory committee on the education of Negroes.

The committee, organized in 1938 to advise the office on Negro problems, was allowed to lapse during the war when travel restrictions limited its activity.

Oscar R. Ewing, federal security administrator, announced its reorganization. He said Dr. Ambrose Caliver, office of education specialist for higher education of Negroes, again will direct the committee's activities.

Acting Commissioner of Education Rall I. Grisby said the 26 committee members were chosen from a list of more than 70 candidates nominated by major educational associations. The committee members included:

Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, president-emeritus of Bethune-Cookman college, Daytona Beach, Fla; Robert L. Cousins, Atlanta, director of Georgia's division of Negro education; Dr. H. B. Crouch, Tennessee A. & I. State college, Nashville, Tenn.; Mrs. Maenelle Dempsey, Atlanta, consultant, Georgia Negro elementary schools; Dr. J. C. Dixon, Atlanta, executive director, Southern Education foundation; Dr. Bertram W. Doyle, dean Louisville Ky., Municipal college; L. H. Foster Jr., treasurer, Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., Carol W. Hayes, supervisor of Negro schools, Birmingham, Ala.

Dr. F. D. Patterson, president, Tuskegee Institute; Dean George W. Reeves, Prairie View, Texas, A. & M. college; Orin Clayton Suthern, Dillard university, New Orleans; Nathaniel P. Tillman, Morehouse college, Atlanta; Dr. H. Councill Trenholm, president, Alabama State Teachers college, Montgomery; D. E. Williams, Tallahassee, Fla., state department of education.

Leaders Say School Bias Violates All Catholic Policies

WASHINGTON—A special committee of prominent Catholic educators took a strong stand this week against any form of discrimination still extant in individual Catholic institutions of higher learning.

Composed of members of the National Catholic Educational Association, the committee was appointed after a review had been made of the report issued recently by the President's Commission on Higher Education.

In a series of resolutions published for the guidance of Catholic educators, the NCEA members declared that "the selection of students based solely on color, national origin or ancestry in our Catholic colleges and universities is a violation of sound American and Catholic principles."

OPEN DOOR URGED

They urged that "every Catholic college and university make certain that no qualified Catholic student is refused admission on the basis of color, race, national origin or ancestry and that those Catholic colleges and universities which accept non-Catholic students do not refuse admission to non-Catholic students on the basis of religion, color, race, national origin or ancestry."

Where legal obstacles or social pressures barring the abolition of segregation exist, the group added, "Catholic educators should exercise leadership for their removal."

The special committee was headed by Brother Emilian, F. S. C., Ammendale, Md. and was composed of thirteen members, including Msgr. Frederick G. Hochwalt, NCEA secretary general, and Dr. Martin R. P. McGuire of the Catholic University of America, both members of the President's Commission.

Catholics Demand Schools Admit Negroes

WASHINGTON — Flouting attempts by southern governors to perpetuate a system of racial segregation in educational facilities, student representatives of 11 Catholic colleges in the Washington-Balitmore area have unanimously voted the admission of Negro student to their schools.

The action was taken at the recent Baltimore-Washington regional congress of the National Federation of Catholic College Students attended by 125 student representatives.

The federation made clear that "the action was an outpouring of representative student opinion and does not necessarily mean a statement of policy by the administration of the schools present."

All of the 11 colleges with the exception of Notre Dame of Maryland already admit Negroes it was disclosed.

The schools represented in the balloting were: Catholic University; Georgetown University; Trinity; Dumbarton of the Holy Cross; Georgetown Visitation and Immaculata, all of Washington; Loyola of Baltimore; Mt. St. Agnes, Norte Dame of Maryland; and Mt. St. Mary's and St. Joseph's of Emmitsburg.

National Institute of Science

Experts Conduct Research And Report On Findings

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala.— The nation's top chemists, mathematicians, biologists and physicists, many of whom are authors of books, contributors to leading national science publications, and teachers in more than thirty Negro colleges and universities, met in a three-day conference to discuss findings and report on various research projects at Tuskegee Institute this week. This was the fifth annual meeting of the National Institute of Science and according to Dr. Joseph A. Pierce, Atlanta University, retiring president, the most successful with respect to attendance and participation.

One hundred and thirty members and nearly one hundred other interested visitors attended the meeting, which was held in Armstrong Hall, Tuskegee Institute's Science building which now houses the George Washington Carver Laboratories.

READ SCIENCE PAPERS

During the meeting, 30 papers were read in the field of biology, chemistry, mathematics, physics, and science education. One special feature was the honor paper in mathematics presented by Dr. J. A. Pierce professor of mathematics at Atlanta University. His presentation was a statistical analysis on "sampling". He emphasized the importance of finite and infinite formulae for testing and establishing the validity of mathematical hypotheses. It was implied that such technique have practical applications in summations of statistical data of many kinds.

The symposium on "Research in Small Colleges" was centered on projected programs of cooperative research for member institutions of the National Institute of Science. Discussions were conducted on research personnel, facilities for research, administration of researches and inter-departmental cooperation. A committee on cooperative research was established to follow through with the recommendations of the symposium participants which included Dr S. M. Naebrit Atlanta University; Dr. R. W. Brown, Tuskegee Institute; Dr. C. M. Hill, Tennessee State College; Dr. Lawson, Fisk University and Dr. Spaulding, Morgan State College, Baltimore, Maryland.

At the banquet session on Friday night, addresses were made by Dr. Pierce and by Dr. Lloyd Cook, Director, Chicago section, the Visking Corporation. Dr. Pierce spoke on "Science and the Scientist" and Dr. Cook spoke on the preparation of Negroes for entrance into scientific pursuits in industry.

HOLD MANY EXHIBITS

Nationally known scientific supply establishments cooperated with the meeting with displays and demonstrations in the various fields of the sciences. Among those were the Central Scientific Company, Chicago; W. M. Welch Manufacturing Company, Chicago; Instrument Development Company, Chicago and A. S. Aloe Company, St. Louis and many others.

Officers for the 1948-1949 Institute of Science are: President, H. V. Eagleson, Howard University; vice presidents, R. W. Brown, Director, George Washington Carver Foundation, Tuskegee Institute; V. J. Tulane, Howard University and H. C. Boggs, Morris Brown College; executive secretary treasurer, Rr. H. V. Crouch, professor of Biology, Tennessee A. and I. State College, Nashville, Tennessee.

Next year, the National Institute of Science will be held at Virginia State College, Petersburg, Virginia.

Negro Stude Gets First Scholarship

STATE COLLEGE, N. MEX. (ANP)—For the first time in the college's history, New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanical arts awarded a scholarship to a Negro student.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Harrison, junior arts and science major, won the Progress Club scholarship for 1948. This $100 grant is awarded to one upper classman each year. The student is selected on the merits of scholarship and character.

A native of Las Cruces, she lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, there. She graduated from Washington high of that town.

What's His Club?

Dear Sirs: We thought some of your readers might be interested in a letter by John W. Haines, Princeton '29, which appeared in the April 30 issue of the Princeton Alumni Weekly. It says in part: New Republic

Is it indeed a fact that there are now Negro students attending Princeton, or is it an unfounded rumor? . . . What is to be gained by admitting the black brothers to Princeton? Will anyone, save a few Negroes—it is fervently to be hoped a very few in any event—gain a better education thereby? . . . Let Negroes seek an education at any school which may desire them, and by all means let such individuals as care to do so eat with them, play with them, dance with them, and marry them (in states which permit it); but why thrust them upon the undergraduates and alumni of Princeton, which has progressed these many years very happily without them? 5-24 48

The letter, of course, speaks for itself, but not, we hope, for the majority of Princeton undergraduates and alumni.

Princeton University Signifies Color Bar Is Crumbling There

New York Herald Tribune Sun 12-26-48 New York, N.Y.

By Walter White

Lecture Hall 10 McCosh at Princeton was packed with students and a liberal sprinkling of faculty. It was a meeting of the Princeton Liberal Union, formed several years ago to do everything possible to bring the university into line with the practices of other major institutions of learning which bar no qualified student because of race or color or religion.

I was about two-thirds of the way through a talk on the color line across the globe. Suddenly a snowball, packed hard as a stone, crashed through the window followed by two or three others. Husky young men at the rear of the hall grabbed their battle-jackets and rushed from the hall to catch the culprits.

When the excitement died down I commented that "the bigots must be on the run when they resort to the juvenile delinquency of stone-throwing instead of meeting reason with reason." The audience laughed, but there was a sternness on their faces which it was stirring to see. What had been for some of them an abstract principle of academic democracy had been jelled by the puerile act of a few into a holy crusade.

The episode illustrated how bigots through the loss of perspective frequently give aid and strength to the other side.

Princeton has been long known, justly or otherwise, as the "country club" university whose student body was made up primarily of men from the South and Park Avenue socialites. One of the most heartening and interesting features of the Princeton Liberal Union is that some of its most active members come from those two classes, presumed to be opposed to abolishing the unwritten ban on the admission of Negroes and Jews.

Before World War II a group of students led by Francis L. Broderick and Powell Whitehead conducted an active campaign against the color bar at Princeton. Their campaign was interrupted by the war. Powell Whitehead died a hero. Francis Broderick survived more than sixty B-24 bombing missions and returned to Princeton more determined than ever that its admission practices be democratized.

When Broderick was graduated the work was taken up by John Bunzel and an increasing number of others, who had the enthusiastic support of a large number of faculty members such as Professor Willard Thorp, co-author of the recently published and brilliant "Literary History of the United States," and Professor Hubert Wilson. Sun 12-26-48

The Liberal Union has made contact with two thousand American high schools to inform prospective Negro college students that they will find a warm welcome at Princeton if they are able to meet the entrance qualifications. The university administration has made it clear that no man will be barred from Princeton because of his race or religion. Eighty-five per cent of the students have vigorously favored the admission of Negroes, and 56 per cent of those polled believe Princeton should encourage the application and admission of colored students.

The United States Navy deserves part of the credit for this liberalization. Under its V-12 program four Negroes were sent to Princeton. Fortunately they were well chosen both as to scholastic ability and temperament, neither wearing a hair shirt nor a bandanna around his head. One of them was elected captain of the Princeton basketball team and another made the football team, not because they were Negroes but because they were excellent athletes.

Educational Opportunity

Times—New York, N.Y.

Equality for All Is Advocated, With Barriers Eliminated

1-15-48—Thurs.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It was extremely gratifying to read in The New York Times, Jan. 4, of Governor Dewey's expected statement supporting fair educational practices in New York State. The recently published Report of the President's Commission on Higher Education emphasizes the need for the extension of educational opportunity generally and for the elimination of barriers caused by discrimination. The forecast of Governor Dewey's forthright position creates the hope that New York State will soon establish fair educational practices by law. Times

That the Governor's position will meet with conscientious approval by thoughtful Protestants throughout the State is evidenced by the following facts: New York, N.Y.

1. The world-wide Ecumenical Conference of church leaders at Oxford, England, in 1937, probably the most representative assembly in the history of Christendom, urged equality in education—ten years ago:

"In the education of youth * * * the Church must be eager to secure for every citizen the fullest possible opportunity for the development of the gifts that God has bestowed on him. In particular, the Church must condemn inequality of educational opportunity as a main obstacle to fullness of fellowship in the life of the community." 14e(1) N.Y.

2. In November, 1947, the Human Relations Commission of the Protestant Council of the City of New York supported the same principle "in the conviction that equal educational opportunity is a matter of justice, and therefore of genuine concern to the Christian Church." The commission prescribed the following necessary features for a bill establishing fair educational practices: 1-15-48

"A. Express declaration that scholarship alone should not be regarded as the one and sufficient criterion in the selection of students, but that place of residence and other criteria should be recognized as legitimate, provided they do not lead to discrimination because of race, religion, color or national origin; Thurs

"B. The establishment of a specific agency within the State Department of Education, charged with responsibility for initiating and conducting investigations in accordance with the purposes of the act; and

"C. That this agency, while relying in the first instance upon persuasion and conciliation, should also have the power to evoke effective sanctions through the right to apply to the courts for enforcement orders."

3. Protestant leaders in up-state cities, including Albany, Troy, Schenectady, Utica, Syracuse and Rochester, are organizing support for fair educational practices legislation through their local councils of churches.

We share Governor Dewey's hope that the present legislative session will result in proper laws to facilitate equality of opportunity in education.

Robert W. Searle,
Executive Secretary, Human Relations Commission, the Protestant Council of the City of New York.

Harlem Committee Of Community Service Society To Give Three $600 Fellowships

To help relieve the shortage of skilled Negro social workers, three fellowships valued at $600 each have been opened to college students in the metropolitan area who can meet the admission requirements of the New York School of Social Work, Columbia University, it was announced Wednesday.

The awards will be made for the fall quarter begining next October but applications must be filed at the school by June 1, it was noted. The fellowships cover tuition for a full school year consisting of three continous quarters with the possibility of renewal for the remainder of the two-year degree program.

Offered by the Harlem District Committee of the Community Service Society, thirty-six scholarships have already been made available since the group was formed in 1939. Under the fellowship plan, it was indicated, supplementary grants may be allowed toward the students' maintenance and other expenses, varying according to the needs of the applicants.

The Harlem committee, an interracial group composed of twenty-seven women, to date has raised $15,653 toward aiding Negro students who might otherwise not have been able to avail themselves of social work training, according to Mrs. Harry G. Bragg, chairman of the scholarship committee.

"So far twenty-six students have benefited through our annual scholarship project," she said, "but the need for professionally trained Negro social workers has never been greater. Our fellowship program will make it financially possible for at least a few additional students to receive the necessary training. However much depends on the support of the public for our fellowship fund."

She added that Negro social workers are needed especially to help cope with mounting problems of family dislocations, delinquency and ill health.

The fellowships are open to Negro men and women between the ages of 21 and 35 who have lived in this city for at least two years. The applicants must satisfy the admission requirements of the school, which include a baccalaureate degree in arts, letters, philosophy or science from an institution approved by Columbia University. At least two of the four years of college work must have been in liberal arts studies, and the applicants must have completed a minimum of twenty semester hours in social and biological sciences.

The recipients of the fellowships are to be selected by the Harlem committee in consultation with the admissions committee of the school.

Three students, previous scholarship winners, are now completing their training at the New York School of Social Work, Mrs. Bragg said. She noted that former scholarship students now hold positions with the New York Urban League, Youth House, Veterans Administration, the Community Service Society, the Department of Welfare and a number of other public and private welfare agencies outside of the city.

68 N.Y. Colleges Violate Law on Applications, Survey Shows

NEW YORK—Of New York State's 97 non-sectarian colleges and universities, 68 question applicants for admission about their race, religion, ancestory or national origin, the American Jewish Congress revealed last week following a survey of college application blanks.

Pointing out that the Quinn Olliffe Law makes discrimination by educational institutions illegal, Leo Pfeffer, acting direcor of the Congress's Commission on Law and Social Action, said that the State Department of Education will be asked to outlaw such questions and order the blanks discarded.

Admitting that the questions in themselves do not conclusively prove that the 68 institutions all are guilty of discrimination, Mr. Pfeffer said that "it can almost be said that he reques for certain informaion on application forms constitutes an all but prima facie case that such information is likely to be used for discriminatory purposes."

New Law Outlaws N.Y. School Bias

NEW YORK—(ANP)—The new State law outlawing discrimination in education in New York, went into effect last Thursday. It will not be enforceable until Sept. 15 but many schools are already voluntarily cooperating to stay within this law.

Negroes and Jews will probably benefit immediately, according to studies to be published by Gov Thomas E. Dewey's state university commission.

A special interdenominational regents committee will administer this law. It will choose an anti-bias administrator and issue regulations. They will hear charges against schools and make rulings. Their actions will be enforceable in the courts.

N.Y. Speeds Law To Ban Jim Crow Colleges

ALBANY, N. Y.—Dewey administration leaders have predicted that the bill outlawing racial and religious discrimination in colleges and universities in the state will be passed at this session by the Legislature.

Only Denominational schools would be exempt from the ruling of the bill.

The leaders pointed out that the State Education Commissioner would be authorized to eliminate discrimination through a conference held with college authorities. That failing, the Board of Regents would be empowered to issue a complaint, hold a public hearing and issue a cease and desist order enforceable in court if discrimination is established.

Two Gothamites Get City Jobs

GOTHAM COED — NO. 11 Gide

NEW YORK— A national movement in Catholic colleges throughout the country to remind students of their responsibility toward members of other races, is headed by Peggy Brown, a white senior at Manhattanville College here.

Miss Brown, who is chairman of the National Commission on Interracial Justice established at her college by the Federation of Catholic College Students, formulated plans with fellow students for "Interracial Justice Week" which began February 28.

Joseph Nearson, a Negro student at the college and chairman of its chapter of the commission, said the main purpose of the program is to give people facts about other races.

Mrs. Brown stated: "We think about the political side of it and the economic issues, but we've got to remember that underlying them we must have a firm foundation for our ow nthinking . . .

2,200 Students Demand Ouster Of 2 Biased Profs

By John Hudson Jones

Over 2,200 City College students yesterday overflowed the Great Hall of the main building and demanded that school, city or state officials oust Professor William E. Knickerbocker, accused anti-Semite, and William C. Davis, admitted segregator of Negroes. The all-day meeting was the third day of student protest action against the teachers.

The students are protesting the recent whitewash of Knickerbocker, who is a Romance teacher, by the Board of Higher Education, and the dropping of charges against Davis. Prior to the Board's action, a City Council committee headed by Democratic Councilman Walter R. Hart, had recommended the dismissal of Knickerbocker.

The all-day sit-down demonstration of Wednesday was continued yesterday. A token group of 26 students kept an all-night vigil in the Lincoln Corridor of the main building, scene of the sit-down.

Rev. John W. Darr, chairman of the National Youth Assembly and American Labor Party candidate, stayed with the group as chaperon. Yesterday the sitdown demonstration began promptly at 9 a.m. with such songs as "Black and White Together We Shall Not Be Moved."

SUSPEND CLASSES

At 11 a.m., Rev. Darr addressed about 300 students and at noon the meeting in the Great Hall began. At 4:30 p.m. James S. Teace, assistant dean of students, ordered instructors to suspend classes so students could attend the meeting. After 5 hours of vigorous pro and con debate, a majority of the students voted for:

- Separate petition to State's Commissioner of Education Francis Spaulding, demanding immediate dismissal of Davis and Knickerbocker.

A previous vote for joint ouster action against Davis and Knickerbocker was ruled defeated on a very questionable count by Day Student Council Chairman Allen Rosenwasser. Deafening protests forced him to consider a new motion on Davis. This resolution was carried after Ed Starrer and Paul Brown, student leaders, denounced attempts to forego action against Davis, the alleged Negro hater.

- A resolution demanding that the students who resent Knickerbocker and Davis be allowed to go to other classes and that no disciplinary action be taken against them. In this connection Professors Ephraim Cross and Elliott Polinger had offered to take such students for no extra compensation.
- That if, by Thursday, there has been no definite action against Knickerbocker and Davis "we will sit down and stay down until we get action."

BOO COUNCILMAN HART

The student lustily booed Councilman Hart, who told them, "I do not like mass action." He said the Lincoln Corridor demonstration was "intimidating the faculty."

Afterwards he told reporters, however, "I still think Professor Knickerbocker should not be teaching at City College." In response to a question put by the Daily Worker, he said, "I don't know too much about the charges against Mr. Davis."

On the other hand, Councilman Eugene P. Connolly declared: "The responsibility for students losing time from classes rests with the Board of Higher Education and with the City College Administration."

The students cheered telegrams from Councilman Benjamin J. Davis to the New York University Students for Wallace, Paul Robeson, the Jewish Peoples Fraternal Order, and the Youth Division of the Jewish Young Fraternalists.

At 5:20 p.m. Rosenwasser adjourned the meeting amid the shouts of students who again questioned his counting of the standing vote. Rosenwasser, however, had the public address system cut off during the discussion on a resolution defending two students arrested Wednesday on the request of a college official.

800 REMAINED

About 800 students remained in an attempted rump session. Shouting and confusion reigned, however, until Brown, one of the strike leaders, prevailed upon the students to go home, "even though the meeting was illegally adjourned."

During the Great Hall meeting a conference of school officials and outside organization representatives was going on in the office of Dr. Harry N. Wright, CCNY president. In addition to Wright, among those present were Dean John J. Theobald; Dr. Ordway Tead, chairman of the Board of Higher Education; Arthur J. Lelyreld, national director of B'Nai Brith; Burt Diamond, American Jewish Congress; Rabbi Arthur Zuckerman, director of the Hillel Foundation, uptown; and student representatives.

Afterwards Dr. Wright told reporters "some progress was made in arriving at a mutual decision. Individuals have pledged their cooperation." Wright declared that further conferences of the group could be called "to explore what might be the next step."

Dean Theobald said that while he considered the Lincoln Corridor meeting "in violation of school laws, the Great Hall meeting was a legal meeting."

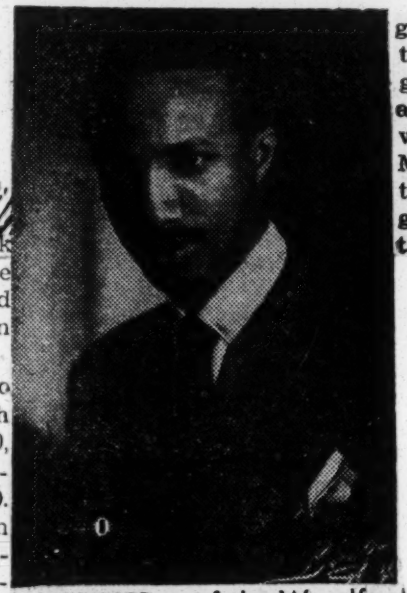
New York Student Wins A Coveted Cornell U. Prize

George H. Fowler, of New York City, was named winner of the coveted Stewart Lyndon Woodford prize for the best English oration by a Cornell University senior.

Mr. Fowler is the first Negro sturent to win the award, which carries with it a cash prize of $120, since its establishment by the former New York Governor in 1870. When he receives his degree in June, he will also be the first Nepro to be graduated from the University's three-year-old School of Industrial and Labor Relations. The young World War II veteran has been an outstanding member of the Cornell debating team and has presided as chairman over intercollegiate debates with some of the leading schools in the East. He was also treasurer of the student council of the School of Industrial and Labor Relations.

The winner's oration, on "The Diseases of Democracy", was a compelling comparison of Athenian and American socities. The suppression of free speech, class prejudice, and lack of active citizen participation in political affairs, which caused the collapse of democracy in Athens, Mr. Fowler declared, are the dangers threatening democracy in America today. He emphasized the evil in oppression of minority groups and indifference to citizenship responsibility.

Mr. Fowler is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen H. Fowler, Sr., of New York City. He is a member of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity.



WINNER—of the Woodford prize for the best English oration by a Cornell university senior is George H. Fowler, of New York. An ex-GI, Fowler orated on "The Diseases of Democracy."

Member of the Cornell debating team, young Fowler will be graduated in June as the first Negro in Cornell's Industrial and Labor Relations School. The Woodford Award was established by a former New York State governor in 1870, Stewart Lyndon Woodford.

N. Y. Bars Bias From Colleges

New York State now has a law making racial and religious discrimination illegal in the admission of students to colleges within the State.

Last week Gov. Dewey signed the bill sponsored by Sen. Elmer F. Quinn, Democratic leader of the State Senate, and Assemblyman Lewis H. Olliffe (R., Bkln.). It was based on a recommendation of the commission on the Need for a State University. Owen D. Young was head of the committee.

The U. S. Supreme Court, meanwhile, agreed to review the conviction of Gaither Lovelady, who was condemned on charges of slaying a city marshal in Lexington, Tex. He contended he had not been tried by a jury of his peers, since Negroes were barred from it.

In Americus, Ga., Judge William M. Harper commuted the death penalty for Mrs. Rosa Ingram and her two teen-age sons to life imprisonment. The Ingrams had been convicted by an all-white jury of the slaying of a white farmer, John E. Stratford. Mrs. Ingram says Stratford had threatened to kill her. Many groups are working for a new trial or pardon.

Texas U. Student Wants State To End Segregation in Schools

Educational segregation can be eliminated in Texas without serious consequences, Jack Summerfield, graduate student at the University of Texas, declared yesterday at the second session of the New York Herald Tribune Forum at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Mr. Summerfield, who spoke after Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher in a discussion of "Equal Educational Opportunities," said the unsuccessful attempt of Heman Marion Sweatt, a Houston Negro, to enter the university's law school in 1946 focused attention on educational segregation in his state. "No one can deny that inequalities exist between the university's law school and the law school for Negroes which holds classes in a basement . . .," he said.

To be consistent in its "separate but equal" education policy, Mr. Summerfield asserted that the state must establish schools of medicine, dentistry, pharmacy, mining, engineering, library science, social work and graduate work for Negroes. "Even Texas," he added, "a phenomenally rich states, cannot afford" such a program, but "nothing less would meet the legal requirements."

Beyond financial and educational considerations, Mr. Summerfield said, the system is degrading and obstructs the progress of civil rights. "I am certain," he added, "that education is one field in which we are occasionally prone to do things which might make other nations question our sincerity in professing democratic ideals."

In refuting opinions that "disaster" would result from lifting of discrimination regulations, Mr. Summerfield cited the successful experience at the state universities in Maryland and West Virginia. "Many Texans still find ways to rationalize their prejudices," he said, but added that the university's students, "on the whole," are ready for admission of Negroes. A constitutional amendment or a court decision would permit it, he explained.

She May Carry Oklahoma Segregation Case to the Supreme Court 3d Time

Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher, who has repeatedly been denied admission to the law school at Oklahoma University because of segretion regulations against Negroes, told the second session of the New York Herald Tribune Forum at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday that "It looks as though I may be an old woman before I become a lawyer."

"I am not able to tell you what I have done, but only able to tell you what I have been unable to do," Mrs. Fisher said in reviewing her thirty-four-month attempt to enter the only law school provided by the state. ". . . My decision to study law," she added, "was tantamount to a fight against segregation."

Asks One 'Qualification'

After being graduated from Langston University, the state's undergraduate college for Negroes, Mrs. Fisher said she applied for admission to the law school on Jan. 19, 1946. University officials, she recalled, "admitted that I was qualified in every respect except one: I am a Negro. On being refused . . . I decided that I could no tand would not let the matter drop."

Her case was taken up by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, but both the state District and Supreme Courts refused to order admission, in accordance with state segregation laws, she said. The case reached the United States Supreme Court in January, 1948. During the arguments, she said, "The state's attorneys admitted that although two years had passed no steps had been taken to afford me a legal education."

Special School Set Up

The court ordered the state to provide Mrs. Fisher with legal education in accordance with the equal-protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. The result, she said, was a special school "whipped up over night for me" in the state capitol in Oklahoma City. "It was certainly clear," she said, "that I would not obtain a legal education" in this school.

A petition to rectify the situation was denied by the United States Supreme Court because the question of establishing such a school was not presented in the original case. Despite subsequent testimony in the state District Court by legal experts who called the special school inadequate, she said, admission to the university was again denied in August. Her case has been appealed to the state Supreme Court and will probably havae to be taken to the United States Supreme Court for the third time.

Fight to Enter Law School Told By Mrs. Fisher

TEXAS UNIVERSITY STUDENT RAPS EDUCATIONAL SEGREGATION IN N. Y. HERALD-TRIBUNE FORUM

NEW YORK (ANP) — Educational segregation got an encouraging rap during the second session of the Herald-Tribune forum at the fashionable Waldorf-Astoria hotel Tuesday when Jack Summerfield, white graduate student at the University of Texas, declared that "educational segregation can be eliminated in Texas without serious consequenceies."

Summerfield, who spoke after Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel-Fisher in a discussion of equal educational opportunities, said the unsuccessful attempt of Herman Marion Sweatt, a Houston Negro, to enter the university law school in 1946 focused attention on educational segregation in his state. "No one can deny that inequalities exist between the university's law school and the law school for Negroes which holds classes in a basement," he said.

Mrs. Fisher, who has been repeatedly denied admission to the law chool of Oklahoma university because of segregation against Negroes, told the forum that it seems she would be an old woman before she could become a lawyer. Her case has recently been appealed to the state supreme court and will probably have to be taken to the United States Supreme court for a third time.

Prior to reviewing a brief history of her attempts to enter the Oklahoma University law school, the Langston university graduate said, "I am not able to tell you what I have done, but only able to tell you what I have been unable to do. My decision to study law and the 34 months attempt to enter the university law school was tantamount to a fight against segregation."

She said she applied for admission in the law school on Jan. 19, 1946. University officials, she re-

COLLEGE BIAS LAW EFFECTIVE TODAY

State Bars Racial or Religious Discrimination in Admission of Student Bodies

JEWISH GROUP CITES FIGHT

Congress Says 2-Year Contest Preceded Passage—Extension to Other Areas Sought

The New York State Fair Educational Practices Act becomes effective today. The first state law of its kind in the United States, it outlaws racial and religious discrimination in the admission of students to all the state's colleges and universities.

Senator Elmer F. Quinn, Democrat, of Manhattan, and Assemblyman Lewis W. Olliffe, Brooklyn Republican, sponsored the law. It declared that the policy of the state requires that students otherwise qualified be admitted without discrimination as to race, color, religion or national origin, but specifies that this policy does not abridge the right of members of religious faiths to establish and maintain schools for students of their own faith or to effectuate their religious principles.

The law makes it an unfair practice for any institution of higher learning to discriminate because of race, creed, color or national origin. Religious or denominational institutions can obtain the right to limit admissions to members of their own faith by filing with the State Education Department a certificate that they have elected to be considered religious or denominational institutions.

F. W. Hoeing Administrator

Last month Frederick W. Hoeing of New York was appointed State Administrator of the anti-discrimination procedure. He assumed his duties in Albany at that time. Mr. Hoeing served two years as field representative for the State Commission Against Discrimination. He has taught at Harvard University, the College of William and Mary and the University of Rochester. Serving in World War II with the American Field Service in Europe, he was for a time a prisoner of war in German-occupied France.

When Governor Dewey signed the bill into law on April 5, he said it was "a further step by New York State to reduce obnoxious and undemocratic barriers based on religious belief or accident of birth."

The Governor added that the bill was the "product of two years of study, debate and deliberation" by the Commission on the Need for a State University. The commission, he said, "found that such discrimination existed in certain instances."

Statement by Jewish Congress

A statement issued yesterday by the American Jewish Congress declared that the act "represents the successful outcome of a two-year fight initiated by the American Jewish Congress and concluded by it in conjunction with numerous other civic organizations banded together into the New York State Committee for Equality in Education."

The congress called the task of enforcing the act an "unprecedented" one. It said the State Commissioner of Education was empowered to investigate alleged unfair educational practices either upon a petition filed by an aggrieved individual or on his own initiative. The law's chief advantage, according to the congress, is that the Commissioner can order an investigation without waiting for a complaint.

Under the law, said the statement, the Commissioner, if unable to eliminate a discriminatory practice by voluntary agreement, will refer the matter to the Board of Regents, "which will issue a complaint, hear evidence, decide the case and, if a violation is found, issue an order requiring the responsible party to cease its discrimination or to take other appropriate action." Regents' orders, the statement declared, "are reviewable and enforceable in court."

The congress recommended that similar laws be adopted by other states.

Blow to School Bias

COLORED BIAS in Northern schools received further blows last week when New York State's Fair Educational Practices Act became effective.

This law, the first of its kind in the United States, outlaws racial and religious discrimination in the admission of students to all the State's colleges and universities.

A bi-partisan measure, it was introduced by a Democratic Senator and a Republican assemblyman, and passed without opposition, thus indicating how far New York has traveled along the road to full equality.

The new law requires that students otherwise qualified be admitted without discrimination as to race, color, religion or national origin.

When Governor Dewey signed the bill on April 5, he declared it to be "a further step by New York State to reduce obnoxious and undemocratic barriers based on religious belief or accident of birth."

Under this new law the State Commissioner of Education is empowered to investigate alleged unfair educational practices, either upon petition filed by the aggrieved individual or on his own initiative, and the commissioner can order an investigation without awaiting a complaint.

Behind the commissioner is the power of the Board of Regents enforceable by the courts of the State.

So that spells the death of the vicious quota system based on race, color and religion.

Equally heartening is the news from New Jersey where the State Commissioner of Education announced last week that of the fifty-two schools that allowed segregation last year, thirty had taken "major steps" toward ending that practice, and ten others have taken "partial steps."

The picture in New Jersey is not as encouraging as that in New York, but considering the fact that jim crowism and discrimination have always been greater in the former State than in the latter, the changes that have taken place in New Jersey in the past ten years are little less than remarkable, and indicate a genuine desire to make democracy work in the way it should.

Another encouraging piece of news is the capitulation of the Salesian School, a Catholic preparatory institution in Goshen, N. Y., which finally abandoned its former lily-white policy after an NAACP protest over the barring of a Negro applicant.

Francis Cardinal Spellman was quick to assure the NAACP that the school maintained no color barrier and that the rejection of the Negro youth was due to a "misunderstanding" on the part of the school's director and in violation of the Cardinal's announced policy for the New York diocese.

This more liberal policy is especially important to Negroes because there are so few private schools for teen-age Negro youths that in the past their parents have sent them far to the South.

What with the consistent chain of victories in equalizing teachers' salaries in Southern systems and favorable decisions regarding publicly supported graduate schools, the whole outlook is much brighter than it was even five years ago.

It is advisable that groups in other States working for a freer educational system press their attack now when the trend seems to be so favorable.

Fair Educational Study Law in Operation in N.Y.

First Effort to Stop Discrimination in Schools by Legislation Under Way

NEW YORK—This State's pioneering efforts to stop discrimination by colleges and universities against students on racial, religious and nationality grounds, began Sept. 15 when the new educational practices act—first of its kind in the country— became law.

It is directed against the State's 97 non-sectarian institutions of higher learning which are forbidden to discriminate against would-be students because of race color, creed, national origin, or, in the case of sectarian schools, because of religion.

May Use SCAD Plan

Proponents of the law opine that it will ease the difficulties experienced in their search for higher education by the three minority groups most discriminated against —Jews, colored people and Italian-Americans.

Although Frederick W. Hoeing, the $8,000-a-year administrator of the new law, declined to discuss his plans to make it enforceable, he implied that enforcement probably will follow the pattern set by the 3-year-old State Fair Employment Commission.

Procedures Told

Under the law, the Education Commissioner can proceed against a school on his own, or an individual student can file a complaint with the commissioner who refers it to Mr. Hoeing for investigation.

If the complaint is found valid, the investigator tries to persuade the school to desist. If it refuses, the complaint goes to the Board of Regents which orders a hearing and instructs the school to end the discrimination. The State Supreme Court can enforce a verdict.

university bill providing for eventual expenditure of $200,000,000 for construction of facilities for a new state university. The companion bill, outlawing racial discrimination in private non-sectarian colleges, was passed also last Thursday with only one negative vote. It also was sent to the governor.

versities of the state of New York "expressed their cordial support" of the Quinn-Ditfee "fair education practices bill."

Accompanied by a message from Governor Dewey two related measures also were passed. One postpones from July 1, 1948, until April 1, 1949, the date on which the new university board of trustees shall assume administration over existing state-operated colleges.

The second measures, a statement of policy, meets objections on the part of Catholic colleges and the Association of Colleges and Universities of the state of New York. It provides that subsidized state university facilities shall not be set up near private colleges and compete for students.

State's Schools Coming Under Anti-Bias Law

Ban Against Discrimination for Race or Creed Goes Into Effect Wednesday

New York's pioneering effort to curb discrimination by colleges and universities is scheduled to begin Wednesday, when the new education practices act—first of its kind in the country—takes effect as law.

The measure is directed against the state's ninety-seven non-sectarian and twenty-nine sectarian institutions of higher learning. It forbids them to discriminate against would-be students because of race, color, creed, national origin, or except in the case of sectarian schools, because of religion. Proponents believe it will ease the search for education by the three minority groups most discriminated against—Jews, Negroes and Italian-Americans.

The approach, so far, has been cautious. Indications were it would continue that way. Machinery for the delicate enforcement task was being set up at Albany, where Frederick W. Hoeing, forty, opened administrative offices in the Department of Education. Son of a former dean at the University of Rochester, Mr. Hoeing taught there, at Harvard and at William and Mary. He was torpedoed and captured with the American Field Service during the war, served in North Africa and Italy and commanded ambulance units in Europe. Until he became the $8,800-a-year administrator of the new law he worked two years as field investigator for the State Commission Against Discrimination in Employment.

Requisitions Drawn

Mr. Hoeing's task so far has been to prepare regulations, policies and procedures for submission to the Board of Regents, top body in the Education Department. The board will consider his proposals at its September meeting in Albany Friday. According to Associate Education Commissioner Algo D. Henderson, suggestions and advice will be sought from representatives of colleges and of minority groups before the final plan of procedure is adopted.

Mr. Hoeing, meanwhile, declined to discuss his plans, except to imply that enforcement probably will follow the pattern set by the three-year-old Fair Employment commission. The commission has handled more than 1,000 cases without once going to court. Employers found guilty of discrimination have been persuaded by the commission to reconsider discriminatory acts.

Mr. Hoeing expressed belief his own staff will have similar success. He is sure, he said, that universities and colleges will offer fullest co-operation. "All we ask," he said, "is that matters of race, color, religion, creed or national origin not be taken into consideration when a college or university considers its quota of students for the next term."

No Comment on Situation

The new administrator refused to say how much discrimination he believes there is in New York schools. Minority groups, however, believe there is considerable, and studies by national, state and New York City governmental agencies tend to bear them out.

At least two organizations, the New York State Committee for Equality in Education and the Commission on Law and Social Action of the American Jewish Congress, already have begun compiling evidence of discriminatory practices in some institutions. Will Maslow, director of the Jewish Congress group, said the first step will be to present evidence privately to Education Commissioner Francis T. Spaulding.

If subsequent negotiations under the law fail, he said, then "we will make a public charge, and ask the commissioner to investigate." In addition, individual students who believe they are being discriminated against will receive aid from the organizations in fighting their cases.

Under the new law the Education Commissioner can proceed against a school on his own, or an individual student can file a complaint with the commissioner. The commissioner refers the matter to Mr. Hoeing for investigation and discrimination have cited Cornell Medical College and the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons. However, the American Jewish Congress, which conducts the most active research, finds discrimination or signs of discrimination in colleges and universities all through the state. Judging by questions to applicants aimed at discovering racial or religious background, the congress reported in July that only thirty-one of the 126 institutions express lack of interest in whether a prospective student is Jewish, Negro, foreign born or the child of foreign-born parents.

Columbia University, Colgate, Long Island University, Syracuse and Rochester were among those listed as asking questions which could be used for purposes of discrimination.

Few Negroes Graduated

In 1946, a City Council investigating committee reported that New York medical colleges had graduated fewer than fifty Negro doctors in the preceding twenty-five years. Whether the new law, however, will mean enforced admission of qualified Negroes and Jews to medical or other schools on equal terms with others is not a question for this year's students.

The state cannot act on offenses unless they occur after Sept. 15, if the complaint holds up, the investigator tries to persuade school officials to desist.

Court Is Last Resort

But if the school refuses, the case goes to the Board of Regents, which orders a hearing. If the complaint is sustained, the Regents then order the school to stop the practice. The Regents have control over all colleges and universities, and few cases are expected to go further than this, but the act provides one further step. The Regents can send the case to the State Supreme Court, which can enforce a verdict under its contempt powers.

No one argues that the New York fair employment practices law has ended all discrimination against job-seekers, and no one argues that the new law will end all race discrimination against students. However, Mr. Maslow, one of the principal proponents of the measure, said:

1. That discrimination often is imposed on unwilling college administrators by pressure from alumni, students or trustees. Mere presence of the law will allow these administrators to resist the pressure and reduce discrimination.

2. That the law makes discrimination illicit and unrespectable, driving it underground—"never as effective as an open discrimination system."

Questions Restricted

3. That discrimination will be made difficult if application forms must avoid questions of race, religion and the like. "When you eliminate discriminatory application blanks, many Jews will be admitted without the schools even knowing," he said. "Also, any discrimination will have to come at a later stage in the student's admission, when he will have a greater opportunity to show his merits."

4. The education discrimination law will be easier to enforce than the job law. Instead of thousands of employers, a comparatively few colleges and universities must be watched, and all are quasi-public institutions, susceptible to publicity.

In fair employment law enforcement about 62 per cent of cases have concerned discrimination against Negroes, 25 per cent Jews and the balance a scattering of Catholics, Protestants, Japanese, Indians, Puerto Ricans and the like. The ratio is expected to be reversed with the education law.

For one thing, its proponents hope the law will crack the so-called quota systems, under which many schools have limited the number of Jews to 10, 15 or 20 per cent of the student body. Existence of quota systems has when the law takes effect, and most institutions already have selected their classes for the year. Thus, first complaints are not expected to come until the fall of 1949.

Effective On September 15: First Of Kind

126 Institutions Under Direction Of F. W. Hoeing

NEW YORK — (ANP) — The New York state law against discrimination in education went into effect Wednesday, Sept. 15. This law is the first of its kind in the nation, and affects 97 non-sectarian institutions of higher learning in the state.

Frederick W. Hoeing, 40, is the new administrator of the law with offices in Albany. He formerly worked two years as field investigator for the State Committee Against Discrimination in employment.

In prewar days he taught at the University of Rochester, Harvard and William and Mary. He is the son of a former dean at Rochester. During the war he served in North Africa and Italy and was torpedoed and captured with the American Field service.

So far he has been busy preparing regulations for the operation of the law. The board of regents, highest unit in the state education board, will rule on his regulations. Minority groups and the schools involved will also give their ideas on regulations, said Algo D. Henderson, associate education commissioner, before the final plan is made.

Hoeing has not discussed his plans, but this law is expected to operate just as the state FEPC law has operated—through conference and persuasion without resort to the courts.

"All we ask," Hoeing said, "is that matters of race, color, religion, creed or national origin not be taken into consideration when a college or university considers its quota of students for the next term."

STEPS OF PROCEDURE

Procedure will probably be as follows:

The education commissioner, himself, may make a charge against a school, or a student may make a complaint to the commissioner. The commissioner tells Hoeing who investigates. If it is justified, Hoeing tries to persuade the school to change policies.

If the school does nothing the case is taken to the Board of Regents which can order the schools to stop discrimination. This board controls all colleges and universities in the state. It can take one more step, send it to the state supreme court.

This law is expected to be easier to operate than the anti-bias law in employment, because there are comparatively few schools to watch to the thousands of employers. This law will also affect Jewish students most in comparison to Negroes most in employment.

HITS MEDICAL SCHOOLS

Medical school discrimination against Negroes may be hit by this law. A city council committee of New York reported in 1946 that during the past 25 years fewer than 50 Negroes had been graduated from medical schools in the state.

Such discrimination procedures as quota systems have been used to keep Jews out of most schools. It is also hoped that questions of race, religion, nationalities and other "cuts" for discrimination would be dropped from application blanks.

This law is not expected to affect schools this year because most of the quotas had been made before Sept. 15, the effective date of the law.

New York State Law Against Bias In Education Effective

NEW YORK—(ANP)—The New York state law against discrimination in education went into effect Wednesday, Sept. 15. This law is the first of its kind in the nation, and affects 97 non-sectarian and 29 sectarian institutions of higher learning in the state.

"All we ask, "Hoeing said," is that matters of race, color, religion, creed or national origin not be taken into consideration when a college or university considers its quota of students for the next term."

MEDICAL SCHOOL BIAS

Medical school discrimination against Negroes may be hit by this law. A city council committee of New York reported in 1946 that during the past 25 years fewer than 50 Negroes had been graduated from medical schools in the state.

Duke students ask admission of Negroes

DURHAM, N. C. — Divinity students of heavily endowed Duke university last week presented a petition to the administration and faculty of the university, requesting the admission of Negroes.

The petition was signed by 119 of the school's 124 students. It apparently had the approval of Dean Harold A. Bosley, of the divinity school, who said his students had made a survey of other southern schools and had found that a number of them, all religious, were already admitting Negroes. He named schools in Texas, Tennessee, and Union Seminary in Richmond, Va.

Duke authorities said no action was taken on the petition because it was presented too late for consideration by the board of trustees which met June 5.

School Pioneer Called Example To Educators

N. Carolina College Hears Dr. Johnson On Founder's Day

DURHAM, N. C.—Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson paid tribute to the late Dr. James E. Shepard as "a revolutionist of the kind produced by the Christian religion," at the first observance of Founder's Day to be dedicated to the departed president and founder of North Carolina College. Dr. Johnson was the principal Founder's Day speaker.

Dr. Johnson predicted that regional schools will never become a reality in this country because no one is seriously working to bring them into existence, and he prophesied further that if they should be established the citzens of China, India, Indonesia and Africa will no longer suffer themselves to be led by a nation which after 350 years of christianity and democracy still will not trust itself to sit in its highest institutions with men of color.

PREDICTION

Dr. Johnson said "in the next 20 years we shall either open the doors of white institutions of higher learning or the moral center of gravity will be moved out of the western hemisphere." He predicted that at some time in the future "on this spot made holy by the late Dr. Shepard the children of all people shall come to be educated, and this campus shall be filled with a conviction about the meaning of life that will conquer the world.

"And when it happens," he continued, "not only the Negro will be free, but the South will be free indeed because it believes in the higher capacity of human nature as such."

B. N. Duke Auditorium was the scene of the special services which began at 10:30 a. m. and featured special music by the college choir in addition to a tribute to the memory of North Carolina College's first president and founder by Capus Waynick, chairman of the institution's board of trustees.

Dr. Johnson who has been visiting the North Carolina College campus for more than 15 years, urged his listerners to follow Dr. Shepard's example in dealing honestly with his fellowmen without utterly compromising.

OUTSTANDING EXAMPLE

"The young people of today would do well to think a great deal about Dr. Shepard", the speaker said. "His life covered nearly the entire span of the freedom of the Negro people. With his left hand and with almost all of his body he stood within the system of slavery itself. Yet he died at a peak of glorious realization. He had the confidence of the Negroes of North Carolina, and broadly over the nation, for they knew that he served them all his life with all his heart, and showed in serving them a remarkable wisdom.

"He had the capacity," Dr. Johnson said, "to work for the development of segregated instiutions as if he expected them to last forever, but he did everything in his power to change. He died having the confidence and support of the finest element of white people in North Carolina. He never doubted that this minority would some day become the majority and make this one of the great states in the United States.

FULFILLED WISH

"He died having fulfilled in his life the wishes of Northern whites who came down to begin schools for Negroes. They had in him the development of leadership which would work. He bore in his soul and in his secret purposes no objectives which were inconsistent with the deepest fulfillment of their lives."

Dr. Shepard's life was called the perfect example of the success that comes to an honest man. Here was a man, Dr. Johnson stated, who made a success of dealing with Southern white leaders while differing with them politically and in other ways. "You can do this," he said, "if in holding to your convictions you can convince others that your holdings are honorable."

The Rev. Miles Mark Fisher, pastor of White Rock Baptist Church, was in charge of brief graveside services at Beechwood cemetery at 12:15 p. m.

Duke Divinity Students Ask for Mixed Theological School

DURHAM, N.C.—Dr. Harold A. Bolsey, dean of the Duke University Divinity School, revealed last week that 119 of the 124 undergraduate and graduate students signed a petition asking for the integration of colored students. This petition was presented to the administration and faculty too late for definite action to be taken by the Board of Trustees which met June 5, according to the dean.

The petition, which was signed by all theology students except five, included the signatures of the present eight student officers including President Galreath G. Adams Jr., and the eight officers-elect. One graduate student and four undergraduates did not sign. The petition stated, in part:

"Whereas we are a part of a segregated Divinity School which does not afford us an opportunity for understanding and appreciating colroed Christians preparing for the ministry . . . and other seminaries in the South have already admitted such students . . . we request that serious consideration be given to the admission of colored day-students without affecting the general university policy."

Third Race Student Adds To North Car. U. Headache

The Defender

CHAPEL HILL, N. C.—A third Negro student has submitted his application for admission to a University of North Carolina graduate school within the last three weeks. He is Dewey Clayton, of Roxboro, a graduate of Johnson C. Smith University.

Clayton is seeking admission to the school of medicine, while the other two applicants, Harold Epps and James R. Walker, students at North Carolina College for Negroes, are seeking to enter law school at the university.

Both said they wanted to enter the university law school because the Jim Crow course at the college for Negroes is not recognized by the American Bar Association. This will limit them after graduation, they pointed out.

Chancellor Robert B. House of the University of North Carolina admitted that the three applications had been received, but denied that he is able to do anything about them. The matter is out of the university's hands, he declared.

A report will be made to the school trustees, and the university will be found by their action, he explained. A similar report has already been handed Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the university, but he has declined comment.

The executive committee of the 100-man trustee board will study the three applications at a meeting, May 17.

Duke Students OK Negro Admissions

Pittsburgh, Pa.

DURHAM, N. C.—The admission of qualified Negroes to Duke University's Divinity School was urged in a petition signed by 119 of its 124 students, which was sent to the university's officials here last week.

Sat. 6-12-48

The petition was presented too late for action by the board of trustees which met June 5, according to Dean Harold A. Bosley.

The divinity students' action is significant, because Duke is a privately endowed school and apparently no Negroes so far have applied for admission to this division of the university.

Isolation Seating at Okla. U. Hit

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. (NNPA)—Attorneys for G. W. McLaurin, former Langston University professor, last Tuesday [illegible] their attack on his segregation at the University of Oklahoma on the basis of his race and color.

In a brief filed in the U.S. District Court here, the attorneys contend that Mr. McLaurin's treatment at the university, where he sits in an anteroom in all classes, is unconstitutional.

The brief declares the distinction is the same discrimination as it would be to set another student apart because he had red hair.

Reference also was made in the brief to Mrs. Mauderie H. Wilson, who is seeking admission to the university.

Attorneys declared that she is in the same class with McLaurin insofar as being entitled to admission to the university is concerned.

Lone Negro St Of Humiliatic

Oklahoma City, Oct. 16 (AP)—G. W. McLaurin said today he was under "strain and humiliating conditions" in his segregated classwork at the University of Oklahoma.

McLaurin, first Negro ever to enroll at the university in Norman, is seeking a Federal court order to end his segregated status.

He testified briefly concerning classroom, library and dining facilities which were imposed when he enrolled October 13. He is a student in the graduate school and is working for a doctorate in education.

He has been seated in an anteroom adjoining the regular classroom. The school has furnished him a separate place in the library and he eats at a separate table in the Woodrow Wilson dining hall.

"It is necessary to look at the professor and blackboard from a greater angle than the other students," McLaurin said of his anteroom.

"It puts me under a strain and humiliating conditions, and handicaps my work. I cannot concentrate as I should.

"I feel there is something irregular in that I can't sit with other students."

McLaurin testified that his desk in the university library is on the flood above the librarian's desk and he must walk downstairs to check out books. He is required to return to his desk, which he described as "behind the stacks." to study, while white students have the freedom of the building, he said.

Mrs. Mauderie Hancock-Wilson pleaded also she should be admitted to the university under the McLaurin ruling. A three-judge court gave attorneys for the two Negroes and the State five days to file briefs. Federal Circuit Judge A. P. Murrah said the opinion would follow the briefs by two or three days.

New Student Given Wish For Good School Year

BY VIOLA DREW

NORMAN, Okla. — (A N P) — Prof. G. W. McLaurin came to the University of Oklahoma here Wednesday to enroll, the first Negro ever to be admitted to the university. He had decided to accept the invitation of the regents of the university to enroll on a segregated basis after the federal court had ordered the university to accept his application.

Prof. McLaurin, who is 54 and interested in civic affairs, went to the campus accompanied by his wife, by Roscoe Dunjee, editor of the Black Dispatch of Oklahoma City, and by Amos T. Hall, well known lawyer of Tulsa. Hall and Dunjee had advised McLaurin to go through with the enrollment "just to see how they are going to work this thing out."

The regents ordered the university to take McLaurin in but to keep him segregated from the other students. The group went into the office of Laurence Snyder, dean of the graduate school. President George L. Cross was not in the city.

HAS TO COMMUTE

McLaurin will have to commute between his home in Oklahoma City, 20 miles away, and Norman which is virtually an all-white community, the only Negroes living there being those employed as servants by a few families.

It is generally accepted that some form of segregation will be followed. The Tulsa Tribune, in a pointed editorial warned, the university that it must not set up any fence around the student as the University of Arkansas did with one of its students for awhile.

The Tribune said: "Prof. McLaurin is a highly intelligent man and will do nothing to lower the standards and prestige of the O. U. school of education. First, perhaps they will put him alone in a separate classroom and lecture to him singly. This, too, is ridiculously expensive. Then they may let him into a white class but put a fence around his chair as they did in the case of a Negro student at the University of Arkansas. Arkansas white students requested and gained the removal of the fence. O. U. students will do likewise.

VARYING DEGREES

"It is important not to confuse the admission of Prof. McLaurin with the abolition of jim crow altogether. There are varying degrees of segregation and some of them, in the current state of race relations in the south, are wise. But while segregation may be properly practiced in a bus, it is silly in the post office, and while Negro undergraduate schools are logical in a state like this, separate graduate schools are senseless.

"We wish Prof. McLaurin a good school year, and we hope that he joins the white class and that the fence comes down as soon as possible."

SECOND APPLIES FOR ADMISSION

NORMAN, Okla. — (ANP) — As G. W. McLaurin attended his first class in the graduate school at the University of Oklahoma here Thursday, J. E. Fellows, dean of admissions, announced that Mrs. Mauderie Hancock Wilson had applied for enrollment. Fellows said the woman's records were in order, but that no action could be taken immediately.

McLaurin, a retired professor, began his first day quietly. He sat alone in an anteroom adjoining the regular classroom for 31 students in educational psychology. This was in line with the university regents' order that he be admitted on a "segregated basis." He could easily see and hear the instructor, Dr. Frank Balyeat.

Several students and Dr. Balyeat greeted McLaurin when he reported to the class several minutes early. Student were carefully casual.

Hits Conditions Under Which He Was Admitted

3-Judge Court Has Complaint Under Advisement

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—(NNPA)—A three-judge federal court has under advisement the complaint of G. W. McLaurin, 54-year old Langston University professor, against the segregated conditions under which he was admitted to the graduate school of the University of Oklahoma.

The court probably will rule within this week on the two questions before it:

1. Whether Mr. McLaurin is being deprived of his constitutional rights by the segregation imposed upon him at the university.

2. Whether Mrs. Mauderie Wilson, who has sought entrance to the university's graduate school for work toward a master's degree in sociology, is entitled to enroll.

FILE BRIEFS

The court, consisting Judge Alfred P. Murrah of the Tenth United States Circuit Court of Appeals, and District Judges Bower Broadus and Edgar S. Vaught, gave counsel five days within which to file briefs.

The McLaurin case went before the three-judge federal court for the third time in October 25 on the question of whether the segregation imposed on him at the university is constitutional.

McLaurin was admitted to the university under a ruling by the three-judge court early last month that state segregation laws keeping him out of the university were illegal as to him. McLaurin has special desks in the library and classroom.

The question of the legality of this segregation was argued on October 23 by Thurgood Marshall, special counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who represents McLeburin.

Mrs. Wilson has pending in the Oklahoma Supreme Court a case involving the question of whether she is being deprived of her constitutional rights by the refusal of the university to admit her. Her suit originally was brought in the Cleveland County court, which ruled against her. She then appealed to the State Supreme Court, which has not yet passed upon her appeal.

PRINCIPAL HIT

McLaurin objects as a matter of principle to his segregation at the university. He told the court the University's arrangements for him are "a strain and humiliating." He said they interfere with his studies.

A spot-check of university students revealed that many of them would object to the arrangements, too, if they were forced to adhere to them. But they said that if they weren't "forced," the special facilities McLaurin "enjoys" actually would be a pleasure.

McLaurin's class desk gives him more working space than the wide armed chairs used by other students. He said his anteroom position makes him feel conspicuous and apart from the other students. But one of his professors, Dr. Ellsworth Collings, said, "as far as my class is concerned, Mr. McLaurin has equal rights to take part in all class activities."

Like all graduate students and members of the faculty, McLaurin holds a permit to use the library "stacks" bookcases holding the references volumes.

One of several desks in the stacks has been marked with McLaurin's name. No one may sit at it but him, although he may sit nowhere else.

HAS OWN DESK

The library was built when the university student bodynumbered 7,00. The enrollment now is 11,000. Library facilities are crowded and students frequently cannot find a seat. J. L. Rader, librarian, said, "Actually he is much better off than other students. He has his own desk and equal facilities in checking out books."

Another member of the library staff, Mrs. Christie Cathey, said many students prefer to study in the stacks because the lighting is better. The area has fluorescent lighting, while the main library room is illuminated with standard bulbs.

Meal facilities for McLaurin have been provided in the student union, campus dining hall. The snack bar on the second floor of the union has been set aside for his use. None but McLaurin may use it between noon and 1:30 P. M.

According to student union personnel, he has only eaten there once. That time he was served by a waiter.

Other students, eating at the cafeteria on the first floor, have to stand in line up to 15 minutes during the rush period.

Among other students at the university there is substantial feeling that segregation restrictions shou'd be raised. Most students appear to feel McLaurin should be allowed to go to school just like everybody else.

Crux of the feeling was summed up by J. B. Shattuck, Norman junior. He said, "If I were forced to eat on the snack bar, I wouldn't like it. But if I had the opportunity to eat there I would—to get away from the noise and hubbub of the cafeteria."

Oklahoma U., Is Told It Is Required to Admit Only One Negro Covered by a Court Order

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 23 (AP) —The University of Oklahoma does not have to admit another Negro student just because it enrolled one, Oklahoma's Attorney General held today.

Mac Q. Williamson advised Dr. George L. Cross, university president, that the university was under "no legal obligation" to admit Mrs. Mauderie Hancock Wilson, a Negro.

The University admitted its first Negro student in history G. W. McLaurin, Oct. 13, after a Federal court ruled that the state must furnish equal facilities to Negroes.

Mr. McLaurin is working toward a doctor's degree in education, a course not offered at the state's only college for Negroes, Langston University.

Although Mr. McLaurin was admitted, his classwork is still kept on a segregated basis. He uses an ante-room adjoining the regular classroom.

Mr. Williamson advised Dr Cross that the ruling in the McLaurin case applied only to his application and did not affect "other Negroes similarly situated."

Mrs. Wilson seeks a master's degree in sociology.

Oklahoma University Told to Admit Negro; Regents Order Him on 'Segregated Basis'

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 11 (AP) —Admission of a Negro graduate student to the University of Oklahoma was ordered today by the University of Oklahoma board of regents, but under a "segregated basis."

The order paves the way for opening to a Negro a white educational institution in Oklahoma for the first time in the state's history. The Negro is G. W. McLaurin, a retired professor. He seeks a doctor of education degree.

apply to Mr. McLaurin.

L. Cross, president of the university, to admit him on the "segregated basis."

The type of segregated class work will be left for Dr. Cross to determine. He is now on a trip to New York and will not be back until Oct. 14.

There was no indication of whether Mr. McLaurin would accept segregated class work.

The resolution of the regents was approved at a secret special meeting yesterday. The resolution said:

"That the board of regents of the University of Oklahoma authorize and direct the president of the university to grant the application of admission to the graduate college of G. W. McLaurin in time for Mr. McLaurin to enroll at the beginning of the term under such rules and regulations as to segregation as the president shall consider to afford to Mr McLaurin substantially equal educational opportunities as are afforded to other persons seeking the same education in the graduate college."

A three-judge Federal court ruled Sept. 29 that the university had acted unconstitutionally in denying Mr. McLaurin admission.

Oklahoma has no graduate school for Negroes. The state constitution and statutes made it a penal offense for Negroes to attend white colleges. The Federal court ruling, however, declared the statutes unconstitutional, as they apply to McLaurin.

The McLaurin Case

We do not know the answer the court will give, but we are apprised of the question that will be propounded to the three judges Monday when the federal jurists appear on the bench. G. W. McLaurin and his attorneys will want to know whether or not University authorities, in segregating him in the University classes, have properly complied with the ruling of the court.

The petitioners and the NAACP are not fighting for partial segregation, they are fighting for total integration, and they believe the decision of the court cleared up this question so that there can not possibly be any misunderstanding among or within any group having discourse to reason. If the court held that "state segregation laws are null and void," as they apply to McLaurin, it does not mean what the state seems to think it means. The attorney general advises like the stupid doctor who tried to tell the anxious parent her daughter was "half pregnant." The Bible says "thou shalt not kill." Who is the simpleton who would argue it is legal to "half kill."

On advice of the attorney general University authorities have half-way segregated McLaurin. He's in the classes, and presto! in another sense he's not. For instance, he participates with the group and listens to the lectures but this participation must be carried on across an imaginary line, which is discriminaory in that it sets McLaurin out as something different to the remainder of the class, which should unfairly affect the feelings and sensibilities of this victim of prejudice, and in a more or less degree unfit him for serious study.

In addition, McLaurin has been designated a particular seat in which he must sit while studying in the library. He will not be at liberty to make independent explorations in the stacks, but must depend upon someone in authority to bring him the research material he desires. His food is served to him in a cubby-hole, and he has no opportunity to exchange ideas with members of the class during his leisure moments, which many eminent school authorities consider very important in an atmosphere of intellectual growth.

Now the NAACP opposes segregation, period. There are no qualifying standards which meet approval. Position is taken that segregation is basic in the idea that one human being is better than another, and the suggestion of equality is pure fiction in such an atmosphere. White students attending Oklahoma university have openly expressed to McLaurin their displeasure at the distinction and difference that has been made in his campus and schoolroom status, and surely McLaurin, the victim of this sorry treatment, would have deeper resentment than his white friends. To be segregated on the O. U. campus is bound to affect the mental state of McLaurin. Studying under such humiliating conditions, his hope, faith and confidence in the future and himself are bound to be hurt and tarnished. We firmly believe a just court will so rule and give this man the academic and physical freedom to which he is entitled.

Attorney General Williamson takes one or two words out of the context in discussing the three-judge decision, in attempt to prove his point respecting segregation, but it is the opinion of the Black Dispatch he cannot blow hot and cold on the same subject. What interpretation would you give to a court ruling which said Oklahoma's segregation laws are not applicable to McLaurin? Our state constitution has already converted the Indian into a white man, and we presume the attorney general is now attempting to change the spots on the leopard.

ADMIT NEGROES, DEANS SUGGEST

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA. (AP) —A committee of deans of graduate schools of the University of Oklahoma and Oklahoma A&M college Monday recommended admission to Negroes to graduate and professional schools of the two institutions. 3-23-48

The recommendation was made to the state regents for higher education, which had asked the six deans a month ago to study the matter of providing equal educational facilities for Negroes.

The U. S. supreme court last January directed the state to provide equal law school facilities to a Negro applicant on the same basis they are provided white students. Issues.

The regents for higher education then established a Negro law school here as a branch of Langston Negro university, but Negroes have termed the school a "Jim Crow law school" and no student has enrolled.

The committee of deans was appointed when six Negroes attempted to enroll in graduate schools at the University of Oklahoma.

Negro Okehed As Student At U. Of Okla.

The News
Tues 10-12-48
Kansas City, Mo.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 12—(AP) —For the first time in the history of the state, the doors of the all-white University of Oklahoma will be ready to open for a Negro student tomorrow.

He is G. W. McLaurin, a 54-year-old retired professor who wants to study for a doctor's degree in education in the university's graduate school.

Yesterday the state—represented by the university regents—bowed to a Federal Court ruling of Sept. 29 and decided to admit McLaurin.

But it was not an unconditional surrender.

The regents told the university president, Dr. George L. Cross, to admit McLaurin "on a segregated basis." This will probably be similar to the partial segregation used at the University of Arkansas, which enrolled its own first Negro student last Spring.

Whether McLaurin will accept such enrollment is not yet certain. His lawsuit was one of several sponsored in Oklahoma by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in an effort to remove educational bars for Negroes. Tues 10-12-48

Oklahoma has a university for Negroes at Langston, but Langston has no regular graduate school system.

When state segregation laws stopped McLaurin's admittance to the white university, he sued in Federal Court. He claimed Oklahoma violated his constitutional right of "equal protection of the laws" guaranteed in the 14th amendment.

A three-judge Federal Court agreed with McLaurin, and said the university must admit him as there is no other graduate course for him in Oklahoma.

Negro Starts Study At U. of Oklahoma

Tues 10-12-48

Kept Carefully Segregated; Second Seeks to Enter

NORMAN, Okla., Oct. 14 (AP).— A Negro woman sought admission to the University of Oklahoma for the second time Thursday, while a retired Negro professor attended his first class in the graddate school. Herald Tribune

Mrs. Mauderie Hancock Wilson applied for enrollment at the office of J. E. Fellows, dean of admissions, who found her records in order but said no action could be taken Thursday. Dr. George L. Cross, president of the university, would make no statement. Oct 10-15-48

Mrs. Wilson, an Oklahoma City secretary, attempted to enroll last March in graduate studies in social science but was refused admission because of Oklahoma's fifty-eight-year-old segregation laws.

The retired Negro professor attending his first class was G. W. McLaurin, whom the regents ordered admitted on a "segregated basis" after a three-judge Federal Court in Oklahoma City rejected his admission. Newspaper, N.Y.

Mr. McLaurin attended a class of thirty-one students in educational sociology but sat alone in an anteroom adjoining the regular classroom, at a special desk from which he could easily see and hear the instructor, Dr. Frank Balyeat. Several students and the professor greeted Mr. McLaurin when he reported to class several minutes early. Students were carefully casual.

Professor McLaurin's Private Desk

The University of Oklahoma, wrestling with racial segregation, believes it has neatly solved the problem. Professor G. W. McLaurin, a middle-aged Negro seeking graduate courses in educational sociology not elsewhere available in the state, is now attending classes, thanks to a United States District Court order. Oklahoma, as befits its pride and wealth, supports one of the better State universities, but its educational authorities felt that some lingering obeisance to segregation was still necessary in the McLaurin case. The result is an adaptation of the Jim Crow buses and street cars or the black-curtained cubicle of the dining cars. Oct 10-16-48

Professor McLaurin is in sight and sound of the same teacher, along with a classroom of white students, but he is carefully set off at a little private desk in the entranceway. There is no curtain, no sign on the wall that this space is "for colored," but there might as well be. Oklahoma's university took a seven-league stride by admitting Professor McLaurin, instead of undertaking a fiction of equal but completely separate facilities, all of which is to be praised. Having yielded this far, Oklahoma might as well give another foot or two and abolish the anteroom in education. We hope to hear any day now that Professor McLaurin has been invited to come around the corner and sit with the rest of the class. All concerned will feel better for it.

Oklahoma's Half-Way Democracy

New York Herald Tribune

IN admitting G. W. McLaurin, retired Negro teacher, to its graduate law school and segregating him in the classes, the University of Oklahoma has gone half way to democracy.

It could not bring itself to go all of the way because that would have been flying in the face of both tradition and the law, the latter specifying "separate but equal" accommodations.

In this connection, however, it is to be noted that in giving Mr. McLaurin a seat in an alcove of the classroom, the university officials are also violating Oklahoma law because the Negro law student is nevertheless in the same room with the whites.

Probably Oklahoma University is following in the footsteps of the University of Arkansas and ...ventually abandon in...ter-class segreg...n as the latter has done.

So let's not be too hard on Oklahoma because its objective may be to do the right thing (spurred by the courts, of course) but in a roundabout way which will not arouse too much clamor on the Ku Klux front.

Separate graduate schools in the South, having been proved pretty much of a flop, as well as being a bit expensive, it is understandable that Oklahomans would want to find the easiest way out, even if so far it is only half way.

Just as half a loaf is better than none, so half way is better than no way at all.

American Negroes have scored another victory, and the NAACP is to be commended.

A class in educational sociology was the initial study group entered by Mr. McLaurin and white students of the class displayed little curiosity over the school's first Negro student, merely glancing at him and taking their seats. His entrance was the result of a Federal Court ruling on Sept. 29.

Mrs. Wilson, like McLaurin, a native of nearby Oklahoma City, applied for admission immediately.

STILL SEGREGATED

McLaurin, although admitted, is still segregated. He sits in a special 15x18 room which adjoins the regular classroom and a panel separating the two rooms has been partially removed, allowing him to look through a six-foot doorway into the regular classroom. The special room was once a library.

Another Applicant For Univ. of Okla.

(Special to The Courier)

NORMAN, Okla.—Action is expected momentarily on the application of Mrs. Mauderie Hancock Wilson, who seeks to become the second Negro to be admitted to the University of Oklahoma graduate school. Meanwhile, Prof. G. W. McLaurin, retired 54-year-old Negro professor and first Negro student, admitted, is attending classes in individual jim-crow facilities.

Two sidelights on the situation developed in New York City. The first was an admission by Dr. George L. Cross, University of Oklahoma president, that it would be "very difficult" for his institution to give instruction to Negro graduate students on the "segregated basis" ordered by the university regents. He was attending ceremonies inducting General Eisenhower as head of Columbia University.

From his sumptuous offices in the downtown Wall Street section, Dr. Dunbar S. McLaurin, youngest son of Professor McLaurin and president of a huge import-export enterprise, said his father's admission to the Oklahoma school was only a partial victory because he was still faced with individual segregated facilities under which he had to study. Dr. McLaurin, himself, holds a PhD degree from the University of Chicago.

Negro Attends First Class, Another Applies To Enter U. Of Okla.

NORMAN, Okla., Oct. 15—(AP)—Oklahoma settled down to its racial segregation problem today with a huge question mark on how it will work for the future.

G. W. McLaurin, 54-year-old Negro professor, attended his first class in sociology at the University of Oklahoma yesterday.

At the same time, Mrs. Mauderie Hancock Wilson, an Oklahoma City Negro secretary, applied for entrance to the graduate school of social science.

She was refused entrance last March because of the state's segregation laws.

Dean J. E. Fellows said no immediate action could be taken.

McLAURIN WAS ENROLLED for graduate work by the university's board of regents after a Federal Court ordered him admitted. The regents authorized his admittance on a "complete basis of segregration." The university changed the classroom of its sociology class in order to segregate the professor and still provide him with equal educational opportunities.

McLaurin was seated in a small ante room just a couple of feet from the regular classroom in view of the instructor, Dr. F. A. Balyeat.

Asked if he thought he would receive equal rights under his present arrangement, he answered:

"This was hard to tell today. We were distracted by photographers and the repair down the hall. I'd have to see how things will go a little farther down the line."

Negro Student Tells of Strain

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 25 (AP)—G. W. McLaurin said today he was under "strain and humiliating conditions" in his segregated classwork at the University of Oklahoma.

McLaurin, first Negro to enroll at the university in Norman, is seeking a federal court order to end his segregated status.

He testified briefly concerning segregated classroom, library and dining regulations imposed when he enrolled Oct. 13. He is a student in the graduate school and is working for a doctor's degree in education.

He has been seated in an anteroom adjoining the regular classroom. The school has furnished him a separate place in the library and he eats at a separate table in the Woodrow Wilson dining hall.

"It is necessary to look at the professor and blackboard from a greater angle than the other students," McLaurin said.

"It puts me under a strain and humiliating conditions and handicaps my work. I cannot concentrate as I should."

The case is being heard by a three-judge federal court, which, on Sept. 29, ordered the state to furnish the 54-year-old retired professor "equal" educational facilities.

The Court Invalidated Segregation

Entry of G. W. McLaurin, Negro, into the classes at Norman last Thursday should be a lesson to all of the Negroes who for the past thirty months have argued that this feat would never be accomplished. If McLaurin leaves this minute and never returns, the individual who wagered McLaurin would never enter Oklahoma university classes has lost his money. His entry there is a tribute to the patience, perseverance and wholesome belief of Oklahoma Negroes in constitutional guarantees.

We want to repeat, most of the battles Negroes have lost in America have slipped out of their clutches, not because there was not opportunity to win, but because right in the open path to victory and success Negroes developed fatigue, became jaded and surrendered to foolish fears.

One of the most usually accounted for fears is one suggested by reaction; that the good relationship between the two races will be destroyed. The spineless and stupid never stop to realize that jim crow and segregation evidence bad race relations, and the efforts to rid the social fabric of these evils have substantial and constructive value. One should never feel contented in a home where a snake lurks.

But the entry of Prof. McLaurin to the classes at Norman is just the beginning of a struggle. Of course, in his enrollment we are over the major hump having to do with changing the social pattern, but the difficult task of living on the other side of the hump immediately presents itself. Yesterday integration was merely a theory in Oklahoma. Today it is a practice. Just how well the two races are prepared for this new venture in social understanding remains to unfold. There will from now on be many difficult decisions to be made by both the whites and the blacks.

For instance, what did the three-judge panel intend in the language employed in its decision? Did it wreck the citadel of segregation, or did it perpetuate it? What is the position of the NAACP on this question? Does the institution of segregation practices on the campus at Norman, respecting seating, eating and restroom accommodations for McLaurin, meet the approval of McLaurin and the organization that supplies the legal brains behind this program of integration? What is the proper course to pursue in carrying out the instructions of the court?

So that you may know, Attorney General Williamson feels the three-judge panel went farther than the United States supreme court in its instructions to the university officials, we quote herewith from paragraphs from his instructions to university authorities at Norman respecting compliance with the federal court requirements:

"The Court further holds that insofar as the statutes of the State of Oklahoma drawn in issue here deny or deprive this plaintiff of admission to the University of Oklahoma for the purpose of pursuing their course he seeks to pursue there, are unconstitutional and void. Now that does not mean, of course, that these laws cannot be made to stand with the power of the State to provide equal segregated facilities, provided that those facilities are equal and that they are afforded as soon as they are afforded to any other group.

"While this language follows the logic and purpose of the United States Supreme Court decision in the Sipuel case, yet it stands as the first time that any court has directly declared the penal statutes (70 O. S. 1941, 455, 456 and 457- prohibiting scholastic intermixture and higher education to be unconstitutional and void. Also, it is the first instance where a court has passed upon the precise question of a Negro plaintiff's admission to a state supported college, using the University of Oklahoma, by name. Thus. we have by judicial decree, a voiding—a striking down—of the state's traditional policy of scholastic segregation in higher education, directly applied to entrance of plaintiff, McLaurin, to the University of Oklahoma.

"While the injunctive relief was (for the time being) withheld, yet the decision notes the assumption of the court 'that the State will follow the law' . . ."

In his opinion, Attorney General Williamson says the three-judge panel went farther than the United States supreme court in that it declared Oklahoma's penal statutes "prohibiting scholastic intermixture in higher education to be unconstitutional and void." If the interpretation the attorney general places on the decision of the three-judge panel is correct (and we are inclined to feel it is) then the university authorities in segregating McLaurin have violated the order of the court. The university authorities certainly cannot track in the path outlined by the court totally overlooking the fact that a federal court by judicial decree has struck down and voided the state's traditional policy of segregation in higher education. The question for McLaurin to decide is whether or not he should accept less than the federal court granted, or will he seek to exercise those rights relying upon the efficacy and strength in the federal court order?

In attempt to adhere to the traditional state law respecting segregation there is grave danger the university authorities are in contempt of both state and federal law, for the state's penal statutes employ clear, understandable language prohibiting Negroes and whites being taught in the same classes and by the same instructor. University authorities will not argue that McLaurin is not in the same class with whites and taught by the same instructor. The state is thus placed in the position of partially violating the domestic law, provided the position is assumed the action of the court in voiding the state penal statutes as they apply to interracial classes is of no effect. If the state laws regarding education of Negroes and whites in the same classes have validity, university officials have violated that statute. On the other hand, if the three-judge federal decision has substance respecting the invalidity of segregation in the higher brackets, university authorities have violated that opinion.

There is some question as to whether or not McLaurin will be able to give the same application to his studies laboring under the spiritual handicap in which the state has placed him. What will it do to his morale? Will he have the emotional balance and poise of those white members of the class who enjoy a social atmosphere of which each of them are definite parts, as contrasted to one who looks on a few feet away, but has a badge of inferiority placed upon him?

It seems in the McLaurin case the purpose of segregation is for the first time brought out in the open. Hitherto it has been argued that irreparable damage is done to white folk when they are taught in the same class with Negroes. The presence of McLaurin in the class at O. U. leaves the state naked and bare, exposing the sole desire of white people to humiliate, low-rate and cast public derision upon dark people. There is nothing else that explains a man sitting two feet over a proscribed line, but listening to the lectures, joining in the discussions, and participating in everything except that he must wear a badge identifying him as a social leper.

It becomes the responsible task of the NAACP to go back into court asking for further relief for G. W .McLaurin. Most assuredly, Attorney General Williamson cannot go back

"Similarly Situated"

On the 13th day of October this writer, along with Attorney Mauderie Hancock Wilson did appear and ask to be enrolled on October 13th, the petitioner would have been recognized as

It should, however, be noted that when Vice President Cate asked questions about the Wilson enrollment on the 13th, the attorney general's office dodged the issue by announcing hypothetical questions were not answered; that Mrs. Wilson would have to appear at the University and ask for enrollment before the department would render an opinion. It is to the credit of the University officials that when this writer took Mrs. Wilson to the University on the 14th in order to life the attorney general's office out of its hypothetical hide-out, University authorities agreed with this writer that Mrs. Wilson had applied for enrollment through her attorney on the 13th and that they would not contest the date of her application. We say this because we feel citizens should know that no one but the attorney general's office raises the question of failure to request enrollment within the legal period.

The attorney general also takes the view that Mrs. Wilson is not one of those "similarly situated," as referred to in the three-judge opinion. The best way to put the attorney general to bed on this question is to inquire "to whom did the court refer when it provided succor for 'those similarly situated'?" Who were the folk the court had in mind, around whom the same and identical set of circumstances surrounded in this school case as it did McLaurin? We are of the opinion that when the attorney general gets through answering the above two interrogations he will have been far busier than a cat on a tin roof, and his face will have as many wrinkles as an empty purse.

There never was a more flagrant case of intellectual dishonesty than this opinion which argues that Mauderie Hancock Wilson is not one of those "similarly situated."

And to clinch this point clearly for our readers, it should be pointed out that during the first McLaurin hearing the attorney general stopped pointedly before the three-judge court and wanted to know who counsel for McLaurin assumed were those "similarly situated." It was agreed in open court that no one came within this protective circle but the six Negroes who applied at the University the same day that McLaurin applied. Here is a stipulation and agreement arrived at in open court which the attorney general now seems confused about. "Upright men shall be astonished."

We do hope the court clerk transcribed his notes covering this colloquy between counsel during the first McLaurin hearing, for it will expose completely the insane desire of a rebellious state to thwart, set aside and go around a perfectly understandable decision of the federal court.

PAINE COLLEGE AND THE C. M. E. CHURCH

COMPARATIVELY few persons in recent years remained aware that only half of the beautiful Paine College campus and magnificent buildings actually belonged to Paine College proper.

Half of the property worth more than a half million dollars actually belonged to the Woman's Division of Christian Service of the Methodist Church. Forty years ago the women of Southern Methodism purchased land adjoining Paine College and later erected buildings for women dormitories and other educational projects. They also appropriated more than $10,000 per year for operative expenses in connection with Paine College proper.

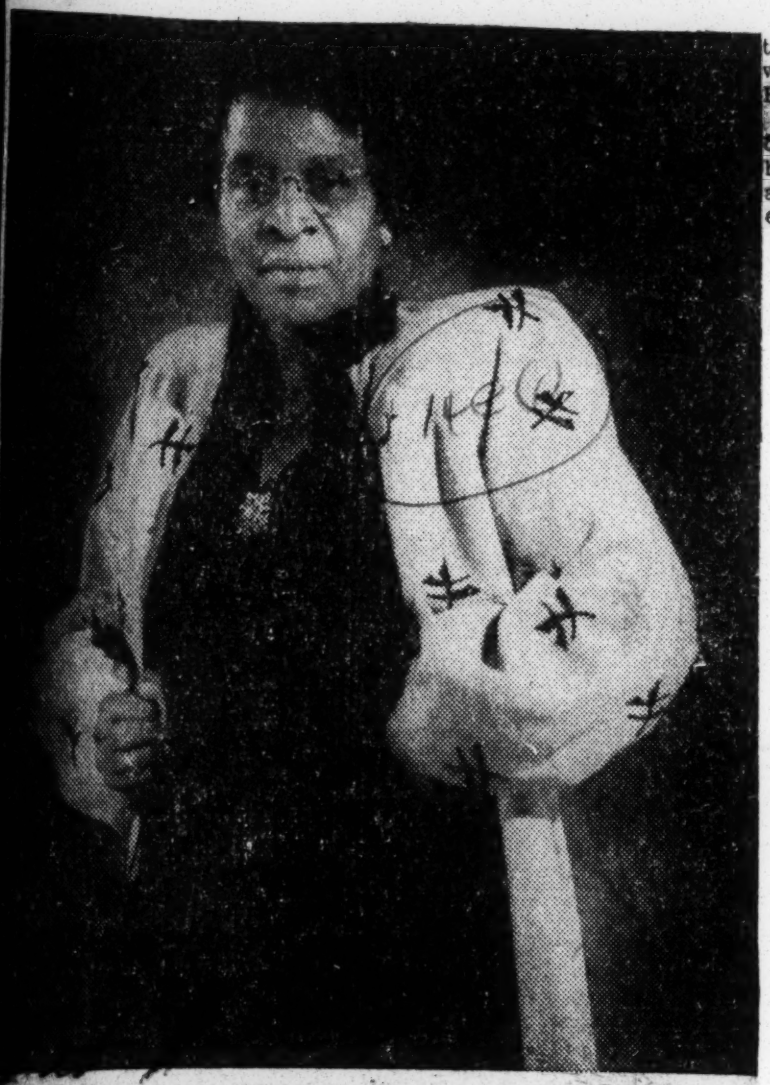
THE CHRISTIAN INDEX carried an article in the February 26th issue released by the President of Paine College, Mr. E. C. Peters, stating that the Women's Division of the Methodist Church has transferred to Paine College all of this property by deed without reservation of support and interest. It should be borne in mind by all persons interested that the property of Paine College is and has been jointly owned, sponsored and supported by the (M. E. Church, South), now Methodist Church and the C. M. E. Church.

Paine College has been jointly owned, sponsored and supported by the M. E. Church, South and the C. M. E. Church. It has always been one of the C. M. E. Colleges and remains so now. Since the Methodist union was perfected in 1939 there have been some who questioned the status of the C. M. E. Church in relation to Paine College. This was partly because Paine College was officially listed as one of the "Negro Colleges" of the Methodist Church along with such colleges as Clark, Wiley, Claflin and others.

The charter of the Paine College Board of Trustees requires that a proportionate number of the trustees must be members of the C. M. E. Church. Bishop J. M. Moore is the president of the Board of Trustees and Bishop W. Y. Bell, Vice President.

Such provision naturally serves as a legal guarantee for the rights and interests which the C. M. E. Church has invested in Paine College. Furthermore the claims of the C. M. E. Church are perpetuated by history, by sentiment, by its annual appropriations and by active support and connectional interest.

The C. M. E. Church however, shared legally on only half of the Paine College until the recent transfer of deeds from the Woman's Division of the Methodist Church to Trustees of Paine College. The significance of this act is that it was a step to preserve legally as well as in sentiment the co-operative venture in interracial good will at Paine College which was established long ago between the C. M. E. Church and the M. E. Church, South, now merged into the Methodist Church.



DR. CHARLOTTE H. BROWN—Pushed Palmer Memorial endownment to $100,000 in one year.

Dr. C. H. Brown Is Nearing Climax of Life-Long Effort

By J. H. BROCKETT Jr.

SEDALIA, N. C.—A wizard at pulling purse strings and in getting $1,000 gifts, Dr. Charlotte Hawkins Brown, president of Palmer Memorial Institute, has accomplished within one year the seemingly impossible.

In a single-handed effort to meet the challenge of a trustee who offered the first $10,000 as a conditional gift on her raising in cash and pledges a total of $100,000 within a year, Dr. Brown went over the top.

Accepting the challenge in the early fall of 1947, without announcement or display, and forthwith taking a plane to Boston, she began to organize the friends of the school in that area. They immediately began their campaign.

SOUTHERNER GIVES $10,000

A $10,000 gift from a Southerner became a great challenge to Boston "bluebloods" who within forty years or more have put more than one-half million dollars into the building of Palmer, one of the finest cultural institutions for Negro youth in America.

In a recent issue, Boston's foremost evening paper, the Herald Traveler, paid her the high tribute of being one of the most important women in that area. During the winter stay in the city, she was guest in the homes of old Boston families.

It has been disclosed by school officials that a white Bostonian has left the institution $35,000 in a will toward completion of the endowment fund.

College Group Elects Negro Girl President

OSKALOOSA, Pa. — (ANP)— Members of the Women's House association of William Penn college, consisting chiefly of white students, selected Miss Jimmie Simmons, Negro student from Jacksonville, Fla., as president of the group, recently. The association includes all college women living in the women's dormitory on the campus.

Purpose of the organization is to enable college women to make living regulations and plan their social lives. About five per cent of the students at William Penn are Negroes.

Beaver College Admits Third Colored Girl

PHILADELPHIA — (ANP) — After four years of opposition, the exclusive school for girls, Beaver College, opened its doors to its third Negro student recently when it admitted Miss Clonie Patricia Smith, 19, to its pre-medical school.

Miss Smith will attend the college partly on a $300 per year scholarship. Since tuition is more than $5500 a year, she will have to get the remainder of her expenses from other sources. She plans to take her medical training at Temple university.

Patricia, as everybody calls her, is the eighth of 11 children of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson G. Smith of Huntington Valley, Pa. She earned her scholarship to Beaver because of her superior scholarship at Upper Moreland high school.

Dr. Raymin Kistler, president of Beaver, presented the award to her at commencement exercises. She will commute to the school.

Last week Miss Smith received another honor. She was elected director of the Inter-Urban league, the youngest person to ever hold the office.

One other colored girl now attends Beaver. She is Miss Emfa Gant of Ambler, Pa., a junior majoring in fine art. She also commutes to the school.

One other Negro is reported to have gone to Beaver several years ago. She was taking up post-graduate work there, it is said.

Protest Junior College Site Sale To Philander Smith

LITTLE ROCK—(ANP)—The recent sale of the Little Rock Junior College site to Philander Smith College by the Little Rock School board, brought a vigorous protest from 601 white property owners and residents living near the junior college property last week. The protest was based upon the citizens' belief that property values would be lowered if Negroes are permitted to infiltrate into the community.

Joe H. Bilheimer, representing the citizen's group, presented a petition and letter to Beall Hempsted, the school board's business manager, asked that a public hearing be held on the matter. The petition protested "sale of the building and grounds to any person or persons, or any school or college to be used by Negroes." The area south of the junior college property is predominantly white.

"For more than 35 years, the people of this area have protected this property from Negro infiltration, and if this sale is made, more than $1,000,000 worth of our property will be adversely affected," the petition read.

REQUEST ACTION

"We don't believe there is a member of the Little Rock School board who would want a Negro College, or school, practically in his front yard, and we don't want it in ours. We respectfully request favorable action on this petition."

Bilheimer, a resident in the area affected, was once alderman of the ward in which the property is located.

Dr. Edwin N. Barron, president of the school board, said the property had already been sold and "there's nothing we can do about it."

"The school board has sold the property. The members of the petitioning group have been informed of that before."

Philander Smith purchased the site at its appraised value of $222,350, but ill not move into the buildings until its present occupants are able to move to a new building in another section of town which is currently under construction.

Philander Smith To Buy $222,350 Junior College Site

LITTLE ROCK—(ANP)—Philander Smith college entered into an agreement with the Little Rock School board to purchase the site upon which the Little Rock College administration building is located, at its appraised valuation of $222,350, it was disclosed here last week. Terms of the agreement call for a cash transaction when abstract and title are brought up to date, with the title being delivered to Philander Smith within 90 days after acceptance of the offer.

The junior college site is located across the street from properties of Philander Smith, the oldest Methodist Episcopal educational institution for Negroes in the southwest. The junior college is to have a three-year lease on the building, pending completion of its new site west of Fair Park boulevard. Under the lease, it will pay a rental of $3,600 annually.

Philander Smith Opens Jr. College

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—Philander Smith College authorities last week opened a junior college unit at Forrest City in the Lincoln High School building. Classes began June 2, with courses being offered on the freshman and sophomore level.

This is the second year the college has offered junior college courses at both Hope and Forrest. The Forrest City unit will serve more than seventy-five teachers in the immediate area.

Philander Smith Receives $50,000

LITTLE ROCK,—(ANP) — A gife of $50,000 toward the building fund to Philander Smith College was announced last week by Dr. M. LaFayette Harris, school president.

Dr. Harris said he was not at liberty to reveal the identity of the donor. He did say that the money came from the estate of a [illegible] Arkansas white person.

The $50,000 brings the total collected toward a $1,000,000 expansion fund goal up to $300,000. The campaign drive is set for 1952.

The board of trustees of the school has already sought technical advice from federal agencies and experts from the George Peabody College for designs of a proposed new layout called for by the fund, according to Dr. Harris.

Philander Smith Increases Value Of Plant By $600,000

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — (SNS) — Philander Smith College, Little Rock, Arkansas, increased the value of its phy ical plant by approximately $600,000 during the past 60 days, according to announcement by Dr. M. LaFayette Harris, president, at the Summer Session Commencement. The additions include a Student Union Building, Gymnasium, special building for Music and drama, a Science building, and a general academic Administration Building of more than 40,000 feet of floor space.

The Student Union Building was erected outright. The other buildings, all recent brick structures, are separated from the Philander Smith College campus by 12th Street, and have been used by the Little Rock Junior College (White).

The property was purchased on a cash transaction when President Harris presented the Little Rock School Board with a check for $222,350 in exchange for deed and title. The College Architects estimate that to build this property at current prices would cost $800,000. The properties have been appraised at $490,000. This addition more than doubles the plant and facilities of the Institution.

The campus now comprises 6 squares of the most valuable property near the heart of the city of Little Rock. More than 1,000 persons attended the Commencement Exercises and witnessed conferring of degrees upon 65 graduates from 11 states. The enrollment for the past fiscal year was 1318.

The anticipated enrollment for the current year is 1500.

an announcement by Doctor M. LaFayette Harris, President. The two-story building provides offices for the Dean of Women, Dean of Students, and Chief Counselor, a large lounge and social hall, a cafeteria, a snack-lounge bar and ample storage space on the first floor. The second floor is composed of 2 distinct units. One unit contains a Reading-Lounge Room for women which will house Sorority shingles and certificates of special merit. Immediately adjacent is the Club Room for light games, then a special Meeting Room, a Powder Room and Rest Room. The 4-room unit for men is composed of a Reading-Lounge Room where Fraternity shingles and certificates of merit are displayed, followed by a Club Room for light games, a Billiard Room, and a Wash Room. Two trophy cases are located in the lobby of the front entrance. This Building, known as "The Barracks" was constructed by the Miller-Ross-Turner Conctruction Co., and represents a $70,000 addition to the capital outlay of the College. It has been described as thoroughly functional, and a strong character building agency.

Nearly 200 Smith Students Stricken in Mass Poisoning

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — A mass attack of ptomaine poisoning threw a frigthful scare into students attending the summer session at Johnson C. Smith University, Sunday, but none were seriously stricken and many had returned to their classes Monday morning. 6-19-48

University officials were unable to state the exact number of students stricken in the poisoning attack or the cause of the group illness, but it is believed that between 150 and 200 students were victims. Let. 6-19-48

President H. Lifton of Johnson C. Smith said Monday, "We had a scare and are busy now checking to find out how many students were affected and what the cause of the illness was."

Stricken at 6 p.m.

The university president also pointed out that most of the students stricken were women and that while some of theme were still recuperating the vast majority had returned to classes Monday morning in good health.

The mass posisoning hit the campus about 6 p.m., Sunday evening, two hours after the students ate their second meal for the day. The meal, served in the university dining hall, consisted of ham, potato salad, string beans, pineapple and ice cream.

Treated at Hospital

Two hours after the meal, students, one by one, began to complain of illness and were taken en masse to Good Samaratain Hospital in Charlotte for treatment and later released in the care of university physicians.

President Lifton said, "We don't know the cause of the poisoning, but we are trying hard to find out.' ' He was out of town at the time of the incident, but returned later in the evening.

Johnson C. Smith has a summer school enrollment of approximately 500, half of whom usually eat in the small university dining hall. However, on Sundays many eat out in the city with friends or go to their homes in nearby towns. Otherwise, it was said, a much larger number may have been victimized in the attack.

Temples of Learning Say Jim Crow Change Is "Impractical and Unwise"

ST. LOUIS UNIVERSITY JOINS GROUP OF REACTIONARIES

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Presidents of nine white southern colleges bitterly attacked the recommendation of the President's Commission on Higher education that the dual system of schools, now in effect in 17 states, be eliminated, and agreed with four southern members of the commission that it would be "impractical and unwise" to end the segregation of Negro and white children in the south by any government edict. Sat. 1-3-48

The nine presidents were Colgate W. Darden Jr., University of Virginia; Bennet H. Branscomb, Vanderbilt university; Isaiah Bowman, John Hopkins; Hamilton Holt, Rollins college; John D. Williams, University of Mississippi; Father Patrick J. Holloran, St. Louis university; Rufus C. Harris, Tulane university; T. S. Painter, University of Texas; and Lewis W. Jones, University of Arkansas. 1-3-48

The dissenting bloc of the commission included Douglas Southall Freeman, editor of the Richmond News Leader; Arthur H. Compton, chancellor, Washington university, St. Louis; Lewis W. Jones, and Goodrich C. White, president, Emory university, Atlanta.

This group had issued a statement saying "We recognize that many conditions affect adversely

President's Commission on Higher Education

New Day for Education

Pittsburgh Courier

Appropriately on the eve of the new year, the President's Commission on Higher Education submitted its report and recommendations reached after a year of comprehensive study.

Declaring that democracy demands an informed citizenry, the commission recommended a national scholarship program for colleges and universities calling for an immediate outlay of $135,000,000 to this end.

If the recommendations are acted upon favorably by Congress, scholarships will be provided for 300,000 students in 1948, and by the year 1960 it is planned to have 4,600,000 students in our colleges. Sat. 1-3-48

The average scholarship will be $400, but the average fellowship for graduate students will be $1,500, renewable for four years. Pittsburgh, Pa.

Further recommendations of the commission, which are of special interest to us, are the establishment of "Fair Educational Practices" laws in the several States similar to the FEPC laws in New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey and other States.

The commission in its report attacks the "quota system," obviously aimed at Jews and Negroes, and also the segregation of Negro and white students in Southern schools and colleges, and it urges that in publicly controlled institutions there be no tuition or other required fees for the freshman and sophomore years, with fees beyond that no higher than those in existence in 1939.

The report charges that:

"Discrimination in the admission of college students because of an individual's race, creed, color, sex, national origin or ancestry is an anti-democratic practice which creates serious inequalities in the opportunity for higher education. This commission is opposed to discrimination and believes it should be abandoned." 1-3-48 Sat.

Just Let South Solve Its Own Race Problem, Pierson Urges

14e

Montgomery Ala. Advertiser

Dr. W. W. Pierson, dean of the Graduate School of the University of North Carolina, speaking before the graduating class of Huntingdon College Monday morning declared that the problems of the South ought to be resolved by Southerners, by its own two races in conference and without interference. This settlement, he said, will in time be reached with justice and fairness and tolerance in the interest of social peace. 1-4-48

The Alabama-born speaker outlined the recommendations of the President's Commission on Higher Education and added, "there is little doubt that the American public expects much of the college graduates and regards them as the most promising hope of the future, and there seems little doubt that the number of persons seeking college education will continue to grow.

The report, he said, sets up patterns of thought, practice, and legislation, which, if adopted, must in time lead to a very much greater uniformity in our society and in our programs of education than we hitherto had and must lead to the possibility of a managed society. This report and that of the President's Commission on Civil Rights—with the two having some areas in common—may by some be thought to chart courses leading in that direction, probably requiring more and more centralized control. Sat. 1-4-48

In the past, he continued, we have been proud that our schools, colleges and universities have not been molded to a uniform pattern but have been free to undertake educational experimentation and the student has been able to find the sort of education desired. Some of us would like to have a greater measure of uniformity but the uniformity we seek is that of excellence under principles to which we voluntarily agree and to which we give obedience from a sense of responsibility and honor. Drastic change may become patriotic duty during the so-called cold war and during the impending hot war if and when it comes. Also there is the risk that steps of progress in the new direction may not be perceived and that we have traveled in that new direction without knowing it.

The full freedom to have institutions of special character, of partisam objective and of nonconformist character, said Dr. Pierson, will result in some institutions, both public and private, that are of doubtful value to the community and some that are on "the lunatic fringe," but their eccentricities in time tend to disappear as they accommodate themselves to the conventions of respectability and as their clientele tends to demand that they provide an education which enables students to be acceptable and useful in a competitive society. It is better to endure such institutions than to adopt restrictive measures in the interest of a system of uniformity. Given our situation as it is and has been, we need both private and public education. Although public education is a public trust and duty, private institutions are needed and are publicly serviceable. Public and private institutions are complementary as needs of our society. Without the private institutions of the better class, the public institutions would soon be Prussianized.

Both the report on higher education and the report on civil rights, said the dean, are symptomatic of a disposition and a trend of thought of our times, offered under the aegis of democracy but not having a conception of democracy which would be acceptable to the political scientist or student of history. There is ample evidence in history, he said, "that the interests of locality, of sections and of regions offset and differ from the interests of generality and of centralization. When in a freedom loving and politically self-conscious society these interests get unduly out of balance, there is likely to be trouble unless these interests—both local and general—are reestablished according to a rightful equilibrium. Does not the long and bloody story of wars of religion tell us, if we would but profit from the story, that the toleration of dissent and differences in matters of faith is not only a practical, but a just and reasonable solution of that form of strife?"

"We are a proud, powerful and independent country," Dr Pierson went on. "We are ready to discharge our international obligation and to share in the responsibilities and burdens of maintaining the peace, but I do not believe that we are willing to suffer interference from abroad in our domestic concerns and I hope we shall never be willing to endure such interferences. The plain moral of any such opinion is that we will abstain from interference in the affairs of others. It would be refreshing and inspiring if the voice and sentiment of toleration were heard and felt in the councils of those now dealing with the problems of mankind and the fateful issues of war and peace. It might be possible in the new international order for the historic, the lawful, and real interests of nationalism to be respected and fostered along with those of internationalism. A successful, productive, and endurable international order is not likely unless the rightful interests of nationaliasm are respected."

President's education commission reports on inequalities found in U. S. schooling

(See editorial comment, "Where do we go from here?")

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Although more than 82 percent of the white youngsters between the ages of 14 and 17 are attending school, only 71.9 percent of the Negroes in this age group are in school.

This fact is called the greatest difference between white and Negro education by the President's Commission on Higher Education in its report issued last week.

Citing "noteworthy advances" made in education, the commission, as have several bodies before it, indicted segregation in education as practiced by 17 states and the District of Columbia as education's greatest deterrent. The commission said:

"Although segregation may not legally mean discrimination as to the quality of the facilities, it usually does so in fact. Schools maintained for Negroes are commonly much inferior to those for whites.

"Segregation", the commission added, "lessens the quality of education for the whites as well. To maintain two school systems side by side — duplicating even inadequately, the buildings, equipment and teaching personnel — means that neither can be of the quality that would be possible if all the available resources were devoted to one system, especially not when the states least able financially to support an adequate educational program for their youth are the very ones that are trying to carry a double load."

The rise in the percentage of Negroes attending school was taken note of by the commission. Between 1900 and 1940, the percentage of Negroes five to 20 years attending school rose from 31 to 64.4 percent. In the same period, the percentage of Negro youth 15 to 20 years attending school rose from 17.5 to 33.8.

The commission hit the quota system by which many U.S. colleges and universities limit the number of Negroes and Jews who may attend.

"The quota system denies the basic American belief that intelligence and ability are present in all ethnic groups.

Congressional Action to Prevent Unfair Distribution of Monies Held Sole Solution

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON — (NNPA) — The second report of the President's Commission on Higher Education is provocative, but it presents what must be the ultimate solution to the question of equality of educational opportunity.

The first report recommended the elimination of race segregation and the quota system from institutions of higher learning in this country. Sat. 1-3-48

The second report advocates the repeal of all State laws requiring separate schools for white and colored students. It also recommends Federal grants-in-aid to needy students and fellowships for post-graduate study. Afro.

Would Penalize J.C. Institutions

The commission suggested, however, that the legislation appropriating Federal funds should require that the grants go only to those institutions where discriminatory practices do not exist.

In States where segregation is legal, the report added, Federal aid should be equitably distributed to individuals and institutions without racial discrimination.

Seventeen Southern States and the District of Columbia are committed to a policy of segregation. In none of these States, nor in the District of Columbia, is there equality of educational opportunity. Baltimore, Md.

Given Infinitesimal Share

Since 1862 the Federal Government has been aiding the States with their educational programs. Land-grant colleges in the United States received Federal funds totaling $76,545,644 for the year ended June 30, 1946.

Of that sum, the 17 separate land-grant colleges for colored students in Southern States received only $534,048.

While waiting for the recommendations of the President's Commission on Higher Education to be put into effect, colored people, especially the presidents of the colored land-grant colleges, should seek an equitable division of Federal monies given Southern States annually for the land-grant colleges. Sat. 1-3-48

One Act Demands Equality

Only one of the acts authorizing Federal appropriations for land-grant colleges requires an equitable division of funds. That is the second Morrill Act of August 30, 1890. 1-3-48

FIRST — The term "equitable division" should be defined by the Congress.

The several acts under which Federal appropriations are made to the land-grant colleges were intended to promote the teaching of agriculture and the mechanic arts.

Therefore, it appears that the basis of division of funds between white and colored land-grant colleges in Southern States should be the ratio of colored rural farm population to the total rural farm population of each State.

Bill Required

SECOND—The Congress should bills appropriating funds for the bills apropriating funds for the land-grant colleges a provision requiring the U.S. Office of Education and the Agriculture Department to withhold funds from States which maintain separate schools but which fail and refuse to make an equitable division of State and Federal monies.

Expedients will no longer work. The United States Supreme Court has ruled that a State must provide equal facilities for colored students within the State or admit them to the white State-supported universities.

That decision makes voidable the system of State scholarships at of-State institutions.

Can Demand His Rights

In other words, the student may take advantage of it if he wishes to study at some out-of-State institution or he may insist upon his right to the kind of education he wants at an institution within the State. 1-3-48

As the President's Commission on Higher Education pointed out, the idea of regional schools, advanced at the recent Southern Governors' Conference, "fails to meet the legal issue of providing equality of educational opportunity within each State."

Congress should begin to equalize educational opportunity by requiring an equitable division of Federal grants between white and colored land-grant colleges in each State maintaining a dual school system.

DITTO FROM THE NORTH

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Fri. 1-9-48

We Southerners need to be reminded now and again that everybody north of the M. & D. does not fail to understand our race relations problem. There are discerning Northerners whose thought is consonant with representative thought in the South.

For example, Henry Noble McCracken, president emeritus of Vassar College, recently wrote a letter to The New York Times in which he said:

> No thoughtful person will disagree . . . that the applications of the principles of equality in admission to Southern colleges and schools must be worked out by the Southern people "within the established patterns of the social relationships" in the South . . .
> I have the impression, after many years of almost annual visits at Southern centers of education, that the situation in the South is improving quite as rapidly as in the North, which I admit is itself far from satisfactory in many respects . . .

The Christian Science Monitor, a newspaper published in Boston, has commented:

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Fri. 1-9-48

> The first of doubtless many sequels to the monumental report of the President's Commission on Higher Education is a minority dissent on segregation . . . We would be less than honest were we not to say that, in our view, the four dissenters come nearer to the realities of the problem and to the practical solution than does the commission's majority report . . .
> Such elemental rights for the Negro as protection against violence, assurance of a fair trial, and the privilege of free exercise of the ballot seem attainable through law and its evenhanded enforcement. Fri. 1-9-48
> But when one enters the domain of social relationships between the races, it is to discover that which has little to do with the rational as do the customs which define the edible and inedible in food, and which embodies deep-seated values of right and wrong as does the code of ethics which attaches to the family. Montgomery, Ala.
> Such patterns are not changed by compulsions from without. . . . Precipitate pressures could crystallize now-yielding antipathies into granite and generate emotional heat the violence of which could undo the work of years.

The Boston paper could not have said it more convincingly. Thoughtful, realistic people in the South know that modifications have come, to be followed by more. In the poor State of Alabama we are spending millions each year to educate Negroes. We obviously are not spending those millions with a view of keeping the Negro where he is.

Anybody who has even a fragmentary knowledge of recent Federal court decisions knows that the Federal Government is going to see that qualified Negroes are permitted to vote. The South would be subject to less pressure now from the Federal Government if it had been more judicious and liberal with the franchise. The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Fri. 1-9-48

Informed people realize and accept this. But there is no demonstrable give in the matter of segregation. Little is to be anticipated. Mass production of strife can be achieved by outside pressures.

Education for Democracy Not Profit—Is Urged

By ROBERT GEIGER,

The Courier Journal Louisville, Ky. 14e(1) Sun. 1-11-48

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Scattered through the recent report of the President's Commission on Higher Education—but so thinly that it scarcely has been noticed—is a recommendation striking at the very roots of the traditional American educational system. Sun.

The commission recommends that colleges and universities educate their students for the benefit of democracy, and not for the students' own profit. 1-11-48

The report also recommends free federal scholarships, widened adult education, two more years of free public education and other things. But a commission spokesman says: "In my opinion, this is the whole point of the report."

For generations, Americans have been educated primarily with the idea that it would help them get ahead in the world; but now, in carefully studied words, the commission says:

"All too often the benefits of education have been sought and used for personal and private profit, to the neglect of public and social service . . .

"Teaching and learning must be invested with public purpose."

The question soon may reach "human beings" with a keen understanding of any sympathy for human problems. The commission acknowledges, of course, that doctors, dentists and other professional people need to combine with these qualities a high degree of technical skill.

2. It says an inventory must be kept of the scientific skills needed to make democracy function at its most magnificent level. People must be trained to fill all these needs, it says, even if it means multiplying the size or number of colleges and providing federal money to pay tuition.

The commission says its recommendation for a speedy overhauling of the educational system is justified because there is a race between man and the atomic bomb. The Courier-Journal

The Major Change

The major change would be in increased emphasis on studies to "humanize" the student and make him more aware of the problems of human behavior that create world problems. Sun 1-11-48

The studies, called "liberal education," now generally are given the student during his first two years, before he enters a professional school. The commission proposes that the student be exposed to them throughout his college career.

These studies would form the "core" of common knowledge with which all college people would be familiar, regardless of whether they might become doctors, dentists, lawyers, engineers or research scientists.

FEDEBAL AID TO COLLEGES

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Wed 2-4-48

President Truman's Commission on Higher Education evidently believes that the Federal Government should become senior partner in the business of expanding the facilities of state supported colleges to the point where such institutions can take care of double the present enrollment by 1960.

To accomplish such an objective, the commission figures that the government would have to subsidize the colleges to the tune of nearly $2 billion dollars. This is a whopping lot of money to ask for any sort of peacetime enterprise, but Dr. Zook and his coadjutors perhaps decided that they'd set their sights high to allow for congressional parsimony. Wed 2-4-48

The commission has already gone on record with the suggestion that Congress should appropriate $780,000,000 for the establishment of fellowships and scholarships to assist any ambitious young American to realize his dream of attending the college of his choice. This recommendation, coupled with the suggested grant for the improvement of college facilities, represents by far the most ambitious long-range program in the history of American education.

At this time there is little reason to believe that an economy-minded Congress will give favorable consideration to such a costly program, but the mere fact that it has been seriously proposed by a committee of experts indicates how far we have advanced on the road to the achievement of free public education from kindergarten through college. The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Wed 2-4-48

Though this seems a bad time to propose extensive federal aid to education, the suggestions of the Zook committee will undoubtedly give Congress something definite and objective to think about. The American people have gradually been led to appreciate the true relationship between education and prosperity. Two great wars have pointed the need for better professional and technical training for our youth. If a third great war should come, our country would need more specialized service than it has ever needed before.

2 Catholic Members Balk Unless Private Schools Are Added To Program

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—(AP)—President Truman's Commission on Higher Education, overriding a protest of Catholic members, today recommended $1,875,000,000 in federal aid to publicly supported colleges.

This five-year outlay, to help with operating costs and building, was suggested as the start of a program to double college enrollment by 1960. It would be in addition to the $780,000,000 program for improvements and scholarships proposed by the commission last year.

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Wed. 2-4-48

Group Urges Federal Aid For Colleges

addition to federal scholarships and fellowships at public and private schools costing the treasury another $780,000,000.

The funds would be used to help states and communities expand school facilities and partly offset the higher cost of making the freshman and sophomore years tuition-free for all students, which was recommended previously by the commission. Above those grades, the commission urged, tuition costs should be cut sharply. Mon. 2-2-48

Catholic Dissent

Two Catholic members, objecting to the exclusion of private schools from federal funds, signed a vigorous dissent. It went to Mr. Truman along with the majority report of the 28-member commission headed by George F. Zook, chairman of the American Council on Education.

FEDERAL AID WITHOUT CONTROLS. Commonweal 2-13-48 Ed.

THE FIFTH of the reports of the President's Commission on Higher Education made public February second seems, by itself, to overemphasize the economic element. It envisages higher education for all to the extent of doubling present college enrollments. What would that do to our already mediocre general educational standards? To make higher education available to every American of genuine college caliber regardless of his purse it seems hardly necessary to gather everybody in, regardless. Or is the idea growing that higher education is primarily a useful social—rather than an intellectual—experience, which should be open to all? Commonweal

Of key importance also are the recommendations on the channels for government appropriations. One of these, through scholarships and fellowships, would come generously to the assistance of individual talent and ambition, as obliquely suggested above. New York, N.Y. 2-13-48 Fri.

The commission did split, 26 to 2, however, on the question of aid to private institutions. The overwhelming majority apparently experienced no qualms in actually seeking to build up state universities and other public institutions at the expense of private colleges and universities. The majority frankly and calmly admit that restricting these considerable appropriations to higher educational institutions which are publicly controlled might "make it extremely difficult for many private institutions to survive" in the face of such heavily loaded competition. Commonweal

This is hardly a matter where only Catholic colleges are involved, although the lone dissidents here are Catholic representatives. The country's most noted universities are private institutions, although some of them are heavily endowed. And there is a rather impressive list of others many of them smaller, liberal arts colleges, technical schools and Protestant denominational colleges whose contribution to the common well-being continues to be substantial. Their passing would be a national loss. Perhaps many compatriots who cannot abide the thought of public monies going to private institutions would at least hesitate before favoring a subsidy plan which would result in killing them off. New York, N.Y. 2-13-48 Fri.

Or examine the reverse side of the medal. Picture an American educational system where the student is a ward of the State from kindergarten right through graduate school and ask whether, on the basis of present experience, such a plan promises to develop the élite endowed with the independence, self-reliance, zeal and vision which the decisions confronting the United States will demand. How can the subsidy scheme favored by the majority of the President's commission measure up even to the minimum requirements of national self-interest? Commonweal

Who Should Be Educated?

The President's Commission on Higher Education recommends Federal aid to raise the level of free education from high school through two years of college; with Federal scholarships to double, by 1960, senior college, graduate and professional enrolment. This, with curricular changes to assure "well rounded" education; and with elimination of religious and racial discrimination and segregation. Many editors see America ready for a higher free education level. But the large majority fears, in this plan, Federal controls, lowered educational standards and imbalance between professional education and trade training. Majority opinion condemns religious discrimination where provable; and opposes Federal-imposed non-segregation. Tues. 1-13-48

Schenectady (N. Y.) Union-Star (Ind.-Rep.): "The same evolution in public education which has brought opportunity of high school training to almost every boy and girl in America since 1900 is underneath the findings of President Truman's Commission on Higher Education. . . . Underlying it all is the recognition that high school education is no longer adequate for wrestling with modern living. More young people must be trained for leadership . . . Mainly this would be brought about through 'community colleges' in almost all population centers." 1-13-48

Tampa (Fla.) Times (Ind.): ". . . The philosophy that the Government must guide the lives of people from the cradle to the grave was clearly evident in the Commission's report . . . Young people who really want higher education today, with relatively few exceptions, are not denied it. The doors are open and the way is made easy if they have the will to seek additional learning." 1-13-48

San Diego (Calif.) Daily Journal (Ind.-Dem.): "As education broadens, it also gets more expensive, and money cost prevents its having that free and common quality basic to our whole American idea of it. The history of education in America . . . demonstrates the American idea of freedom of opportunity. All the little share-the-wealth crusades, with all the small prophets of free land, free rent, free beer or whatnot free, seem to wither early in the American climate.—But that climate itself has been determined by free public education." 1-13-48

Asheville (N. C.) Citizen (Ind.-Dem.): "Tuition-free schooling for the first two years would strengthen the junior college and is in accord with the Jeffersonian principle of state-supported education for the worthy and promising. Canada, by the way, already offers free two-year education through its public 'collegiates,' or high school-junior colleges . . . Doubling college enrolment is of course an ideal. It may come in any case. But are the colleges prepared for it, as Dr. Zook (Commission chairman) warns they must be?" 1-13-48

Columbia (S. C.) Record (Ind.-Dem.): "It doesn't take four years to train a man to make automobiles or tractors, to cite only one example, and most of the training that may be of value to an assembly-line worker isn't available in the colleges . . . The Commission ought to have recognized that education is not a mass-production industry and that its problems are not to be solved by suddenly increasing the number of students. The important thing in education is quality and it must be maintained, if education is to be education." 1-13-48

New York Post (Ind.): "Significantly, the Commission suggests that Congress refuse to spend the grants in colleges which practice racial or religious discrimination. And it urges states to pass fair education practice laws . . . The time is ripe for such federal aid to higher education. And if some ivy league colleges, because of their alleged prejudiced policies, find themselves by-passed to a minor role in American education, it will be only because they failed to keep in step with our expanding democracy." The Record

Christian Science Monitor (Ind.), Boston, Mass.: ". . . We would be less than honest were we not to say that, in our view, the four dissenters (Southern members of the Commission) come nearer to the realities of the problem and to its practical solution . . . The minority also wants conditions improved, 'inequalities removed, and greater opportunity provided for all our people'—Negro as well as white. But they hold that 'efforts toward these ends must, in the South, be made within the established pattern of social relationships.'" 1-13-48

Starvation In The U. S.!

The Record

More than 2,000,000 children in the United States are actually starving—starving intellectually. That's what Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing maintains in an article on public school education in the current American magazine.

Millions more are receiving an inadequate mental diet, says Mr. Ewing, whose agency has jurisdiction over the U. S. Office of Education. Birmingham, Ala.

Mr. Ewing points out that a number of countries have done better by their children than the U. S.—Britain, Scandinavia, Switzerland, the Netherlands, for instance. He says education in America has become a lottery. Your child is just lucky if you live in a community offering an adequate education. He's unlucky—and an awful lot of children are—if he attends school manned by incompetents and badly equipped.

*News * * * 2-9-48*

A full educational diet, with some trimmings, is asked also by the President's Commission on Higher Education, which last week-end issued its fifth report.

The commission would guarantee every U. S. citizen 14 years of education, including high school and two years of college. It would spend $1,875,000,000 in federal funds in the next five years to help with operating costs and building for the expanding colleges. In addition $780,000,000 would be spent in federal scholarships to guarantee full equality of educational opportunity.

The News

It is significant that in both of these educational news items the solution is found in federal aid for education. Birmingham, Ala.

Federal aid for education, of course, is becoming increasingly controversial. The need for more money for education is more and more evident, but the opponents of federal aid fear federal control. Dr. Guy E. Snavely, former president of Birmingham-Southern College and now executive director of the Association of American Colleges, voiced some of these fears recently in his report to the association in Cincinnati. We recognize some of the dangers in federal aid that its opponents point out. But

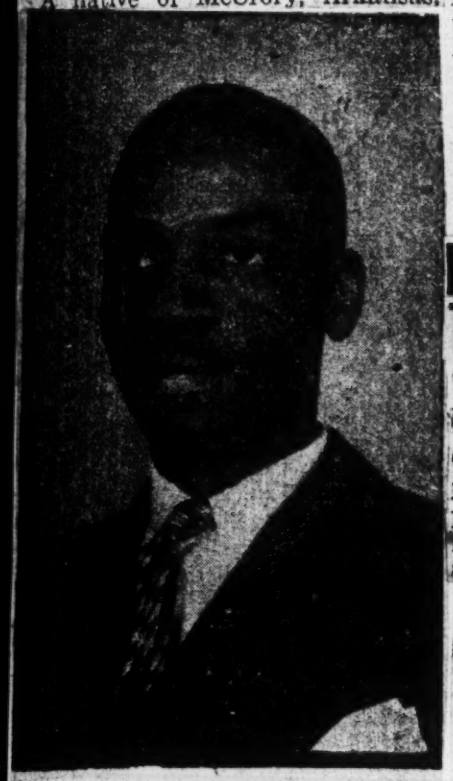
By BUTLER T. HENDERSON

PINE BLUFF, Ark.—Dr. Lawrence A. Davis, president of Arkansas State A. M. and N. College, was chosen president of the Conference of Negro Land-Grant College Presidents at their recent annual meeting held in Washington, D. C. This association is composed of heads of 20 Negro colleges in 17 states. President Davis succeeds Dr. Felton G. Clark, president of Southern University.

A native of McCrory, Arkansas,



DR. LAWRENCE A. DAVIS

Dr. Davis was elected president of Arkansas State College in 1943 at the age of 28 after the death of Dr. J. B. Watson. Under his administration the enrollment has reached an all-time high of nearly 2,000 students in all departments of the institution, and the faculty now exceeds 150 persons, offering specialized courses in more than 30 fields.

President Davis has also expanded the facilities of the college through the construction of classroom buildings, a dining hall, infirmary, more than 30 new homes for members of the faculty, a cannery, and 50 beautiful quonset apartments for veterans and their families.

Fri 11-5-48

A graduate of Arkansas State College and the University of Kansas, President Davis was last year honored with the doctor of laws degree from Lane College. He is a member of the Governing Board of Equalization of Educational Opportunities, the National Education Association, Arkansas Teachers Association, National Council of Teachers of English, Alpha Kappa Mu Honor Society, Masons, Elks, and the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity. He is also listed in Who's Who, International Who's Who, and Who's Who in Education.

Negroes Are Advised To Keep On Fighting Segregation In Schools

Memphis Tribune 11-22-48

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21—(AP)—Two Negro attorneys advised the presidents of Negro land-grant colleges Wednesday to keep fighting race segregation in state-operated schools. They said segregation is going to continue until the Supreme Court rules it unconstitutional.

James M. Nabrit, secretary of Howard University, Washington, told a conference of Negro college presidents that he believes "segregation in education is discriminatory on the basis of race and color and is unconstitutional.

Pittsburgh Courier 11-27-48

"The uniform practice of the 17 Southern states in operation of segregated public schools is a denial of equal justice and is prohibited by the 14th amendment to the constitution," he added.

"No reason for segregation exists except hostility to Negroes.

"Nevertheless the Supreme Court has not yet adopted the view . . . that segregation is unconstitutional and we are stuck with the doctrine until the court strikes it down."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20 (AP).—The presidents of Negro land-grant colleges were advised today to keep fighting race segregation in state-operated schools.

Pittsburgh Courier 11-27-48

James M. Nabrit, secretary of Howard University, Washington, told a conference of Negro college presidents that he believes "segregation in education is discriminatory on the basis of race and color and is unconstitutional."

"The uniform practice of the seventeen Southern states in operation of segregated public schools is a denial of equal justice and is prohibited by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution," he added.

"No reason for segregation exists except hostility to Negroes.

"Nevertheless, the Supreme Court has not yet adopted the view . . . that segregation is unconstitutional, and we are stuck with the doctrine until the court strikes it down."

Seeks Congress Action

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20 (UP).—Representative Brooks Hays, Democrat, of Arkansas, said today he will ask the next Congress to approve the interstate compact worked out by fourteen Southern states to carry out their program of higher education. The compact was approved by the House during the last session, but the Senate refused to take action. It provides for a regional university system.

Herald Tribune 11-21-48

Representative Hays said the project was conceived by "the progressive leadership of the South," and it should "not be sacrificed because it fails to require non-segregation which some of our outside critics insist upon as an educational goal." He said the compact does provide for equal educational services to whites and Negroes.

Heads of 17 Negro Colleges Told Segregation Is Contrary to the Interest of Country

By GEORGE STREATOR

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20—Presidents of the seventeen Negro land and grant colleges in the southern and border states were advised by legal counsel today that the best interests of Negroes as well as the country dictated that they should oppose race segregation in education.

The presidents announced that their group would become more active in opposing such a policy and hailed as their "spiritual spokesman," Dr. Oliver Dwight Holmes. He said that things had changed in fifty years, and that educational leaders could now say openly that "no intelligent Negro can agree with segregation."

Dr. John W. Davis, president of the West Virvinia State College for Negroes, Institute, W. Va., said that it was for the reason of letting the public know where they stood that the presidents had invited to the conference Thurgood Marshall, special counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Dr. Davis asserted that "this is no time for pussy-footing—we are going to put our cards on the table, and they all read the same thing, 'no segregation.'"

"Evidence" of Bias Presented

Assisting Mr. Marshall in presenting the "evidence" of widespread discrimination were three members of the faculty of the Howard University Law School, Herbert O. Reid, James M. Nabrit Jr. and George M. Johnson.

The lawyers said that Federal grants for public education in the South were intended "to promote the liberal and practical education of the industrial classes in the several pursuits and professions in life."

Thurs 11-21-48

They sketched a course of legal action against the Federal Security Agency, the Department of Agriculture, the Office of Education and other agencies that might be found biased in allotting public funds.

The Department of Agriculture was called by the presidents the most "prejudiced" of all Federal agencies. They said that Federal funds intended to further agricultural research in the South had been spent wholly for white schools in white institutions to the exclusion of Negroes. The Negro colleges obtained more aid "but not what is due" from the funds intended for "resident instruction," they said.

Mr. Marshall argued that equality in a segregated school is impossible. Persons defending "the theory of gradualism in breaking down segregation and discrimination tend to ignore completely that those states maintaining the luxury of segragation are least able financially to break down race differentials," he said, adding:

"As the Negro schools are improved, the white schools are improved, and the gap instead of lessening, is continuing, and in some cases widening."

Mr. Marshall praised "a very small group of enlightened citizens from the awakening state of Mississippi" for opening a fight against unequal salaries for white and Negro teachers in that state.

Private Race Colleges Facing Fight for Life

The Courier- Sat 11-20-48
Pittsburgh Pa.

(Pittsburgh Courier Press Service)

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—With the regional school plan still being bandied around in the South and the dearth of funds for the operation of private Negro colleges and universities growing worse, observers are beginning to feel that the private Negro colleges and universities may be forced to go under State control in order to continue operating.

Meharry Medical College is still in the spotlight for consideration in the program for "mass education" for Negroes, and Tuskegee Institute and Atlanta University both are also reportedly studying the regional school plan as a means to secure financial aid.

In Charleston, W. Va., last week, Dr. John W. Davis, president of West Virginia State College, expressed grave concern over the financial crisis which threatens private Negro educational institutions. He cited the placing of Morgan College, Baltimore, Md., and Wilberforce University of Ohio, under State control and operation, although the AME Church still maintains an institution at Wilberforce.

Dr. Davis declared that presidents of seventeen Negro land-grant colleges were in accord with his views on the subject that financial pressure is making it more and more difficult for the private institutions to keep their heads above water.

BECOME STATE WARDS

"The dollar crisis in the world today is liquidating the assets of the private colleges, Dr. Davis said, pointing out that presidents of such institutions "face the dilemma of either closing their doors or trying to become State institutions or of considering seriously the discriminating regional college plan."

But Dr. Davis excoriated the regional school plan as being something which "will saddle segregation on Negroes in the fields of higher education at a time when some States are turning away from racial segregation in education."

Here in Nashville, there have been no recent developments in the highly explosive regional school plan in which Meharry Medical College had been fitted as a key instrument to carry out the desires of Southern whites to keep Negroes from institutions so far open only to white students.

HELP FROM OUTSIDE

Some private institutions in the South have fairly good security in their substantial endowments and from support by the American Missionary Association and the General Education Board. There are few which have substantial endowments from private sources, but there is little doubt that there is a serious threat to the smaller schools which lack either of these types of support.

The changing pattern which focuses attention on the gradual trend away from segregation in some States and towards it in others, also offers a threat to funds derived from the Smith-Lever, the Smith-Hughes and the George-Dean acts of Congress, and allocated for extension, vocational and agricultural research.

Protest Langston Accreditation

Atlanta Daily World

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — (ANP) — The youth council of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People last Sunday voted to ask the senior NAACP group to take action in protest of the recent accreditation of Langston University by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

The youth group thinks Langston has not been improved enough to justify accreditation. They went on record signifying their "displeasure" after hearing the report North Central associaton examiners made on Langston.

Examiners visited Langston on January 8 and 9. The report, de tails of which had not been dis closed before Sunday, March 21, stated that the men spent two days talking "chiefly" with administra tive officers of the college.

Some faculty members also were interviewed it stated. In addition, they telephoned Gov. Turner and W. A. Nash, chancellor of the state regents for higher education concerning the school's physical properties and financial support expected to be given in the school in the future.

BUILDING PROGRESSES

The investigators said they were told that Langston's physical plant was bad but that a lot of building was in progress.

Fire protection seemed to be satisfactory,' the report asserted. Langston students claim the school has one army surplus fire engine which is not in running order.

The report set out that "remarkable improvement" has been made recently in library service adding that "with the exception of faculty and student use," the library stands "high" on all items considered.

Examiners also reported that the faculty rates on all counts, below the thirtieth percentile and that a large percentage of the faculty does not hold advanced degrees. Salaries are below par.

The tenure situation was termed excellent. No faculty members have been dismissed over a five year period, the report stated.

Some 500 persons attended the meeting Sunday at Calvary Baptist church.

Atlanta, Ga.

Sun. 7-25-48

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla.—The Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, has awarded Bethune-Cookman College a class "A" rating, which is the high est rating given an Institution by the Association.

President Richard V. Moore, in a special assembly, read a telegram from Dr. J. Henry Highsmith, Secretary of the Executive Committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, stating that the college had been approved as a four year class "A" col lege. The students and faculty cheered joyously at the announcement. Before the cheering had ceased, President Moore stated that the privilege of becoming an "A" rated college carries with it a corres ponding responsibility. He further stated that he was very desirous that everyone connected with the institution understands the responsibility.

$1,800,000 Provided for Its Construction

Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON—The College of Dentistry of Howard University has been accredited with full approval by the Council on Dental Education of the American Dental Association, according to an announcement in the March issue of the ADA Journal.

Dr. Russell A. Dixon, dean of the College of Dentistry, confirmed the report and stated that he had been officially notified of the accreditment by Dr. Harlan H. Horner, secretary of the Council on Dental Education.

The official report of the survey committee to Dean Dixon, stated, in part, that "Howard continues to enroll a high percentage of college graduates. She stood in the first four schools in this regard in the original survey (in June 1943) and apparently has not lost her place."

$1,800,000 Grant Voted

Dean Dixon added that within a few years the Dental School will be housed in a new building to be erected adjacent to the existing Medical School building. For this building, Congress authorized prior to July 1, 1947, appropriations totaling $1,847,910.

Dr. Dixon indicated further that the building co-ordinator, Julian Cook, has practically completed his work in connection with the plans and the actual process of construction will begin in the near future.

Sat. 3-27-48

$334,697.21 Granted

Dean Dixon stated further that "one of the most outstanding gifts that has come to any of the dental schools in America in recent years came from the late Dr. Louise C. Ball, New York dentist, who, for 20 years was a member of Howard University's board of trustees.

"Her everlasting interest in dental education was manifested in her gift of $334,697.21, especially, to the College of Dentistry of Howard University for postgraduate studies of its faculty and alumni," he pointed out.

Faculty Members Benefited

Two members of the faculty already receiving graduate training under Louise C. Ball Fellowship grants, are Dr. Harry M. McLinn, studying at Columbia University, and Dr. Norman H. C. Griffiths, taking courses at Northwestern University.

NEGRO BAN BACKED AT U. OF ALABAMA

Most Students Polled Oppose Entry—But 68% in Survey Favor Anti-Lynch Law

Sun. 8-22-48

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

UNIVERSITY, Ala., Aug. 21—The majority of the student body at the University of Alabama would oppose the opening of the institution's classrooms to Negroes, it was reported here today.

Student opinion on the question was sought in a survey conducted by a graduate student, under University auspices, among a representative sampling of graduates and undergraduates. The poll also covered two other civil rights issues.

Sixty-two per cent of the 835 students questioned would not be willing to see Negroes admitted, even if such a step were necessary to receive Federal funds. Thirty-three per cent said they "would be willing" under such circumstances and 5 per cent had no opinion.

Disregarding the matter of possible Federal funds, 50 per cent "would favor the admission of Negroes under no circumstances at the present time." Eighteen per cent would approve the admission of Negroes "without any segregation whatever," and the remaining 32 per cent would approve if varying degrees of segregation were enforced.

On the question, "Do you think that Congress should pass President Truman's Civil Rights Program as a whole?" 76 per cent answered negatively, 12 per cent affirmatively and 12 per cent expressed no opinion.

Nevertheless, answering separate questions, 68 per cent said they would favor passage of a Federal anti-lynching measure.

Forty-one per cent approved a Federal anti-poll-tax law, with 54 per cent opposed and 5 per cent undecided, but only 21 per cent voiced support for "a law to prevent race discrimination and segregation on interstate buses." Seventy-six per cent disapproved such a measure and 3 per cent had no opinion.

The third broad issue was that posed by the Boswell Amendment, an amendment to the Alabama Constitution approved two years ago which sets as a qualification for voting the ability to "understand and explain" any article of the United States Constitution.

Fifty-seven per cent of the students who knew of the amendment (80 per cent of the total polled) said they disapproved of it, 24 per cent approved it and 19 per cent had no opinion.

Jackson College Gets Class "A" Accreditation

Atlanta Daily World

Tues 12-7-48

JACKSON, Miss.—(SNS)— The Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools announced Monday, Dec., 6, that Jackson College has been awarded an A-rating

Atlanta, Ga.

The school is a state--supported teacher--training institution and was recognized by the rating group for utilizing the latest methods and techniques in its educational program.

Accreditment of Langston U. Does Not Make it Equal-Prexy

LANGSTON, Okla. — (ANP)— "Although Langston University has been accredited by the North Central Association, that does not automatically make it equal to Oklahoma University or every other accredited white school," Dr. G. L. Harrison, president, said last week following announcement of Langston's accreditment.

"The demand now for equality of opportunities for colored and white students in the field of higher education is just as great today as it was the day before Langston University was accredited," Dr. Harrison said.

Must Continue Fight

He urged all citizens of both races interested in securing equality of educational opportunity to continue the fight, especially in Oklahoma.

Dr. Harrison pointed out that the North Central Association has accredited only five colored secondary schools of 122 accredited schools in Oklahoma. He asked not only for work to achieve approval of colored schools by the association, but also that they "will be equal to secondary schools for whites."

Florida Normal Is Accredited

Florida Normal and Industrial College was accredited as a standard four-year college by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools according to an announcement by President John L. Tilley. The Baptist College at St. Augustine, Florida, was accredited as a Junior College in 1931. It operated as a Junior College until the fall of 1943 when it began work on the Senior College level. The first class to receive the B.S degree was graduated in the spring of 1945.

ALCORN COLLEGE RATING IS TOP 'A'

Southern Association Acts After Due Inquiry

(Special to The Times-Picayune)

McComb, Miss., Dec. 5. — Alcorn A. and M. college at Alcorn, Miss., one of Mississippi's two Negro owned and operated colleges and the oldest Negro land-grant college in the United States, has been awarded the top "A" rating by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

E. R. Jobe, executive secretary of the board of trustees of the Mississippi institutions of higher learning has been officially advised of this top rating which indicates that the Southern association after due investigation of the institution considers it to be in satisfactory order with regard to administration, salaries, instruction, physical plant and in service to the state.

Members of the committee of the board of trustees on "Negro education" which consists of Dr. W. M. Ivy, Meridian; J. O. Emmerich, McComb; Reese McLendon, Poplarville; Mrs. Janice Rice Taylor, Jackson, and H. G. Carpenter of Rolling Fork, regard this as a forceful rejoinder to those individuals outside the state who charge that Mississippi is not making progress with Negro education.

Improvements Made

Mr. Emmerich stated that within the past four years the operating budget of the Alcorn A & M college has nearly tripled, that the Legislature and the building commission have spent $1,500,000 in this period in an effort to improve the college and that another $150,000 has been earmarked to be used for an agricultural building to be constructed on the Alcorn campus. Since 1944 the Legislature has appropriated the sum of $375,000 for a new paved highway to the campus from Highway 61. The road is now completed. Other improvements include two brick dormitories for men, four apartment houses for students and faculty members, a farm show building, an annex to the trades school, two farm houses, a dairy barn and a heating plant valued at $100,000.

The campus streets have been paved and R. E. A. has been brought to the campus.

The operating budget has increased from $259,401 in 1944 to $572,000 as of today.

Similar progress has been achieved in the standing of the faculty. In 1944 there were teachers on the faculty who held no college degrees. Only a few with masters degree and none with the degree of doctor of philosophy were then on the faculty. Today the faculty is made up of members with 23 bachelor degrees, 21 master degrees and 4 with the degree of Ph. D. No teacher on the faculty today is without the basic college degree.

Enrollment Increases

Dr. W. H. Pipes has been the president during this four years of expansion and improvement during which time the enrollment leaped from 184 in 1944 to 850 in 1948. The president is a native of Mississippi and graduated from Tuskegee Institute He received his master's degree from Atlanta university where he wrote a thesis on the life of Booker T. Washington. He received his doctorate from the University of Michigan.

The recognition given his institution by the Southern Accrediting Association reflects the progress and advancement of the school under his supervision. The committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools which made the investigation at Alcorn campus before reporting to a recent Memphis meeting of the association included the following educators:

Dr. J. E. Bryan, superintendent of schools, Birmingham, Dr. M. C. D'Argonne, dean of graduate school, Xavier university, New Orleans, Professor J. Martin school of agriculture, Mississippi State college, and Dr. P. H. Easom, state agent in charge of Negro education of Mississippi state department of education.

LOUISVILLIAN TELLS HOW ROOSEVELT COLLEGE IS CARRYING OUT THE IDEALS OF DEMOCRACY

The Courier Journal magazine.
Louisville, Ky.

ROOSEVELT COLLEGE, in Chicago, is the youngest, yet the lustiest, college in the United States. Less than three years ago —in 1945—it consisted of a faculty, and nothing else. Since then, it has boomed to a school of more than 5,000 students, a faculty of more than 220 and a 10-story building of its own on the beautiful Chicago Lake Front. It is fully accredited. 14e(1)

One member of the faculty is Miss Sara Landau, formerly of Louisville, who is assistant professor of economics at Roosevelt. Miss Landau formerly taught economics at the University of Louisville, later worked for the Office of Price Administration and the Treasury Department. After the war, she went to Simmonds College, in Boston, where she was teaching when she joined the Roosevelt College faculty. She is a sister of Miss Mathilda Landau, Cumberland Apartments, a teacher in the Louisville public schools.

According to Miss Landau, Roosevelt College is more than just a young and fast-growing institution. It is a college organized along the most democratic lines of any major institution of learning in the country, and is set up in such a way as to provide both faculty and students with the utmost freedom of expression. Sun. J. 22. 48

Roosevelt College got its start when Dr. Edward J. Sparling, now its president, broke with the old Central Y. M. C. A. College in Chicago over that school's proposal to admit students from minority religious and racial groups on a quota basis. In the schism that followed, Dr. Sparling led most of the faculty away from the Central Y. M. C. A. College, which went out of business. As a result, Roosevelt College was formed.

FROM the causes of its founding, the rallying cry of Roosevelt College became "no racial discrimination." Miss Landau points out that this is the most readily noticeable way in which Roosevelt differs from other colleges. For entrance, she says, a student "must be eligible for college entrance based upon scholastic rules. Neither his application blank nor his registration cards ask for his religious preference, national background, racial group, 'mother's maiden name,' or the 'names of all four grandparents.' The latter two are more recent refinements of extrascholastic information required by a number of colleges and universities, particularly in the East."

As a result, The New York Times reports, "a visitor to a typical class commented that that were Chinese, Japanese, Negroes, Levantines, Jews, Catholics and Down East Yankees. It would surprise only a first visitor, for the faculty also is representative of many peoples and most creeds, including Hindu and Chinese."

Says Miss Landau: "The students I now have are the most challenging, the most argumentative, the most alert I have ever had. Maybe the times have something to do with this. More likely, it is the feeling of their rights as persons which makes so many students in each class wish to question or add to a discussion."

THIS heterogeneity is evident not only among the students, but among members of the board of trustees as well. On the 21-man board are representatives of labor, management, capital, public administration, education, the professions, the social services and the press.

Roosevelt is a self-governing institution, free of partisan or sectarian control. Five members of the board are members of the faculty, elected to the board by the faculty, an unusually democratic arrangement. The board elects the president, who every three years must submit to a vote of confidence of the entire faculty. The president appoints the deans, who similarly must submit to regular votes of confidence on the part of the faculty. In this way, the president and the board can be apprised of the feelings of the faculty.

Even selection of teachers is different. Miss Landau reveals that her experience in being elected to the faculty was far different from any she had ever had before.

"Heretofore," she said, "I have been interviewed by a president and/or a dean with or without a personal interview with the head of a department. At Roosevelt College, after some correspondence with the dean of the faculties and a personal interview with the president himself, no appointment was possible until I was elected by the department itself."

There are no interscholastic athletics at Roosevelt, but the school does carry on a season program of intramural sports. Students are given opportunities to take part in various sports. They are allowed to form groups of all kinds—intellectual, athletic, social, or hobby-type—so long as their organization is in harmony with the guiding principle on which Roosevelt was founded—they must be open "to all alike without discrimination on any basis except that of individual merit and community of interest." Clubs like the Photography Club and the Psychology Club have been formed, and two forums have been organized. The school has a newspaper and a Little Theater.

Roosevelt also tries to serve the community, and the college sponsors many programs in which group interests are manifested.

THE college was named, at the request of the student body, for President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

As a university, it is different without consciously striving to be different, aside from following the democratic ideals that led to its founding. But there is one outstanding way in which Roosevelt College is different, Miss Landau writes. "There is a feeling of living in a free world which can be matched in few schools in this or any other country, as far as I knew them. This does not mean that every faculty member and every student is liberal, tolerant or a near-god. But there is no sense of fear. There is assurance that your colleagues who differ with you also respect you as an individual and as a fellow citizen. Students, too, differ with each other and with some of us from time to time. But freedom from fear is here, and freedom of speech is here, and freedom of assembly is here."

Right now, Roosevelt College is conducting a campaign to raise $3,000,000 to renovate the Auditorium Building, which it has taken over, and to provide scholarship funds. J. L.

A MEMBER of the faculty of Roosevelt College, Miss Sara Landau, formerly of Louisville, is proud of the way it is operated.

A college for human beings

JWV's Picture News

WE HAD THE HAPPY EXPERIENCE, last week, of hearing the president of an American college tell us that there are no statistics on the percentage of Negroes, Jews, Orientals or other minorities enrolled in his institution. "We don't count people that way," he said, "but I can tell you how many human beings are enrolled."

The college president is Dr. Edward James Sparling, a tall, humorous, robust man with a springy step and an air of inexhaustible vitality. The college is Roosevelt College, Chicago, named after Franklin D. and one of the few institutions of higher learning in the U. S. A. that doesn't have a quota system. New York, N.Y.

We met Dr. Sparling and his wife at the Hotel Biltmore while they were here on a visit. Roosevelt College, he told us, was founded in 1945 after Dr. Sparling, then president of Chicago's Central YMCA College, and 80 per cent of his faculty had resigned in protest against discriminatory practices in that institution. 3-21-48

To make sure that the same discriminatory practices would never exist at Roosevelt, its board of directors had been carefully assembled to include Negroes as well as whites; Catholics, Protestants and Jews; representatives of labor as well as capital; and representatives from the judiciary, social services and the field of education. It had also been decided that the president of the college and its deans must appear before the faculty for a vote of confidence every three years. "If they don't like the way we're running things," Dr. Sparling said with a smile, "they can throw us out."

Higher IQs, lower fees

Dr. Sparling spoke with enthusiasm of his student body of 5400, who, he said, hail from high schools in 48 different states and 25 foreign countries. The age level of Roosevelt's students, he went on, is a year or two higher than in most colleges because many of its students lost time working to earn money to finance their educations. Their average IQ level is also higher—by some 15 per cent.

Tuition at Roosevelt College is low—$300 a year, though the Government will pay up to $500 for ex-GIs. The low tuition is based on a precept set forth by the Brookings Institute, of which Dr. Sparling approves wholeheartedly: the finest possible product at the lowest possible cost for the widest possible distribution. Yet money received for tuition pays for 91 per cent of the total cost of a Roosevelt student's education. The rest is drawn from a fund created by contributions.

Dr. Sparling then told us some of the incidents in his life which he considered milestones in the formation of his philosophy. He and his seven brothers and sisters were born on a small farm in Panoche, Cal. Because their father was not overly affluent, the boys had to work to help pay their school expenses. Afternoons and during vacations, Edward worked in prune and apricot orchards where he came to know, love and respect many members of minority groups - Portuguese, Japanese and Mexicans.

When he was 16 and had been graduated from high school, Edward got a job in a box factory. He plunged into his task with vigor and hadn't been there for more than a few hours when one of the workmen told him, "Slow up. You're working too fast." He was puzzled by this directive. At lunch time he went to the workman and asked him, "Why?" 3-21-48

"Because we've got wives and children to support and if we work too fast we work ourselves right into a layoff," the workman said. New York, N.Y.

Edward went to the president of the company and said, "There's something very wrong here. It hurts the integrity of the men to be forced into deception." When the executive asked what Dr. Sparling thought should be done about it he said: "The plant needs repairs and painting. It would be improved by the planting of some trees and shrubs. The men could do that when they have finished their regular work." His suggestion, as it happened, was well received and the story ended happily. But what stuck with him was a conviction about the necessity of job security. Roosevelt College now has a Labor Education Division in addition to a full liberal arts curriculum.

When he was assistant director of personnel at Long Island University, Dr. Sparling learned much about the blatant inequality of opportunity in institutions of learning. There were two boys, both Jewish, and both eager to go into medicine. One was born in Russia and spoke with a noticeable accent, but was a sincere and brilliant student with a true vocation. When he was graduated Dr. Sparling wrote recommending him to 35 different medical schools. None would accept him.

The other boy, American born and with an Anglicized name, had chosen the profession of medicine more haphazardly. He was graduated with such low grades that Dr. Sparling did not feel that he could recommend him to a medical school. This boy, however, was accepted in one of the best schools in the country, and without benefit of recommendation from his university. He had given his religion as Scotch Presbyterian. Sun. 3-21-48

Educator Finds Democracy Is a Spiritual Thing

The Post Washington, D.C. Sun. 6-6-48

By Fred M. Hechinger

NEW YORK, June 5.—People are more important than institutions. In education, the buildings are necessary props, but their content and spirit depend on the men and women inside. Few men could demonstrate those truths more dramatically than Dr. Edward J. Sparling, president of Roosevelt College in Chicago.

SPARLING

Within little over two years the success of that college has become an all-American legend. But last week, after an exclusive conference with Dr. Sparling, I understood the personal force behind an institution which has literally grown out of democratic protest against restrictions, discrimination and provincialism. Sun. 6-6-48

Success has not tempered Dr. Sparling's idealism. He refuses to regard the nonbias college as anything but the advance platoon in a development which the President's Commission on Higher Education foreshadows on a national basis.

Translating its principles into action, Roosevelt College has not only rejected all traces of quotas in admission, but has outlawed segregated fraternities, opened all facilities to all students, and introduced the constitutional system of "checks and balances" into its own administration.

Man of Confidence

The Post

DR. SPARLING is a man of confidence. He radiates unshakable belief in the workability of democratic principles. The predictions that Roosevelt College would become "all-Negro," "all-Jewish," "all-Italian" or "Communist" turned out to be as fantastic as some of the smear campaigns directed at the growing institution during the first few weeks of its struggle. After six months the college became fully accredited. The University of Chicago took a look at its young "competitor" and offered a welcome hand of brotherly cooperation. Washington, D.C.

Meanwhile, the faculty—at first uncertain where its next paycheck would come from—has grown from 84 to 311. The number of courses has increased from 242 to 703. And in the historic auditorium building on Michigan ave., 5600 students are now working toward their degrees.

"Hatred based on race, religion or culture is a serious matter in our community," says Dr. Sparling, looking at Chicago. "We have counteracted that prejudice at all levels. Our weapon has been education. In our laboratory of democracy, students are rediscovering the meaning of liberty. There is no clash between cultures, between races, between colors." Sun. 6-6-48

Teacher Training

DR. SPARLING talks with particular concern about teacher training. "We know that children come into this world without prejudice. But nothing is easier to exalt in a child's mind than racial and national pride. This is absorbed by children as gospel and results in hostility to those who do not share their identical faith or origin."

Unemotional realism helps Dr. Sparling in dealing with another current problem. When a small minority group of students invited a Communist speaker, he made no attempt to interfere. The audience was small and polite, but skeptical. When the speaker made the familiar charge that freedom of speech does not exist in America, the students just laughed: they—with the help of their president—had effectively contradicted his words.

The answer, of course, is that Dr. Sparling has created the atmosphere of democracy in which no totalitarian dogma can maintain itself. Firm belief in the American ideal of equality and freedom has become an effective defense against "infiltration."

A Suggestion 6-6-48

CONVINCED that radicalism thrives on "gripe publicity," Dr. Sparling found it easy to deal with a handful of students who recently wanted to participate in a political parade. He told them that he thought their action unwise and harmful to the college. But he also emphasized that he had no intention to interfere. Before the disappointed "delegation" left his office, he suggested that they determine by "scientific investigation" whether their agitation was justified.

The students never marched. "If I had prohibited the demonstration, they would have carried picket signs in protest and others would have joined the demonstration without knowing the issue," said Dr. Sparling. It's time for us to realize that Communists thrive on the publicity they get by pretending that they are defending liberty. The Post

As to the future of democracy, Dr. Sparling permits no doubts. But to assure its victory over all foes, education must be made truly democratic. "Education alone can eliminate the jealousies and fears which move men to hate," he says. Washington, D.C.

Dr. Sparling has never been afraid of the difficulties which often stand in the way of high ideals. But at times he is frankly puzzled by the intellectual dishonesty of small minds who try to block the process of democratic education. Then he smiles, shakes his head and simply shrugs: "I guess I am too naive and innocent." Sun. 6-6-48

London Interested In U. S. Negroes

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Va.

By PROF. ST. CLAIR DRAKE
(For ANP)

(Editor's Note — Prof. Drake is on leave to England from Roosevelt College, under a Rosenwald fellowship, to make a study of colored people living in Europe.)

THEY REALLY LIKED US:

Principally I am in England to study the impression the colored GI made on the English. Everywhere I went last summer, and everywhere I go now, the surface reaction is the same —people commenting on how polite the boys were, how nice to children and old folks, what good dancers, what experts at finding supplementary rations for their English friends, etc. If they were really this "good," leaving out the extra rations angle, the Courier and Urban League had better round up ex-GIs to spark their "better conduct" campaigns.

A TIP TO EDITORS:

Please kill those phoy stories about 10,000 colored war babies over here, and the chartered boats that are to sail into New York with 5,000 of them for adoption. The National Negro Publishers Association should post a $5,000 reward for anybody who can find even 2,000 such babies in England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

HILDA'S HERE, SO'S JOE:

Anna Lucasta has been a smash hit for weeks at His Majesty's Theatre in London. Hilda Sims is a favorite of the Negro intellectuals for the brains that go with her beauty.

Joe Louis is front page news also these days. He arrived recently to give a series of boxing exhibitions. A headline in London's Evening Standard of Feb. 18, said:

"Joe Louis Gets 2 Flats in London." It also commented, "The Louis party will occupy four first-class staterooms in the best part of Queen Mary's main deck . . . Joe is confident he will be allotted enough petrol (gas) for his $16,000 Cadillac limousine .. . he's sure arrangements will be made." The story was later killed for another; "Joe says 'If the English can do without, so can I.'"

NOT CLAUDE AND JASPER BOTH!

I ducked into a downtown London newsreel theater the other night with George Padmore, Defender columnist. Suddenly he heard an Harlem accent advising that we all needed chest X-rays. (We'd forgotten the screen during a third rate cowboy short and were discussing "racial politics.") Up we looked, and there he was—one of the "stateside" racial brothers, surrounded by colored nurses and doctors, just lecturing to that English audience from the screen on TB and X-rays. And then, what do you think? The scene shifts to Claude A. Barnett of the Associated Negro Press and a bunch of other prominent Negroes. Even George's eyes bucked, I think.

You guessed it—an All-American newsreel on Negro life. Would I ever see this on Broadway or even Main street, at home? Congrats, British theatres, but I'll have to withhold the Oscar until you drop those darn Jasper-Scarecrow Blackbirds things featuring what is supposed to be a cute "pickaninny" with rolling eyes.

MARGARET COMES HOME:

This is not a story of Princess Margaret Rose, but of an earnest, hard-working English girl who loved a Negro GI enough to take all of her savings and go to him in Virginia. Reynold News, a co-op paper, carried a headline last Sunday. "I Met Negro Sweetheart in Secret: Deported Woman Asks Him to Leave U. S. For England."

This seems to be a story of love, hate, ignorance and prejudice, plus fear—a woman's great love; some fellow's plain dumbness in having her go to Virginia; a prospective mother-in-law, who according to Margaret, was hard to get along with; then a jail sentence for the man and girl; and deportation back to England.

The fear part? Well, I haven't heard of any Negro or left-wing organization in America raising its voice in loud and vigorous protest over the fascist law that made this tragedy possible, or the rough way Margaret was treated. Granted that an attack on the South's intermarriage laws is not Negro America's first business, but when a case like this arises, we should raise some noise about it.

And remember, this could have happened in Indiana and a number of other northern and western states. Full democracy means a man has the right to associate with and marry any woman he thinks he can get along with. Are our leaders, even the northern ones, still afraid to stand this ground?

The English whites don't care too much for intermarriage, but I think they find it hard to understand our making laws against it—that is 'till I remind them of South Africa. In London itself, its rather refreshing to see the matter-of-fact way people view mixed couples or mixed families. No charge for the lecture.

DR. J. A. RUSSELL

St. Paul's Polytechnic Institute Accredited By State Of Virginia, Ready For Association

Not Affected By Move Of Church Council To Take Over Work Of American Church Institute

ST. PAUL'S POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE, at Lawrenceville, Virginia, St. Augustine's College, at Raleigh, N. C., Voorhees, at Denmark, S. C., and Fort Valley, in Georgia and five other Episcopal schools will not be affected adversely in their rating or otherwise by the recent announcement that these schools are to be probed by the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States.

The nine schools named in the newspaper article several weeks ago have received some support yearly from the American Church Institute which was created some years ago by the Protestant Episcopal Church for the specific purpose of aiding in the operation and maintenance of the Church School.

In Virginia, St. Paul's Polytechnic Institute, founded 60 years ago by the late Archdeacon James S. Russell, is one of the two Episcopal schools in the group named. The other in Virginia is Bishop Payne Divinity School at Petersburg. St. Paul's Polytechnic Institute is now headed by the Rev. Dr. J. Alvin Russell, son of the founder.

READY FOR ACCREDITATION

The newspaper article stated that St. Paul's is accredited as a four-year college by the State Department of Education in the following areas: teacher-training and elementary education; home economics, agriculture, and trade and industrial education. In each of the foregoing fields St. Paul's gives the bachelor of science degree.

ALUMNI PRESENT CHECK FOR $25,000

While St. Paul's does not have an adequate library building at the present time, it is in possession of the necessary books and library requirements for accreditation. At the recent observance of the 60th anniversary of St. Paul's, the Alumni Association presented the school with a check for $25,000 raised among the alumni and friends of the school.

The alumni has raised a total of almost $30,000 for the purpose of erecting a library building. It is expected that additional funds needed for the construction of this building will be in hand in the not too distant future.

St. Paul's is proceeding with the construction of a modern refectory, for which it has funds in hand.

At the last meeting of the board, which was in April, administrative and teachers' salaries at St. Paul's were brought up to a point which will facilitate accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges.

OPERATION OF SCHOOL NOT IN QUESTION

The operation of St. Paul's Institute from an administrative standpoint is not in question, as far as the proposed "probe" is concerned affecting the nine church schools. As a matter of fact, it is the American Chhrch Instithte that is in question. It is the failure of the American Church Institute to achieve satisfactory results in its relations to the schools that has brought it in question and which, will in all probability, result in the National Council taking over the work formerly done by the Church Institute.

Penn School Will Change Curricula

Pittsburgh Pa.

ST. HELENA ISLAND, S. C.—Penn Normal, Industrial and Agricultural School will discontinue its program of formal education at the end of this school year, and focus its efforts on a program of rural community work including vocational training for veterans.

The Penn School Board's decision to turn the formal educational responsibility over to the public school authorities was founded on a recent survey directed by Dr. Ira DeA. Reid, chairman of the department of sociology at Atlanta University.

SURVEYED BY EXPERT

Dr. Reid was assisted by a staff of specialists in education, including Dr. J. Curtis Dixon, executive director of the Southern Education Foundation.

The findings of the survey indicated that adequate public education facilities could be made available for the Negro children of the Sea Islands, and recommended the shift to a program of private-public cooperation in adult education and other community work.

Penn School's background and history goes back to 1862, when Miss Laura Towne of Philadelphia and Miss Ellen Murray came to the Sea Islands immediately after the fall of Port Royal and worked among the liberated people on the plantations and founded the school.

Shorter College

Bishop Fountain Leads Educational Improvement Plan

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—Sixty-two years after its founding here in 1886, Shorter College, an AME institution, is graduating from a junior college to a four-year institution, and merging with Flipper-Key-Davis College of Tallahassee, Okla., through action of the Arkansas-Oklahoma Planning Conference of the AME Church under Bishop W. A. Fountain Sr.

The announcement was made here last week, shortly after Bishop Fountain had made his initial visit to Arkansas where he was assigned as presiding Bishop by the last AME General Conference, after having been chancellor of Morris Brown College, Atlanta, Ga., for twenty-eight years.

INTRODUCED BY CLAYBORN

Bishop Fountain was introduced to the AME clergy and laymen by Bishop J. H. Clayborn, Little Rock resident Bishop, who presides over Tennessee and Kentucky.

Approximately $67,000 was allocated to Shorter College by the AME Church for the repair and revamping of college buildings, while the merger was under considefation.

Conference action directed that the AME diocese of Arkansas and Oklahoma pool educational funds for the support of Shorter which had an enrollment of 700 last term Flipper-Key-Davis College, founded in 1916, had an enrollment of 800. The merged institution will open in September with the enrollment expected to be around the 1,200 figure.

$100,000 PROGRAM

The conference voted to support a $100,000 educational program which Bishop Fountain recommended with an eye towards securing accreditation for the school by the Arkansas and North Central Association.

A bi-State Congress of Religious Workers will be held under conference auspices at Muskogee, Okla., Aug. 31-Sept. 4, it was also announced.

OFFERS SOLUTION TO SCHOOL ISSUE

The Times-Picayune
New Orleans
1948
(The Associated Press) Feb.

Atlanta, May 11.—A Southwide bi-racial committee of social workers, educators and business men has recommended opening of all Southern schools to Negroes.

The action came at a meeting of representatives from some 37 schools and organizations here Saturday and followed rejection of support for the proposed regional education plan. Wed.

Under this plan the various Southern states would set up a school for Negroes on the professional and graduate level to meet requirements that Negroes are entitled to the same educational facilities as whites. 5-12-48

The objection to the regional school was that it would provide continuance of discrimination, racial and educational.

The committee held the only solution to the problem of providing equal educational opportunities for Negroes would be to open white schools to all races.

Represented at the meeting were such widely divergent groups as the Young Women's Christian Association, the Southern Regional Council, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, teachers' associations and the Atlanta Housing Authority. 5-12-48

'Ignorance Bill' Footed by South, Educator Says

The Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.

SAVANNAH—The South is paying a terrific "ignorance bill" today because the present educational program is not geared to the understanding and needs of the people Dr. John Ivey, Jr., Executive Director of the Regional Council for Education, told a group of Southern educators here yesterday. Mon. 12-13-48

There is a big gap between what the people now know and do and what they could do if they used the scientific knowledge available at the fingertips of their scientists," Ivey said. "Until the competency of the people is developed so they can take advantage of their ntaural resources, the South will continue to pay a big ignorance bill."

Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools

New Officers of College and School Association

Here are the new officers of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, elected at the 15th annual session of the association at Wilmington, N.C. Left to right they are: I. B Bryant, first vice-president, principal of Booker T. Washington High School, Houston, Texas Dr. Albert W. Dent, president, head of Dillard University, New Orleans; L. S. Cozart, secretary-treasurer, president of Barber Scotia College, Concord, N.C., and George Gore, second vice-president, dean of A. and I. College, Nashville.

Educators Put Governors Spokesman on Hot Seat

Admits Plan By-Passes Gaines Decision; Dr. Lanier Urges 'Education for Democracy'

By DOUGLASS HALL

WILMINGTON, N. C.—Reiteration and confirmation of its unanimous opposition to the establishment of "segregated" regional schools, first voted last year, was one of six major resolutions adopted by the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools at its 15th annual meeting here Dec. 8-10.

Other resolutions urged:

"Immediate passage of a bill providing for Federal aid to education; pledged full support toward implementing President Truman's Civil Rights program; endorsed and asked early implementation of the report of the President's Commission on Higher Education;

Encouraged by 5 States

"Recorded the association's encouragement by the action of certain States—Delaware, West Virginia, Maryland, Arkansas and Oklahoma — which have made some progress in providing colored students with graduate and professional education in State universities formerly attended only by white students; and

"Demanded that colored people have adequate representation on local, State and national committees and agencies where their educational, political and social interests are involved, and that such representatives be chosen by the people most concerned rather than by political appointment."

Clarifies Position on Plan

The full text of the important resolution on the Regional Plan follows:

"Whereas the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools believes (as voted at its meeting at Prairie View College last year) that the principal of regional cooperation and regional schools in some graduate and professional schools to be sound, provided they are not established upon the basis of racial segregation;

"And whereas, the Regional Council on Education, according to report, proposes to establish regional schools providing separate higher and professional facilities for white and colored students;

"Therefore be it resolved that this association reiterate and confirm its unanimous opposiiotn to the establishment of such regional schools as undemocratic, and pedagogically unsound; and will refuse to co-operate in this endeavor as long as the principle and practice of racial segregation are adhered to.

"And be it further resolved that this association urge the Regional Council on Education to reconsider and rescind its reported decision to establish its regional schools upon a racially segregated basis."

Vote to Discuss Issue

The Southern Governors regional plan was discussed thoroughly at an unscheduled session on Thursday and produced "fireworks" which almost forced an adjournment less than half an hour after the debate started.

While William J. McGlothlin, associate director, Regional Council for Education, Inc., was in the midst of explaining the controversial Governors' Plan, Dr. Rufus Clement, president of Atlanta University, asked if the council had discussed "race" in its planning and spoke in favor of "immediate adjournment.

S. E. Duncan, president of the association, pointed out that the schedule called for a bus tour.

Dr. B. W. Doyle, dean of Louisville (Ky.) Municipal College saved the situation with the statement that the group "was interested in discussing the Regional Plan," and moved to postpone the bus tour and hear the plan in session. His motion was passed unanimously.

Governors' Aide Explains

Mr. McGlothin told the colored educators:

"The Regional Plan will follow State statutes and court decisions regarding admission of students to various schools . . . The Regional Council is not an institution to end or perpetuate segregation."

Asks Co-operation

He appealed to the group to "take part in the planning of regional education," stating that the Regional Council was making progress in getting this co-operation.

He assured his listeners that "colored persons will have ample representation" at the council's meeting which opened last Friday in Savannah, Ga.

However, the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools will not have a representative at the meeting. "So far, it has refused to accept such invitations," President Duncan declared.

Not a single person defended the plan, and Mr. McGlothlin was the target of some blistering questions and retorts during the question period.

'Let Meharry Die'

When he stated that the Regional Plan "was about the only means" of saving Meharry Medical School, "since donors are not giving as in years passed," then asked, "Do you want Meharry to die?" one of the educators retorted:

"If Meharry is not performing service that merits its living, let it die! We want to be admitted to schools in the South on an unsegregated basis. Other Southern States should follow the example of Arkansas."

Bucks Gaines's Case

Dr. A. G. Macklin of Virginia State College asked, "Does the Regional Plan square off with the Supreme Court's decision in the historic Gaines Case?"

Mr. McGlothlin replied: "It does not. But it will reach that point if we work together. Already, I am informed, Southern white deans have voted to admit colored deans to their association. That is what will happen if we meet and work together."

Will Keep Segregation

Another educator asked: "Why is it that the Regional Council desires to perpetuate segregation in the South when many organizations in the region are making moves to eliminate it?"

Mr. McGlothlin answered: "I think that these institutions should continue their work. It happens that we (the Regional Council) are not interested in ending segregation."

Integration Untenable

L. S. Cozart, president of Barber Scotia College, Concord, N.C., posed this one: "Does the Regional Council intend setting up educational policies free of segregation?"

Mr. McGlothlin said: "I don't know, but I don't think that the council will take up the fight against segregation. I do not see the council as denouncing segregation as long as the individual States served by it upholds it."

Another educator asked: "What if the majority of persons affected by the Regional Plan do not accept it?"

Mr. McGlothlin replied: "That would make planning very difficult."

Other Participants

Dr. R. O'Hara Lanier, president of Texas University, who made the principal address at the opening session said "education should be for democracy," and urged the development of "a culture of excellence."

Mayor E. I. White and Superintendent of Schools H. M. Roland welcomed the educators at Williston Industrial High School, F. J. Rogers, principal, where the 3-day session was held.

Dent New President

Albert W. Dent, president of Dillard University, New Orleans, president; I. B. Bryant, principal, Booker T. Washington High School, Houston, 1st vice-president; George Gore, A. and I. College, Tenn., 2nd vice president; L. S. Cozart, president, Barber Scotia College, Concord, N.C., secretary-treasurer.

Named to the executive board were S. E. Duncan, high school supervisor in North Carolina; Frank Decosta, South Carolina State College, and Fred J. Rogers, host principal here.

The next annual meeting will be held at Bethune-Cookman College, Daytona Beach, Fla., Dec. 7-9, 1949.

This committee spent the entire day conferring with students and following a thorough inspection made of the various farm units, physical plant, and service to the state. This committee voted unanimously to recommend Alcorn College for "A" rating. They complimented the administration at Alcorn and the State for the many improvements which have been made thru December 3rd, awarded the Alcorn A. and M. College. This is the highest rating that the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools has possible and declares that a college is of the first order.

The following committee of Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools spection of Alcorn College on November 3rd to 3rd

Dr. H. Easom, State Agent, Negro Education, Mississippi Department of Education.

Dr. J. E. Bryan, Supt. of Schools, Birmingham, Ala.

Dixie Sociologists Favor Admitting Negroes To Colleges

NEW ORLEANS, July 18—(UP)—Southern sociologists were said today to favor college admission of Negroes on equal terms with whites in graduate and professional schools.

Aubrey Williams, president of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., reported on that a survey of 240 members of the Southern Sociological society. It resulted in approval by 71 per cent of admission of Negroes on an equal basis.

The poll gave the following results, Williams said:

Admit Negroes to graduate schools when the desired courses are not available in state schools for Negroes—71 per cent.

Admit Negroes, but keep them segregated—none.

Set up new graduate schools for Negroes—four per cent.

Establish regional schools for Negroes as proposed by the Southern Governors conference—23 per cent.

The first plan, Williams said, was more strongly supported because the sociologists believe it "more Democratic, more economical and more practical."

Social Scientists Vote To End Graduate School J'Crow

The Lighthouse and Informer
Columbia, S.C.

NEW ORLEANS, La.—"Three out of four social scientists of the South favor the elimination now of racial segregation in graduate and professional schools," according to Aubrey Williams, President of the Southern Conference Educational Fund.

"The results of an opinion poll of 240 members of the Southern Sociological Society conducted by the Southern Conference Educational Fund show that only one in four of the social scientists favor the proposal of the Southern Governors for segregated, regional schools for Negroes."

"In recent months," stated Mr. Williams, "Southern institutions in response to decisions of the United States Supreme Court, have revised their policies along four different lines: Plan A of the University of Delaware eliminating segregation in the graduate school when the desired courses were not offered in state schools for Negroes; Plan B of the University of Arkansas admitting Negroes to its law school, but with segregation.

Plan C. of Oklahoma setting up a new three-teacher law school, but thus far with no students; and Plan D of the Southern Governors calling for the establishment of segregated, regional schools for Negroes."

"The Southern Conference Educational Fund wanted to know, said Mr. Williams, "which of these four plans was most acceptable to the most impartial and best qualified group of experts in the South. It was assumed that the members of the Southern Sociological Society met these qualifications.

"Seventy-one per cent of those who replied were for Plan A eliminating segregation. Four per cent found none of the plans acceptable. There were no votes for Plans B or C. Among the reasons for supporting Plan A there were 3 that appeared most frequently: "more democratic," "more economical," and more "practical." A number of those voting for Plan D said they thought that Plan A was the long-time goal but was not "practical" at the moment."

Southern U. To Operate Radio Station On Campus

BATON ROUGE, La—President Felton G. Clark of Southern University announced that the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System has admitted Southern University to membership. Southern is the first Negro college to achieve this recognition and will be registered with the Federal Communications Commission.

The campus radio station equipment was assembled and installed by students in the dapartment of radio electronics under the direction of Jesse F. Murray. Students will operate the new station and will receive training in both the technical and program phases of radio.

'Christian' College Admits Negroes On 'Leper' Scale

DALLAS, Tex.—A Southern Methodist University official last week hastened to correct "an erroneous" statement made several days before by a Negro educator that the school had dropped its color ban.

Dr. Eugene Hawk, SMU administrative vice-president, said emphatically that there are no Negroes enrolled in the school. His statement was in reply to laudatory remarks about the school made by Dr. George D. Kelsey, director of the school of religion at Morehouse College, Atlanta, while speaking in Austin, Tex., the previous weekend.

Dr. Kelsey nad said that SMU had admitted about eight Negro students to its school of religion and one to its school of engineering. Dr. Hawk made it plain that such is not the case. He said that for about two years SMU has been conducting separate afternoon classes in the school of theology for Negroes, declaring:

"These Negroes are not enrolled in SMU, they pay no fees, they get no college credits. Our instructors handle these classes outside their regular schedule. Most of the Negroes in these separate classes have degrees and we are teaching them because we want to do something to help the leadership of the Negro race."

Atlanta, Ga.

At the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of Spelman College (67 year old institution for Negro women in Atlanta, Ga.) this group elected as new members Mrs Catherine Hughes Waddell of New York City and Mrs. Sadye Harris Powell of Atlanta.

Sun.

The first-named, a daughter of former Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, is a graduate of Wellesley College and an active member in the Wellesley College Alumnae Association. She serves as chairman of the Woman's Committee of the United Negro College Fund, and recently was elected to the Board of Directors of this organization. Mrs. Waddell is the mother of two sons, one of whom is a junior at Cornell University. 4-18-48

Mrs. Powell is owner and superintendent of the Harris Memorial Hospital of Atlanta, one of the few modern and well-equipped institutions of its kind in the city.

A graduate of Spelman High School and Provident Hospital and Training School, Chicago, she was formerly head nurse at the Fair Haven Hospital in Atlanta. Mrs. Powell is active in programs of social welfare in Atlanta. She was chosen Woman of the Year in Business in 1943 by the 27 Club of Atlanta and was cited as "a distinguished citizen, a community builder and outstanding benefactor." During 1947 she headed the campaign for the Anti-Tuberculosis Association.

Majority of Texas Students Favor Admittance of Negroes

Seventeen Student Bodies Join Campaign to Support Sweatt's Application for Law School

AUSTIN, Tex.—A clear majority of the students at the University of Texas favor the admission of Negroes to the Graduate School, an authoritative poll has revealed.

The Student Opinion Survey, directed by Dr. J. R. Stockton, professor of business statistics, asked this question of a carefully selected cross-section of the students at the all-white University: "Would you favor Negroes being admitted to the University campus to study in Graduate School?" The results were as follows:

	For	Against	Don't Know
Men	54.9%	39.9	5.2
Women	61.5	36.2	2.3
All	56.6	39.1	4.3

A great deal of support from white students has been given Mr. W. Astor Kirk, Negro professor of government at Samuel Huston College, in his application for admission to the University of Texas Graduate School. Mr. Kirk desires to complete his work for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Political Science.

Previously a mass campaign in support of Mr. Heman Marion Sweatt in his celebrated fight to enter the University of Texas Law School also swept the student body, gaining the support of seventeen student organizations, and culminating in the formation of a chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People on the campus.

The Sweatt case is being appealed to the United States Supreme Court.

Outstanding in the fight to win white student support for the determined effort of the Negro people of Texas to end Jim Crow in education have been the various religious groups, the American Veterans Committee, the Common Sense Club, and the Communist Party.

GOOD NEWS FROM TEXAS

SAN ANTONIO (INR correspondent)

San Antonio politicians are frantically searching for a way to invalidate the election of G. J. Sutton, a Negro undertaker and member of Henry Wallace's New Party organization, to the board of the all-white San Antonio Junior College. This is believed to be the first election of a Negro to a countywide office since the poll tax took effect in Texas in 1933. The president of the college board, W. W. McAllister, has asked county and district judges to check the accuracy of the 79-vote margin Sutton scored on the voting machines.

Sutton was elected by a coalition of Negro and Latin American votes which also swept Gus Garcia, an attorney, onto the San Antonio Independent School District Board. Garcia, who is attorney for the League of United Latin American Citizens, was high man among seven candidates for two places on the public-school board. He also defeated an incumbent supported by the county machine. This is the first time that either board has had a Negro or Latin American member. (Latin American is the term used in San Antonio for US citizens of Mexican ancestry.)

SAN ANTONIO MEXICANS AND NEGROES UNITE POLITICAL STRENGTH AND PLACE MINORITY REPRESENTATIVE ON CITY BOARD OF TRUSTEES

CAST LARGEST VOTE IN PRECINCT HISTORY

Alliance Called For Latin-Americans to Support Black Candidate And Negroes Supporting Mexican—"This is Power" Says Writer

SAN ANTONIO.—(ANP)—Political history was made in the South Saturday and San Antonio scored another "first" when, with Negro and Latin-American voters combining forces, G. J. Sutton, 39-year-old mortician, was elected to the board of trustees of the San Antonio union junior college district, which includes the area of the city and adjacent rural school districts.

It is the first time in the South that a Negro has been elected to such a post.

The strategy called for the Latin-Americans supporting Sutton, in return for the Negroes voting for Garcia. Neither group could have won without the support of the other. The power of this alliance is now history. Each lived up to the pact.

A record 21,000 voters flocked to the polls for an election that has never before attracted many over 5,000. Running against two incumbents seeking re-election, Sutton polled 7,064 votes, second to Jesse N. Fletcher, who received 7,933. Sutton displaced E. H. Keator, wealthy oilman, who ran third in the race with 6,985.

Riding to victory with Sutton was Gus C. Garcia, Latin-American attorney, who scored a wide plurality in his race for a seat on the San Antonio independent school district board of trustees. Garcia received 7,942. Harry Rogers, incumbent, and present president of the board, retained his seat, getting 5,344.

Rogers, as president of the board, has been particularly discourteous in recent months to groups representing the Latin-American constituency when they sought relief for the sub-standard, overcrowded, run-down schools in Latin-American neighborhoods, and Rogers, during the campaign just closed, stirred up the racial issue in his frantic efforts for re-election.

Mrs. E. R. Lewis, board member for 16 years, was defeated in her efforts for re-election, getting only 5,027 votes. She ran on the "Better Schools' tickets with Rogers.

Cline Thomas, a Negro undertaker, who has resided in San Antonio four or five years, was also a candidate in the independent school district race, but Negroes, feeling he was not representative and not qualified for the position, turned their backs on him. He was last in the field of seven independent school district candidates, getting 753 votes.

Victory for the two minority group candidates resulted solely from the alliance of Negroes and Latin-American effected when Valmo C. Bellinger, Negro leader and publisher, flung his political organization into the fight, a long with the Organized Voters league, an interracial non-partisan organization, of which Sutton is a member and officer.

For Bellinger's work in the successful campaign, Don Politico, political writer and analyst for the San Antonio Light, wrote, in a by-lined Sunday article, " . . . Bellinger emerges more of a potent political power than his father . . ." (the legendary late Charles "Sarge" Bellinger, who, for a quarter of a century was the key figure in San Antonio politics.)

Besides making history in electing a Negro, the Negro voters answered another question in not electing one, Cline Thomas. Dixie demagogues insist that Negroes, with the power of the ballot, will vote for a Negro simply because he is of the race. San Antonians answered that slander, Saturday. They refused to vote for Cline Thomas, for, they felt, he was in no sense representative, and, during the campaign, showed nothing that would qualify him for the position he sought.

Sutton is a native San Antonian, attending Wiley college, Marshall, and Wilberforce university, from which he graduated in 1930. He entered business for himself in 1937. He is vice-president of the league, of the executive committee of the NAACP, chairman of fraternity, and president of the board of directors of the State local, Pan-Hellenic council. The Scope Of The Regents' Authority

The Informer Houston, Texas

Many, including The Informer, have been questioning the authority of the regents of the Texas State University for Negroes in some of its activities in the Negro University recently. It may be well for all to take a look at the authority granted to the regents, and the responsibility placed upon them for the the management and government of this Negro University. The act creating the regents provides:

Dat. 1-3-48 14e(2)

"Sec. 3. The government of the Texas State University for Negroes is hereby vested in a Board of Directors to be composed of nine (9) persons and to consist of both white and Negro citizens of the state. They shall elect a chairman and a vice-chairman from their number, who shall serve at the pleasure of the Board and the Board shall appoint a secretary. The State Treasurer shall be the treasurer of said institution. The Board shall have the right to make and use a common seal and may alter the same at pleasure. Each member of the Board shall be a qualified voter of this state, and shall be selected from different portions of the state

"Sec. 4. The reasonable expenses incurred by the members of the Board in the discharge of their duties shall be paid from any available funds of the institution. All expenditures shall be made by order of the Board, and the same shall be paid on warrants to be issued by the Comptroller of Public Accounts of the State of Texas based on vouchers to be approved of the chairman of the Board or some other officer of the University to be desgnated by him in writing to the Comptroller, and to be countersigned by the secretary of the Board or by some other officer of the University to be designated by said secretary in writing to the Comptroller. . . .

Sec. 7. The Directors shall establish the several departments in said University, determine the offices, professorships and other positions at said institution, appoint a President, appoint the professors and other officers and employees and prescribe their duties, and fix their respective salaries; and they shall enact such by-laws, rules and regulations as may be deemed necessary for the successful management and government of the institution. They shall have the power, by and with the advice of the faculty, to prescribe and regulate the course or courses of instruction to be given at said institution, and to confer such degrees and to grant such diplomas as are now or may hereafter be granted by the University of Texas or any of its branches. The Directors shall have the power to remove any professor, instructor, tutor, or other officer or employee connected with the institution when, in their judgment, the best interest and proper operation of the institution shall require it."

1-3-48 Dat.

Those are the pertinent sections to the responsibility, the power, and authority of the regents of the Texas State University for Negroes. One must ask where the regents get the authority to appoint an executive assistant to the regents; with authority to such executive assistant to carry out the powers given by the statutes to the regents themselves? Neither does one find any section of the law giving the regents the rigth to authorize their executive assistant to usurp the functions of the officials of the University. Yet by any imperial check of the activities at the University today, one must conclude that the executive assistant to the regents is in fact the executive head of the University, both from the fiscal, academic, and the executive sides.

In all fairness it would seem that the regents are charged with the responsibility for the expenditures of the funds at and for the University. It is likely that in accepting that responsibility, the regents have gone astray in their attempt to execute it. It would seem that the regents have the notion that they are responsible for evevry detail in the expenditure of the funds, and have attempted to cover this minute action, in the appointment of an executive assistant to the regents.

It is the view of most people familiar with state institutions, state colleges, and state universities, as well as with private colleges and universities, that the regents responsibility for the funds does not require that they do the fiscal work of clerks, business managers, auditors, or other nominal functionaries in the field of finance. In most state institutions the procedure is for all of the money to be credited to the regents, and controlled by the regents. Then the regents in turn deposit certain amounts in the care of the business manager, comptroller, bursar or auditor at the University, with instructions as to its expenditure and as to the vouchers, etc., that are to be used. When these officers at the University expend any money from the fund deposited for that purpose, they must send to the regents the orders, requisitions, invoices, and all evidences of the action, with a request for replenishment from the general fund, that the regents still control, to the one that they have used to buy whatever they have bought. This way the regents get all the records, check all the expenditures, and leave the work at the University, where it belongs.

In this practice, usually someone from the Comptroller's office goes into the state university or college and sets up the records and procedure which are to be followed. These people, from the experiences they have had in other similar state institutions, provide requisitions, vouchers, invoices, receiving orders, and like forms People handling the funds at the college or university are put under bond. They can make no expenditures except in the manner provided by the Comptroller of the state's directions and regulations.

The Informer Houston, Texas

This, we understand, was done in the case of the Texas State University for Negroes. Then all the regents needed to have done was to have had their own body organized so that the bills, papers, vouchers, etc., with the supporting check from the fund that they had deposited at the University would be sent to the office of the properly appointed representative of the regents, who would check and, when he found it correct, issue a check from the regents general funds to replenish the treasury at the University. Now that is what is normally done in state institutions, and in all of those in Texas, except where Negroes are the executive officers

Dat. 1-3-48

Now who will contend that the executive assistant to the regents is an officer of the University? Does anyone contend that the regents have any more authority than that given to them by statute? The statute sets out distinctly and clearly the method by which expenditures are to be approved and made. Neither by implication nor surmise can any reasonable person interpret the strict statement of procedure, to give to the chairman of the Board of Regents the right to appoint someone else other than "some other officer of the UNIVERSITY" to approve those vouchers in the stead of the chairman.

Likewise, the same Section 4 provides that such orders and vouchers are "to be countersigned by the secretary of the Board or by some other officer of the University, to be designated by said secretary in writing to the Comptroller." In each instance the statute provides that where the official of the Board of Regents does not choose to sign or countersign, such official of the regents is to designate some officer of the University to sign or countersign these orders and vouchers. Here again we have to point out that an executive assistant to the regents is by no stretch of the imagination

Houston, Texas

Let's look and see what is being done at this Negro institution. The regents have appointed "an executive assistant to the regents," and have given him functions the like of which exists in no other state-supported educational institution in Texas. Here it must be borne in mind that we are not arguing that the regents could not appoint an assistant secretary, or even an executive assistant to the regents, what we are arguing is that the regents do not have power, authority, or warrant to give to this executive assistant to the regents the authority to usurp the functions of the officers of the University.

For instance, let's refer again to Section 4, authorizing the chairman of the Board of Regents to approve vouchers for the University, the exact wording is:

"All expenditures shall be made by order of the Board, and the same shall be paid by warrants to be issued by the Comptroller of Public Accounts of the State of Texas based on vouchers to be approved by the chairman of the Board or some other officer of the University to be designated by him in writing to the Comptroller . . ."

The Informer

an officer of the University.

Without having any particular knowledge of either one, we challenge the idea that J. H. Robertson has any more qualifications for handling the orders, vouchers and requisitions at the University than Lloyd Isaacs. As we understand it, Mr. Robertson is a graduate of the University of Texas in Civil Engineering. We understand that he has had a number of jobs in oil fields, and in construction, and has also been the head of an institution at Corsicana, probably an orphanage or some such for delinquent people. We would assume that he perhaps has had some experience as an instructor, maybe, in some school. We have heard that he did some teaching in Africa.

On the other hand, Lloyd Isaacs has been trained in Business Administration. He had experience in that field at Tuskegee for a number of years, with a good record. He has had experience with insurance compaines, his last having been with the Watchtower as the officer in charge of finance. So why would the regents hire a man like Mr. Isaacs, trained in the field, and then put a man trained in civil engineering out to do the work normally cut for Isaac? There wouldn't be any matter of color involved there, would there?

Section 7 gives the directors power to move any instructor, or for that matter any employee of the institution, but we fail to find any provision giving them authority to take the executive assistant to the regents and make him an overall ruler in the executive side of the institution

It has seemed to us that the Legislature enacted a statute in proper form, to make a prima facie case of setting up a university equal to the University of Texas. The regents were appointed, publicly and with great flourish, to make it appear that the gestures were intended to create the same sort of atmosphere and school. But once the formalities were gone through, the attitude of those responsible for the Negro University was one of the usual Southern paternalism, where the white man decides that he is the only person who knows what is good for the Negro, what he ought to do and how he ought to do, and who therefore proceeds to dole a little out to him and to restrict him to the position of semi-serf. Certainly the pattern at the Texas State University for Negroes is far different from that that obtains at the University of Texas in its actual effect and impingement upon the rights of the instructors and the Negroes!

Texas votes two million dollars to build a Negro University, but it can't bring itself to let Negroes take any important position in this Negro University. "Negroes just aren't supposed to handle $0,200,000.00, even when it is supervised minutely and entailed by the Comptroller of the State, the Treasurer of the State, and the Board of Regents." Admittedly, Negroes could merely administer it in the straight jackets furnished by the forms and the controls of these state officials, but the whites just can't let Negroes play their normal parts in the $2,000,000.00. They would rather take a civil engineer and give him the play with the money, than to let a trained fiscal agent, who is black, function smoothly in the University.

The fact that this executive assistant to the regents may have his own private notions as to how the property of the Negro University should be used is of no concern to the regents.

$12,000 for Lanier

HOUSTON, Texas — R. O'Hara Lanier, who recently assumed the presidency of Texas State University here, will receive an annual salary of $12,000, the AFRO learned this week.

In addition, President Lanier has been given a furnished house, an automobile and personal services, in addition to a liberal travel allowance.

All deans at the college will be paid $7,500 a year on a 12-month basis with no other allowances.

Lanier Heads New University

Special to The New York Times.

HOUSTON, July 3—The new Texas State University for Negroes had its first permanent president today as Dr. R. O'Hara Lanier, former United States Minister to Liberia, began work. The Negro educator resigned his diplomatic assignment to assume the presidency of the university, created by the state to provide equal educational rights for Negroes.

Lanier Reported To Get $18,000

HOUSTON, Tex. — The annual salary of Dr. R. O'Hara Lanier, new president of Texas State University, as reported to The Courier, is $18,000. This makes the highest paid any Negro college president in the country.

Texas State Assistant To President

TEXAS STATE PREXY'S AID—Mrs. Constance E. H. Daniel of Washington, D. C., well-known government publicist, today took office as administrative assistant to the President of Texas State University for Negroes on July 9.

Mrs. Daniel has had fifteen years of experience as a member of the working press, and as a public relations official, information specialist and editor in the Federal Government. She has also had extensive experience in editing, research and publicity for educational institutions and national organizations.

An active member of the Capital Press Club and the Writers' Club of Washington, Mrs. Daniel has served as Information Specialist and Public Relations Adviser in the Farm Security Administration, an Editor in the Production and marketing Administration, Department of Agriculture, and as Editor of the Afamerican Woman's Journal.

New President Inaugurated At Tougaloo (Miss.) College

14e(1) Daily World, Atlanta, Ga. Tues. 4-20-48

TOUGALOO, Miss—"My ambition is that, whatever equipment they may have when they enter college, and for whatever business or profession they may be preparing upon graduation, all who leave Tougaloo College shall be men and women of integrity and ideals—intent upon following the divine plan for their lives; ever quick to see their brothers' needs and quicker to relieve them."

That was the clear and simple manner in which Dr. Harold Collins Warren explained the educational philosophy he will employ at Tougaloo College, of which he has not been inaugurated as sixth president.

EARLY PH. D. LOOMS 4-20-48

President Warren, graduate of Princeton University and McCormick Theological Seminary and a Edinburgh, Scotland, who is candidate for a University of Pittsburgh doctorate, said: Tues.

"I have as much respect as anyone for the facilities, the faculties, and the scope of large universities. They have meant much to me, as they have too many of you. But I am sure you share my conviction that the small and independent college, by reason of its freedom of movement and a decision, is privileged to make an incomparable contribution to the youth of today and tomorrow."

HOPEFUL DESPITE HYSTERIA Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

Discouraging pessimism at this time, the new Tougaloo president asserted, "Despite the prevailing dismay at our sad state of affairs, despite the increasing number of intelligent people who have come to the conclusion that the world is flat—"flat on its back"—I dare to believe that the situation is far more hopeful now when we are fully aware of the possibility of failure, of complete disaster even, than it was in the middle of the Nineteenth Century when Church and State were both certain that progress was automatic and assured. He said "the greatest waste in human life is due to the stubborn insistence of each generation upon making the same mistakes over again; the refusal of young people—and older people—to take full advantage of the experience and accumulated wisdom of those who have lived life here on this earth with eyes wide open."

Dr. Vernon L. Wharton of Millsaps College, trustee of Tougaloo, presided. Investing the new president was Hon. W. H. Watkins of Jackson, Miss., chairman of the board. Dr. Robert W. Harrison of Natchez, Miss., also a board member, presented guests from 58 colleges and universities—including Harvard, Princeton, Yale; the Universities of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Illinois, and Nebraska; Southern, Xavier, and Dillard Universities of Louisiana; Jackson and Mississippi Industrial Colleges, Tuskegee Institute of Alabama — and also 15 educational societies including the American Missionary Association, the Board of Home Missions of the Congregational and Christian Churches, the Jackson Chamber of Commerce, Mississippi Board of Health, the Mississippi State Board of Education and State Federation of Colored Women's Clubs, as well as Tougaloo Clubs of Chicago, Laurel, Jackson, Tougaloo, and Washington County and the National Tougaloo Alumni Association. 4-20-48

Representing the American Missionary Association were Dr. Fred L. Brownlee, Mrs. Eva H. Eastman, and Miss Ruth Horton, all of New York, while Miss Helen Kenyon of New York represented the Home Mission Board of Congregational and Christian Churches. Tues.

Tougaloo Installs Dr. Warren As Head

Memphis World Memphis Tribune

TOUGALOO, MISS.—(ANP)— Dr. Harold C. Warren was installed as president of Tougallo college Sunday, April 4 in special ceremonies. Dr. Hunt has been a Presbyterian minister for 30 years. He graduated from Princeton university in 1912, and recently received his philosopher's degree in religion from the University of Pittsburgh. Fri.

On April 3, Tougaloo formally opened a new building, Brownlee hall, named after Dr. Fred L. Brownlee, executive secretary of the American Missionary association. Dr. Douglas Harton, executive of the General Council of Congregational and Christian churches, made the dedicatory address. 4-9-48

Louisiana the per centage of disqualifications for educational deficiency was over three times as high among colored registrants as among whites, while in Illinois the rate was five times as high among colored registrants as among whites. Fri. 4-9-48

The findings noted, however, that the per cent of all rejections due to educational deficiency was higher for whites in North Carolina (15 per cent of all rejections) than for colored registrants in Massachusetts (5.6 per cent of all rejections) and the incidence of disqualification for educational deficiency was over six times as high for whites in Texas (22.7 per cent of all rejections) as for colored registrants in Minnesota (3.6 per cent of all rejections.

The NEA pointed out that the differences in educational opportunity among the states were not matters of greater or less desire to educate, but were directly related to differences in economic power. Memphis World

Negro Pastor Gets Degree at White Virginia School

Black Dispatch

RICHMOND, Va. — (ANP) — Dr. W. L. Ransome, pastor of First Baptist church, South Richmond, was awarded the master of theology degree at commencement exercises of Union Theological Seminary here May 18. He was the seventh Negro minister to get a degree at this white Presbyterian school.

Oklahoma City Okla.

Negroes were first admitted to the graduate department in 1935. The first Negro graduate were the Rev. Samuel Govan Stevens who received his master of theology degree in 1937, and the Rev. Cary Sylvester McCall who received the master of theology degree in 1943.

A total of 18 Negro ministers have attended the school since 1935. There were 12 Negro ministers at the school the past year, but no new ones enrolled for the year.

Dat. 6-5-48

Dr. Ransome is a well known minister and a forceful speaker. He has served on the faculty of Virginia Union university where he earned a degree some time ago. He came to this city from Fredericksburg, Va., and is the successor of the late Dr. A. J. Binja.

Virginia State U Gets 190 Housing Units

WASHINGTON— (ANP)— Virginia State college at Petersburg, Va., is one of 11 Virginia colleges that will receive wartime housing facilities to meet new needs on their campuses. The school will get 933 family units and 1,016 individual dormitory units.

Virginia State will get 184 dormitory and six family units.

The legislation on these housing transfers, was sponsored at the session of congress just ended by Senator A. Willis Robertson.

STRESSES DEMANDS ON NEGRO COLLEGES

Head of Virginia State Asserts Advanced Skills Require Revision of Courses

By GEORGE STREATOR

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETERSBURG, Va., Nov. 4 — The demands made upon Negro institutions for training in the higher skills of industry and agriculture require a re-vamping of courses in all Negro industrial colleges, Luther H. Foster, president of Virginia State College, said today.

Tracing the thirty-five years he had spent at this institution, six as president, he said that a desire for a better standard of living on the farms and in the small Southern cities was the principal basis of the current agitation for equal rights in education. Most of the more than 1,500 students now enrolled here will remain in the South "if we can help them live more substantial and significant lives," Mr. Foster added.

Mr. Foster said that the college had received some cooperation from Federal and state Governments in meeting the needs of students, "but not enough," he asserted, "especially from the Federal Government, which places the funds for the Negroes and whites at the disposal of the white land-grant college." Over a period of years, he declared, the funds have not been equitably distributed.

Negro Colleges Handicapped

The Negro land-grant college has very limited and outmoded equipment and inadequate personnel for teaching the advanced industrial and agricultural subjects, said Mr. Foster. The agricultural work needed for the Negro youth of Virginia will require every facility now found in the white colleges of the South and these improvements should be extended as progress demands, he added.

The trade school enrolment of the college has reached 222 students, mostly men. The enrolment by classes includes twenty-six students in carpentry, forty taking brickmasonry, thirteen radio, twenty-five electrical repair, forty two mechanics and a fe win sheet-metal work.

The college enrollment is 1,445, about 55 per cent of whom are men. A division at Norfolk has 689 students in a two-year course. Of these 211 are trade students. There are 110 students enrolled in adult classes, on a sub-college level.

The problem of placement faced by the college has been eased by better race relations and the fact that there is little employment in the skills being taught. Most of the buildings on the campus have been constructed by Negro mechanics, and many by Negro contractors.

The officer training program granted to the college includes a complete quartermaster unit of the Reserve Officers Training Corps. Other Negro colleges have infantry, artillery and transportation units. Negro land-grant colleges do not have pharmacy, dental, medical and veterinary units, Mr. Foster explained. The military course is required for the first two years of college.

The reason given by these colleges for a larger participation in military training was to obtain more training leading to Army commissions.

Gains in Rural Education

The college here has carried on rural educational programs provided for under the Smith-Hughes and Smith-Lever Acts of Congress. The rural extension service is carried on under the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, the state land-grant college for white students. A report from this division revealed an improvement in land improvement and crop production among Negro farmers.

The achievements of McKenzie Talley, a Negro farmer in the Palmers Spring community, Mecklenburg County, in expanding his interests from a log cabin to a modern dwelling from the earnings of improved farm and livestock, are offered as "Exhibit A."

The college has interested the Petersburg community in entertainment provided by the Robert Shaw choral group, the Detroit Symphony Orchestra and several singers and dancers of the same good quality.

The campus of 180 acres at Virginia State College includes the original campus of twenty-six acres provided through legislation originally urged during the reconstruction period by a Negro member of the Legislature. College revenue from Federal, state and other sources totals $1,800,000.

Demand for Higher Skills Creates Need for Revision

Virginia State College Head Cites Reasons for Equality in Education

PETERSBURG, Va. — Revision of all courses in colored industrial colleges is necessary because of demands for training in higher skills of industry and agriculture, Dr. Luther H. Foster, president of Virginia State College, declared last week.

Declaring the current fight for equality in education is based on a desire for a better standard of living on the farms and in small Southern cities, Dr. Foster, for six years president at Va. State, traced his 35 years of service to the institution.

The college enrollment is now 1445, approximately 55 per cent of whom are men, and most of the students will remain in the South, Dr. Foster said, "If we can help them live more substantial and significant lives."

Colleges Handicapped

While the college receives some co-operation from Federal and State governments in meeting the students' needs, Dr. Foster emphasized that it is "not enough," adding, "especially from the Federal Government which places appropriations for the colored and whites at the disposal of the white land-grant college."

This system has resulted in an inequitable distribution of funds for a long period of years, Dr. Foster said, consequently the colored land-grant college has limited and outmoded equipment and inadequate personnel for teaching the advanced industrial and agricultural subjects.

The agricultural work needed for colored youth of Virginia would require every facility now found in the white colleges and these improvements should be extended as progress demands, Dr. Foster asserted.

222 in Trade Courses

Va. State College has a trade school enrollment of 222, mostly men students, with 26 in carpentry; 40, brickmasonry; 13, radio; 25, electrical repair; 42, mechanics and a few in sheet-metal work.

The Norfolk division of the college has 689 students, in a two-year course, with 211 trade students and 110 enrolled in adult classes on a sub-college level.

The college here has conducted rural educational programs provided for under the Smith-Hughes and Smith-Lever Acts of Congress, and the rural extension service is carried on under the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, the State land-grant college for whites.

College Adopts Anti-Bias Policy

Race Students Admitted To Another University

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va.
Sat. 5-22-48

By NNPA News Service

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—Admission of qualified colored students to the graduate school of arts and sciences of Washington University has been authorized by the board of directors, Chancllor Arthur H. Compton annuonced last Tuesday.

5-22-48

The authorization, which becomes effective immediately, brings to three the number of graduate schools in which colorded students may enroll at the university. The others are those of the school of medicine, where a colored physician recently completed a seminar course, and of the George Warren Brown School of Social Work, where two colored women students are currently enrolled.

Dean Carl Tolman of the graduate school of arts and sciences said the action of the directors followed a recommendation made by him. He said he canvassed the graduate council, made up of heads of departments represented in. the graduate school, and found unanimous approval of the idea. The recommendation was made to the central administration of the university and conveyed by it to the directors, he said.

"Henceforth, anyone can be considered for admission to the shcool, irrespective of race, creed or color," he said. "Admissions have always been on an individual basis and all applicants must meet the same standards of admissibility. Those standards will no longer include color," he added. 5-22-48

Dean Tolman said the graduate school had been admitting for some time Chinese and Indian students. "It seemed to me completely out of place to students of one particular color, and I felt that graduate school especially ought to be above such considerations," he said.

The arts and sciences graduate school is the largest of the three admitting colored students. Present enrollment is about 600 students.

Wilberforce U. Wins Sole Right To Title

WILBERFORCE, Ohio While alumni of the once united schools struggled to arrange a harmony session between church school and state school heads when they meet here Jan. 25, the warring factions carried their quarrel into court on two counts last week.

Disputing the right of the state college to use the name "Wilberforce," representatives of the AME school won a victory before Common Pleas Judge Frank L. Johnson.

He ruled that the name Wilberforce university is the property of the church school. In addition to using the title "College of Education and Industrial Arts at Wilberforce, Greene County, Ohio, the state school must print "Not connected with Wilberforce university" on all official papers.

In the second court round Judge Johnson allowed the church school to withdraw a contempt suit claiming ownership of O'Neill hall, a women's dormitory.

AME Church Plans to Buy Wilberforce From State

Possible Purchase Discussed at Board Executive Meeting; $30,000 Mortgage Burned

NEW YORK — (ANP) —The AME Church is planning to buy Wilberforce University from the State of Ohio, it was learned here this week.

Although Bishop D. Ward Nichols of the First Episcopal District was known to have left the city Monday to attend an execuive conference of the school board in Xenia and has since returned, he could not be reached for a statement.

On Tuesday, the school burned a mortgage for $30,000, which was held by the First National Bank of Xenia, the school's last outstanding debt, $20,000 being left by Dr. Charles Wesley, president now of the state-controlled school, and $10,000 incurred since Dr. Charles L. Hill took over as the new president.

5 Bishops at Rites

To date the amounts received by the school from the various episcopal districts are first $30,000; third $19,000; fourth $14,000; fifth $17,000; 13th $5,000; fees, $31,000 and other sources, $5,000.

Among the bishops attending the mortgage burning on Tuesday night were D. Ward Nichols, A. J. Allen, George W. Baber, D. O. Walker, and J. H. Clayborne.

A conference will soon be held by the executive board of the school and the governor-elect of Ohio, as well as with other state and city officials.

Wilberforce Officials Attempt To Stop Ohio Money At College

Church officials at Wilberforce Univ. continuing this week their efforts to restrain the State of Ohio from paying certain funds to the newly-created College of Education and Industrial Arts at Wilberforce.

Norman S. McGhee, Cleveland attorney, Tuesday was expected to file a suit in the Franklin County Common Pleas Court alleging the misapplication of funds —questioning the special granting and giving of scholarships to non-residents of the State of Ohio.

On March 31 at Wilberforce, McGhee, representing church officials of Wilberforce University, attempted to take depositions from Charles H. Wesley, president of the College of Education, and several students.

Wesley and the students refused to testify as witnesses, contending that their attorney, Ray E. Hughes, had advised them not to answer.

Attorney McGhee attempted to question Wesley about the disbursements of funds and to determine the legal residence of some of the students.

WHEN WITNESSES Wesley and students refused to answer, McGhee demanded that the notary arrest them. This the notary refused to do. Hughes contended that the basis for the questions was not contained in the original petition.

As a result of this, Attorney McGhee moved back to Franklin County where he asked Common Pleas Judge John R. King to permit an amendment. The hearing was held on Friday, April 16.

Attorney Hughes called the attempt a "sham and an attempt to delay." He gave a political speech on the history of state government in Ohio and further charged that leaders of the African Methodist Episcopal Church and Wilberforce University were attempting to embarrass the state government.

Judge King upheld Attorney Hughes' contention and Attorney McGhee withdrew his petition. The new petition, expected to be filed this week, is said to contain the basis to question President Wesley on the disposition of funds and also to permit the questioning of students as to their home addresses.

It is believed that Attorney McGhee will attempt to show a large percentage of the students are not residents of the State of Ohio and that they are receiving scholarships in violation of rules making such awards possible.

There is the contention that a large number of the students came from the south and that Ohio should not be forced to bear the rightful burden of such states as Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia.

For some time, controversy has been raging in Ohio as to whether the College of Education is a jim-cro institution. Many church leaders contend that it is and some newspapers are of the same opinion.

At all of the hearings the State of Ohio was represented by Joseph McGill of Attorney General Hugh S. Jenkins' office.

MARCH ON OHIO'S GOVERNOR!!—Columbus, Ohio: A group of students from Wilberforce University, led by Dr. Charles Leander Hill and other A. M. E. church leaders, marched on Gov. Thomas J. Herbert of Ohio protesting his permitting the state-operated state college of Industrial Arts at Wilberforce, Ohio, to use their name, Wilberforce. Dr. Hill is President of the church-owned Wilberforce University, and Dr. Charles H. Wesley is President of the state Wilberforce. The two schools split last year when the A. M. Ohio, AME Church Agree To Commission To Solve Problem

CINCINNATI—(NNPA)—Governor Thomas J. Herbert and leaders of the African Methodist Episcopal Church in Ohio have agreed to set up a commission of educators and lay men to seek a solution to the problem created by the divorcing of the state part of Wilberforce University from the church part.

Disclosure of this agreement was made by Governor Herbert when he appeared before the final session of the 118th annual conference of the Third (Ohio) District of the AME Church here on Sunday, October 25, it was learned last Thursday.

Governor Herbert told the more than 2,000 delegates and visitors at the conference in Taft Auditorium that he believes "the problem at Wilberforce can be solved." He added that he also believed that "it can only be solved through the sincere cooperation of those in a position of authority, whether they represent the church or the state."

Bishop A. J. Allen, of Cleveland, presiding bishop of the Third Episcopal District, introduced Governor Herbert. The governor received a tremendous ovation.

Governor Herbert Appears At District Conference Meeting

Governor Herbert said he and Bishop Allen had agreed, following a conference, to set up a commission to iron out the difficulties growing out of separation of the state and church interests in the school. It is expected that Governor Herbert and Bishop Allen will confer at an early date on the method of selection of the members of the proposed commission.

LEGISLATURE PROBLEM

In the final analysis, the only agency that can resolve the Wilberforce problem, Governor Herbert said, is the legislature.

The governor declared that "there must not be any segregation in our public schools and state-supported universities.

Paying tribute to the struggles of the churches to establish and sup-made to maintain it," Governor Herbert said, adding:

"I have called upon the men and women representing the state of Ohio in this situation to lay aside any personal or partisan motives, in order to attempt in all sincerity, to emulate the vision, courage and resourcefulness of those men who established, built and maintained Wilberforce.

"I call upon the duly constituted leaders, members and friends of the AME Church to likewise emulate these foundings fathers of Wilberforce, and in the best tradition of the church to cooperate in this matter.

COMMON PROBLEM

"I give you this assurance, As long as I am Governor I shall do all within my power to insure every boy and girl and equal opportunity at the school of their choice, whether at Ohio State, Ohio University, Kent State, Bowling Green, Miami or Wilberforce.

"At Wilberforce we have a common problem. Working together, it can and must be solved."

Bishop Allen told the NNPA in Cleveland Monday, October 25, that he was highly encouraged that real progress will now be made in settling the issues between the church and the state.

"I was pleased to have had the opportunity to discuss intimately with Governor Herbert the problems that beset us at Wilberforce," Bishop Allen said.

"The governor's pledge to name an impartial committee to make a comprehensive study and recommendations meets with my approval. The AME Church has always felt that the problems between the church and state over Wilberforce could easily be settled once the facts on both sides were known.

"I think Governor Herbert has shown real statesmanship in agreeing to take positive steps to bring order and harmony out of the present chaos at Wilberforce."

AME's Fight Appointment Of Hughes

WILBERFORCE, Ohio.—(ANP)—Officials here of the AME Church and Wilberforce University opposed the reappointment by Governor Thomas Herbert of Ray Hughes last week as the chairman of the board of trustees of the State College of Education and Industrial Arts at Wilberforce.

In turn the church college offered the following suggestions to the state:

"1. That the state of Ohio withdraw entirely from the Wilberforce scene and sell or quit claim its holdings to the church for certain considerations.

"2. That the law which created the present state college be repealed, and that all laws passed since 1940 be likewise repealed, thus returning to the status quo of the cooperative enterprise that has been carried on between the church and the state for almost 57 years."

In announcing its stand, the church called for the Ohio legislature to refuse to confirm Hughes' appointment. It would rather have the state leave Wilberforce altogether than return to joint operation.

Of Hughes' reappointment, the church said: "It is hoped that the Ohio senate will not confirm the reappointment of Mr. Hughes, who is the bone of contention in the Wilberforce problem. If Mr. Hughes is confirmed it will only further protract the aggravating situation and render it impossible for mediation in the near future."

OHIO SENATE CONFIRMS HUGHES AT WILBERFORCE STATE TRUSTEE

WILBERFORCE, Ohio—Attorney Ray E. Hughes, Columbus, Ohio, was re-appointed as a Trustee of Wilberforce State College by Governor Thomas J. Herbert. Mr. Hughes' appointment was confirmed by the Special Session of the 97th Ohio General Assembly Monday, December 6.

Attorney Hughes is president of the Columbia Civil Service Commission, having served eleven and one-half years as a member, seven of which he served as president. Mr. Hughes has been prominent in Columbus Civic life for the past 25 years. He is a long-time member of the Mt. Vernon Avenue African Methodist Episcopal Church and is president of the choir, having been a member of the choir for the past 25 years. He is a member of the Board of Management of the Spring Street YMCA, having previously served 12 years as president of the Board and 22 years as a member.

He was Assistant Prosecuting Attorney for Franklin County for ten years and is admitted to the practice of law before all the courts, State and Federal, including the United States Supreme Court.

During the war he was a member of Ohio Post-War Program Commission and served on the Building Code Committee. He is a 33rd degree Mason and a leader in the fraternal and other public activities of the State of Ohio.

Governor Ready To Turn Over State Wilberforce Property

WILBERFORCE, Ohio — Governor Thomas J. Herbert said Thursday in Columbus he would recommend turning the State College property at Wilberforce over to the African Methodist Episcopal church at such time as it indicated it can support the institution.

Herbert pointed out he had taken this position over a year ago, and said that he would require proof that the church had a long-range financial plan for Wilberforce.

The governor said that if such a plan was submitted to him, he would recommend to the state legislature next year that state property at Wilberforce University be turned over to the church.

Offer Made To End Fight At Wilberforce U.

State College Official Ridicules Hill's "Appeal"

WILBERFORCE, Ohio—(NNPA)—An offer to settle the campus fight between Wilberforce University and Wilberforce State College came last Saturday from the AME Church side, but a State college official ridiculed it.

Dr. Charles Leander Hill said he would resign as acting president of the university if Dr. Charles Wesley would quit as the college's president and Ray E. Hughes, Columbus attorney, would resign as the chairman of the college board of trustees.

Mr. Hughes, commenting in Columbus on Dr. Hill's open letter to Governor Thomas J. Herbert, said Dr. Hill was "making a desperate appeal" for state aid and public sympathy. Mr. Hughes said the university, supported by the AME Church, was in debt.

He added that it was unlawful for the state to support a religious institution.

The two institutions have been split for a year. Formerly, as Wilberforce University, they were jointly supported and administered by the church and the state.

Resignation of Dr. Wesley and Hughes, Dr. Hill said, "would leave the trustees of both schools free to agree and to unite upon some man acceptable to both boards."

"To protract longer the great educational travesty and farce being dramatized at Wilberforce," he continued, "is a reflection on American Education and the proud history of the state of Ohio."

The state college lists an enrollment of 1,000 students; the university, 400.

Wilberforce Gets $41,000 From N. Y. AME Group

NEW YORK — (ANP) — At its closing two-day religious education chautauqua, a check for $30,000 was presented by Bishop D. Ward Nichols, of the First Episcopal District, AME Church, for Wilberforce to its president, Dr. Charles Leander Hill here at Carnegie Hall Thursday night.

A few days ago a check for $11,000 was also sent to the university by the bishop to help keep the doors of the controversial institution open.

The district's conference opened Wednesday at Bethel AME church with Bishop Nichols presiding for a two-day session.

A six-man committee was appointed Thursday "to investigate if the AME Church has any equity on the Paradise Lakes project" in Salem, New Jersey.

BOUGHT BY SIMS

This project, purchased by the ousted Bishop Sims some years ago and which was a factor in his ousting, has cost the organization to date, more than $150,000, it was learned.

The district will also publish a paper to acquaint the Conferences of its activities.

The financial standing of the educational fund for the entire denomination from April 1, 1944 to to March 31, 1948 was $159,156.89 with disbursements of $146,143.75.

The cash balance as of March 31 was listed as in the Victory Savings Bank, Columbia, S. C., $2,500, in the irFst National Bank, same city and state, $2500 and on hand $8,013.14.

Hughes Confirmed Again As Wilberforce Trustee

WILBERFORCE, Ohio — (SNS) — Attorney Ray E. Hughes, Columbus, Ohio, was reappointed as a Trustee of Wilberforce State College by Governor Thomas J. Herbert. Mr. Hughes' appointment was confirmed by the Special Session of the 97th Ohio General Assembly Monday, December 6.

Senator John W. Brickers, as Governor of Ohio, appointed Mr. Hughes to the Board of Trustees in 1939 for a six-year term and reappointed him in 1944. In 1947 when the Board of Trustees was re-organized, Governor Herbert appointed Mr. Hughes to a one-year term on the Board and has again re-appointed him with an eight-year term which will expire June 30, 1956.

Attorney Hughes is President of the Columbus Civil Service Commission, having served eleven and one-half years as a member, seven of which he served as President. He received his initial appointment by Mayor Myron Gesamon in 1937; his second appointment in 1942 by Mayor Floyd Green and in February, 1948 he was appointed to his third six-year term by Mayor James Rhodes.

Mr. Hughes has been prominent in Columbus Civic life for the past 25 years. He is a long-time member of the Mt. Vernon Avenue African Methodist Episcopal Church and is President of the Choir, having been a member of the Choir for the past 25 years. He is a member of the Board of Management of the Spring Street YMCA, having previously served 12 years as President of the Board and 22 years as a member.

He was Assistant Prosecuting Attorney for Franklin County for 10 years and is admitted to the practice of Law before all the Courts, State and Federal, including the United States Supreme Court.

During the war he was a member of Ohio Post-War Program Commission and served on the Building Code Committee. He is a 33rd degree Mason and a leader in the fraternal and other public activities of the State of Ohio.

Wilberforce State Wins O'Neill Hall in Suit

Court Rules Ohio Provided Funds for Dorm; Judge Calls Fight 'Petty Politics'

WILBERFORCE, Ohio—Affirming a common pleas court judgment, the Second District Court of Appeals on Dec. 11 ruled that O'Neill Hall, 58-year-old women's dormitory at Wilberforce, is State property. Presiding Judge William C. Wiseman of Dayton wrote the opinion in which Judges Rose G. Hornbeck of London and Fred G. Miller of Columbus con-

In its decision the Appellate Court said, "The two institutions are now separate entities, "Wilberforce University being supported, controlled and managed by the AME Church and the College of Education, by the State of Ohio."

The appeal had been made last Oct. 14, by the AME Church's Wilberforce University after Judge Frank L. Johnson, Xenia, had decided an eviction suit against the State in favor of the defendant.

State Funds Used

It went on to recognize that

Wilberforce University had gained title to the land on which O'Neill Hall stands in 1856, but in 1891, AME Church had failed to prove when the dormitory was built. The State of Ohio contributed $10,000 in 1891 and $16,000 in 1892.

Although Wilberforce University did contribute to the building, this fact alone," the decision read, "would not prevent the State of Ohio from acquiring title by prescription."

The Appeals Court said records do not show that any funds raised by Wilberforce University for construction of O'Neill Hall ever were used for that purpose. The State.

The decision continued, had maintained, controlled, held, described the split of church

Wilberforce University for Negroes Split By Administrative 'Civil' War

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.
Sun 3-21-48

By KEN DAVIS

WILBERFORCE, Ohio, March 20.—Civil war has split 92-year-old Wilberforce University into two hostile schools with separate athletic teams, faculties, administration staffs and student bodies.

This hodge-podge of hostility is contained on a single campus. It is a complex situation in which principles, policies and personalities are involved.

The African Methodist Episcopal Church still finances and operates Wilberforce University, chartered to the Methodist Church in 1856 and the country's oldest Negro university.

The State of Ohio finances and operates an offspring of the current troubles — the College of Education and Industrial Arts at Wilberforce, Ohio. This name was ordered by a Common Pleas Court judge.

Alumni Jump In

Wilberforce alumni jumped into the fray a few weeks ago. They talked of a reconciliation between the A.M.E. Church and the State of Ohio. So far, their efforts have met little success. The end of the Wilberforce war is not yet in sight.

Billed as a fight between Church and State, the Wilberforce wrangle also is a personal battle between two strong personalities: A.M. Bishop R. C. Ransom, chairman of the Wilberforce Church school trustees, and [illegible] Wesley, president of the Wilberforce State school. Dr. Wesley, a Negro educator of national prominence, was president of the university before the split. The Courier-Journal

There are those who say there is a third, and publicly silent, person in this dispute.

They point to the bishop's wife, Mrs. Georgia M. Teel Ransom, former Wilberforce dean of women, as this behind-the-scenes figure. Critics of this stately, smiling woman call her the "petticoat president." Friends describe her as a high-minded educator who was fired by Dr. Wesley in 1944 because of "a severe clash of ideas." 3-21-48

Wesley Blamed

A church-university pamphlet titled "The Wilberforce Dilemma" had this to say about the bishop's wife:

"The dismissal of the dean of women, who later married Bishop R. C. Ransom, is of special significance . . . because of the popular belief that the subsequent conniving with the State Legislature to weaken the Church's position.

To all this, Dr. Wesley merely observed that "the statements by Bishop Ransom about the status of Wilberforce and its president are collections of incorrections, exaggerations and untruths."

The Church took two steps: It asked the State to get out of Wilberforce and let the Church run the school; and sued the State for possession of a girls' dormitory, O'Neill Hall. Sun

About 900 students chose the State school, about 400 the Church school. They live for the most part in amicable truce.

The Church once charged two of its students were "abused and manhandled" by State school authorities when they attempted to pass out pamphlets. Some students threatened a strike unless the rupture was healed. Neither charge nor threat came to anything. 3-21-48

But there still are some curious rivalries.

Not Enough Points

The State school is particularly proud of its athletes. Its football team climaxed a fine season by playing in the Vulcan Bowl. Its basketball team won most of its games, and trimmed Wilberforce Church cagers in their first Midwestern Conference meeting.

Wilberforce Church athletes weren't so successful. Their basketball players strove mightily. They made the supreme effort one night, and scored 116 points. Their opponents, little Rio Grande College, however, scored 118.

The Church school does its crowing in a different direction. Its officials ignore this margin in muscle. Sun 3-21-48

"We have eight Ph.D.'s on our faculty. The State has only two," commented Bishop Ransom serenely. The Courier-Journal

Educators, alumni and churchmen watch the struggle between Bishop Ransom and Dr. Wesley with interest. Louisville, Ky.

The bishop is battling against odds, it appears. Recently a group of A.M.E. laymen gathered in Detroit to call for the automatic retirement of A.M.E. bishops over 75. Bishop Ransom and at least one other bishop are in their 80's. explosion between Bishop Ransom and Dr. Wesley arose out of this dismissal.

"While there seems to be some truth in it, Dr. Wesley's own actions alone are responsible."

The feud between 87-year-old Bishop Ransom, eldest of the Church's elderly bishops, and 55-year-old Dr. Wesley erupted to public attention in June, 1947. A few weeks earlier, the bishop had called on Dr. Wesley to resign.

Wesley countered with the acid suggestion that the bishop retire from the Church board of trustees "in order not to impede further the unified education progress of the university."

President Fired Sun

On June 11, the Church's board of trustees fired Dr. Wesley charging him with losing "faith and confidence in the university trustee board and the sacred principles upon which the institution was founded." 3-21-48

To understand how Dr. Wesley successfully defied the Church board, you must know first the history of the dual Church-State control of the school.

Wilberforce University was founded by the Methodist Church in 1856 to train pastors. Bishop Ransom points out it was "the third school in the nation to be coeducational."

The African Methodist Episcopal Church bought the school in 1863. In 1888, the Ohio General Assembly established at Wilberforce a normal and industrial department under a separate board of trustees, five to be named by the Governor, four by the A.M.E. Church.

Title Changed

The Legislature changed the title of that department to College of Education and Industrial Arts in 1941, and in 1947 created an office of president with a board of trustees, of which eight were named by the State and one by the Church. Louisville, Ky.

From 1930 until last year's blow-up, the State helped support the faculty pay roll of the College of Liberal Arts operated by the Church. That support no longer is extended.

That's why the dismissal of Dr. Wesley just didn't take. The State's trustees wouldn't back the Church. Somewhat later, the State established Dr. Wesley as president of the State school.

An official statement of the North American Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools may have had much to do with the State's action. The association's board of review last year wrote: Sun 3-21-48

". . . the members of the board, as individuals, considered your (Dr. Wesley's) leadership in the institution the single point of strength that would warrant continuation of accreditation for the coming year."

Judge Holds Use of Public Funds Legal, Reviews History of School in Ohio

WILBERFORCE, Ohio—Wilberforce State College was awarded the fourth court decision, in its legal battles with its opponents, in the Court of Common Pleas of Franklin County, Ohio, on June 26.

The suit was that of Andrew J. Cunningham against Joseph T. Ferguson, Auditor, and Don Ebright, State Treasurer. Cunningham, as a taxpayer, sought to prevent the State officials from paying funds appropriated by the Legislature for the maintenance of the College of Education and Industrial Arts.

Charged Charter Impaired

Counsel for the defense charged that the legislation creating the college was unconstitutional and that the State was impairing the obligations of a contract represented by the charter previously issued to the Wilberforce University Corporation in 1863, although the original charter was issued in 1856 to a board of several religious faiths and composed of both races.

It was also alleged that the trustees of the college were misappropriating the funds. Sat.

Judge Danna F. Reynolds, in his decision, reviewed the history and origins of Wilberforce University and the College of Education and Industrial Arts and the legislation establishing each of them, and found that no damage had been done to Wilberforce University.

Says State Is Satisfied

Concluding the decision, the court held "that all the legislative acts now in effect are valid and effective to carry out the lawful purposes intended." Declaring that the State Department has been satisfied over the years that the State funds were being properly expended," the court ordered the petition "dismissed at plaintiff's costs." 7-17-48

This fourth case was the result of an amended suit in the same court. Two other cases were tried in the Court of Common Pleas of Greene County, and in each case decisions were rendered in favor of the State College.

The attorneys in the case were J. R. Samuels of Cincinnati, Norman McGhee of Cleveland, a member of the board of trustees of the Wilberforce University Corporation, and J. S. Gill, assistant State's Attorney General, who had associated with him Ray E. Hughes, chairman of the State College board of trustees.

Dr. Long has had a distinguished career in the field of Educational Administration in the college and the public school, and has distinguished himself in the field of Educational Research. He is the holder of the Bachelor of Science degree from Howard University, the Master of Arts degree from Clark University, and has done graduate work at the University of Chicago. His appointment is one of the most significant ones in the recent development of the college.

Fourth Court Decision Awarded State College At Wilberforce

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga

WILBERFORCE, O. — Wilberforce State College was awarded the fourth court decision, in its opponents, in the Court of Common Pleas of Franklin County, Ohio, on June 26.

The case was termed: Andrew J. Cunningham, plaintiff vs Joseph T. Ferguson, Auditor, and Don Ebright, State Treasurer, defendents. The plaintiff, a taxpayer, sought to prevent the State Auditor and State Treasurer from paying funds appropriated by the Legislature for the maintenance of the College of Education and Industrial Arts Thurs. 7-8-48

In order to support this contention, it was alleged that the legislation creating the college was unconstitutional and that the State was imparing the obligations of a contract represented by the Charter previously issued to the Wilberforce University Corporation in 1868, although the original Charter was issued in 1856 to a board of several religious faiths and composed of both races. It was alleged that the trustees of the college were misappropriating the funds.

HISTORY REVIEWED

Judge Danna F. Reynolds, in his decision, reviewed the history and origins of Wilberforce University and the College of Education and Industrial Arts and the legislation establishing each of them. Judge Reynolds declared that "....while over the years the two schools have cooperated in many ways, there has apparently been nothing done which in any way has impaired the rights and obligations of the University as evidence by its Charter, nor is there any provision of the existing statutory enactments which in themselves prove for any state aid to Wilberforce University."

The Court referred particularly to the water, sewage and lighting facilities which were being provided by the state, and were still being provided for the Wilberforce University, and that these facts of themselves did not "amount to the public support of a private and religious institution." Thurs. 7-8-48

COURT ORDER

"Concluding the decision, the Court held "that all the legislative acts now in effect are valid and effective to carry out the lawful purpose intended." It was ment has been satisfied over the decided "that the State departyears that the State funds were being properly expanded, and, in the absence of anything but generalities in the claims made, without proof of any specific misuse of funds plaintiffs action must fail. It is therefore ordered by the Court that the petition be dismissed at the plaintiff's costs."

This fourth case was the result of an amended suit in the same court. Two other cases were tried in the Court of Common Pleas of Greene County, and in each case decisions were rendered in favor of the State College.

The attorneys in the case were J. R. Samuels of Cincinnati, Norman L. McGhee of Cleveland, the latter is a member of the Board of Trustees of the Wilberforce University Corp., and J. S. Gill Assistant Atty General of the State of Ohio, who had associated with him Ray E. Hughes, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the College of Education and Industrial Arts.

92-Year-Old High School Closes At Wilberforce U.

WILBERFORCE, Ohio—The executive committee of the board of trustees of Wilberforce University recently announced that the 92-year university high school has been permanently discontinued as a part of the university's program of reorganization.

The committee believes that this move will enable the university to concentrate attention to the building of a better and bigger institution. The committee also made plans to meet all current obligations and the much-talked-of mortgage note when due next month.

The high school was first opened in 1856 as an academy and was the basis from which the university later came into being. The name academy was changed to university high school in 1939 under the administration of Dr. D. O. Walker, whose program of reorganization led to the accreditation of the university by the North Central Association in 1939.

WILBERFORCE, Ohio—Wilberforce University has announced that the institution will drop football this fall. Inability to secure Cox Field in Xenia, five miles from here, for practice or for games was given as the cause.

The University dropped its high school department after 92 years recently.

The move to drop football leaves Wilberforce State College, the only Mid-Western representative in this section.

Wilberforce University is known as the church side while Wilberforce College of Education is known as the state side.

BISHOPS MEET; MAKE PLANS FOR WILBERFORCE

Tues 7-11-48

WILBERFORCE, O.—(ANP)—A debt of $120,000 for Wilberforce university was announced last week as the school's executive board of five AME bishops met and mapped out plans to make the school an accredited institution once more.

Attending the board meeting were Bishops A. J. Allen, D. Ward Nichols, George Beaber, D. O. Walker and J. H. Clayborn of the First, Third, Fourth, Fifth and 13th districts.

Atlanta Ga

Despite the large debt of the school, the bishops confidently stated that they expected to pull the school out of its present rut and raise it once more to the top.

Of the total debt, $30,000 is owed to the Citizens bank in Xenia. It is to be paid in September. Teachers are owned $10,000 in bank salary, and summer school teachers are owned about $3,000.

UNDERWRITE $30,000

The five bishops, who make up the first AME educational area, have underwritten the $30,000 to be paid to the Citizens bank.

In the reorganization scheme, the executive board announced that the Wilberforce high school unit will be closed. It also voted $300,000 for operation and maintenance during 1948-49 school year. The bishops expect to pay the bank and the teachers by October.

A new three-story building which will house 100 students and serve as an administration and chapel is being erected for Payne Theological seminary which was recently moved to Wilberforce, Dr. John H. Lewis revealed.

REPORT HARMONY

In order to assure return of Wilberforce to an accredited status under the North Central association, the board of trustees, the president, the faculty and officers of the school are working together harmoniously.

Tues 7-13-48

"Wilberforce university is the oldest, the best, owned, controlled and manned from the janitor to president by Negro leaders. It has within the past few years, had a serious setback, but day is breaking—it is now in the hands of new administrators."

Speaking of the debt of $120,000, he said, "This seems large, but the five bishops who came to take over the university are adequate to the task. They are not no vices."

Settle That Dispute

The struggle between the A.M.E. Church and the State of Ohio for control of Wilberforce University at Xenia, it should not be out of place to remind the contenders that the university is an institution for the education of youth for life, leadership and citizenship; that petty politics and partisan advantage should play no part in the plans and decisions which will make the university a great institution or destroy its usefulness at a time when our educational facilities are lamentably inadequate.

The cost of operating and expanding the facilities of educational and other public institutions has risen to levels far beyond the resources and competence of municipality, state or federal government would be in small private organizations. The next step is state aid the larger public interest.

There may be a need for new leadership in these or assistance, and it would be sound leadership if challenging times. The leaders of the A.M.E. Church and the state officials of Ohio should get together before the field of philanthropy for the public welfare would and work out a constructive plan of cooperation between church and state for the benefit realize that a partnership between themselves and the of the youth of the country.

Church Retains Sole Right to Use Name Wilberforce

Baltimore, Md.

WILBERFORCE, Ohio—The church-supported section has been given the exclusive right to the use of the name Wilberforce, and the newly created State College has been forbidden to use the name "Wilberforce State College" by Common Pleas Court Judge F. L. Johnson.

Sat 1-24-48

At the same time the court granted the University permission to withdraw its contempt of court suit and file instead an action for eviction over the possession of "O'Neill Hall" which allegedly is on church grounds.

The law specifically grants ownership of a building to the owner of the land after the expiration of a definite period and in the absence of a contract to the contrary.

Clarifying the Issue

Attorneys for Wilberforce University asked for a clarification on the court's intent in the previous decision on the case in which the court had asked the State College not to 'capitalize' on the name 'Wilberforce,' and Judge Johnson made an additional journal entry stating:

Sat

"The court finds that the name 'Wilberforce' belongs to 'Wilberforce University.' It decrees that the defendants be restrained from capitalizing and printing in large letters the word 'Wilberforce' in connection with any activities of their college, which is 'College of Education and Industrial Arts at Wilberforce, Greene County, Ohio.'

1-24-48

"They are also restrained from using the name 'Wilberforce State College,' and in connection with the use of their name: 'College of Education and Industrial Arts at Wilberforce, Green County, Ohio,' they add in reasonably bold type immediately thereunder, '(not connected with Wilberforce University.'"

Bishop Tells 44 Graduates Church Will Fight With State; 85th Commencement Held Thursday

1-24-48

Philadelphia, Pa.

BISHOP D. O. WALKER

Thur. 6-24-48

"Wilberforce is not for sale and the continued attempts of the state of Ohio to steal its spirit by pilfering its name only will end eventually in the university swallowing the state institution," declared Bishop D. O. Walker at Wilberforce University's eighty-fifth commencement in Jones Auditorium Thursday morning.

Forty-four students received degree of bachelor of arts, science and business administration; eigh students from Payne Theological Seminary were awarded degrees were conferred by the university.

Speaking on "Wilberforce—the Unpurchasable Heritage of the Black Man," Bishop Walker, one-time president of Wilberforce and now presiding bishop of the fifth Episcopal district which contributes to the school, discussed the factional fight at the university since the split between the church and state over its operation a year ago.

Bishop Walker, speaking in behalf of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, said it seeks no compromise and accepts no appeasement and that it intends to continue to operate Wilberforce University as an "effort of free men to keep themselves forever free."

"The Northwest Ordinance, out of which the state of Ohio was created, says there shall be no separation in the use of public funds for education on the basis of race, creed and color," he said. "The present state trustee board of the newly created Jim Crow college is breaking this law and establishing an undesirable procedure in opening a completely state-supported college when Negroes are free by law to go to any college in Ohio. "When the truth is known the citizens of Ohio will not permit the waste of public funds to maintain the continuation of this all-state Negro institution whose per capital student expenditure is the highest among all state institutions in Ohio."

Continuing he said: "The founders of the university addressed themselves to provide not just education. It was an education designed to act upon the thinking of the black people as to their own achievements. They effected these results through the use of the applied arts and sciences but only as a means to an end. Their ultimate purpose was to lift those whom other people thought to be valueless and without brains or souls to the place where they could be recognized as men. They thought and believed the way to achieve these ends was to do the job themselves. Thus, Wilberforc became a symbol of self-help."

Recipients of honorary degree were as follows: doctor of divinity —Jonathan C. Brewer, Aurora Ill.; Arlie Roland Moresberger Hollidays Cove, W. Va.; Hillar Saunders, Muncie, Ind.; Reverend Alfred Edmond Lawrence, an Reverend S. J. M. Tladi, both o South Africa; doctor of laws—Dr. Gaston Foote, Dayton, Ohio J. H. Lewis, Jacksonville, Fla. Bishop Ransom To Quit Wilberforce Position

RANSOM . . . will quit

WILBERFORCE. — (Special).— Declaring that "As long as I am alive I will have the interest of the university," the 87-year-old Bishop Reverdy C. Ransom revealed last week that he does not intend to remain chairman of the board of trustees of Wilberforce University after the AME conference next month.

It is believed that this positive statement of the bishop may lead to the reconciliation between the state and church colleges if Dr. Charles Wesley keeps his promise of accepting the presidency of Morgan College.

Many members of the faculty here are deeply puzzled at the apparent inconsistencies practiced by the leaders of the NAACP. These leaders seem to object very strongly the setting up of regional universities for Negroes in the south where segregation is legally practiced.

The same leaders, however, seem to see nothing wrong in the newly-created fully-supported state college that came into being through the efforts of Dr. Wesley in June of 1947.

"The whole thing seems to hinge upon who is doing it," explained Dr. Charles L. Hill, president of Wilberforce University. "Wesley is a friend of Walter White and Roy Wilkins, both of NAACP officers, and so according to them the state colelge in Ohio is not a segregated college."

Commenting on recent stories in the newspapers about an offer from Long Island University, Dr. Hill said that the press was not accurate; that he has received no direct offer from that university, and that unless an actual offer is made he will not say now just what his response to it would be.

Warns Students Will Obey Board Or Be Dropped

14e(1) Daily World Thurs. 1-4-48

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(ANP)—Bishop Robert N. Brooks, chairman of the trustee board of Wiley College, Marshall, Tex., termed the walkout by students at Wiley "disgraceful" and declared that "students shall not be permitted to run the school as they see fit."

The bishop made the statement here last week while attending a meeting of the Methodist Federation for Social Action. The walkout had occurred when the bishop was attempting to announce the action of the trustee board on complaints lodged by the students against the administration and faculty. Bishop Brooks said that a student committee had pledged itself to abide by whatever decisions the board reached, but that the walkout came in spite of the pledge. Daily World

"I had just finished reaching the first of four decisions reached by the board when the students filed out of the chapel," Bishop Brooks remarked. Atlanta, Ga

Object to McLeod

The ruling stated that the board had voted unanimously to continue Dr. E. C. McLeod as president—an issue to which some students as well as faculty members had objected. The other rulings concerned faculty tenure, student council and discipline.

The tenure of teachers at the school was recommended as being dependent upon their fitness, efficiency and preparation for the position they hold. The present student committee, acting as the student council, was to be disbanded until such time as rules and regulations governing the group, its operation and defining its functions could be drawn up. The board held that the council, a joint enterprise of faculty and students, must be approved by the administration and faculty before it can function. Daily World

Academic activities at the school were suspended following the walkout. However, plans were being made to reopen the school on Jan. 5, but, according to Bishop Brooks, "If the college reopens Jan. 5, the board will make clear that those students who apply for readmission must abide by the decisions of the board and the administration." Court Grants Wiley Temporary Injunction Against Students

14e(1) The Informer Houston, Texas

MARSHALL, TEXAS, February 3, 1948. — By agreement of the attorneys for both parties, a temporary injunction was entered by the Court as prayed for in the petition of Wiley College; which injunction shall remain in effect until such time as the case may be tried on its merits as to whether or not the fifty three (53) discharged students would be re-admitted to the school. March 8 was set as tentative date for hearing on case to determine whether the school was within its lawful rights to suspend these 53 students. Of the fifty-three only 24 were enjoined. The rest are eligible for reconsideration of their application to re-enter Wiley College at opening of Spring quarter, March 8. Sat. 2-7-48

Some have already made application for review and they will be considered in the near future. Dr. J. S. Scott, special executive assistant to President McLeod and who is functioning as acting president, states that affairs at the college are moving along very satisfactorily. The enrollment of academic students remains above the 300 mark.

In addition there are 160 veterans taking vocational courses in photography and tailoring on the campus. Sat 2-7-48

President McLeod, upon the advice of his physician and President of the Board of Trustees, Bishop R. N. Brooks, will spend some time away from the campus recouperating from effects of the high tension under which he has been laboring for the past three or four months.

Wiley College Strikers Ask Legal Advice

(The Courier's Texas Bureau)

HOUSTON, Texas — Closely following announcement that all students planning to return to Wiley College after the holidays would have to file a readmission application form, certain students, fearful that their applications would be denied, sought legal advice, The Courier learned from reliable sources. 1-3-48

In several cities, reports are that law suits will be filed against the school if "suspected" strike leaders are denied admission.

GENERAL "WALKOUT" 1-3-48

Announcement that readmission blanks had to be filled out was signed by President E. C. McLeod.

The announcement resulted from a general walkout of students as Bishop Robert N. Brooks, chairman of the trustee board, was announcing that Dr. McLeod had been given a vote of confidence as president of Wiley by the entire board of trustees. 1-3-48

Students had demanded McLeod's ouster. Academic activities are scheduled to resume Jan. 5, but skepticism prevailed as to whether the militant students would accede to the boards' overruling their demands.

TOSSED "BOMBSHELL"

During the strike earlier in the year it was intimated that students had "a bombshell" that they would use when the time occasioned it. It apparently was the walkout staged a day before the scheduled holidays.

14e(1) Argus, St. Louis, Mo.

AUSTIN, Texas — Persistent, but unfounded rumors that the merger of Wiley and Samuel Huston College, two educational institiutions under the supervision of the Methodist Church, will be consummated at once received a blow here this week when a joint report released by Dr. M. S. Davage, secretary of the Methodist Educational Institutions and Bishop R. N. Brooks indicated that the work of the two institutions will not be interrupted in the near future. Fri. 6-25-48

The report reads:

"There is no connection whatever between the strike situation which prevailed at Wiley and the vote for the merging of the two institutions. In any event, each institution will continue its work and the merger, if argeed upon, will not be consummated for several years.--The only objective in the merging of the two institutions is to concentrate the work of the Methodist Board of Education into one large and better institution so what the one institution can do a better quality of work than two separate institutions." Fri. 6-25-48

Meanwhile, work at Samuel Huston College is proceeding with renewed enthusiasm and plans are being made to accommodate the largest enrollment in the history of the college when school opens in September. Fri. 6-25-48

Enrollment in the summer session is approximately 400, which exceeds that of any summer in the last decade.

The first witness, Chief of Police, C. M. Ezell, merely stated that there were peaceful relations between officers and students and that there was no violence January 5, when students staged a protest strike on the campus after 24 students received eviction notice. San Antonio, Texas

The second witness, H. F. Coleman, dean of Wiley College, testified he put students out of the main dormitories and had signed letters asking them not to return to the campus. Under rapid fire of cross examination from attorney for the students, Herbert T. Dotson, a Wiley College alumnus of Chicago, Dean Coleman got mixed up on whether students were legally evicted from the campus or illegally put out.

He testified that he saw a group of students among 200 others January 5 during the demonstration on the campus. Sat 2-7-48

"I signed orders against the men but I had nothing to do with drawing up the letters," he said.

"Do you realize you may be ruining a life?" he was asked.

"I didn't consider it as such," he replied, "neither did I realize that students of age were responsible for themselves as men and women instead of their parents." he added

When asked if he signed the letters under duress, he answered, "No."

McLeod Quits, Coach Fired In Wiley Shakeup

Completed Plans To Be Announced By Joint Committee

MARSHALL, Tex.—Coincident with the resignation of E. C. McLeod as president of Wiley college here late last week, the board of trustees announced the planned merger of the school with Samuel Huston College of Austin.

President McLeod's resignation was effective June 2.

Left to a joint committee yet to be appointed was the decision of where the proposed new institution would be located and how the necessary funds would be raised in which the school would be endowed.

Profs Dismissed

On Monday morning last it was also announced from the offices of Dr. J. S. Scott, specialist assistant to President McLeod, appointed by Bishop R. N. Brooks, that Fred T. Long, coach of the Wiley Wildcats and physical educational director of the college for the past twenty-five years would no longer be connected with the institution.

Reason given for Long's and seven other faculty members' dismissals was that their presence was not conducive to the best interest of the college. This was taken to mean that the faculty members were suspected of having actively sympathized with students during the Wiley student strike of last winter which ended in a state district court.

Served Six Years

Dr. E. C. McLeod has been president of Wiley for six years, having served two years previous to that as religious advisor during the days of Dr. M. W. Dogan. He told the board that he was weary of patience and tried of soul, and that he wished to relinquish the post as president of of the college. The board immediately accepted the resignation.

Austin Objects

It was stated that a prominent Austin attorney had raised objections to the proposed merger of the two famed Methodist schools, and stated that Wiley was seeking the merger for her own benefit after her recent upheavals.

Long and the 'Cats'

The dean of Southwestern athletics was Coach F. T. Long, nationally known for his stellar teams produced at Wiley in cooperation with his late brother, Harry J. Long. Wiley has won at least two national Negro grid titles and a number of Southwestern conference titles. The names of Long, Wiley and Dogan were synonomous. In a special interview Coach Long stated that the alleged suspicion that he had taken part any part in the recent student upheaval was grossly incorrect, other than this statement there was nothing else to say. He stated that at present he had no plans, but was open to suggestions.

A special committee was appointed to seek a new president for Wiley for the coming year. It was voted to maintain Wiley as a Class "A" rated college until plans had been approved for the moving of the two schools together. It would probably take some years before everything was ready for moving.

Also present during the recent board meeting were Bishops R. N. Brooks of New Orleans, and W. J. King of a Liberian constituiency, who is in the United States to attend a jurisdictional conference in Atlanta on June 9.

President McLeod did not reveal any plans for the future, but stated that he would take a rest during the summer months. He is recuperating from an illness sustained during the height of the student strike last January. He was a patient in John Hopkins at Baltimore.

Wiley Strike Orderly, Says Police Chief

MARSHALL, Texas—Hearings in the Wiley College strike began Monday morning in local court, with Police Chief E. M. Ezell as the first witness called. The police chief testified that the strike had been orderly and that students had displayed no form of violence.

Dr. E. C. McLeod, president of the college, was absent from court when hearings began. His physician claimed that he was too ill to appear, after he had been subpoenaed by the Sheriff's office. Atty. Herbert Dotson, representing twenty-five of fifty-three suspended students, insisted that the president be present.

Questioned by Attorney Dotson, Dean Henry S. Coleman said that the students had displayed no violent action during the strike. Miss Mary Hill of Chicago, chief Wiley student involved in the court case, was not brought into the picture during the opening stages of the trial.

MARSHALL, Tex. — The final chapter of the recent student strike at Wiley College was written here last week, when Judge W. H. Strength denied an injunction prohibiting students who had been barred from the campus from interfering in any way with operation of the school.

He dismissed writ of mandamus to force the school to take them back, except for those already readmitted. Seven of the strike leaders will not be readmitted to Wiley. Present enrollment is 600 students, plus 116 veterans taking vocational courses.

(Courier State Correspondent)

MARSHALL, Tex.—As the result of the "nervous breakdown" of Dr. E. C. McLeod, president of Wiley College, hearing of the injunction suit to restrain twenty-four suspended students from readmission to the college has been postponed until March 8. The Wiley president has been rushed to Johns Hopkins in Baltimore.

Hearing of the injunction was scheduled for Monday of last week. Failing to respond to a subpoena to appear in court that day, Judge W. H. Strength ordered that Dr. McLeod's deposition be taken at his residence on the Wiley campus. It was while this hearing was going on that the educator's physician announced his condition.

It was on Tuesday morning that attorneys for both parties agreed that a temporary injunction restraining twenty-four students from entering the Wiley campus be granted and remain in effect until such time as the case may be heard on merits as to whether fifty-three discharged students would be readmitted to school."

It was indicated that some of the suspended students would seek mandamus action to gain readmittance, but announcement that all but ten of the group considered leaders of the recent strike were eligible for immediate consideration for spring registration, March 6, kindled hopes that Wiley had seen its final day in court over the striking students case.

Attorney Herbert Dotson of Chicago entered the Wiley situation in behalf fo Miss Mary Hill, one of the students affected. He also represented other suspended students as parties to the case.

Although the press was barred from the hearing held at Dr. McLoed's residence, it was learned from reliable sources that the educator was forced to ask for rest periods during the questioning. Dr. G. T. Coleman was in attendance and made the announcement of his condition.

Dallas-Wiley Club Announces Stand On Conflict At Wiley

The Informer
Dallas, Texas
14e(1)
Sat 1-17-48

DALLAS — The Dallas-Wiley Club went on record in it's first meeting of the year, held at the YWCA at four p. m. Sunday January 11, as favoring the re-instatement of the 53 students of the college who were not allowed to enter school following the Christmas holidays, despite the fact that they had matriculated for the winter quarter two weeks prior to the holidays recess. These students were dropped from the school on the grounds that their presence in the student body was not conducive to the best interests of the school after they had taken part in a strike that led to the dismissal of three faculty members on charges of moral laxity. But the reason given was a minor demonstration before the bishop. Earlier these students had been assured that they would be unmolested for their participation in the uprising by a high official of the Methodist Church but the promised immunity failed to materialize after the strike was supposedly settled. An attempt to gain some sort of security for themselves by the students led to the premature closing of the school on December 17 when another strike seemed inevitable.

In going through the whole situation carefully the club agreed unanimously that the students had committed a grave error when they walked out on Bishop Brooks when he stated that the board had unanimously decided to retain the existing administration but took notice of the fact that the mistake was recognized and regretted as the apology that was forwarded to the Bishop bore out.

The club maintained that it was hardly just to single out 53 students to get rid of as the instigators of the walkout when all except three of four students got up and walked out on the speaker spontaneously. Their participation in the strike that led to the dismissal of the three faculty members was for the best interests of the institution, the club maintains while their dismissal for bringing to light the things that existed is out in keeping with the principles that Wiley and all religious institutions were created to stand for. The opinion is strong that the dismissals are an attempt to create a group of scapegoats to cover up the true picture of conditions in the college and to side-track interest from the things that are going on and center it on the "disobedience" of a group of conscientious students.

Members of the club who have children in the school related the in accessibility of the executive of the college to them upon visits to the school to see him in matters pertaining to their children. Many of the members of the club were not impressed with the news coming from Wiley until Dean J. I. Scott filed a suit against the school for the pay which he would not receive after being stricken from the payrolls of the school. At the time of the first strike he had issued a statement to the press that he had no desire to stay in any institution where the students did not appreciate his presence and for that reason he was resigning. These people believed that he had resigned and that the talk they heard was a lot of unfounded gossip but the filing of his suit has convinced these persons that there is a lot more to the matter than is being told.

They are now certain that the present trouble is an attempt by the administration to cover up for Dr. Scott despite the findings of a reviewing officer from the Methodist Board late in 1947.

Another incident which has incensed the group greatly is the calling of the Texas Rangers to guard the grounds of the group Alma Mater. Calling the act unnecessary, the club members went on to say that persons who are capable of stooping to such levels in an attempt to make a group of students seem rediculous have no place in any educational institution. The club further states that it, too wants to see "obedient" students in the college, but that it will be necessary to have upright and sincere attention paid to the things that go on the campus and persons of high moral principles and good intentions to teach in such a situation.

Pledging themselves anew to the principles, that Wiley stood for when they were students and should stand for now, the members of the club vowed to leave no stone unturned in their search for the truth behind the trouble, that has transpired in their Alma Mater and expressed the hope that all those who stand for honest leadership and decency in educational institutions will join them in their drive to ferret out the evil that threatens the existence of one of the oldest and proudest educational institutions in the nation.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the Moorland Branch YMCA at 4:30 p. m. Sunday, January 19. All members are urged to be present.

MARSHALL. — The presence of an FBI agent in a 15-minute conference with H. J. Mason, business manager of Wiley college and public relations director of the school, let loose a flock of rumors that the Veteran Administration was investigating recent application of funds paid to GI's at Wiley.

Since ex-Dean J. Irving Scott was the man who headed and ran the Veterans school at Wiley prior to the break last fall, most of the rumors naturally centered around him. But the ex-dean's friends stoutly maintained that there was nothing wrong at all with his handling of the funds and that he was not involved.

"PURELY SOCIAL"

According to Mr. Mason's statement to The Informer last Thursday afternoon, he did receive an agent of the FBI in his business office, but their conversation did not have anything to do with the case of ex-Dean Scott. He stated that they did not talk about anything of interest,, not even the mention of the college's name. This "social" call was made during the business part of the day, and while Mr. Mason was performing his official duties for the college.

In an exclusive interview with Professor Rosser, head of the Chemistry department of the college, and reputedly Scott's closest friend, he informed the reporter that he had talked with Mr. Scott last Friday, February 6, and that he had stated then that he had gained some knowledge that he was wanted by the government for something, just what he did not know. Prof. Rosser told the Informer that the last he had heard from Dean Scott was that he was somewhere at Stowe College, St. Louis, Mo., Prof, Rosser stated that if it were true that ex-Dean Scott was wanted, the former professor was being made the victim of an eight-ball scandal that would break soon and blow the college to bits.

He stated that he was still the dismissed dean's friend, and that he did not want to see anyone pin anything on him, or take advantage of his latest misfortune to cause him any embarrassment with the government.

As soon as the agent entered the building, rumors flew that for some time the vocational schools for veterans at Wiley had been under a shaky set-up between a few of the heads of the college, and with the recent shake-ups around the college the Veterans Administration had instituted a regular check-up, when they found irregularities.

Sunday afternoon Prof. Rosser stated that he still had not heard from his friend, nor anything else on the supposed hunt for, or arrest of his friend, J. Irving Scott, He stated that Major Pierson had talked with Scott sometime since last Thursday, but did not reveal the conversation. Major Pierson is at present head of the veterans department at Wiley.

In a check-up with the business office of the college, secretaries in the business office told the reporter that as far as they knew there were no discrepancies. They stated that all money received went into the college treasury, being banked by Mr. Mason. Just how "the others" became in the picture for their alleged "slices" they could not explain. They stated that if such was being done, they had no knowledge of it. The young lady who receives money for the college from the government stated that she could definitely trace all monies received until the time they were deposited in the bank. Just how they were re-issued she failed to state.

Failure to reach Dr. J. S. Scott, head of the college during President E. C. McLeod's absence, was the reason for no statement from him. He was reported not available for interview during the week-end.

Catholic University Will Honor Xavier President

Will Award LL. D. Degree for Education Leadership

For her leadership in educating Negro and Indian youth of America, Mother Mary Agatha Ryan, president of Xavier university, will be awarded the honorary degree of doctor of laws by Catholic university.

The Most Reverend Patrick O'Boyle, archbishop of Washington, D. C., and chancellor of Catholic university, made that announcement Wednesday. He said that the degree will be conferred on Mother Agatha during graduation ceremonies on June 9.

The degree is seldom presented to women, and only one such degree is given each year by the university. 5-27-48

Mother Agatha pioneered in teaching the Navajo and the Winnebago Indians and in establishing and administering schools for Negroes in the South.

In addition to her duties as president of Xavier university in New Orleans, Mother Agatha serves as directress of schools and studies for the sisters of the Blessed Sacrament. Forty-eight elementary and 14 high schools have been opened in various states during her administration.

Recognized among America's outstanding educators, Mother Agatha pushed the development of Xavier from its start. In 1925, it had but 47 students. Today it has more than 1100 with 85 faculty members and boasts a college of liberal arts and sciences, a college of pharmacy, a school of education and a graduate school.

Mother Agatha is a member of the board of directors of Xavier, the Pennsylvania Corporation of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament for Indians and Colored People; the Corporation of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament of Louisiana and the United Negro College Fund, Inc. She is also a member of the National Catholic Education Association, the Mediaeval Academy of America, the Academy of Political Science, the Pennsylvania State Education Association, the American Catholic Philosophical Association, the National Conference of Catholic Charities, the Catholic Rural Life Conference, the Society for the Advancement of Education, Inc., the National Catholic Welfare Conference, the National Education Association and a fellow of the American Geographical Society.

MOTHER AGATHA

Mother Agatha received the bachelor of arts degree from Catholic university and the master of arts from Villanova in 1924.

As a young sister, she was placed in charge of St. Michael's schools for Navajos and remained there for seven years. Principal chief among the Navajos then was Chee Dodge, the adopted son of Geronimo.

Later Mother Agatha was ordered to Philadelphia to take charge of the Holy Providence School for Negroes. She returned to the West as superior of the first Catholic mission among the Winnebago Indians where she served for five years. After that she became general council of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament.

The Red & the Black

It is a custom in New Orleans that when a graduate of Xavier University marries, he takes his entire wedding party to call on the university's president. No Xavier wedding is quite complete without the blessing of Mother Agatha Ryan.

In her 60-odd years, Mother Agatha has let her blessings fall on thousands all over the U.S. For most of them it has been a rare experience, for the skins of Mother Agatha's children are red or black. The university she runs is the only Catholic university for Negroes in the U.S. She is also director of 75 grammar and high schools—all for Negroes or Indians.

Journey into Squalor. Her work began in Philadelphia when she was "about 18." It was then that she heard of a wealthy lady who had founded a new Catholic order. Katherine Drexel, daughter of a Morgan partner, had been troubled by the squalor of Indian life she had seen on a trip through the West. In Rome later, she begged Pope Leo XIII to do something about it. "Why don't you become a missionary yourself?" the Pope replied. Katharine Drexel did, and gathered together in the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament a group of women who devoted their lives to teaching Indians and Negroes. Among them was Agatha Ryan.

Mother Agatha, a jolly little lady with twinkling blue eyes, was sent west to settle among the Navahos. Under her, St. Michael's school so flourished that she was picked to run the first Catholic mission among the Winnebago Indians. Finally, in 1932 she went to Xavier.

Over the years, Xavier has grown from a high school to a university—rated Class A by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools—"a good school, even if I do say so." Its enrollment has climbed from 47 to 1,100. Bit by bit, the sisters have added to it—a graduate school of arts and sciences, a college of pharmacy, a school of education, a school of social service. Courses include everything from Greek to journalism.

Scholars among Saloons. Xavier's 17 buildings stand surrounded by lumberyards, saloons, and a dog pound. Protected from these, on the tree-shaded campus, Mother Agatha spends her days. Last week, carpenters and cleaners were getting the campus ready for fall. But Mother Agatha had other matters on her mind. The order was building a new Navaho school, and she had gone to the order's headquarters outside Philadelphia to check up on the far-flung school system she presides over.

For a life of work, Mother Agatha gives herself little credit. But she has her satisfaction. She can't help being pleased when her alumni come back ("they seem to love to bring their children to see me"). It is not out of vanity, she insists, that she carefully conceals her age. Says she: "If I told it, they might try to retire me."

$1,340,000 Building Program Is Urged For Negro College

Montgomery, Ala., Sat. 1-24-48

The State Building Commission visited the Montgomery State Teachers College for Negroes here Friday, and college officials outlined four proposed building projects totaling $1,340,000.

The commission was scheduled to wind up a week-long tour of institutions of higher learning in the afternoon at Alabama College in Montevallo.

President H. C. Trenholm, of the State Teachers College, told the commission the college had two projects considered "urgent"—a dining room and home arts building, and an education and training school building.

He estimated the new dining room and home arts building, including remodeling the present dining room for dormitories, would cost $305,000. The education and training school building, with the reconstruction of the present building into a dormitory, was estimated to cost $325,000. Sat. 1-24-48

Trenholm listed the following two projects as "desirable":

1—Administration and graduate classroom building and swimming pool, $350,000. Sat. 1-24-48

2—Auditorium and fine arts building and the purchase of 25 or 30 city lots adjoining the college, $360,000. The Advertiser

State Finance Director W. H. Drinkard, a member of the building commission, said the group would meet here Wednesday morning to study the commission's surveys and findings.

It was also announced by Drinkard that the Capitol Building Commission would meet Monday. This agency differs from the State Building Commission in that it deals only with the capitol and grounds. Montgomery Ala.

The finance director added he did not know what would be considered at the meeting.

Only last week the State attorney general ruled in an advisory opinion that the legislative act creating the State Building Commission did not repeal the act creating the Capitol Building Commission, which gets an annual continuing appropriation of $100,000.

Members of the capitol group are the governor, Attorney General Albert A. Carmichael, Secretary of State Sibyl Pool, Chief Justice of the State Supreme Court Lucien D. Gardner, Drinkard, and two members at large to be elected by the other members. The Advertiser Sat

The last two members at large on the group were T. B. Hill, Jr., and Algernon Blair. 1-24-48

Negro Leader Asserts Regional School Setup Would Be 'Makeshift'

The News

Wed. 1-21-48

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 21—(AP)—Proposed regional schools to give Southern Negroes professional training would be only a "makeshift in education" and would not give Negroes educational opportunities "guaranteed to them under the Constitution," says an Alabama Negro leader.

E. D. Nixon, of Montgomery, president of the Alabama branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said yesterday Alabama Negroes "highly oppose" a regional training setup. The News

The regional plan under consideration among Southern states would enable the various states to send students elsewhere for training not available within their own borders. Trustees of Neharry Medical College, in Nashville, have offered that institution to the Southern states for use in a regional school program. Birmingham, Ala.

In a written statement, Nixon also said a suggestion of members of the Alabama State Board of Education that specialized education be made available at the Montgomery Negro Teachers College would be acceptable "only if the expanded facilities will be comparable with those found at the University of Alabama and Auburn." Mail

"Regardless of what might be done in the matter of higher education for Negroes in Alabama, all Negroes are aware of the fact that equal opportunities cannot be made possible overnight and it puzzles us why those in authority will create a double tax burden on the citizens of Alabama just to maintain a dual Jim Crow educational system."

The N. A. A. C. P. leader at a statewide meeting several months ago voted to demand admission for Negro students to the University of Alabama and Auburn. 1-21-48

Education Board Asks Study On Providing Training For Negroes

Wed. 1-14-48

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 14—(AP)—The State Board of Education today ordered an immediate study of the possibility of providing professional training for Negroes in Alabama.

At the suggestion of newly-elected vice president, former Congr Joe Starnes, Guntersville, the board instructed State Supt. A. R. Meadows to begin the study and make recommendations back to the board.

Starnes pointed to Monday's U. S. Supreme Court ruling that Negro students in Alabama are entitled to facilities equal to those provided for white persons, and said Alabama must prepare to face this issue. The News

"We can't dodge it any longer," he said. "We must raise the level of our educational and economic opportunities for Negroes."

Conference In Nashville Set This Weekend For Southern Governors

An immediate study designed to provide professional educational facilities for Negroes in Alabama was ordered Wednesday by the State Board of Education.

The action was taken after one member said the State is faced with a situation where this can be "dodged" no longer.

Supt. A. R. Meadows was instructed to begin the study and make recommendations back to the board.

Former Congressman Joe Starnes, of Guntersville, newly elected vice president of the board, asked that steps be taken to investigate the possibilities of such training. He said recent decisions of the U. S. Supreme Court make such a course mandatory. 1-15-48

"We can't dodge it any longer," he said. "We must raise the level of our educational and economic opportunities for Negroes. In doing this we can raise the general standard of living for all our people."

Ruling On Oklahoma

Starnes referred to Monday's U. S. Supreme Court decision, holding that Negro students in Oklahoma are entitled to facilities equal to those for white persons. The Advertiser

At a state meeting of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People here several months ago, Negro spokesmen said they intended to file court suits to compel the admission of Negro students at the University of Alabama and Alabama Polytechnic Institute (Auburn) Montgomery, Ala.

NAACP Attorney Arthur D. Shores said in Birmingham this week the association would proceed with plans for the litigation despite the Supreme Court decisions. News 1-15-48

Wednesday's action by the State school board was the second development in two days following the Supreme Court ruling in the Oklahoma case.

Gov. Millard Caldwell, of Florida, announced Tuesday that a group of Southern governors will meet at Nashville this week-end to discuss establishment of regional medical school for Negroes. 1-15-48

He said the governors will inspect Meharry Medical College, at Nashville, and if it is found acceptable, will consider its acquisition for the Southern States as an "interstate" institution.

Caldwell, who is chairman of the Southern Governors' Conference Committee on Regional Education, said the institution would be the first step in a regional plan for education of both white and Negro students. 1-16-48

Dr. Meadows, speaking to other members of the Alabama board, suggested that the State Teachers College for Negroes at Montgomery would be a good central location for establishment of professional training facilities. News

"Regardless Of Cost"

Board Member C. M. A. Rogers, of Mobile, said it would cost the State "millions of dollars" to provide such training. Both he and the other members agreed, however, that no matter what the cost Alabama would have to do something about it.

In urging that action be initiated on the Negro education question, Starnes observed: 1-15-48

"We've got a Supreme Court that will go to any degree to support issues raised by Negroes. The State must go ahead and do everything possible to improve educational and economic opportunities for Negroes." The Advertiser

The former congressman said he was not in favor of tearing down the South's segregation laws, but he did feel Negroes should be given equal opportunities as to employment and education. Montgomery, Ala.

Starnes said the State's $25,000 annual grant to provide out-of-state professional training for Negro students "has worked out fine, but now it looks like we are going to have to go into the field ourselves." The Advertiser

Law And Medicine

The State superintendent said law and medicine would be major fields of interest to Negro students. News 1-15-48

He said the Negro teachers college here would be ideal for starting such courses because it is near the center of the State's Negro population. Its location at the State capital, he added, would be convenient for administration purposes. News

Meadows said graduate work in education is already being supplied by the Montgomery institution, as are pre-law courses.

"Tuskegee Institute is more of a national or international Negro college," he commented. "Tuskegee probably could not be worked into the State system for such training." 1-15-48

In other actions the board raised the salaries of the presidents of the State's five teacher colleges from $6,000 to $7,500 a year, and elevated John E. Fortin to the position of director of the Alabama School of Trades, at Gadsden. The Advertiser 1-15-48

White Medics Favor School at Tuskegee

TUSCALOOSA, Ala.—(ANP)—Members of the northwest division of the State Medical Association, white, were in favor of a resolution read at a meeting in Northington Auditorium here recently, seeking the establishment of a medical, dental and pharmaceutical school at Tuskegee.

The resolution was proposed by Dr. Harvey B. Searcy, president of the Tuscaloosa County Medical Society, which was host to the division meet.

The recommendation was that the State Board of Censors study the existing situation in Alabama in terms of the ratio of Negro doctors to whites who are available to serve those of their race in the State. It pointed out that there are sixty-four Negro physicians to 1,794 whites to minister to Alabama's 3,000,000, but that one-third of Alabama's poupation is Negro.

Doctors from sixteen States attended the meeting.

Southwide Meet Proposed To Study Regional Plan

14e(2) Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

Considerable interest has been aroused over pending Congressional legislation designed to approve the regional education plan of Southern governors for Negro citizens of this area. The proposed All Citizens Committee on the Southern Regional College Plan met at the Butler Street YMCA, Thursday, March 25th, at 7:30 p. m. J. H. Calhoun was elected temporary Chairman and Miss A. L. Hall temporary secretary.

Sat. 3-27-48

R. A. Thompson read a statement of the issue that had been prepared by Dr. Ira De A. Reid for the Southern Regional Council. Questions were raised by Mr. Nelson Jackson and others in regard to the attendance of Presidents, Rufus E. Clement, Frederick D. Patterson, H. Trenholm and William Gray at the Educational Conference in Florida called by the Southern Governors. It was explained that although no public statement had been made by these men, they did not apparently make any commitments approving the plan.

Dr. George Mitchell indicated that the plan has merit without the proposition of segregation, but stated that if the NAACP calls the conference and invites only people who are against the Regional Plan, such a meeting will be pointless. Mr. Calhoun replied that although the national organization has taken a stand, the Local Branch which has some autonomy, has not, and that the purpose of the South-wide conference would be to gather facts, discuss the issues, and decide on what steps should be taken.

It was also proposed that several resource people and specialists be called in to give the history, both sides of the question, facts on Negro education and possible solutions. It was also suggested that educational, student and civic leaders from the fourteen Southern States affected, be invited to attend the Conference at their own expense.

The following points were established as the purpose of the proposed meeting:

1. To secure facts, figures, and intelligent opinion upon the history, potentialities, and consequences of the Southern Regional College Plan.

2. To hold discussions and draw up resolutions with the [illegible] that they will be adopted by the Conference.

3. To propose immediate action, based upon such resolutions as may be adopted.

Mrs. Reuben Taylor raised a question as to whether or not the information should be first prepared and distributed to the invites, requesting comments, and then decide whether or not the conference should be called. As a result of the discussion, the following agreements were reached:

1. That the Conference would be called for a Saturday-Sunday weekend, at the earliest possible date. Daily World

2. That each organization composing the All Citizens Committee, be asked to contribute at least $10.00, and as much more as possible to cover expenses estimated to be $500.-00. Atlanta, Ga.

4. That Mr. Calhoun and Miss Hall continue as temporary Chairman, and Secretary respectively. Sat.

NEGRO STUDENT ENROLLED

The Kansas City, Mo. Times 2-5-48

Arkansas Veteran Will Attend Law Classes at University

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Feb. 3 (AP)—A young Negro, whose undergraduate work was interrupted by Army service as a combat infantryman, was officially enrolled today as a law student at the University of Arkansas.

He is Silas Hunt of Texarkana who returned from the Army to complete his undergraduate study at Arkansas Agricultural, Mechanical and Normal College at Pine Bluff. This is a state-supported Negro school. The student's credits from that institution were accepted today by the university registrar and his course cards officially signed.

Like thirty white students enrolled from the spring semester, he will take courses in agency, criminal and real property law, but will attend separate classes.

Ark. U. Enrolls Negro

Atlanta, Ga. The Constitution Sun. 2-15-48

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Feb. 3—(UP)—Silas Hunt, 24-year-old World War II combat infantry man, formally enrolled Tuesday as the University of Arkansas Law School's first Negro student, but he will study and go to class separately from the whites.

The University newspaper, the Arkansas Traveler, published an extra edition carrying an editorial which indorsed the University's decision to admit qualified Negroes as graduate students. 2-4-48

Dean Robert A. Leflar of the Law School said arrangements were being made to provide separate classes and study facilities for the Texarkana, Ark., Negro. He is expected to begin classes next week in the law course for which he qualified in earlier studies at Arkansas AM&N School, a Negro institution at Pine Bluff.

Hunt becomes the first Negro admitted to a traditionall all-white Southern university under the recent Supreme Court decision granting members of all races equal education facilities. 2-2-48

The dean, looking disgusted with it all, promptly assigned Hunt to a classroom in the basement of the law building, where he is being instructed alone. New York, N. Y. Sun. 2-15-48

Some Points Are Raised By Compromise On Race

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky. Sun. 2-1-48

THE Arkansas compromise with racial exclusiveness in the State university's graduate and professional schools raises some interesting questions. A Negro wants to enroll in the law school. He would be admitted, on the condition that he stay in a special classroom. However, he would be instructed by the school's faculty members, all of whom are white.

This brings to light one of the great paradoxes of the situation. Segregation, it seems, is for students, but not for professors. Obviously, then, the principle, if it be a principle, breaks down a little. Or rather it is over-extended to the point at which it is likely sooner or later to break down completely. There is segregation even among the segregated, for the white students are to be separated while the white professors are not.

Is it a question of maturity (the professors) which can be depended on to accept non-segregation and immaturity (the students) which may not do so? Who is going to be protected from what or whom? It might surprise a great many people to discover from the responses that professional students are themselves mature. Their profession is the important thing, and they are doubtless aware that when they set out upon its practice they will find Negroes to be their colleagues as well as their clients and patients.

It is true that the mere proposal of compromise is a sort of milestone. However it may be forced by court decisions which demand equality of opportunity, it has happened. As far as this special event is concerned, it is incidental that the Negro involved in the Arkansas proposal has refused the condition of separation from other students. The main point is that adjustments to reality, however difficult, have begun. The Courier-Journal 2-1-48

ARKANSAS OFFERS COURSE FOR NEGRO

School of Law Would Provide Special Classes for Clifford Davis if He Reapplies

The Courier New York, N. Y. Sat. 1-31-48

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Jan. 30 (AP)—A Negro will be admitted to the University of Arkansas School of Law if he reapplies, Lewis W. Jones, president, announed today. Applications of Negroes for undergraduate work raised another question, the president added.

Dr. Jones said that if Clifford Davis applies again he will be given instruction apart from white students — but in the law school building and by regular members of the law school faculty.

Davis first applied for admission a year or more ago and was rejected because the application was not in order. He reapplied and his credits were found in order, but Davis made no further effort to attend the university.

Mr. Davis, of Little Rock, Ark., now is a student, at Howard University in Washington, D. C.

The United States Supreme Court recently held that an Oklahoma Negro was entitled to educational facilities equal to those offered whites. Sat. 1-31-48

Only yesterday at Pine Bluff, Ark., another Negro—W. A. Branton—said he probably would seek enrollment at the University of Arkansas in the School of Business Administration Monday.

Herbert L. Thomas, chairman of the University Board of Trustees, said later he believed "any qualified Negro applying for graduate work will be accepted," but that Negroes applying for undergraduate work "will be reected," explaining that facilities for undergraduate work at the university are packed to capacity.

One Solution

The Kansas City, Mo. Star Mon. 2-2-48

The University of Arkansas has settled the issue of Negro graduate students in another way. It has elected to admit qualified Negro students applying for graduate work under "special arrangement."

What these "special" arrangements may be are not announced but there are indications that in admitting Clifford Davis, Little Rock Negro, to the law school Arkansas has set up segregated classes within the university. "Special facilities" have been established for Negroes at the law school, the announcement declares.

This is one way to solve the problem of complying with state segregation requirements and at the same time complying with the decision of the supreme court requiring equal educational opportunities for all races. Wash. 2-2-48

And is it cheaper than setting up an entirely separate graduate school.

Silas Hunt Turns in "C" Plus Average

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — (ANP) — Silas Hunt, the Negro student enrolled in the University of Arkansas Law school, had a "C" plus average for the spring semester, the university's registrar announced tris week.

The Texarkana war veteran's average was 2.72 points. 'C' is 2 points, and 'B' rates four points. Hunt attends segregated classes to himself at the school, and regular university professors give him class instruction.

Arkansas Example

The University of Arkansas has dealt with an awkward problem in a simple, sensible and essentially decent way. There would be nothing remarkable in this if so many other Southern institutions of higher learning had not stubbed their toes on the same problem, doing grievous injury to their own academic pretensions and coming into open conflict with the "equal protection" clause of the Constitution as it has lately been interpreted by the Supreme Court. Having received a request for admission to its medical school from a qualified Negro applicant, Edith Mae Irby, the University of Arkansas approved her entrance and announced that she would be accorded the same treatment as other students, without segregation or discrimination of any sort.

Now, it should be recognized to the credit of the University of Arkansas that this was not an easy thing to do. It ran counter to local prejudices and to a long-established tradition. At the same time, it was the only practicable course for the university to pursue in the light of the Supreme Court decisions in the Gaines and Sipuel cases. It is certain that the educational opportunities of Arkansas medical students will in no way be impaired by Miss Irby's presence among them. Presumably they are adult and educated persons. As such, they will discover very quickly, if they have not done so already, that the color of Miss Irby's skin is no more a matter of concern to them than the color of her hair. And this will be the most valuable lesson they can draw from their university experience.

Perhaps the ideal place to teach such a lesson is among graduate students. They will pass it along. And once it is generally learned, the South will have solved the problem which is its greatest incubus. The University of Arkansas could find no better way to discharge its responsibilities as an institution of learning than by the leadership it has displayed in letting this lesson be taught.

Arkansas Secedes From Jim Crow

The most pertinent way one may define states' rights is to suggest it is the instrumentality through which we perpetuate states wrongs. Like the Biblical Ephraim, the South is joined to its idols. It is lured by the harlots of iniquity, jim crow, segregation and white supremacy.

One would think Oklahoma, a border state, would rise higher in the norm of social decency than Arkansas, but as we tug and pull at the traditional wickedness of the South we find today the folk in the Ozark hills and out in the delta country, where General Forrest once ruled with an iron hand, more inclined to accept democracy and fair play as a program of living than the people who allege they brought civilization to the Indian country.

When the supreme court of the United States around the first of the year rendered an opinion in the Sipuel case, and announced that Oklahoma must admit this young woman to the law school "as soon as it did one of any other group," the State of Deleware immediately announced it would enroll, without reservation, all Negroes desiring to enter classes at the University of Deleware. Arkansas followed with a limited program in its law classes.

But the past week we have the announcement in Associated Press dispatches that Arkansas has gone a step farther and that with the opening of the fall term a young Negro girl, resident of Little Rock, will be enrolled, unsegregated, in the state medical school. Is it not a shame that Arkansas should have to point the way to democracy in Oklahoma?

Somehow we are inclined to feel that the first experiment in the law school turned out well, and that Arkansawyers have decided Dixiecrats are in serious error regarding the dire calamities predicted if and when Negroes and whites attend school together in the South. Unquestionably, Arkansas experimented with a new philosophy in living when it permitted the Negro youth to enter the law school on a segregated basis, but everything has worked out so harmoniously that within less than a year the entire state has been reassured and the natives who live on the banks of the St. Francis and the Big Black rivers now know that good can come out of Nazareth.

And why should the South throw away its pearls? Why should the South waste and atrophy all of its wisdom and understanding about life, flirting as the ancient Ephraim, with the whores of folly? But for the big heart and the homing spirit of the late Dr. George Washington Carver, the South would have completely lost claim to this pearl of genius, and the greatest scientist ever born in Dixie. The South, following the traditional theory that the Negro was mentally lacking, traded Dr. Carver for a horse before he was released from chattel slavery. Dr. Carver had to leave the South and go to the civilized state of Iowa before he could receive graduate training in the field where he for many years flowered. Missouri canont take credit in any way for this towering giant in the field of science, because Missouri in the early life of Dr. Carver was impressed with the idea that black means inferiority.

And yet this same Dr. Carver developed the humble peanut into commercial use by which thousands of poor whites in Dixie today make comfortable livings. "Penol," a healing potion for the gums, was also produced from the peanut, giving millions relief suffering from a dreadful and painful disease. Why should unreason and an insane desire to make believe one race only has a patent on comon sense, prevent the world, and America in particular, from enjoying the blessings Negroes conceivably could create and offer in our day and time.

Perhaps Arkansas has heard of Dr. Charles Richard Drew, the black boy who was responsible during the late war for the lives of thousands of white youths who would have instantly died had not the blood plasma formula produced by the son of a black mother, been present to preserve strength and infuse new life into faltering hearts. Perhaps some GI, who knows what black genius and brain power meant to him in a critical moment on the battlefield, is now in a seat of power around Little Rock, and has determined that Arkansas shall harvest all of its gold. Perhaps the little black girl entering the medical school may write her name as indelibly in the field of medicine as did the little Jewish woman who held the secret of the atomic bomb, and who was driven from Germany by Hitler.

We are told in the scriptures that sometimes we entertain angels unaware. Hitler might have controlled the world had he turned a searchlight upon the total population of Germany and sought diligently to find value in everyone. Instead, with the same sort of stupidity of those who would deny Negroes education, he falsely assumed that all knowledge, vision and understanding rested in a Teutonic skull. Somewhere, we imagine today, in the throes of perdition, the once mighty Hitler is now saying: "Perish the thought."

Take Booker T. Washington. No man in our time gave more fully and completely to the total nation than this mighty man. The Extension Service of the U. S. Government is copied direct from his early farmers conferences; the United States Health Service stems direct from his Negro Health Week, the great program of industrial education that is featured in white schools today results from the thesis on education Washington gave to the South. All informed persons know this is true. Washington gave more of constructive value to the South than any other of its statesmen. He evidences the fact that educating Negroes helps every living soul residing under the Stars and Stripes.

Today, Negroes from American colleges, competitors in the world Olympics, are bringing fame and honor to their native land because of an opportunity to secure an education in northern climes. We are happy to know that Arkansas has for the second time seceded, but this time from segregation, jim crow and white supremacy.

Arkansas To Admit Negro Girl Student

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 24—(AP)—A 20-year-old Negro girl has been admitted to the medical school of the University of Arkansas — without segregation.

Dr. H. Clay Chenault, the university's vice president in charge of medical education and hospitals, said last night that Edith Mae Irby of Hot Springs will enter the school when the 1948-49 terms commence next month.

Dr. Chenault explained that it would be impossible to set up any measure of segregation in the medical school.

"She will be a part of her class, just like any other member," the university vice president said.

He pointed out that the board of regents had established a precedent when it allowed a Negro to enter the law school in 1947. The law student, Silas Hunt of Texarkana, attended classes under a program of segregation.

The Irby girl, a graduate of Knoxville, Tenn., college, was 28th in an aptitude test given to determine the 90 students who will make up the freshman class. Dr. Chenault said 11 other Negro applicants were rejected as a result of the aptitude test. The test was sponsored by the Association of American Medical Colleges.

Yale Prexy's Stand on Bias Law Scored

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—President Charles Seymour of Yale University was criticised last week by Vincent J. McGovern, president, Central Labor Council here, for opposing proposed State legislation prohibiting racial and religious discrimination by colleges in the admission of students.

The president was assailed for allegedly asserting at the annual Alumni Day exercises, that although Yale would continue to pursue liberal practices on admissions, "we must be completely free to select those we regard as best fitted to the privilege of a Yale education."

Mr. McGovern told Dr. Seymour by letter: "You argue that anti-discrimination legislation would constitute 'interference' in college affairs.

"Even if this were true, it would not follow that Americans of different racial, religious or national origins should be denied equal educational opportunity in order to spare colleges such petty annoyances. But it is not true."

Debate Regional School Proposals

The Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

By CHARLES J. SMITH III
(Special to The Courier)

SAVANNAH, Ga. — The spotlight of the educational world was focused on Dixie and Savannah in particular this week as the Regional Council for Education and the Southern Governors Council met here Saturday, Dec. 11 through Wednesday, Dec. 15.

Activities got under way at 2 P. M., Saturday, as the steering committee of the Regional Council for Education convened to map a program for Sunday and Monday.

Negro consultants to the Council who attended the meeting of the steering committee were Dr. W. R. Banks, vice president, board of trustees, Texas State University; Dr. C. O. Dummett, dean, dentistry, Meharry Medical College; Dr. F. D. Patterson, president, Tuskegee Institute; Dr. William H. Gray, president, Florida A. and M. College, and Dr. George N. Redd, head of the Department of Education, Fisk University.

The purpose of the Council is to assist States and institutions and agencies concerned with higher education in their efforts to advance knowledge and to improve the social and economic level of the Southern Region, according to a pamphlet distributed to the press at the meeting.

The pamphlet further describes the Council as a group organized as a result of a conference of Southern Governors which met in Asheville, N. C., in October, 1947.

Moving as rapidly as possible because it recognized the need of adequate facilities for higher education for both whites and Negroes, the Governors early in 1948 signed a compact to plan and establish "regional facilities," according to the pamphlet.

12-18-48

GRADUATE WORK

Of particular importance to both Negroes and whites, not only those attending the conference, but those in virtually every section of the country, is the program of providing Southern schools in which Negroes may enroll for graduate work in several professions.

In its preliminary "informal unofficial" report of the entire work-conference Sunday afternoon, the subgroup on veterinary medical training proposed to recommend to the Council that Tuskegee Institute become a regional school of veterinary medicine to be used by students who reside in any Southern State contracting therein. It further proposed that nine students from the State of Alabama be admitted and forty-one from other Southern States.

Likewise in a similar report, the committee on medical and related training proposed to recommend to the Council Monday that Meharry Medical College become a regional school of medicine along with any other that might cooperate, possibly Howard and the proposed medical school at Texas State University.

PROBLEM "ACUTE"

In its report the committee described the problem of Meharry as being "acute." It further said it might be necessary to take it (Meharry) over lock stock and barrel to be operated by the Regional Council.

There was no outward sign of jim crow either at the subgroup meetings or at the meeting of the entire work-conference in the ballroom of the spacious Oglethorpe Hotel, located on scenic Wilmington Island about eight miles from Savannah.

During the meeting of the subgroups Negroes sat intermingled with whites, participating freely in the discussions. The same was true in the ballroom, as Negroes entered and sat where they pleased. Throughout the meeting they asked questions if they wished and were called on to make any comment they felt like making.

Other Negroes attending the conference were Dr. A. E. Manley, dean, N. C. State; Dr. S. M. Nabritt, dean, Atlanta University Graduate School; Dr. George N. Redd, director of education, Fisk; Dr. R. E. Clement, president, Atlanta University; Mrs. N. E. L. Carnegie, dean of nursing education, Florida A. and M.; Dr. Melvin O. Alston, dean of education, Florida A. and M.; Dr. Houston Stalworth, Fort Valley; Dr. T. S. Williams, dean of veterinary medicine, Tuskegee; Dr. Lula Johnson, chairman of history department, Florida A. and M., and James A. Colston, president, Georgia State College.

During the conference, Georgia State College was host to the Negro consultants and their staffs. They were honored at a banquet held at the college Sunday night and guests at vesper services.

FSA Gives MD-Minded Youths Shot in Arm

The Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sat 4-2-49

WASHINGTON — (ANP)—In order to stimulate more Negro boys and girls to enter the medical profession, plans are being formulated by the Federal Security Administration, whereby financial assistance will be rendered to deserving students, according to an announcement made last week by Administrator Oscar R. Ewing.

Expressing his desire of seeing at least thirty more Negroes graduate from medical schools annually, Mr. Ewing said he was working on a plan which he hoped would encourage as well as assist Negro youth in receiving medical training.

He said he had the assurance of a big foundation to grant annual fellowships to 100 Negro students who could qualify for training in the pre-med schools providing FSA could work out a plan to get them through medical school. These fellowships will amount to $1,000 a year for a period of two years. Mr. Ewing expressed his belief that the other half of the bargain could be worked out.

Regional Education Bill Sidetracked by Senate

The Constitution
Atlanta, Ga. Fri. 5-14-48

WASHINGTON, May 13—(AP)—The Senate Thursday sidetracked a civil rights battle at this time by returning to committee a Southern States' Education Compact Bill.

The vote was 38 to 37.

The roll call was a thriller with the lead seesawing throughout.

As the roll call first ended it was 37 to 36 against sending it to Committee, but arrival of Sens. Capper, Republican, Kansas, and Edwin C. Johnson, Democrat, Colorado, during the recheck swung the margin the other way by a single vote.

Before the vote, Sen. Russell, Democrat, Georgia, said that returning the bill to committee meant the end of it in this session of Congress. The measure would give Congressional approval for Southern States to make a compact and jointly support educational institutions. The Southern States propose to set up universities for Negroes and keep their State Universities as all-white schools. Fri. 5-14-48

The motion to send the bill back to committee was made by Sen. Morse, Republican, Oregon.

Morse had announced that if his motion failed to carry he intended to try to write into the measure a clause to bar segregation of Negroes from white students in the proposed regional universities.

Morse also had served notice he would try to add to the bill the other civil rights proposals of President Truman. That program includes antilynching, antipoll tax anti-Jim Crow laws.

Southern Senators held a strategy meeting earlier in the day and decided to try to keep their bill before the Senate, even if it meant a Senate battle now over the Civil Rights issue. The Constitution

Russell said the Southerners would be agreeable, however, to laying their bill aside temporarily for other matters. 5-14-48

Russell said 16 Democrats held a conference in the office of Sen. Byrd, Democrat, Virginia. He said all except one announced he would oppose the move to send it back to committee. Atlanta, Ga

"That would be killing the plan for this session," Russell said. "We are relying upon the innate sense of fairness and decent procedure by the Republican Senate leadership for a fair test on the merits."

Acting Gov. M. E. Thompson, of Georgia, and Gov. Millard Caldwell, of Florida, informed of the Senate action shelving the regional universities measure, termed it "politics" and officially expressed regret the South should be victim of such action.

Dr. John Lawlah At Wisconsin U.

Each year the medical alumni association invites a distinguished graduate of the University of Wisconsin Medical School to speak at the annual conference. Dr. Lawlah is the first Negro to be so honored.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Speak Now or Else Hereafter

By Dean Gordon B. Hancock for ANP

Informer & Sentinel
New Orleans, La.
Sat. 2-7-48

"Speak now or else hereafter forever hold your peace has been soelmnly uttered by many a solemn minister before the assembled wedding guests. The injunction holds an ominous meaning for southern Negro educators before the studied attempt of the southern governors to feist upon the south and the Negroes thereof a regional university for higher education of Negroes.

The success of this new attempt to evade the spirit of the United States constitution will prove one of the great iniquities of the century. Social structures have a way of remainng after socal functions have changed. This means, race relaion ally speaking, that when segregation in the south has died a natural death and when the old south can no longer stem the tide of a higher civilization, the highly financed instruments of segregation will be stumbling blocks in the way of the new order if things whereby the brotherization of mankind will become a fact and not merely a theory. The Informer & Sentinel

One of the more depressive aspects of the impending situation has been the silence of the Negro educators of the south. The time to speak is now and the matter in question is the matter of this proposed segregated- regional university whereby segregation will be unnecessarily prolonged in the south and nation. It is the fervent wish of this column that Negroes of the south will not swallow the regional university idea as they swallowed Lillian Smith's "Strange Fruit" The south is growing and growing rapidly and it would be a major calamity if the regional university were thrust in the way of this steady growth. Segregation cannot be banished by coddling segregation; it must be opposed not a bit mere for the Negro's advantage than for the white man's pride and self-respect. New Orleans, La.

Our Negro college presidents are the logical spokesmen in the premise. Atlanta is the logical center of the sentiment that should be opposed to the purported educational departure. Salvation means being not only saved to something, but to be saved from something. The future salvation of the south will necessitate being saved from enough things beside a regional university and the vagaries thereof. 2-7-48

We are witnessing one of the most shamefull episodes in American history when the most clever minds of the south are being engaged in ways and meang of evading the cardinal doctrines of the United States constitution. Southern tradition is being flaunted in the face of the constitution, in the face of the bible and in the face of democracy; in fact, it is being flaunted in the very face of God. If God is opposed to segregation then a sector of the south is opposed to Him.

This nation is fast being hurtled into one if the most critical situations ever to face a regnant nation. Britain quailed before the challenge and is fast passing from the scene of action. Britain's days are numbered. Unless we are willing to face God's truth and live by it, we too are a deemed nation. Great armies and navies and even atomic bombs cannot save the nation that comes to cross-purposes with God. The Informer & Sentinel

Race prejudice and segregation and the spirit that prompts them are at cross-purpose with God Almighty; and if our nation insists, it is only a matter of time and our decline is sure. We need some great Jeremiah to sit at the upper window and weep over the tragic are at cross-purpose with God Altranspirations that are in the offing. New Orleans, La.

There is a mistaken idea that when we are working for justice and righteousness among men, we are working specifically for Negro advantage. This has long since ceased to be the case. The white man has as much if not indeed more to gain from a spiritual transfusion for this nation, than the distressed, oppressed repressed, and suppressed Negroes. The world is crying for the bread of democracy at the hands of our great country; we are offering the stones of segregation, discrimination and race prejudice. Let our Negro educators speak God and Time and Right and on their side! Sat. 2-7-48

D. C. Approves Medical School Plan For Area

Atlanta Daily World

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—Oscar R. Ewing and officials of Gallinger and the three medical schools.

The plan, under which the Howard University Medical School will be admitted to hospital and teaching privileges at Gallinger Municipal Hospital on an equal basis with George Washington and George-town Universities, was approved by the District of Columbia Commissioners last Thursday.

Agreement on the plan, involving the complete elimination of racial segregation at Gallinger, had been reached on March 11 at a meeting of representative of the three medical schools and the Health Department with Commissioner Guy Mason in attendance. Sat. 5-15-48

Approval of the plan was taken in those divisions up to one third by the city heads at a meeting with of the bed capacity of those Federal Security Administrator vices Sat 6-12-48

The Howard University Medical School also will make nominations to the interne staff at Gallinger Hospital on October 15, 1948, for appointment, November 15, 1948, and for service beginning July 1, 1949.

Gallinger has thirty-six internes and forty residents. Beginning July 1, 1949, the number will be increased to forty-six internes and forty-six residents and assistant residents. Howard University Medical School graduates will fill one-fourth of these positions, as will Georgetown and George Washington. The remaining one-fourth will come from medical schools outside of the District of Columbia.

Negro leaders testify against regional schools in Congress

WASHINGTON—Lead by the NAACP, representatives of 12 national organizations declared bitter opposition to the establishment of segregated regional colleges during public hearings held in Congress on Senate Joint Resolution 191, which asks congressional consent to a compact entered into by 14 southern governors to take over Meharry Medical school in Nashville, Tennessee as a regional school. Negro organizations held that this is an attempt on the part of southern states to (1) circumvent decisions of the United States Supreme Court requiring states to give within their own boundaries equal educational opportunity to Negro students, and (2) "perpetuate educational segregation and discrimination with the express approval of Congress.

Appearing as witnesses were: Thurgood Marshall, special counsel of the NAACP; Dr. J. G. Gathings, chairman of the board of trustees, National Medical Association; Dr. Millard R. Dean, representing the National Dental Association; M. C. Clarke, president of the National Insurance Association; Alma Vessells, executive secretary of the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses; George M. Johnson and James Nabrit, representing the Conference of Presidents of Land Grant colleges; Dr. Martin D. Jenkins, educational consultant for the National Negro Publishers Association; Rev. W. A. Jernagin, director of the Fraternal Council of Negro Churches; George L-P Weaver, director of the CIO Committee Against Discrimination; James B. Cobb, secretary of the education committee, National Alliance of Postal Employees; M. W. Perry, of the National Lawyers Guild.

Sole Negro to appear in favor of the plan was Dr. Daniel Thomas Rolfe, faculty member of Meharry Medical School and executive secretary of Meharry Alumni Association.

Attacking the southern proposal, Marshall told members of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee that: "Responsibility of the southern states to educate Negro citizens cannot constitutionally be met by any plan which would force a Negro medical student from Texas to attend a regional medical school in Tennessee, while his white compatriot attends the University of Texas Medical School. The compact appears to be based on the twisted reasoning that what each southern state is forbidden to do individually can be lawfully accomplished if some of them act together. But the reality remains that so long as a state provides education to white students within its borders there is no legal way for it to deny such education to its Negro citizens. We do not assume that the southern governors propose to close down existing facilities and send all their students elsewhere in order to overcome this initial legal hazard.

"The truth is that in order to increase educational opportunities for its citizens, the south must give up segregation," Marshall said. "The southern states can neither jointly nor severally provide equality in a segregated set-up."

Marshall further challenged the good faith of the governors in coming to Congress with the proposal. He said that they were seeking a federal "prop for segregation to bolster it against the withering blasts of the President's Committee on Civil Rights, the President's Commission on Higher Education" and equalization suits now pending before various state courts.

The Senate Resolution was introduced by 28 senators, some of whom came from states as far north as Maryland and West Virginia.

Commenting on the situation, Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP, said: "Our only hope of defeating this brazen scheme to extend and entrench educational segregation is for Negroes all over the country to swamp their senators and congressmen with letters, telegrams, telephone calls and personal visits. Congress must be made to know that we do not intend to take this 'laying down.'"

Plan for Regional Schools Rejected by Southern Deans and Registrars

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, — "It is unjust and undemocratic for a State to support institutions within its borders for one racial group and maintain at the same time that lack of funds requires colored citizens to pursue higher education outside its borders."

This indictment of educational discrimination by Southern States seeking to by-pass the U.S. Supreme Courts decision in the Gaines Case through a Regional Schools' Plan, featured resolutions adopted by the national association of Collegiate Deans and Registrars which met here March 24-26.

84 Delegates Attend

In attendance were 50 deans of colleges and 34 registrars from 16 States and the District of Columbia who diseussed the theme "Extending Democracy in Institutions of Higher Education for Negroes."

In the absence of Persident F. D. Patterson of Tuskegee, Dean I. A. Derbigny extended welcome at the opening session in the auditorium of the Trade "A" building on Thursday morning, and discussed briefly the conference theme.

Panel Speakers

Participants in a panel discussion, "Handicaps to Intellectual and Cultural Growth in Colleges" were Robert G. Brown, Tuskegee student; Dean R, A. Carter, Alabama A. and M. College; Dr. H. C. Trenholm, president, Alabama State Teachers College; Dean B. W. Hall Jr., Leland College; and Dr. Mozell Hill, Atlanta University Department of Sociology.

Other topics discussed Thursday were:

"Democracy in Faculty Administration Relationships," by Dr. George N. Redd, Fisk University; "Faculty Morale as it Relates to Rank, Tenure, Salary Scale and Sabbatical Leave," by Dean W. W. E. Blanchett, Fort Valley State College, Ga., and "Legislative Function of the College Faculty," by Dr. James Holladay, University of Alabama.

Students Role Aired

An address on "Students Role in the Democratic Progress," to students, faculty members and visitors was delivered in the Institute Chapel on Thursday evening by Dr. T. R. Solomon, registrar, Prairie View A. and M. College.

A banquet was given in Tompkins dining hall at 8 o'clock Thursday night at which Dr. Harry V. Richardson, former chaplain of Tuskegee, spoke on the conference theme.

At the Friday session, a special committee report, "Survey on Educational Trends in Curriculm Planning in the Liberal Arts Colleges" was given by Dean J. Newton Hill of Lincoln University, (Pa.), followed by a report, on "Student Government and Participation in Activities of the College," by Dean J. T. Cater, Talladega College.

Regionalism Rapped

Other reasons given in the association's opposition to regionalism that:

"Regionalism is unnecessary for all States...The individual States have not maintained equality through the past 80-odd years of freedom for colored people...

"We cannot understand the justification for violation of the principle of States' Rights merely for the sake of what might be called economy in education.

Stand by Equality

"We reaffirm our belief in the principle of equality of educational opportunity — that democracy demands that all citizens possess the right to attend any type of educational institution open to any other group.

"We confess that we are in a dilemma to believe that the principle of regionalism is offered in good faith by the leadres who at the same time express an unrelenting opposition to the "Civil Rights" bills as proposed by the President's Commission.'"

Official Staff

New officers elected are:

Dean Bertram W. Doyle, Louisville Municipal College, President; Registrar J. T. Brooks, State Teachers College, Alabama, first vice president; Registrar E. N. Wilson, Morgan State College, Baltimore, secretary;

Mrs. Charlie S. Henderson, Arkansas State College, Pine Bluff, assistant secretary; Registrar C. D. Batchelor, Langston University, Oklahoma, treasurer; and Dean H. Manning Efferson, Florida A. and M. College, Tallahassee, editor of the Journal.

Dr. Gray Reverses Stand

The Lighthouse + Informer

"No self-respecting Negro can afford to support the regional college plan," Dr. W. H. Gray, Jr., presidetn of the Fla. A. and M. College, told some 3,500 teachers in Columbia Friday night. Sun.

In making the statement and others in objecting to the regional college plan," Dr. W. H. Gray, Jr., president of the ing a position on the issue attributed to him by Governor Caldwell of Florida. He agreed with other opponents that such a college would lend aid to perpetuation of segregation in education and destroy most of the educational gains Negroes have made through courts in recent years. 4-4-48

But Dr. Gray's about-face may or may not be a fact Before he had come to South Carolina to deliver the keynote messsage to the state's teachers, he had been questioned by the State NAACP Conference and may have learned on his arrival that he would have been thoroughly embarrassed had he gone through with declarations supporting the regional college. It is believed that the danger in such a course was pointed out to him by leaders in the profession on his arrival. And to clinch the case the teachers themselves had beforehand voted unanimous opposition to the regional plan. Columbia, S. C.

Of course, we are told, that Dr. Gray has never backed the college plan; that Governor Caldwell listed him in this category knowing that he could not expediently take issue because of his position. Then, we are told, Dr. Gray felt there would be no organization resistance to the scheme and while he opposed it, did nothiing to halt it since he felt Negroes would allow its establishment. Sun 4-4-48

Whatever the real reasons behind his puzzling position of several days ago, Dr. Gray is now on record as opposing the regional college. It well may be that South Carolina spun him around. Left out on a limb are Presidents Patterson of Tuskegee, Clement of Atlanta University and Trenholm of Alabama State. The Lighthouse and Informer

Closed Meet Said To Have Avoided 'Regional'

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga. Sat 4-24-48

Eighteen representatives of Negro colleges, educational foundations and medical schools conferred for two days at Atlanta University reportedly on the serious problem of the supply of Negro doctors with reference to pre-medical education.

The group met in closed sessions Thursday and Friday in the third floor presidential conference room at the University. The press was not invited.

President Rufus E. Clement, of Atlanta University, revealed following the closed meeting that the group had discussed only the matter of supply of Negro physicians and that regional education was not a topic of discussion.

Members of the Negro press had been informed earlier that the meeting was being called to discuss the idea of regional medical education at Meharry in Nashville. President Clement said this was an erroneous idea concerning the conference. Meharry entered the discussions as a medical training school and not as a regional institution, Clement sad. Daily World

A press release on the meeting was said to be in the process of preparation Friday afternoon, but this release had not been given the press late last night. President A. W. Dent, of Dillard University, was to have released the report to the press. Atlanta, Ga.

One source revealed that the conference was inspired by the dearth of Negro physicans and medical students several years ago, and the interest of large educational foundations which had been pressured to build a new Negro medical school. Sat 4-24-48

Among reported representatives to the Atlanta University conference were the dean of Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., and a representative of the Emory University School of Medicine, Atlanta as well as representatives from Meharry Medical Colleges and Negro undergraduate schools. Also reportedly present was a representative of the Provident Associates, which had the backing of educational foundations such as Rosenwald, Rockefeller and General.

Regional Education Action By House Pleases Georgians

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga.
Thurs 5-6-48

By BOB ERWIN.
Constitution Washington Bureau.

WASHINGTON, May 5—Georgia Congressmen, heartily indorsing House passage, by a vote of 236 to 45, of a joint resolution authorizing a States' compact to establish a system of regional education, predicted Wednesday that the Senate would ratify the measure on Friday.

The resolution gives congressional consent to the regional education compact recommended by the Southern Governors' Conference Feb. 8. It would permit States to pool their resources and establish regional colleges to provide graduate and technical colleges and universities.

Rep. James C. Davis, of Stone Mountain, said this would give "the youth of our section educational advantages equal to those anywhere in the country." Rep. Eugene Cox, of Camilla, expressed similar sentiments.

The Constitution

Rep. Henderson Lanham, of Rome, brought out that, through unified action, Southern States could establish graduate schools which as individual States they are not able to provide. This means the South could build and maintain better schools not only for Negroes but for white people as well, he added. Atlanta, Ga.

"Under the compact," Rep. Stephen Pace, of Americus, said, "we should be able to provide the necessary educational institutions in the South and at the same time conform with all the requirements of the Constitution and the decisions of the Supreme Court."

Rep. Prince Preston, of Statesboro, declared it is absolutely necessary for the South to pool its resources if it is to create institutions of higher learning offering specialized training on a graduate level. Thurs 5-6-48

Senate Shelves Southern School Plan

Detroit, Mich. 5-11-48

Foes said the regional university plan would be used to meet recent Supreme Court decisions that Negroes must be given equal educational facilities.

Free Press Wire Services

WASHINGTON—A dramatic 38-to 37 Senate vote shelved the bill to give Congressional approval to a Southern plan for regional universities.

The vote was to send the measure back to the Senate Judiciary Committee for further study. It was on the motion of Senator Morse (R., Ore.) who said he wanted to prevent segregation of Negroes in the proposed schools.

WHEN THE ROLL CALL was first tallied, the count was 37 to 36 against sending the bill back. But during the recount, Senators Capper (R., Kan.) and Johnson (D., Colo.) arrived in the chamber with two "aye" votes. They swung the decision.

They said it would permit continued refusal to admit Negroes to white institutions and would be a device for continuing segregation.

Sponsors of the plan, however, denied that this was the purpose.

IF THE 15 STATES set up regional universities for Negroes—or for Whites—they would need approval of Congress, supporters of the plan said.

Senator Morse argued such approval was not needed under the Constitution.

Regional Collaboration

Birmingham News

The South is currently considering regional educational institutions to provide specialized training for persons, both white and Negro, who cannot find suitable training in their own states. But regional schools are only one phase of a broader interest in interstate cooperation. Other state institutions as well as schools lend themselves to regional support. Mon. 6-14-48

The May issue of State Government reports on recent exploration by some Western states of the advisability of institutional care on a regional basis. A number of the less populous states in that part of the nation have found it difficult to maintain the right kind of institutions in cases where the number of patients or inmates was small. So they have been working out regional agreements whereby one state would have charge of an institution and other states using it would pay their part of the expense under formulas carefully and equitably worked out.

The South should also be weighing the possibility of regional institutions of various kinds other than educational. Although the population of Southern states is generally large enough to provide intrastate care of large institutionalized groups, there are smaller groups for which most individual states do not and cannot easily provide institutional care.

Birmingham News

Consider, for example, the victims of cerebral palsy, of which spastics are the largest class. Isn't the state as much responsible for the education of spastic children as for the education of blind or deaf children? That it hasn't assumed more responsibility toward spastics has been due to the smaller number of them, to the larger expense sometimes needed in their education, and to the comparative newness of our knowledge of how most of them can be educated and become useful, happy human beings. But if a single state cannot provide a school for spastics, could not a group of states do it?

The spastics, of course, are only one example. It might even be that difficulties growing out of a failure to segregate old and young criminals could be removed through regional reformatories for young first offenders. A reformatory for young white women would seem especially to fit into a regional plan. Visually handicapped students who need not be sent to schools for the blind, blind or deaf school graduates who wanted to do high school or college work, and many other special cases could be made the object of regional responsibility. Another suggestion is the separation of idiots, imbeciles and morons in institutions for the young. Through segregation, the latter two groups could be trained for useful work; training would be much more difficult were they associated with low-mentality idiots. Regional cooperation in these cases is also a possibility worthy of study.

Regional education and regional institutions are no longer hypothetical matters. Their need and their desirability are proved. The only questions relate to the extent and feasibility of such cooperation in particular cases.

DEFEAT OF COLLEGE PLAN HAILED BY ATLANTA PAPER

May 20, 1948

ATLANTA, May 20— Hailing the defeat in the Senate of the southern scheme for segregated regional colleges, the Atlanta Daily World expressed the hope that the measure has been permanently set aside.

AP & P Press, New York City

"We rejoice," the editorial said, "in the defeat of the scheme. For it has neither moral nor legal foundation. And as Thurgood Marshall so well stated before the committee hearings, in the last analysis the Supreme Court would be asked to declare it invalid, but it would be unhealthy for the Congress to give its blessings to the system. Once again, Negro Americans owe another debt of gratitude to Walter White and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

Dixie Veterinary Study At University Urged

The Atlanta Constitution

Atlanta, Ga.

Mon. 12-13-48

By M. L. ST. JOHN
Constitution Staff Writer

SAVANNAH—Seven Southern States would send students to the newly constructed veterinary school at the University of Georgia and would help finance the operation of this school on a regional basis, under terms of a provision suggested for recommendation to Southern Governors here this morning by educational leaders.

College and university presidents from throughout the South discussed actual details of establishing regional schools in medicine, graduate work, veterinary medicine and research late yesterday. Subcommittees made reports and received support from the educators. The ideas were proposed for presentation this morning to the Regional Education Council—composed of Governors and two educational leaders from each State—for final approval or disapproval.

Dean Tom Jones, of the University of Georgia Veterinary School, speaking as chairman of a subcommittee, suggested that white students from Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia attend the Georgia school. Out-of-Georgia students would pay the same tuition fees as resident students. Each State could contribute $1,000 per student—considered the actual cost of running the school—to pay for operation of the school. Students' quotas would be set up for each State.

Similar regional white veterinary schools would be established at Auburn, Ala., and Oklahoma A. & M. A Negro school would be developed at Tuskegee. There are State schools already in operation at these sites.

Mon. 12-13-48

The Governors today will be asked to develop Meharry Medical School at Nashville, Tenn., along similar lines as a school to train Negro doctors for the South. A sub-committee suggested that the many white medical schools broaden their bases of operation, and stressed the necessity of schools for nurses.

Noting that a lack of qualified teachers is the greatest drawback to establishing graduate schools in the South, Pres. Harold Stokes, of LSU, speaking for a sub-committee, urged fellowships to students who will agree to work in the South. He suggested an appropriation of $200,000 annually for this purpose.

Regional School Bill Tops First Hurdle

The Record

The Senate judiciary committee has approved the bill to grant the permission of Congress to the Southern states to enter into a regional compact to set up regional graduate schools for both whites and Negroes.

The schools would be supported by state funds from all of the participating states. They are designed to fill gaps in the higher education of the South that cannot be filled by any of the Southern states acting alone.

The chief beneficiary of the regional school idea will be the Negroes who desire to take graduate courses not offered to their race in the states in which they live, courses which could not be offered save at considerable expense, increasing the taxes on both whites and Negroes, particularly if segregation is to be maintained, as the South is persuaded it should be maintained.

But whites would also benefit. Few of the Southern states have enough white students seeking to take some of the courses to make the establishment of schools in these specialized fields feasible. But some of them are the very fields in which the South needs more knowledge and research.

The states which originally signed the tentative compact adopted by the conference of Southern governors in February are: Alabama, Arkansas, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Maryland, Mississippi, Tennessee and Texas. Other Southern states might be expected to join if the bill passes the Congress to authorize the compact. 4-14-48

And there is no guarantee that the measure, introduced by 29 Southern Senators, will be passed. Spokesman for the Negroes oppose it as being a device for continuing the segregation system. And this isn't, of course, the whole end and aim of it, as these opponents assume. There is another way to accomplish the purpose of segregation, if the South wants to come to it, a way that would put the South in the clear on the supreme court's requirement that equal educational facilities must be provided for both races within the state. It is the device of setting up segregated classes in the existing state colleges and universities, taught by the same professors as teach the white classes, although the two campuses be separated. Wed 4-14-48

The advantages of the regional school system over this proposal, from the Negro students' point of view—and none of the talking or very little of it is being done by the Negro students who might desire to take the courses—are at least two. One, it would allow for the establishment for Negroes on a regional basis of courses not now offered even to whites within some of the states, maybe all of them. And it would offer the hope of employment as professors in these regional Negro schools to those graduates of them and of other Negro institutions who go on to take their doctor's degrees.

But it must be recognized that the opposition exists and that so long as it does the Negroes in the North can wield considerable influence with Congress and congressmen.

Regional-School Plan Is Shelved By Senate

Is Sent Back to Committee By One Vote; Threat By Morse Causes Virginian to Stray

Louisville, Ky. Fri 5-14-48

By ROBERT L. RIGGS,
The Courier-Journal Washington Bureau.

Washington, May 13.—By a margin of one vote, the Senate today put on the shelf a Southern proposal to give Congressional authority to 15 states to set up regional institutions of higher learning for Negroes.

The chamber approved 38 to 37 a motion by Wayne Morse, of Oregon, Republican foe of segregation, to send the regional-compact resolution, already approved by the House, back to the Senate Judiciary Committee for further study. The effect of the vote is to kill the resolution for this session.

Morse's Threat Has Teeth.

The Courier-Journal

Nine Democrats, including Kentucky's Alben W. Barkley, voted with 29 Republicans in support of the Morse motion. Ten Republicans joined with 27 Democrats in an effort to keep the resolution alive.

Louisville Ky.

With the exception of Virginia's A. Willis Robertson, senators from the Deep South stuck together in opposing the Morse motion. Robertson voted for it. The Virginian apparently was motivated by Morse's threat that unless the resolution went back to committee, he would attempt to tack onto it all the controversial civil-rights legislation. That would include an antilynching bill, an anti-poll-tax bill, and an F.E.P.C. bill. Fri 5-14-48

Kentucky's Republican senator, John S. Cooper, who spoke against the regional compact Monday, voted with Morse to send the resolution to committee.

Indiana's Homer E. Capehart sounded the first Dixie protest against President Truman's civil-rights proposal.

Out of the Tallahassee conference came a proposal for a 15-state regional compact, under which the South could establish schools of medicine, engineering, and other professional institutions. Theoretically, some of the schools could be for Negroes and some for whites.

Ferguson Tells Bill's Aim.

The Courier-Journal

Louisville Ky.

Actually, the purpose of the plan was to enable the Southern states to get around the Supreme Court's ruling that if they are to practice segregation, they must provide equal educational facilities at home for whites and Negroes.

Fri 5-16-48

Morse, Homer E. Ferguson of Michigan, and other senators charged that the reason the Southerners were seeking Congressional approval of the compact was that they wanted Congress to give at least implied approval to the policy of segregated schools.

Ferguson said that if a court test should come on the question of segregation, the Southerners could argue that Congress had given its approval to the policy of separate regional schools for whites and Negroes. Even State universities could make such a claim, Ferguson said, because, by having one State contribute to a university for whites in another state, they could argue the State school was a regional institution.

The Courier-Journal

Louisville Ky.

Says States Have Power Now.

Cooper and Morse argued that there is nothing to prevent States from setting up regional schools without Congressional approval the compact would decrease power of the Federal Government, Morse and Cooper said, then they admit that the Federal Government has authority over State, public-tax-supported education. Both Morse and Cooper said they were unwilling to admit such federal authority exists and expressed surprise that Southerners, of all people, would be willing to admit it.

Louisville Ky. 5-14-48

Clements Hasn't Signed.

The first project for the regional compact, had it been approved, was to take over Meharry University in Tennessee, a medical and dental college for Negroes. The school is going to the wall, the Southerners said, unless something is done for it.

Kentucky is listed as one of the 15 states subscribing to the regional compact, but Governor Earle C. Clements has never signed the compact. The Governors of 14 others have done so. They are: Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Maryland.

Senate Body Favors Regional School Compact

WASHINGTON, D C. — (NNPA) —The Senate Judiciary Committee, by a vote of 6 to 2, on last Monday approved the Senate joint resolution giving the consent of Congress to a compact of southern states to set up regional schools. Wed

The compact by the governors of 14 southern states as a meeting of the Southern Governors Conference in Tallahassee, Fla., Feb. 8th, provides for the establishment and maintenance of regional schools colleges. 4-14-48

Supporters of the compact at a hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee last month that regional schols would enable the South to provide better facilities for professional and post-graduate training of both white and colored students. Wed.

Opponents charged that the compact was an attempt to extend state boundaries for educational purposes so as to meet the requirements of decisions of the United States Supreme Court that each state must furnish equal educational opportunities for white and colored students within the state boundary. 4-14-48

They also charged that it was designed to crystallize segregation in education and give it the sanction of the Federal Government.

Senators Homer Ferguson, of Michigan and William Langer of North Dakota, voted against the resolution. Daily Worker

Regional Idea Seen As Device Of Circumvention

Tues. 4-27-48

(Second of a Series)

CHICAGO—(ANP)— College presidents of Negro schools are unanimously opposed to regional schools as proposed by the southern governors, the Associated Negro Press poll on Negro education reveals.

Negroes should also fight right now for entrance into white schools and southern white schools will probably admit Negroes soon, most of the college leaders believe.

On the question of regional schools the ANP asked: "Do you favor the proposed regional college training in special fields? If so, why? If not why?" Memphis World

COMPOSITE SENTIMENT

Joseph J. Rhoads of Bishop College in Marshall, Texas, sums up the sentiment of most of the college presidents when he says: Memphis Tenn.

"The regional university idea commends itself as a feasible means of enchancing educational opportunities in the south through the establishment of a few strategically located technical and professional institutions of the highest order.

"I have no faith in the realization of any such objectives under the assumed political leadership of southern governors. This idea is entertained by them as a new device to facilitate race discrimination in education within the states I oppose it." 4-27-48

In simpler terms President R. B. Atwood of Kentucky State said: "Regionalism itself has some merit but not the way the southern governors are using it."

SEES EVASION

"No," Dr. Horace M. Bond of Lincoln (Pa.) university answered. "As presently conceived the program is designed to evade the supreme court decisions and (a) make it cheap to discriminate. (b) get out of the load of paying for the luxury of segregation."

" In the south the framework of segregation does not make educational equality," Dr. Charles H Wesley of Wilberforce said.

President William H. Gray Jr., of Florida A and M and Dr. F. D. Patterson of Tuskegee both agreed that the idea of regionalism was sound, but as proposed by the southern governors-- it was being favored only to promote segregation.

Is the result of more formal education for all the people in the south worth paying the price of continued segregation? Dr. Rufus E. Clement of Atlanta university said this is the question to be settled.

VIEWS ON ENTRANCE

Memphis World

In answer of the ANP query, "Are you in agreement with the idea that Negroes should fight unremittingly for admittance to white schools as the only real method of security?" the educators answered yes, but many qualified their replies.

Memphis, Tenn.

Dr. Wesley cautions: "While this is being done, the Negro separate college should be carried on as a first step toward the ultimate objective of integration. Our colleges cannot be scuttled at once.... Although other colleges may be open to us by legislative act, the actual transition will take longer than a day." Tues.

Two presidents, Dr. Bond of Lincoln and Gray of Florida A and M agree that Negro schools should also admit whites. 4-27-48

RECRUITS WHITES

Dr. Bond, whose school is in the north, said, 'Yes. In our anomalous position here we are actively engaged in recruiting more white students."

"When all schools are giving a program of education of desirably high quality," Gray said, "there will be no question as to whether a Negro will want to go to a so-called white school or a white person will want to go to a so-called Negro school. It is my feeling that we should fight for equality in educational opportunity regardless of the kind of school, recial designation or place in which it is given." Fla.

Based on the fact that the U. S. Supreme court has ruled that Negroes are entitled to equal education now, President Rhoads of Bishop said, "Negroes should fight for admittance to white schools, when and where the white schools represent the only facilities by which equality in education may be provided now."

All the presidents answered yes, but with some qualifications, to the ANP question: "Do you believe that Negro students will be admitted to white colleges in the south within any forseeable time?"

No one was a positive as President John W. Davis of West Virginia State College. He said, "Segregation in the south is doomed. Negroes are already enrolled in white colleges and universities in the south." Tues.

"Negro students will be admitted to graduate work in the south with in a short period," Dr. Wesley answered. 4-27-48

(Next week, in the third and last of this series, the ANP will discuss the overall strategy the college presidents recommend for Negroes to improve their education and how the colored man should fight segregation.) Memphis, Tenn.

Segregation Rulings Figure Little In South's School Plans---Caldwell

The Constitution 4-16-48 Fri.

Atlanta, Ga.

By M. L. ST. JOHN

Whether the United States Supreme Court should approve or outlaw the proposed regional school plan as a system for segregation was of little consequence in the development of the South's higher education Florida's Gov. Millard Caldwell told the Southern University Conference here Thursday.

Caldwell said the Southern Governor's Conference action toward establishing regional colleges was a continuation of a plan which had been discussed for 20 years for improving educational facilities for both the whites and the Negroes It was not a plan just now trumped up to circumvent any anti-segregation decisions, he added.

However, the Florida Governor said segregation would take care of itself on a voluntary basis when the South built the greatest colleges in the world. Negroes would want to go to top-flight Negro colleges instead of trying to force their way into white schools, he predicted.

Plans for launching the regional schools progressed here Thursday. Simultaneously with the Southern University Conference, at the Biltmore Hotel, the Regional Educational Council of the Southern Governor's Conference held a session in an effort to pick an Executive Director to administer an 18-month survey. No decision was reached. Fri.

Members of the Council are Chancellor Raymond Paty of the University System of Georgia; Austin Meadows, of Alabama; Dr. Doak Campbell, of Florida, and Gov. Caldwell. 4-16-48

Paty said a full-time office would be opened when the Director was selected. Atlanta might be the location of this office, he said.

Caldwell predicted each of the Southern States, the General Education Board, and the Carnegie Foundation would contribute their shares of the $100,750 budget in time to start the study by June 1.

Some regional schools — both white and Negro—might be opened before the study was completed, he said. The Constitution

The Southern University Conference elected Dr. Goodrich C. White, of Emory University as Vice President, succeeding Chancellor Raymond Pay, of the University System of Georgia, and decided to hold its 1949 convention in Atlanta. Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. John Pomfret, President of William and Mary, was named President of the Conference. Pres. Edward M. Gwathmey, of Convers College was re-elected Secretary-Treasurer. Retiring Pres. Umphrey Lee, of Southern Methodist, and Dean W. W. Pearson, of the University of North Carolina, were added to the Executive Board, of which Pres. Harmon Caldwell, of the University of Georgia and Pres. Rufus C. Harris, of Tulane, already are members.

Senate Tilt Looms on Segregation Bill

WASHINGTON—Senator Morse (R., Ore.) poised the Senate for a plunge into the boiling civil rights dispute.

But it may not dive in yet.

Wed. 5-12-48

MORSE PROPOSED:

1—An amendment forbidding separation of Whites and Negroes in a Southern regional university system which 15 Southern states have asked Congress to sanction by approving an interstate compact.

2—A motion to recommit the compact bill itself to the Judiciary Committee on the grounds that Congressional approval is not required.

In the offing, Morse raised the possibility of a showdown on President Truman's civil rights program itself.

THE SENATE quit for the day in the midst of debate on the motion to recommit. An effort will be made to reach a vote Wednesday. If the bill goes back to committee, Morse's antisegregation amendment won't come up.

Detroit, Mich.

If the recommital motion fails, then the seething civil rights controversy probably would get going full blast.

Wed. 5-12-48

Morse says if his amendment comes to a vote and fails, he will attempt to throw in major provisions of Mr. Truman's civil rights program, including anti-lynching, anti-poll tax and anti-job discrimination amendments, thus raising "the whole question of civil rights."

Morse declared he wants his own Republican Party to express itself. He thinks a test of its sincerity on its platform planks on civil rights should be made.

$76,400 For Negro Institution, $17,450,000 For Whites Proposed

Atlanta, Ga.
Journal 3-11-48

GAINESVILLE, Fla. —(ANP) — Two phases of the drive of the south to set up "separate but equal" educational opportunity for Negroes and whites were announced here March 5. 3-11-48

Dr. J. Hillis Miller, new president of the University of Florida, proposed a budget of $17,450,000 for a building program to "supply a rich program of lectureships and artistic offerings."

The Southern Regional Education council, on the same day, proposed a budget, too—$76,400 to get the ball 'rolling" in its plan for regional schools for the whole south.

FORMED BY SOUTHERNERS

The regional council was recently formed by southern leaders, supposedly to establish colleges to equalize the education of Negroes and whites in the south. Atlanta

Fifteen member states of the council are asking help from philanthropic educational groups to raise a sum that is a mere pittance or "chicken feed" in today's high state budgets, while one state, Florida, will be asked to appropriate $17 million for one college only.

The schools to be set up by the regional council, or its thousands of dollars are expected to provide educational facilities for Negroes as good as those supported by millions of dollars like the University of Florida for whites. 3-11-48

URGES SENATORS TO BAN
REGIONAL COLLEGE PLAN

April 15, 1948

NEW YORK, N.Y., April 15.--Continuing the fight against congressional approval of the southern plan for segregated regional educational institutions, Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, today dispatched communications to 75 members of the Senate urging them "to oppose this measure if and when it reaches the floor of the Senate."

New York, N.Y.
Thurs 4-15-48

Action of the Senate Judiciary sub-committee last week favoring the Jim Crow plan was condemned by the NAACP board of directors as "complicity in the plot of the southern governors to circumvent the Supreme Court decisions in the Gaines and Sipuel cases." The committee approved the plan by a 6 to 2 vote. Voting for were Senators E. H. Moore, Okla.; Pat McCarran, Nev.; J. William Fulbright, Ark.; Forrest C. Donnell, Mo.; James O. Eastland, Miss.; and Alexander Wiley, Wisc. Senators Homer Ferguson, Mich., and William Langer, N.D. voted against approval. Senator J. Howard McGrath, R.I., abstained from voting.

Thurs. 4-15-48

In his letter which went to all Senators except those from the deep South, Mr. White expressed "shock" that the committee has approved the plan "in the face of the unanimous opposition to the measure by all responsible Negro educational, church, professional, business and civic organizations." He asked the Senators to withhold approval of the plan because it was designed to extend segregated education to the regional level and because it contravened the Supreme Court decisions "which require states to furnish to Negro students educational opportunity equal to that furnished white students within the state boundaries."

MORSE BIDS GOP BACK CIVIL RIGHTS

The Times
New York, N.Y.

Senator Urges Further Study of Plan to Set Up Regional Universities in South

Wed. 5-12-48

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, May 11—Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon called upon his Republican colleagues today to uphold the party's stand on civil rights and send back to committee a House-approved bill endorsing a compact to establish regional universities for Negroes in the South.

Predominating Senate debate on the proposal for the second successive day, he again raised the challenge to his fellow-Republicans that their approval of the compact would be condonation of segregation denounced by the Constitution and by President Truman's civil rights program. Mr. Morse asserted that his party should abide by its position, and added:

"Some of my colleagues felt that this bill was not the proper time or the proper issue to raise the battle over civil rights. The Republican party must make the fight for civil rights whenever it is raised."

The Times

The proposal, in the form of a joint resolution giving the consent of Congress to a pact of fifteen southern states to set up regional Negro medical and other professional schools, was approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee as a legal procedure that imposed no bans not imposed by the states themselves. Senator Morse contended, however, that the bill should be recommitted to committee for further study, on these grounds:

New York, N.Y.

From a legal and Constitutional point of view there was a good case that Congressional sanction of the pact was not required.

If Congressional approval were deemed necessary, then Congress would be establishing a precedent in going beyond state levels to regional levels, would be "condoning segregation" on a regional level, would be transgressing Federal powers in approving any compact unless it adhered to the Fourteenth Amendment and would by extending sanction, simultaneously assume the authority to impose conditions in the pact.

5-12-48

"No compact needs the approval of Congress unless the states are impinging on Federal power," the Senator asserted.

Fight On Segregation Develops In Senate On Regional Schools

The Advertiser

By A. F. MAHAN, JR.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A fight to write anti-segregation provisions into a bill which would permit 15 Southern States jointly to finance regional universities developed in the Senate, Thursday.

The controversy prevented a vote, and debate will be resumed Monday. No amendment reached a vote.

Fri. 5-7-48

The House passed, 236-45, a similar bill, Tuesday, after refusing to write into it anything regarding segregation or anti-

Senator Morse (R), Oregon, offered an amendment Thursday which would prohibit any jointly financed regional school from applying any qualifications for enrollment based on race, creed, color."

Senator Holland (D), Florida, said the Senate judiciary committee drafted.

Holland said "the racial issue is only incidental," insisting that the plan for states to enter into compacts to provide the schools is necessary.

Ives also proposed that it require all schools to meet uniform standards of education.

Morse commented he did not think Congressional approval of segregation.

Supporters argued such was unnecessary.

The bill which passed would make segregation in education.

Morse said changed to say that passage shall not be construed "as approving segregation."

That statement says that congress for the states to establish "is to permit the states to do jointly what none can do alone."

Senator Wiley (R), Wisconsin, said passage of the measure would be construed as an endorsement of segregation in education. "save." Meharry Medical College Ives (R), New York, for Negroes, at Nashville, Tenn., that the language be which the Southern States pro-

Declaring himself opposed to segregation, Wiley told Morse and Ives, however, that "non-segregation doesn't exist in the North."

skirts first," he said, adding to Ferguson that only 18 Negro students in the University of Michigan medical school is proof that non-segregation does not exist in the North. Fay. 5-7-48

He said the non-endorsement clause written into the bill by the judiciary committee was drafted by a Negro law professor at Howard University here. That school's student body is predominantly Negro. Montgomery, Ala.

FOR THE THIRD consecutive year, enrollment in Negro institutions has reached a new peak, it was revealed in the 12th annual survey made by Dr. Martin D. Jenkins, department of education, Howard University.

Approximately 75,000 resident students were enrolled in undergraduate, graduate and professional schools during the Fall term of the current year. News-Age-Herald

A total of 29,557 veterans were attending college in 107 institutions, including 25,489 at the college level.

Howard University, which is the largest Negro institution, reported an enrollment of 5,725 students, including 2,390 veterans during the Fall term and 6,929 students during the school year of 1946-47. Star 5-4-48

With the addition of Meharry Medical College which inaugurated graduate work during 1947, there are now 17 institutions for Negroes now offering work for the master's degree. Birmingham, Ala.

Cause Of Negro Education Suffers Setback

The Record

The plan of the Southern states to set up regional schools, chiefly as a means of providing better education for the Negroes, has been turned down by the Senate and pushed aside.

The proposed interstate compact was submitted to the Congress for what was expected to be mere pro forma approval. The House approved it 236 to 45.

In the Senate it ran up against Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon who proved to be too smart for the Southerners. Senator Morse proposed to write into the joint resolution approving the compact an amendment prohibiting segregation of the races in any of the regional schools set up or maintained under the compact.

He argued, of course, that congressional approval of the compact was not necessary. The supreme court has held, Senator Morse pointed out, that the constitution when it requires that no state may, without the consent of Congress, enter into any agreement of compact with another state it did not mean to refer to all agreements but merely those that tend to increase political powers in the state which may "encroach upon or interfere with the just supremacy of the United States." Columbia, S.C.

Such an agreement not requiring congressional approval is the contract between Viriginia and West Virginia for the joint medical school operated by the two states and another is that between New Hampshire and Vermont establishing a penitentiary to serve both states. Ark. 5-22-48

But if the compact should be submitted to Congress for its approval, he argued, the Congress must impose the nonsegregation requirement. But this would mean federal interference in education, a field in which the United States has no authority, and most members of Congress are opposed to federal interference in education. So the Senators voted to send the bill back to the committee rather than vote on Senator Morse's anti-segregation amendment.

It may be, of course, that the compact could have been put into effect without approval of Congress and even that it may yet be made effective. Yet the South has had some experience with the supreme court of the United States and has discovered that the court has decided against it even in cases where the language of the constitution was much less clear and definite than in this instance. The Southern states may be excused, therefore, for their excess of caution before implementing the compact.

Senator Morse's move, undertaken ostensibly in behalf of the Negroes, has, if the compact now be abandoned, done the cause of education for the Negroes of the South great harm. The states which desire to join in the compact all require segregation of the races in educational institutions. The compact did not create segregation nor extend it. All it would have done would have been to provide better schools for the Negroes than could be provided by any of the states alone. The Record

And Senator Elbert D. Thomas of Utah, supporting the compact, could concentrate on this essential. He saw the compact for what it was supposed to be—a device for improving educational facilities for Negroes.

"I believe that the objective will result in bringing about the type of educational facilities and educational institutions which the colored people of the South deserve, which they have a right to demand, and which the law of the land has said they must have," he said. "With the co-operation of the states and the sanction of the nation, I believe the South now has an opportunity to bring about an educational program quite as great in its possibilities as some of the mighty things which have been done in our country." Columbia, S.C.

He himself, Senator Thomas said, is opposed to segregation, but he did not believe the Negroes should be denied the immediate gain of better schools because the Congress could not grant them the perfection of no segregation. Sat.

"Under present circumstances and under the present laws of these states and in view of what the states are trying to do under the instructions set forth in decisions of the supreme court," he said, "it would be unwise and would bring about the very opposite of what we are trying to do (if Congress were to decree nonsegregation). There are those who think the principle of nonsegregation is just and right, as I do; but everything cannot be done overnight.

"When at last the Southern states are entering into an agreement among themselves, we know a new day is dawning. . . . The way to solve these (race) questions is not to stand absolutely on a principle which cannot be made dominant in our generation, or perhaps in two or three generations, but to go forward as we have gone forward since the Civil war, doing the best possible under the circumstances." 5-22-48

And this is the tragedy of the Southern defeat, Senator Morse and the Negro leaders of the North who agree with him have given the coup de grace to the most sensible idea looking to the real improvement of higher educational facilities for Negroes to be produced by either the North or the South since the Confederate war. And it was not an idea born with the Southern governors.

Most of the education of Negroes in the United States is now being provided in segregated schools. Howard and Meharry, both segregated schools, train 85 per cent of the Negro doctors. In the 75 other medical schools in the country are only 86 Negro students this year.

Regional Plan Is Sidetracked

The News

The segregation issue has brought about at least a temporary sidetracking by Congress of the Southern regional school bill.

Under the measure 15 Southern states would have been authorized to carry out a compact for the joint establishment of institutions of higher education. Many of these states are lacking facilities for graduate instruction. Many of them consider themselves unable to finance such courses individually. But, by collaboration, it is proposed to establish such schools on a regional basis.

There are, however, difficult problems, among them that involving segregation.

The Supreme Court has ruled that equal facilities should be provided by the states for white and colored students. Segregation in instruction is not outlawed if that provision is met. In the Oklahoma case a few months ago the state was ordered to provide equal facilities at once for a Negro student or to admit the student to white classes.

How would that principle apply in the establishment of regional schools? Suppose there was a graduate school for white students in a state, but such instruction were to be offered to Negroes only in a regional school. Would that meet

Birmingham, Ala.

Court approval in a test case? Many believe it would not, that it would be held that this would not provide equal opportunity within a state.

If both white and Negro students had access only to equal regional facilities, the case would be different; a court test might be met. 5-15-48

But in the Senate, after the House had overwhelmingly approved the measure, Sen. Morse, Oregon Republican, blocked the way. He announced that he would try for recommittal of the measure, meaning its indefinite postponement, and, failing that, would introduce a whole series of civil rights amendments along the lines of action proposed by President Truman. 5-15-48

The motion to recommit came Thursday. The roll call was close all the way, first one side, then the other leading. At the end the count stood 37 to 36 against recommitting. But while rechecking was proceeding, two additional senators reached the chamber and asked to be recorded in favor of recommitment. That gave the motion a 38-to-37 victory.

The Negro In the South

The Courier-Journal

The Southern Negro lives a more prosperous and enjoyable life than at least 80 per cent of the world's population. In China, India, Greece, Italy, and in innumerable other impoverished countries, there are millions who would gladly change places with the Southern Negro. Millions of the world's inhabitants are now struggling to attain even a small measure of the American Negro's living standards, his civil rights and his everyday enjoyment of life. He owes these many blessings to the just and fair dealings of his white neighbors. Louisville, Ky.

The Southern States have provided colleges and universities for the education of his sons and daughters. Counties and Cities have provided grade and high schools for his children, where all may attend free of tuition and advance to the limits of their capacities. Negro education in the Southern States is far ahead of that in most of the countries of the world in percentage of students enrolled, and in the number of years of training offered. More than 90 per cent of this cost is borne by the Southern white taxpayers. Fri. 5-21-48

But despite all of the provisions that have been made for the Negro's culture, enjoyment and pleasure, the pastures look greener to him just over the fence in the schools for the whites, and he seeks to jump the racial barrier and force his presence in the white schools. The demand for graduate work in white universities is just an entering wedge. Grant him this privilege, and he will then seek undergraduate work in colleges; and will seek to invade our white high and grade schools. Are we ready for mixed schools and mixed teachers?

He can have the above privileges in the schools of the Northern, Eastern and Western States without arousing much racial antagonism, if he will emigrate to those sections. For his own good, pleasure and happiness, he should seek to obtain a new deal for his race in sections where it will not precipitate hatered and animosity. Segregation

The Constitution

Editor Constitution: There are no two races upon the face of this earth with such distinct characteristics as the Negro and white, who live in more congenial friendship. We Southerners know the Negro race better, they respect and understand us and we them. Atlanta, Ga.

We should educate them and give them all the privileges possible that a white man has access to, but never abolish the segregation laws.

In the event of bloodshed, these radicals that are stirring up all the trouble won't be around to share it. They know this in advance, thus they have nothing to lose! Sat. 5-15-48

A Victory for the Extremists

The Constitution

The Negro's professional friends make it increasingly difficult for those who have more than a political interest in his welfare.

Spurred by the objections of Walter White, demagogic head of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and others who earn an elaborate livelihood exploiting the Negro, and who are as extreme in their way as the late Bilbo in his, the Senate has shelved the resolution giving congressional authorization to the South's regional education proposals. Atlanta, Ga.

The still impoverished Southern States are unable to provide, individually, the highest type education in a number of fields. This is true in the case of white as well as Negro students. Indeed, one has to go no farther than Atlanta University to realize that, in some instances, curricula available to the Negro in the South are superior to anything offered white students this side of Eastern university centers. Sun. 5-16-48

And so the Southern Governor's Conference had sought to allow the various States to co-operate to set up and maintain both white and Negro graduate and professional schools in fields in which no single State can hope to provide adequate training.

Congressional authorization was deemed necessary for such an agreement in view of the Federal Constitution's stipulation: "No State shall, without the consent of Congress . . . enter into agreement or compact with another State. . . ."

It is now apparent this consent is not forthcoming, at least not until after the coming election. The Constitution

That means that the medical college which has been training more than half the nation's Negro doctors is going to have to close its doors. For unless, as they had agreed, the Southern States are allowed to make up its $350,000 annual deficit, Nashville's Meharry Medical College will be forced to cease operation at the end of the current school year.

Meharry, incidentally, is another good example of a Negro institution on a par with any available to white students in the South. In fact, had the Southern States been allowed to take it over, they would have had facilities for Negroes which would have put their State-operated white medical colleges to shame.

But the Negro's professed friends willed it otherwise. Atlanta, Ga.

They had rather see one Negro at the white medical college at Augusta than 300 at Meharry, a vastly superior institution.

We regret that these extremists have had their way, since it not only works a hardship on the Negro, but also makes it at least temporarily impossible to provide graduate education for white students in the South equal to that available in other sections. Sun. 5-16-48

An "all-or-nothing" attitude s s results in NOTHING.

Why?

The Constitution

Editor Constitution: Many of the Congressmen who back extension of civil rights in the South voted against the "compact" for establishment of regional colleges because of "segregation." That this was one of most forward-looking plans ever projected by the South bore no weight apparently. I took my pen in hand asking if a "segregated" education that gave an opportunity to rise from the ruck wasn't better than no education—but no one has deigned to reply. If it was "politics"—it was "dirty." Atlanta, Ga.

New York, 3-27-48 MRS. ETHEL J. ENGEL.

Regional University Centers

The House of Representatives has approved a compact which would permit Southern states to operate regional universities. A joint resolution giving consent to the arrangement passed by a vote of 235 to 45. The measure now goes to the Senate.

What has happened came as a result of the general feeling in the South that individual states cannot in many cases afford to set up professional and graduate school training in each state. Schools dedicated to the teaching of specialized professions such as medicine, dentistry or veterinary science are extremely costly both to establish and to maintain. Yet there is a great need for men and women so trained in the South. The plan offered grew out of suggestions often made and finally approved by a Southern governors' meeting. 5-6-48 rule [illegible] the anti-segregation provision passes, we may be sure that a test case will be brought at an early time.

It would provide that individual states

Sen. Morse believes that he can muster enough strength to pass his amendment over Southern protest. If, however, he cannot, he says that "the whole question of civil rights then has got to be raised." To do that, he plans to offer as amendments to the compact approval bill such specific items as anti-lynching, anti-poll tax and anti-job discrimination. These are the features in President Truman's civil rights message which have set off the Southern revolt.

The dilemma of Southerners in revolt against the Truman civil rights program may be intensified by debate in the United States Senate over a bill to establish the establishment of regional university centers. Sen.

Morse On Regional Schools

Nevertheless, no one knows what attitude the Supreme Court would take in the matter, for it has never been under present laws. The question of whether the law will stand up under court test has never been settled, for all decisions so far made have simply required that Negroes be provided with equal opportunity for training within the state of their residence. 5-6-48

If equal opportunities for advanced work are offered to whites and Negroes alike by the establishment of regional schools, there seems to be less likelihood of an adverse court decision than there would be if such methods of training were set up exclusively for colored and none at all for white students. Thurs. 3-4-48

Negroes throughout the nation have opposed the plan, claiming that it is intended to maintain segregation of the races. Sun. 3-7-48

It is likely that a court test will be instigated. Yet there is no doubt that under the plan suggested, qualified Negroes will be able to get a better education than they can

Morse, of Oregon, does not intend to allow his party to take a "walkout powder" on the civil rights stand if he can help it. Thus it becomes more evident that no protesting Southerner can look for satisfaction to a Republican attitude of "do-nothing" on the issue.

Sen. Morse will bring the question to the floor of the Senate by proposing an anti-segregation amendment to a bill giving constitutional approval to an interstate compact allowing regional professional or graduate schools.

The plan, sponsored in the Senate by Mr. Holland, of Florida, is intended to perform a double service to the South. In the first place, it will provide for better educational facilities for all citizens; second, it will allow the individual states jointly to support colleges for Negroes which they could not support singly. At least that is the presumed purpose. If it were carried out as a constitutional measure it is hoped by many Southerners that it would satisfy the requirements set up by decisions of the Supreme Court that Negroes must be provided immediately with opportunities for special and advanced study equal to those offered white citizens within the states.

The hitch is in the segregation principle. Southern states are committed to segregated schools. It is financially possible, of course, to build regional centers for Negroes—as well as for whites—at a great saving. But what if the bill should be passed prohibiting segregation in regional schools?

If the problem were met by seeking to build separate centers to care for the two races, a heavy, perhaps impossible, economic drain on the South's resources would be required. Wherever a medical, dental or veterinary school would be established for white students, a similar one of equal quality probably would have to be set up for Negroes.

Fifteen Southern states want to join together in setting up regional university centers. There is already one Southern medical college for Negroes, Meharry at Nashville, which could serve Negroes from many states under the proposed plan. Others would have to be established in other fields of specialized study not now available to qualified Negroes in the South. One tremendous center in which schools of various sorts were combined might serve well.

SENATORS APPROVE NEGRO SCHOOL PLAN

WASHINGTON, April 12 (UP)—The Senate Judiciary Committee today approved the plans of fourteen Southern states for setting up jointly supported regional schools to provide professional training for Negroes.

The committee voted, 5 to 2, in favor of a bill to ratify an interstate compact drawn up at the Conference of Southern Governors in Tallahassee, Fla., last February.

The Constitution requires Federal consent for all such interstate "treaties." The bill must go through the Senate and House, and be signed by the President, before the compact can take effect.

Under the compact, Southern states would split the financial burden of supporting a number of regional schools. Although it is not specified in the agreement, present plans call for primary emphasis on medical, dental, law and other professional graduate schools for Negroes who are not admitted to the all-white state universities of the South.

Southern Governors, members of Congress and civic leaders, including several Negro educators, testified at the committee's hearings earlier this year that the arrangement would enable the Southern states jointly to provide higher education facilities which none of them individually could support.

Opponents of the compact charged that it was a piece of legal sleight-of-hand designed to get around the recent Supreme Court rulings that states must either provide equal educational opportunities for Negro students, or admit them to state-supported all-white schools.

UNIVERSITY COMPACT IN SOUTH ATTACKED

WASHINGTON, May 6 (UP)—The Southern plan to establish regional universities was attacked in the Senate today by Northern Republicans as debate opened on a House-approved bill to give Congressional consent to a fifteen-state compact, signed in Tallahassee, Fla., Feb. 8.

"This compact could be used to perpetuate segregation in the South," said Senator Homer Ferguson of Michigan.

Joining in the attack were Senators Irving M. Ives of Ne wYork and Wayne Morse of Oregon. Both offered amendments which they said they believed would make perpetuation of segregation impossible. Senator Ives proposed that all schools have minimum standard forms of education. Senator Morse urged a provision that a qualification for entrance to any of the regional schools developed under the plan should not be race, color or creed.

Mr. Morse declared that even with these safeguards he would not be satisfied. He voiced the belief that the compact "will strengthen the cause of segregation," and added:

"Underlying this is the hope of some it can be used as an instrument for perpetuation of segregation."

Dixie Senators Believe Their Plan Is Shelved For Rest Of Session

WASHINGTON — (AP) — A dramatic 38 to 37 Senate vote Thursday shelved the bill to give congressional approval to a Southern plan for regional universities.

The vote was to send the measure back to the Senate judiciary committee for further study. It was on the motion of Senator Morse (R), Oregon, who said he wanted to prevent segregation of Negroes in the proposed schools.

When the roll call was first tallied, the count was 37 to 36 against sending the bill back. But during the recount, Senators Capper (R), Kansas, and Edwin C. Johnson (D), Colorado, arrived in the chamber with two "aye" votes. They swung the decision.

Foes said the regional university plan would be used to meet recent Supreme Court decisions that Negroes must be given equal educational facilities. They said it would permit continued refusal to admit Negroes to white institutions and would be a device for continuing segregation.

Sponsors Deny It

Sponsors of the plan, however, denied that this was the purpose. They said it had been proposed as far back as 1935 and that it has been contemplated, for example, for graduates of white Florida colleges to use an Alabama veterinary school for post-graduate work. This would save Florida the expense of running such an institution itself. The pattern could be repeated elsewhere.

If the 15 states set up regional universities for Negroes—or for whites—they would need approval of Congress, supporters of the plan said. Senator Morse argued such approval was not needed under the constitution.

Kills It

Anyhow, Morse said, if the Senate didn't send the bill back to committee he would seek an amendment to forbid segregation in the schools. He said he also would try to add to the bill other civil rights proposals such as have stirred the wrath of Southern lawmakers when they were made by President Truman.

Before the vote, Senator Russell (D), Georgia, told reporters that to send the bill to committee "would be killing the plan for this session."

He said leaders in American education agree that the plan is the "most progressive development in the field of higher education for generations."

"Defeat of this would be a death blow to Meharry College," he added.

Meharry is a school at Nashville, Tenn., which has been educating a large proportion of Negro doctors, dentists and other professional men. It would get immediate support under the proposed 15-state compact.

Opposes Clement's Stand On 'Regional'

To The World Editor:

In the issue of The Atlanta Daily World for Tuesday, March 30, I read the announcement on your front page that "Dr. Clement Assails critics of 'Prexies' Stand On Regional Plan."

Ever since then I have felt I should write you explaining what I believe to be the real reason for Dr. Clement's support of the so-called Regional Plan whereby the Southern states hope to evade their responsibility for furnishing adequate aid or financing for the "higher" educational facilities of Negroes in their respective states.

Although Dr. Clement is by no means an intellectual giant, one must admit that he is not so mentally weak as to really believe in that proposed solution of the problem of public support of higher education for Negroes in the South.

One must look then for some motive that Dr. Clement has which makes him advocate this undemocratic program which is strong enough to make him support it in opposition to his common sense, intellectual honesty, and integrity of character.

In my opinion, knowing Dr. Clement as I do, the real reason he favors that plan is that he thinks that Atlanta University will benefit financially in some way by one of the regional schools being situated in Atlanta. As a graduate of the old (and in my opinion greater) Atlanta University, I am, of course, not opposed to the President of that institution wanting to get support for it. But I do think that Dr. Clement is living far below the fine traditions of courage and sacrificial service when he prostitutes the office of President of Atlanta University to the extent that, including practically the country, he uses the influence of that position to attract attention to his otherwise insignificant "one cent" remarks about the vast majority of thinking Negro educators of the South, when they justly criticize his attempt to justify himself and a few others in trying to continue the white so-called liberals that they think the South that the regional idea is sound. Also misrepresented Dr. Clement's great and honorable traditions of the famous institution over which he presides when he practically called a lady opponent of his selfish views a "liar."

Negroes In Professional Schools

The Courier-Journal

My experience with Negro classmates at the University of Chicago convinces me that they make good students and cause no difficulties in the classroom. Our discussion today over admission of them to our graduate and professional schools will soon sound as unreasonable and out-of-date as discussions over slavery do to us now.

I hope we will soon admit the Negroes who wish to enter our graduate and professional schools. There will be only a few and the admissions can be done with very little adjustment. We will soon think nothing of it. Arkansas and Delaware decided last month to admit them to their universities.

A Questionable Plan

News 3-12-48 Fin.

Disagreement has developed in Montgomery among State School Board members over the regional education plan for Negro colleges and professional schools. State Supt. Meadows is more sanguine over the feasibility of the plan than is either Handy Ellis or Joe Starnes, both of whom make objection on the basis of possible legal snarls. Dr. Meadows said he thought the idea would "have a chance" to win the approval of the Supreme Court. But Ellis advised the state to "go slow" before it spent any money in the development of regional institutions. Birmingham, Ala.

This paper sees force in the latter point of view. Taking a "chance to win" might be unwise. Is it wise to prepare to spend money for a plan which is regarded as likely to be disapproved by the Supreme Court? The court has held that a Negro citizen qualified intellectually and scholastically to do the work must be provided with the same opportunity as a white citizen and within the state's borders. News

The regional plan for advanced education has considerable merit for citizens of both races. Not many Southern states can afford to provide all the specialized courses which their citizens desire. Hence there is no logical reason why a number of the Southern states should not band together to provide all the training necessary for all the professions and to admit to such regional schools all the citizens of the various states who desire to carry on the work. Such schools are needed desperately for white students as well as for colored. But the segregation problem would have to be solved. 3-12-48 Fin.

The Supreme Court has not ruled against the South's segregation laws. It has held, however, that qualified Negro students must be supplied with equal opportunity for education. Birmingham, Ala.

It seems obvious to most observers that if the Southern states build great regional universities and restrict them to white students, they must also build such schools of equal quality for Negro students.

Board Disagrees On Negro Schools

Advertiser 3-11-48 Fin.

State school board members disagreed Wednesday on whether the regional education plan for Negroes proposed by southern states will work.

Supt. A. R. Meadows, who is working on the program with other Dixie educators, told the board he thought the idea would "have a chance" to win U. S. Supreme Court approval, but two other members said "no."

Former Lt. Gov. Handy Ellis of Columbiana advised the State to "go slow" about spending money to develop regional institutions and said the program "is not going to settle things. It will just delay things a few years." Montgomery, Ala.

Ellis expressed doubt that the Supreme Court would approve it anyway, if a test is made. The court has held that Negroes are entitled to educational facilities equal to those provided for white students.

Referring to a proposal to use Meharry Medical College at Nashville to train southern Negroes in medicine, the former lieutenant governor told other board members that "if we use Meharry as a regional school for Negroes, they're going to say to us that we've got a school for whites in Birmingham." 3-11-48

Ex-Congressman Joe Starnes of Guntersville agreed with Ellis but suggested that "maybe the political situation there (in Washington) won't be so acute in a few years." Advertiser

Dr. Meadows and other members emphasized, too, that white students as well as Negroes need specialized training not available within the borders of their states and said the regional plan would benefit them too. It would not be restricted to one race.

N.A.A.C.P. to Seek Admission Of Negroes to Kentucky Schools

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

Court Action Is Threatened

Admission of Negroes to Kentucky graduate and professional schools this spring will be sought by the Louisville branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

A Negro girl plans to file application for entrance to the University of Kentucky School of Law for the spring quarter, beginning March 29.

If she is not admitted, the N.A.A.C.P. intends to take the case to court. 1-15-48

Plan Follows Ruling.

This plan of action follows the recent Supreme Court decision that the law school of Oklahoma's State university must admit a Negro girl within three days or provide equal facilities for her.

James A. Crumlin, president of the Louisville branch of the N.A.A.C.P., said that he hoped a court test of the Kentucky case will not be necessary. He thought that by March 29 the General Assembly might take action providing for admission of Negroes to graduate and professional schools. The Courier-Journal

The N.A.A.C.P. has prepared bills which would amend Kentucky's Day Law to allow admission to graduate and professional schools. Under this law, white and Negro students are not able to attend the same schools.

Cites Missouri Case.

Courier-Journal

Crumlin believed that many Kentucky schools would not object to admission of Negroes but they are afraid to attack the Day Law. Times 1-15-48

Crumlin added that the N.A.A.C.P. also plans to seek admission of Negro students to the University of Louisville School of Medicine but will await the outcome of the University of Kentucky's case before proceeding.

Alfred M. Carroll, Negro attorney and N.A.A.C.P. official, said that Kentucky's practice of paying tuition of Negro graduate students in out-of-state schools would not exempt it from the Supreme Court's decision in the Oklahoma case. The Courier-Journal

He noted that in 1939 in a case involving the University of Missouri, the Supreme Court held that equal facilities for Negroes must be provided within the State. Missouri provided law and journalism facilities for the Negro students. Times 1-15-48

Oklahoma Decision Stirs Dixie To High Gear On Negro Issue

The Advertiser 1-30-48

Montgomery, Ala.

ATLANTA, Jan. 29.—(AP)—A U. S. Supreme Court decision that states must at once grant Negroes higher education opportunities equal to those offered white persons has tossed a knotty problem into the South's lap. Times

The court held earlier this month that Oklahoma must admit a Negro woman to the University law school or provide separate, equal facilities now. 1-30-48

Oklahoma quickly established a new law school for Negroes—in the state capitol building—with a three-man white faculty. The Negro woman has spurned it. She is renewing her fight in the highest court to gain admittance to the University of Oklahoma law school which rejected her because of her race. The school never has admitted a Negro in its 56-year-old history.

Realizing that similar cases may be taken to court from their states at any time and that the decision would be the same, southern governors are considering the establishment of a regional school. This would provide courses on the graduate level for Negroes throughout the South.

Texas Puts Out

The Advertiser

Texas now is spending $3,000,000 for the establishment of a state university for Negroes.

Briefly, here is what most of the individual southern states now are doing to provide graduate level education for Negroes:

Alabama—Appropriated $25,000 to finance out-of-state education for Negroes, primarily in law and medicine. The legislature also gave $225,000 to Tuskegee Institute, a private school for Negroes which operates mostly in the vocational field. Montgomery, Ala.

Florida—Operates a special fund through the Florida Agricultural and Mechanical College for Negroes for students seeking courses offered at white schools but not at the A. & M. school. So far $40,000 has been released this year for 59 Negro students for the regular term and 149 students attending Summer school. 1-30-48

Tennessee—Has a contract with Meharry College providing $400 per year for each student who is a resident of the state and is seeking a medical education. Also provides maximum scholarships of $500 to students desiring study in fields not offered at the Tennessee Agricultural & Industrial State College at Nashville.

Law In Carolina

The Advertiser

South Carolina—Operates courses in law, history, English and the sciences at the State Agricultural & Mechanical School for Negroes at Orangeburg. Also spends some $6,000 a year to provide medical training for Negroes at out-of-state schools.

North Carolina—Operates five schools for Negroes. Offers a full law course at the North Carolina College for Negroes plus graduate work in education ds. Graduate training in ence is offered at the state's gricultural & Technical College. ormally pays out $22,000 annually to students seeking courses in other fields for study out of state. Montgomery, Ala.

Louisiana—Sets aside $50,000 annually to care for differential scholarships, but amount is inadequate. Has 56 regular students studying on scholarships now, but applications from 135 students seeking Summer school course. Board of education figures the amount available will provide for only 60. Two suits have been filed by Negroes to force admission to Louisiana State University, one to study law, the other medicine. As a result of the law student's suit, legal courses have been made available at the Southern University for Negroes at Baton Rouge. Times 1-30-48

Kentucky Gives Grants

Kentucky—Appropriates $30,000 for payment of differential scholarships with the prospect that the legislature will come across with $10,000 more. Students may receive grants up to $350 annually.

Virginia—Sets aside around $93,000 for differential scholarships, but maintains several industrial and agricultural schools within the state.

Arkansas—Is working under a biennial appropriation of $12,500 to provide differential scholarships.

Georgia—Sets aside around $35,000 annually for out-of-state education of Negroes. Also has a working arrangement with At- school lanta University whereby it pays four-fifths of the tuition for Negroes desiring to take graduate work in education.

Missouri—Provides around $25, for differential scholarships and also offers a law course at a school in St. Louis and has a journalism school at Lincoln University for Negroes.

Mississippi—Provides two four- has no four-year medical school for whites or Negroes. Does not

Thurgood Marshall's Specious Argument

The Record

Thurgood Marshall, spokesman for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, appeared as a witness before the Senate judiciary subcommittee to oppose the plan for Southern regional colleges as an unconstitutional "prop for segregation" in education.

Marshall testified that the supreme court had held that white and Negro citizens must be given equal educational facilities. Segregation, he said, inevitably leads to inequality. Hence Congress was being asked to approve a practice declared unconstitutional by the supreme court.

"Although the proposed compact on its face makes no mention of either race or color or segregation of the races Congress cannot be blind to its underlying purpose of perpetuating segregation of the races in public education," Marshall said.

The regional college plan would not be unconstitutional if the Congress passes the act, against which Thurgood Marshall was testifying, to authorize the interstate agreement to set up these regional schools.

Subsection 3 of Section 10 of Article I of the Constitution declares: "No state shall, without the consent of Congress, lay any duty of tonnage, keep troops, or ships of war in time of peace, enter into an agreement or compact with another state . . ."

Marshall's argument that the compact perpetuates segregation is downright silly. The compact perpetuates nothing. The Southern states are determined to maintain segregation, in one form or another, and the regional school idea is simply intended to afford the Negroes better education by concerted action than would be possible in any of the states participating in the compact. When segregation is abolished in these states it can be abolished also in the regional schools, which would be set up not only for Negroes but for whites.

Thurgood Marshall and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People are interested not in the education of Negroes but the abolition of segregation. If the regional schools should be better schools than any one of the states maintains for whites—and they may well be—they would still be opposed to them.

REGIONAL COLLEGE PLAN DENOUNCED BY NAACP

Press Service of The NAACP, New York, N.Y.

New York, N. Y.—Declaring the NAACP unalterably opposed to the establishment of segregated regional colleges, the Board of Directors of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People passed the following resolution at its meeting on February 9, 1948:

"WHEREAS, the Southern Governors' Conference, in a move to circumvent recent decisions of the United States Supreme Court, holding that states providing higher education for white students must at the same time provide the same educational opportunities for Negroes, have adopted a plan to set up regional colleges on a segregated basis; and

"WHEREAS, if such a plan becomes a reality the immediate result will be the beginning of a new pattern of segregation which in effect will perpetuate the separate but equal educational myth and destroy all present gains of intercultural understanding in education; and

"WHEREAS, it is the policy of this Association to condemn segregation in any form;

"NOW, THEREFORE, be it resolved that the NAACP is unalterably opposed to the passage of any legislation, state or federal, designed to authorize any state to join with, appropriate funds for or officially associate with any state or groups of states for the purpose of establishing regional colleges designed to separate the races in educational opportunities. All lawful steps, including court action, if necessary, will be taken to block this plan to circumvent the Constitution of the United States and the mandates of the Supreme Court by extending and perpetuating segregation in education."

Regional Cooperation In Education

The Christian Science Monitor

An important new step has been taken in the effort toward greater Southern regional cooperation in education. At Wakulla Springs, Fla., over the week-end an agreement for interstate operation of colleges for specialized and professional training of the South's youth was signed by governors of nine Southern states.

The basic idea of the proposed regional education system is this: Because they are relatively poor and because higher education is expensive, the individual Southern states can ill afford to provide first-class training in many highly specialized fields. But pooling their resources and working together, these states could support good and adequate institutions, properly equipped and staffed.

It is proposed that the regional plan will be applied to six general fields of study: (1) engineering—aeronautical, mining, textile, ceramics and petroleum; (2) forestry; (3) game and wildlife management; (4) medicine—including dentistry, nursing, public health and optometry; (5) veterinary medicine; and (6) music and fine arts, at the graduate level.

There would be a regional board of control—the governors and two members appointed by the governors from each state. The control board would have authority to receive tax funds contributed by each of the states by legislative appropriations based on a population ratio. Property thus held cooperatively by the states would be held in the name of the board.

The plan contemplates both white and Negro regional schools.

The next step in bringing this regional education system into being will be getting ratification by the Legislatures of at least six states. Congressional approval also will have to be obtained.

Then there may be another barrier. A Supreme Court ruling may be sought by Negro groups who see in the move an effort to sidestep equality of opportunity in education.

Now it may well be the case that recent Supreme Court decrees on education for Negroes was the thing that gave special impetus to the proposed regional system. But very important also is the idea of regionally specialized schools for white youth. If efforts at setting up these schools are pushed, the Supreme Court must approve of the plan if the case is ever brought before it.

The Nation

The necessity of our getting busy quickly with this whole plan was underlined in another Southern city over the week-end. Dr. George D. Palmer, professor of organic chemistry at the University of Alabama and one of the South's top chemists, spoke of Southern intellectual poverty in Chattanooga.

"The greatest weakness in the South now," he said, "is the lack of Ph.D.-trained young men and women from our graduate schools. Our own graduates are going North for advanced training and never returning. The South is exporting its brains upon which it already has spent so much money."

Dr. Palmer pointed out that the prosperity of a region is roughly proportional to the number of patents taken out in that region. In that respect the South is still mighty poor. The way to get your patents is to put your inventive brains to work in good graduate schools and research centers.

Jefferson Medical College

Medical College Lifts Racial Ban

Pittsburgh Courier

By Associated Negro Press

PHILADELPHIA— Jefferson Medical College, one of the oldest and most famous in the country, admitted a Negro youth for the first time since 1908. The student admitted was Elmer J. Taylor, the son of a North Philadelphia plumber.

Taylor completed his premedical work at Temple University and applied for medical training at the same college. He was rejected. At the same time, he had filed an application with Jefferson.

Taylor was recommended by a score of physicians and other prominent citizens among whom were Drs. Henry L. Gowens, William H. Riley Jones, Tanner G. Duckry and the Education Equality League.

Arkansas U.'s Negro Student Kee

Because the Supreme Court holds that Negroes, under the Constitution, are entitled to educational opportunities equal to those offered white Americans, the University of Arkansas opened its law school a month ago to one Negro and assigned him to a segregated classroom for first year law studies. The United Press checked yesterday to see how Silas Hunt was getting along with his studies and his schoolmates, what he thought of Arkansas's tradition-breaking "equality." Here is the UP report:

By MORT STERN
United Press Staff Correspondent

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.

Silas Hunt, a Negro law student at the University of Arkansas, appeared today to be winning the respect of the white students and professors here.

Hunt is the 24-year-old Texarkana, Ark., Negro who shattered precedent by being accepted as a regular student of law at the University of Arkansas, a traditionally all-white Southern institution.

"Right now I've got to think about passing my courses," Hunt said when asked what it is like being in his touchy position.

Tougher Hurdles

Rounding out his first month at the University, the former noncom who led a platoon of combat engineers in France, the Netherlands, and Germany, is tackling as tough a set of obstacles as he has faced, in the form of agency, real property, and criminal law.

He lives, eats and studies in a private home in the 200 member Negro section of Fayetteville. Because the Negro population of this Ozark Mountain college town has always been small there was considerable doubt at first that he could find a place to stay.

His room is simply but adequately furnished, with a bed, a table, a small lamp, a chair and a dresser. Photographs of two girl friends from home and a group picture of his Army buddies are on the dresser.

Tougher Handicaps

While he manages to keep pace with his classmates, Hunt says it is sometimes difficult not being able to compare notes with the 30 other first year law students from whom he is segregated.

He attends class in a basement room of the Law School Building which was formerly an office, and at the appointed hour, the proper instructor shows up to deliver a lecture or explain the work. He would prefer not to be segregated, but couldn't help pointing out that this individual attention seemed superior to that which most law students got.

Hunt has been permitted to use the Student Union, and has been issued a student activity book, which admits students to all extra-curricular events.

However, he does not use the student center or the activity book, explaining that he must devote most of his time studying.

If you can get him to discuss racial segregation his conversation is without emotionalism. He doubts that the problem can be solved in this generation, but he thinks the solution would come about if non-segregation were begun on the lowest level of education—in kindergarten or the first grade.

He fears that Arkansas may follow the lead of Oklahoma in establishing entirely separate schools for Negroes, an action which has been upheld by the Supreme Court.

The reaction among students and faculty members toward Hunt's presence on the campus is mixed. But most agree with Dean Leflar, who said:

"Hunt is apparently intent upon studying law; that is all that matters to us."

Railing Removed but Racial Bar Stays at Ark. Law School

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — (ANP) — A railing used to separate Jack Schropshire of Little Rock, from white classmates in the University of Arkansas Law School has been removed, Dr. Robert A. Leflar, dean, said last week. But though the barrier has been taken away, the segregation policy of the school has not been changed.

Schropshire, a war veteran and reserve officer, was one of two colored students who entered the school last fall. Both attended classes, separate from white students. Recently 125 first-year students had to be placed in a small classroom which ordinarily seats 60. This meant that 27 had to be placed in the same section with Schropshire.

According to Dean Leflar, the railing was removed "for public relations reason" and because it was an obstruction in the crowded classroom. He said, "the segregated area is unchanged, due to the physical arrangement of the room. Schropshire's seat is an off-set in the classroom, and there is no longer any visible attempt at segregation, except that his seat is hidden from view to some of the students."

NEGRO DROPS GLASS WORK

Arkansas University Student Stricken

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Aug. 6.—Silas Hunt, 28, Texarkana negro law student at the University of Arkansas, has been tentatively diagnosed as having tuberculosis, it was learned Friday, and has notified the university he is dropping his class work.

After suffering a lung hemorrhage, Hunt entered Fayetteville Veterans Hospital July 28, and was transferred to the Veterans Administration's O'Reilly General Hospital at Springfield, Mo., this week.

The only negro student at the university, he was admitted last February under the university policy of accepting qualified negro students for classes on the graduate level. He received instruction in separate classes and rooms at the law school, and had been doing satisfactory work.

Negro Law Student Says New Setup Is 'All Right'

Courier Journal
Louisville Ky 11-16-48

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 15 (AP)—Classes for Kentucky's only Negro law student were moved to the State Capitol law library today.

Four Frankfort attorneys, one of them a former law professor at the University of Kentucky, took over the task of instructing him. They replaced seven law professors who had been coming from the university to teach him at the Kentucky State College for Negroes here.

Announcement of the change drew criticism from R. B. Atwood, president of the Negro school. He pointed out that the State's original agreement, designed to equalize instruction, provided the lone Negro law student, John W. Hatch, be taught at the Negro college by the same professors who serve the university's Law School at Lexington.

'Oh, It's All Right.'

When asked how he liked the change, the serious-minded Match, delving into law books between classes, answered with a quiet, "Oh, it's all right."

He made no other comment. But answering other questions he said the big law library serving the Court of Appeals and the attorney general's staff was advantageous.

He said a drawback in being the only member of his class is that he can't discuss problems with other pupils.

His four new instructors are Amos H. Eblen, former U.K. law professor; Jo M. Ferguson, an assistant attorney general; Ben B. Fowler, a former assistant attorney general, and Vincent Goodlett, a former attorney for the State Revenue Department.

Kentucky's Constitution and statutes prohibit Negroes and whites from attending the same schools. Hatch, from Springfield, started his law courses last September.

Announcement of the change drew criticism from President R. B. Atwood, of the Negro school. He pointed out the state's original agreement, designed to equalize instruction, provided John W. Hatch be taught at the Negro college by the same professors who serve the University's law school at Lexington.

Hire Four Attorneys to Teach One Negro in Ky.

Pittsburgh Courier

LEXINGTON, Ky.—(ANP)—John W. Hatch of Springfield, Ky., the only Negro to avail himself of law courses under the State's plan to keep Negroes and whites from attending the same schools together and yet give each equal college education opportunities, lost the seven University of Kentucky professors who have been instructing him since September, but gained four more, when the university added a quartette of Frankfort attorneys to its staff for that purpose here last week.

In addition, Hatch's classroom work is being shifted from the campus of Kentucky State College for Negroes to the State capitol, where there is a huge law library.

Pittsburgh Pa.

Immediately after Dr. H. L. Donovan, university president, made the announcement, Dr. R. B. Atwood, head of the State college, charged that the change "violates" the agreement to teach Negroes at his school what they could not get at the university.

Catholic University Announces Non-Discriminatory Scholarships

ST. LOUIS, MO. — Three full-time scholarships to the St. Louis University School of Law, made possible by funds refused Washington University because of the latter institution's jim-crow policy, were announced last week by the Dean of the St. Louis U. Law School.

St. Louis University is conducted under Catholic auspices by the Jesuit Fathers.

The announcement stated that awards would be made without discrimination in selection of students to be asisted nor in granting of assistance because of race, religion, color, place of origin, nationality or sex.

The scholarships were established by the Emil S. Strauss Fund of the Flora S. Frank estate and the Mary F. Culnana Scholarship Fund. Washington University could not accept the fund last year because of the non-discriminatory clause.
